Fr. Env. And how mightily, some other times, we drown our gain in tears. The great dignity, that his valor hath here acquired for him, shall at home be encountered with a shame as ample.

Fr. Gent. The web of our life is of a mingled yarn, good and ill together: our virtues would be proud, if our faults whipped them not; and our crimes would despair, if they were not cherished by our virtues.

Enter a Servant.

How now? where's your master?

Serv. He met the duke in the street, sir, of whom he hath taken a solemn leave: his lordship will next morning for France. The duke hath offered him letters of commendations to the king.

Fr. Env. They shall be no more than needful there, if they were more than they can commend.

Enter BERTRAM.

Fr. Gent. They cannot be too sweet for the king's tartness. Here's his lordship now.—How now, my lord! is't not after midnight?

Ber. I have to-night despatched sixteen business, a month's length a-piece, by an abstract of success: I have congéd with the duke, done my adieu with his nearest, buried a wife, mourned for her, writ to my lady mother I am returning, entertained my convoy; and between these main parcels of despatch effected many nicer deeds: the last was the greatest, but that I have not ended yet.

Fr. Env. If the business be of any difficulty, and this morning your departure hence, it requires haste of your lordship.

Ber. I mean the business is not ended, as fearing to hear of it hereafter. But shall we have this dialogue between the fool and the soldier? Come, bring forth this counterfeit<sup>6</sup> medal: he has deceived me, like a double-meaning prophetess.

Fr. Env. Bring him forth. [Exeunt Soldiers.] He has sat i' the stocks all night, poor gallant knave.

Ber. No matter; his heels have deserved it, in usurping his spurs so<sup>7</sup> long. How does he carry himself?

Fr. Env. I have told your lordship already; the stocks carry him. But, to answer you as you would be understood, he weeps, like a wench that had shed her milk. He hath confessed himself to Morgan, whom he supposes to be a friar, from the time of his remembrance, to this very instant disaster of his sitting i' the stocks, and what think you he hath confessed?

Ber. Nothing of me, has he?

Fr. Env. His confession is taken, and it shall be read to his face: if your lordship be in't, as I believe you are, you must have the patience to hear it.

Re-enter Soldiers, with PAROLLES.

Ber. A plague upon him! muffled? he can say nothing of me: hush! hush!

Fr. Gent. 'Hoodman comes!—Portotartarossa.

1 Sold. He calls for the tortures: what will you say without 'em?

Par. I will confess what I know without constraint: if ye pinch me like a pasty, I can say no more.

1 Sold. Bosko chiumurko.

Fr. Gent. Bobbindo chiumureco.

1 Sold. You are a merciful general.—Our general bids you answer to what I shall ask you out of a note.

Par. And truly, as I hope to live.

1 Sold. 'First, demand of him how many horse the duke is strong.' What say you to that?

Par. Five or six thousand; but very weak and unserviceable: the troops are all scattered, and the commanders very poor rogues, upon my reputation and credit, and as I hope to live.

1 Sold. Shall I set down your answer so?

Par. Do: I'll take 'my sacrament on't, how and which way you will.

1 Sold. 'All's one to him.

Ber. What a past-saving slave is this!

Fr. Gent. Y<sup>e</sup> are deceived, my lord: this is monsieur Parolles, the gallant militarist, (that was his own phrase) that had the whole 'theorick of war in the knot of his scarf, and the practice in the 'chape of his dagger.

Fr. Env. I will never trust a man again for keeping his sword clean; nor believe he can have every thing in him by wearing his apparel neatly.

1 Sold. Well, that's set down.

Par. Five or six thousand horse, I said,—I will say true,—or thereabouts, set down,—for I'll speak truth.

Fr. Gent. He's very near the truth in this.

Ber. But I 'con him no thanks for't, in the nature he delivers it.

Par. Poor rogues, I pray you, say.

1 Sold. Well, that's set down.

Par. I humbly thank you, sir. A truth's a truth: the rogues are marvellous poor.

1 Sold. "Demand of him, of what strength they are a-foot." What say you to that?

Par. By my troth, sir, if I were to live this present hour, I will tell true. Let me see: Spurio a hundred and fifty, Sebastian so many, Corambus so many, Jaques so many; Guiltian, Cosmo, Lodowick, and Grati, two hundred fifty each; mine own company, Chitopher, Vaumond, Bentii, two hundred fifty each: so that the muster-file, rotten and sound, upon my life, amounts not to fifteen thousand poll; half of the which dare not shake the snow from off their 'cassocks, lest they shake themselves to pieces.

Ber. What shall be done to him?

Fr. Gent. Nothing, but let him have thanks.—Demand of him my 'condition, and what credit I have with the duke.

1 Sold. Well, that's set down. "You shall demand of him, whether one captain Dumaine be i' the camp, a Frenchman: what his reputation is with the duke, what his valor, honesty, and expertness in wars; or whether he thinks, it were not possible with well-weighing sums of gold to corrupt him to a revolt." What say you to this? what do you know of it?

Par. I beseech you, let me answer to the particular of the 'interrogatories: demand them singly.

1 Sold. Do you know this captain Dumaine?

Par. I know him: he was a butcher's 'prentice in Paris, from whence he was whipped for getting the sheriff's fool with child; a dumb 'innocent, that could not say him, nay.

[Dumaine lifts up his hand in anger.]

Ber. Nay, by your leave, hold your hands; though, I know, his brains are forfeit to the next tile that falls.

1 Sold. Well, is this captain in the duke of Florence's camp?

Par. Upon my knowledge he is, and lousy.

Fr. Gent. Nay, look not so upon me; we shall hear of your lordship anon.

1 Sold. What is his reputation with the duke?

Par. The duke knows him for no other but a poor officer of mine, and writ to me this other day to turn him out o' the band: I think, I have his letter in my pocket.

1 Sold. Marry, we'll search.

Par. In good sadness, I do not know: either it is there, or it is upon a file, with the duke's other letters, in my tent.

1 Sold. Here 'tis; here's a paper: shall I read it to you?

Par. I do not know if it be it, or no.

Ber. Our interpreter does it well.

Fr. Gent. Excellently.

1 Sold. [Reads.] "Dian, the count's a fool, and full of gold;"—

Par. That is not the duke's letter, sir: that is an advertisement to a proper maid in Florence, one Diana, to take heed of the allurements of one count Rousillon, a foolish idle boy, but, for all that, very ruttish. I pray you, sir, put it up again.

1 Sold. Nay, I'll read it first, by your favor.

Par. My meaning in't, I protest, was very honest in the behalf of the maid; for I knew the young count to be a dangerous and lascivious boy, who is a whale to virginity, and devours up all the fry it finds.

Ber. Damnable, both-sides rogue!

1 Sold. [Reads.] "When he swears oaths, bid him drop gold, and take it;

After he scores, he never pays the score: [bit:] Half won is match well made; match, and well make He ne'er pays after debts; take it before,

And say, a soldier, Dian, told thee this.

"Thine, as he vow'd to thee in thine ear,

"PAROLLES."

Ber. He shall be whipped through the army, with this rhyme in's forehead.

Fr. Env. This is your devoted friend, sir; the manifold linguist, and the omnipotent soldier.

Ber. I could endure any thing before but a cat, and now he's a cat to me.

1 Sold. I perceive, sir, by our general's looks, we shall be fain to hang you.

Par. My life, sir, in any case! not that I am afraid to die; but that, my offences being many, I would repent out the remainder of nature. Let me live, sir, in a dungeon, i' the stocks, or any where, so I may live.

1 Sold. We'll see what may be done, so you confess freely: therefore, once more to this captain Dumaine. You have answered to his reputation with the duke, and to his valor: what is his honesty?

Par. He will steal, sir, an egg out of a 'cloister: for rapes and ravishments he parallels 'Nessus. He professes not keeping of oaths; in breaking them he is stronger than Hercules. He will lie, sir, with such volubility, that you would think truth were a fool. Drunkenness is his best virtue; for he will be swine-drunk, and in his sleep he does little harm, save to his bed-clothes about him; but they know his conditions, and lay him in straw. I have but little more to say, sir, of his honesty: he has everything that an honest man should not have; what an honest man should have, he has nothing.

Fr. Gent. I begin to love him for this.

Ber. For this description of thine honesty? A pox upon him! for me he is more and more a cat.

I Sold. What say you to his expertness in war?

Par. Faith, sir, he has led the drum before the English tragedians,—to belie him, I will not,—and more of his soldiiership I know not; except, in that country, he had the honor to be the officer at a place there called <sup>a</sup> Mile-end, to instruct for the doubling of files: I would do the man what honor I can, but of this I am not certain.

Fr. Gent. He hath out-villain'd villainy so far, that the rarity redeems him.

Ber. A pox on him! he's a cat still.

I Sold. His qualities being at this poor price, I need not ask you, if gold will corrupt him to revolt.

Par. Sir, for a <sup>b</sup> quart d'ecu he will sell the fee-simple of his salvation, the inheritance of it; and cut the entail from all remainders, and a perpetual succession for it perpetually.

I Sold. What's his brother, the other captain Du-maine?

Fr. Ent. Why does he ask him of me?

I Sold. What's he?

Par. E'en a crow o' the same nest; not altogether so great as the first in goodness, but greater a great deal in evil. He excels his brother for a coward, yet his brother is reputed one of the best that is. In a retreat he out-runs any lackey; marry, in coming on he has the cramp.

I Sold. If your life be saved, will you undertake to betray the Florentine?

Par. Ay, and the captain of his horse, count Rousillon.

I Sold. I'll whisper with the general, and know his pleasure.

Par. [Aside.] I'll no more drumming; a plague of all drums! Only to seem to deserve well, and to beguile the supposition of that lascivious young boy the count, have I run into this danger. Yet who would have suspected an ambush, where I was taken?

I Sold. There is no remedy, sir, but you must die. The general says, you, that have so traitorously discovered the secrets of your army, and made such pestiferous reports of men very nobly held, can serve the world for no honest use; therefore you must die. Come, headsmen; off with his head.

Par. O Lord, sir; let me live, or let me see my death!

I Sold. That shall you; and take your leave of all your friends.

[Unmuffling him.]

So, look about you: know you any here?

Ber. Good-morrow, noble captain.

Fr. Ent. God bless you, captain Parolles.

Fr. Gent. God save you, noble captain.

Fr. Ent. Captain, what greeting will you to my lord Lafew? I am for France.

Fr. Gent. Good captain, will you give me a copy of the sonnet you writ to Diana in behalf of the count Rousillon? an I were not a very coward, I'd compel it of you; but fare you well.

[Exeunt BERTRAM, Frenchmen, &c.]

I Sold. You are undone, captain; all but your scarf, that has a knot on't yet.

Par. Who cannot be crushed with a plot?

I Sold. If you could find out a country where but women were, that had received so much shame, you might begin an impudent nation. Fare you well, sir; I am for France too: we shall speak of you there. [Exit.]

Par. Yet am I thankful: if my heart were great, 'Twould burst at this. Captain I'll be no more; But I will eat, and drink, and sleep as soft As captain shall: simply the thing I am Shall make me live. Who knows himself a braggart, Let him fear this; for it will come to pass, That every braggart shall be found an ass. Rust, sword! cool, blushes! and Parolles, live Safest in shame! being fool'd, by foolery thrive! There's place and means for every man alive. I'll after them. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Florence. A Room in the Widow's House.

Enter HELENA, Widow, and DIANA.

Hel. That you may well perceive I have not wrong'd you,

One of the greatest in the Christian world Shall be my surety; 'fore whose throne, 'tis needful, Ere I can perfect mine intents, to kneel. Time was I did him a desired office, Dear almost as his life; which gratitude Through flinty Tartar's bosom would peep forth, And answer, thanks. I duly am inform'd, His grace is at Marseilles, to which place We have convenient convoy. You must know I am supposed dead: the army breaking, My husband hies him home; where, heaven aiding, And by the leave of my good lord the king, We'll be before our welcome.

Wid. Gentle madam,

You never had a servant, to whose trust Your business was more welcome.

Hel.

Nor you, mistress,

Ever a friend, whose thoughts more truly labor To recompense your love: doubt not, but heaven Hath brought me up to be your daughter's dower, As it hath fated her to be my <sup>d</sup> motive, And helper to a husband. But O, strange men! That can such sweet use make of what they hate, When 'saucy trusting of the cozen'd thoughts Defiles the pitchy night! so lust doth play With what it loathes, for that which is away. But more of this hereafter.—You, Diana, Under my poor instructions, yet must suffer Something in my behalf.

Dia.

Let death and honesty

Go with your impositions, I am 'fours Upon your will to suffer.

Hel.

Yet, I pray you:

But with the <sup>1</sup> world the time will bring on summer, When briars shall have leaves as well as thorns, And be as sweet as sharp. We must away; Our waggon is prepar'd, and time <sup>2</sup> reviles us: "All's well that ends well:" still the <sup>3</sup> fine's the crown;

Whate'er the course, the end is the renown.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Rousillon. A Room in the Count-ess's Palace.

Enter COUNTESS, LAFEU, and Clown.

Laf. No, no, no; your son was misled with a snipt-taffata fellow there, whose villainous saffron would have made all the unbaked and doughy youth of a nation in his color: your daughter-in-law had been alive at this hour, and your son here at home, more advanced by the king, than by that red-tailed humble-bee I speak of.

Count. I would I had not known him. It was the death of the most virtuous gentlewoman, that ever nature had praise for creating: if she had partaken of my flesh, and cost me the dearest groans of a mother, I could not have owed her a more rooted love.

Laf. 'Twas a good lady, 'twas a good lady: we may pick a thousand salads, ere we light on such another herb.

Clo. Indeed, sir, she was the sweet marjoram of the salad, or, rather the herb of <sup>a</sup>grace.

Laf. They are not <sup>1</sup>pot-herbs, you knave; they are nose-herbs.

Clo. I am no great Nebuchadnezzar, sir; I have not much skill in grass.

Laf. Whether dost thou profess thyself, a knave, or a fool?

Clo. A fool, sir, at a woman's service, and a knave at a man's.

Laf. Your distinction?

Clo. I would cozen the man of his wife, and do his service.

Laf. So you were a knave at his service, indeed.

Clo. And I would give his wife my bauble, sir, to do her service.

Laf. I will subscribe for thee, thou art both knave and fool.

Clo. At your service.

Laf. No, no, no.

Clo. Why, sir, if I cannot serve you, I can serve as great a prince as you are.

Laf. Who's that? a Frenchman?

Clo. Faith, sir, a' has an English name; but his phisnomy is more hotter in France, than there.

Laf. What prince is that?

Clo. The black prince, sir; alias, the prince of darkness; alias, the devil.

Laf. Hold thee, there's my purse. I give thee not this to <sup>b</sup>suggest thee from thy master thou talkest of: serve him still.

Clo. I am a woodland fellow, sir, that always loved a great fire; and the master I speak of, ever keeps a good fire. But, sure, he is the prince of the world; let <sup>2</sup>the nobility remain in's court. I am for the house with the narrow gate, which I take to be too little for pomp to enter: some, that humble themselves, may; but the many will be too chill and tender, and they'll be for the flowery way, that leads to the broad gate, and the great fire.

Laf. Go thy ways, I begin to be a-weary of thee; and I tell thee so before, because I would not fall out with thee. Go thy ways: let my horses be well looked to, without any tricks.

Clo. If I put any tricks upon 'em, sir, they shall be jades' tricks, which are their own right by the law of nature. [Exit.]

Laf. A shrewd knave, and an <sup>c</sup>unhappy.

Count. So <sup>a</sup>' is. My lord, that's gone, made himself much sport out of him: by his authority he remains here, which he thinks is a patent for his sauciness; and, indeed, he has no <sup>3</sup>place, but runs where he will.

Laf. I like him well; 'tis not amiss. And I was about to tell you, since I heard of the good lady's death, and that my lord, your son, was upon his return home, I moved the king, my master, to speak in the behalf of my daughter; which, in the minority of them both, his majesty, out of a self-gracious remembrance, did first propose. His highness hath promised me to do it; and to stop up the displeasure he hath conceived against your son, there is no fitter matter. How does your ladyship like it?

Count. With very much content, my lord; and I wish it happily effected.

Laf. His highness comes post from Marseilles, of as able body as when he numbered thirty: a' will be here to-morrow, or I am deceived by him that in such intelligence hath seldom failed.

Count. It rejoices me that I hope I shall see him ere I die. I have letters that my son will be here to-night: I shall beseech your lordship, to remain with me till they meet together.

Laf. Madam, I was thinking with what manners I might safely be admitted.

Count. You need but plead your honorable privilege.

Laf. Lady, of that I have made a bold charter; but, I thank my God, it holds yet.

Re-enter Clown.

Clo. O, madam! yonder's my lord your son with a patch of velvet on's face: whether there be a scar under it, or no, the velvet knows; but 'tis a goodly patch of velvet. His left cheek is a cheek of two pile and a half, but his right cheek is worn bare.

Laf. A scar nobly got, or a noble scar, is a good livery of honor; so, belike, is that.

Clo. But it is your <sup>d</sup>carbonadoed face.

Laf. Let us go see your son, I pray you: I long to talk with the young noble soldier.

Clo. 'Faith, there's a dozen of 'em, with delicate fine hats, and most courteous feathers, which bow the head, and nod at every man. [Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Marseilles. A Street.

Enter HELENA, Widow, and DIANA, with two Attendants.

Hel. But this exceeding posting, day and night, Must wear your spirits low: we cannot help it; But, since you have made the days and nights as one, To wear your gentle limbs in my affairs, Be bold, you do so grow in my requital, As nothing can unroot you. In happy time,

This man may help me to his majesty's ear, If he would spend his power.—God save you, sir.

Gen. And you.

Hel. Sir, I have seen you in the court of France.

Gen. I have been sometimes there.

Hel. I do presume, sir, that you are not fallen From the report that goes upon your goodness; And therefore, goaded with most sharp occasions Which lay nice manners by, I put you to The use of your own virtues, for the which I shall continue thankful.

Gen. What's your will?

Hel. That it will please you To give this poor petition to the king, And aid me with that store of power you have, To come into his presence. <sup>5</sup>[Giving it to him.]

Hel. Not here, sir?

Gent. Not, indeed: He hence remov'd last night, and with more haste Than is his use.

Wid. Lord, how we lose our pains!

Hel. All's well that ends well yet, Though time seem so adverse, and means unfit.— I do beseech you, whither is he gone?

Gent. Marry, as I take it, to Rousillon; Whither I am going.

Hel. I do beseech you, sir, Since you are like to see the king before me, Commend the paper to his gracious hand; Which, I presume, shall render you no blame, But rather make you thank your pains for it. I will come after you, with what good speed Our means will make us <sup>a</sup> means.

Gent. This I'll do for you. Hel. And you shall find yourself to be well thank'd, What'er falls more.—We must to horse again:— Go, go, provide. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Rousillon. The inner Court of the COUNTESS'S Palace.

Par. Good monsieur <sup>b</sup> Lavatch, give my lord Lafeu this letter. I have ere now, sir, been better known to you, when I have held familiarity with fresher clothes; but I am now, sir, muddled in fortune's <sup>c</sup> mood, and smell somewhat strong of her strong displeasure.

Clo. Truly, fortune's displeasure is but sluttish, if it smell so strongly as thou speakest of: I will henceforth eat no fish of fortune's buttering. Pr'y-thee, allow the <sup>d</sup> wind.

Par. Nay, you need not to stop your nose, sir: I spake but by a metaphor.

Clo. Indeed, sir, if your metaphor stink, I will stop my nose; or against any man's metaphor. Pr'ythee, get thee farther.

Par. Pray you, sir, deliver me this paper.

Clo. Foh! pr'ythee, stand away: a paper from fortune's close-stool to give to a nobleman! Look, here he comes himself.

Enter LAFEU.

Here is a pur of fortune's, sir, or of fortune's cat, (but not a musk-cat) that has fallen into the unclean fishpond of her displeasure, and, as he says, is muddled withal. Pray you, sir, use the carp as you may, for he looks like a poor, decayed, ingenious, foolish, rascally knave. I do pity his distress in my <sup>e</sup> smiles of comfort, and leave him to your lordship.

[Exit Clowin.]

Par. My lord, I am a man whom fortune hath cruelly scratched.

Laf. And what would you have me to do? 'tis too late to pare her nails now. Wherein have you played the knave with fortune, that she should scratch you, who of herself is a good lady, and would not have knaves thrive long under her? There's a quart d'ecu for you. Let the justices make you and fortune friends; I am for other business.

Par. I beseech your honor to hear me one single word.

Laf. You beg a single penny more: come, you shall ha't; save your word.

Par. My name, my good lord, is Parolles.

Laf. You beg more than one 'word, then.—Cox' my passion! give me your hand.—How does your drum?

Par. O, my good lord! you were the first that found me.

Laf. Was I, in sooth? and I was the first that lost thee.

Par. It lies in you, my lord, to bring me in some grace, for you did bring me out.

Laf. Out upon thee, knave! dost thou put upon me at once both the office of God and the devil? one brings thee in grace, and the other brings thee out. [Trumpets sounded.] The king's coming; I know by his trumpets.—Sirrah, inquire farther after me: I had talk of you last night. Though you are a fool and a knave, you shall eat: go to, follow.

Par. I praise God for you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in the COUNTESS'S Palace.

Flourish. Enter KING, COUNTESS, LAFEU, Lords, Gentlemen, Guards, &c.

King. We lost a jewel of her, and our esteem Was made much poorer by it; but your son, As mad in folly, lack'd the sense to know Her estimation <sup>b</sup> home.

Cout. 'Tis past, my liege; And I beseech your majesty to make it Natural rebellion, done i' the blaze of youth; When oil and fire, too strong for reason's force, O'erbears it, and burns on.

King. My honor'd lady, I have forgiven and forgotten all, Though my revenges were high bent upon him, And watch'd the time to shoot.

Laf. This I must say,— But first I beg my pardon,—the young lord Did to his majesty, his mother, and his lady, Offence of mighty note, but to himself The greatest wrong of all: he lost a wife, Whose beauty did astonish the survey Of richest eyes; whose words all ears took captive; Whose dear perfection hearts that scorn'd to serve Humbly call'd mistress.

King. Praising what is lost Makes the remembrance dear.—Well, call him hither. We are reconcil'd, and the first <sup>i</sup> view shall kill All <sup>k</sup> repetition.—Let him not ask our pardon: The nature of his great offence is dead, And deeper than oblivion we do bury The incensing relics of it: let him approach, A stranger, no offender; and inform him, So 'tis our will he should.

Gent. I shall, my liege. [Exit Gentleman.]
King. What says he to your daughter? have you spoke?

Laf. All that he is hath reference to your highness.

King. Then shall we have a match. I have letters sent me, That set him high in fame.

Enter BERTRAM.

Laf. He looks well on't.

King. I am not a day of 'season, For thou may'st see a sunshine and a hail In me at once; but to the brightest beams

Distracted clouds give way: so stand thou forth;
The time is fair again.

Ber. My high repented <sup>a</sup>blames,
Dear sovereign, pardon to me.

King. All is whole;
Not one word more of the consumed time.
Let's take the instant by the forward top,
For we are old, and on our quick'st decrees
Th' inaudible and noiseless foot of time
Steals, ere we can effect them. You remember
The daughter of this lord.

Ber. Admiringly.
My liege, at first
I stuck my choice upon her, ere my heart
Durst make too bold a herald of my tongue:
Where the impression of mine eye infixing,
Contempt his scornful perspective did lend me,
Which warp'd the line of every other favor,
Scorn'd a fair color, or express'd it stolen,
Extended or contracted all proportions,
To a most hideous object. Thence it came,
That she, whom all men prais'd, and whom myself,
Since I have lost, have lov'd, was in mine eye
The dust that did offend it.

King. Well excus'd:
That thou didst love her strikes some scores away
From the great <sup>b</sup>compt. But love, that comes too late,
Like a remorseful pardon slowly carried,
To the great sender turns a sour offence,
Crying, that's good that's gone. Our rash faults
Make trivial price of serious things we have,
Not knowing them, until we know their grave:
Oft our displeasures, to ourselves unjust,
Destroy our friends, and after weep their dust:
Our own love, waking, cries to see what's done,
While shameful hate sleeps out the afternoon.
Be this sweet Helen's knell, and now forget her.
Send forth your amorous token for fair Maudlin:
The main consents are had; and here we'll stay
To see our widower's second marriage-day. [Bless!]

Laf. Which better than the first, O, dear heaven,
Or, ere they meet, in me, O nature, cease!
<sup>1</sup>Come on, my son, in whom my house's name
Must be <sup>c</sup>disgested, give a favor from you,
To sparkle in the spirits of my daughter,
That she may quickly come.—By my old beard,
And every hair that's on't, Helen, that's dead,
Was a sweet creature; such a ring as this,
<sup>2</sup>The last time ere she took her leave at court,
I saw upon her finger.

Ber. Hers it was not.
King. Now, pray you, let me see it; for mine eye,
While I was speaking, oft was fasten'd to't.—
This ring was mine; and, when I gave it Helen,
I bade her, if her fortunes ever stood
Necessitated to help, that by this token
I would relieve her. Had you that craft to <sup>d</sup>reave her
Of what should stead her most?

Ber. My gracious sovereign,
Howe'er it pleases you to take it so,
The ring was never hers.

Count. Son, on my life,
I have seen her wear it; and she reckon'd it
At her life's rate.

Laf. I am sure I saw her wear it.
Ber. You are deceiv'd: my lord, she never saw it.
In Florence was it from a casement thrown me,
Wrapp'd in a paper, which contain'd the name
Of her that threw it. Noble she was, and thought
I stood <sup>e</sup>engag'd; but when I had subscrib'd

To mine own fortune, and inform'd her fully
I could not answer in that course of honor
As she had made the overture, she ceas'd,
In heavy satisfaction, and would never Receive the ring again.

King. Plutus himself,
That knows the tinct and multiplying <sup>f</sup>medicine,
Hath not in nature's mystery more science,
Than I have in this ring: 'twas mine, 'twas Helen's,
Whoever gave it you. Then, if you know
That you are well acquainted <sup>3</sup>with't yourself,
Confess 'twas hers, and by what rough enforcement
You got it from her. She call'd the saints to surety,
That she would never put it from her finger,
Unless she gave it to yourself in bed,
Where you have never come, or sent it us
Upon her great disaster.

Ber. She never saw it. [honor,
King. Thou speak'st it falsely, as I love mine
And mak'st conjectural fears to come into me,
Which I would fain shut out. If it should prove That thou art so inhuman,—'twill not prove so;—
And yet I know not:—thou didst hate her deadly,
And she is dead;—which nothing, but to close
Her eyes myself, could win me to believe,
More than to see this ring.—Take him away.—

[Guards seize BERTRAM.
My fore-past proofs, howe'er the matter fall,
Shall tax my fears of little vanity,
Having vainly fear'd too little.—Away with him!
We'll sift this matter farther.

Ber. If you shall prove
This ring was ever hers, you shall as easy
Prove that I husbanded her bed in Florence,
Where yet she never was. [Exit BERTRAM, guarded.

Enter <sup>4</sup>the Gentleman, a Stranger.
King. I am wrapp'd in dismal thinkings.
Gen. Gracious sovereign,
Whether I have been to blame, or no, I know not:
Here's a petition from a Florentine,
Who hath, for four or five <sup>5</sup>removes, come short
To tender it herself. I undertook it,
Vanquish'd thereto by the fair grace and speech
Of the poor suppliant, who by this, I know,
Is here attending: her business looks in her
With an importing visage; and she told me,
In a sweet verbal brief, it did concern
Your highness with herself.

King. [Reads.] "Upon his many protestations to marry me, when his wife was dead, I blush to say it, he won me. Now is the count Rousillon a widower: his vows are forfeited to me, and my honor's paid to him. He stole from Florence, taking no leave, and I follow him to his country for justice. Grant it me, O king! in you it best lies; otherwise a seducer flourishes, and a poor maid is undone. "DIANA CAPILET."

Laf. I will buy me a son-in-law in a fair, and <sup>h</sup>toll him: for this, I'll none of him. [fen,

King. The heavens have thought well on thee, La-
To bring forth this discovery.—Seek these suitors.—
Go speedily, and bring again the count.

[Exit Gentleman, and some Attendants.
I am afraid, the life of Helen, lady,
Was foully snatch'd.

Count. Now, justice on the doers!

Re-enter BERTRAM, guarded.
King. I wonder, sir, <sup>i</sup>for wives are monsters to you,

gaged," i. e., engaged to her.

gold, and the matter by which gold is multiplied.—<sup>3</sup> "Removes," i. e., journeys; post-stages.—<sup>4</sup> "Toll him," i. e., pay toll for him.—<sup>5</sup> For is used here for since.

And that you fly them <sup>a</sup>as you swear them lordship,
Yet you desire to marry.—What woman's that?

Re-enter Gentleman, with Widow, and DIANA.

Dia. I am, my lord, a wretched Florentine, Derived from the ancient Capilet: <sup>1</sup>[Kneeling.
My suit, as I do understand, you know,
And therefore know how far I may be pitied.

Wid. I am her mother, sir, whose age and honor
Both suffer under this complaint we bring,
And both shall <sup>b</sup>cease, without your remedy.

King. Come hither, <sup>2</sup>county. Do you know these women?

Ber. My lord, I neither can, nor will deny
But that I know them. Do they charge me farther?

Dia. Why do you look so strange upon your wife?

Ber. She's none of mine, my lord.

Dia. If you shall marry,
You give away this hand, and that is mine;
You give away heaven's vows, and those are mine;
You give away myself, which is known mine;
For I by vow am so embodied yours,
That she which marries you must marry me;
Either both, or none.

Laf. [To BERTRAM.] Your reputation comes too short for my daughter: you are no husband for her.

Ber. My lord, this is a fond and desperate creature, Whom sometime I have laugh'd with. Let your highness

Lay a more noble thought upon mine honor,
Than <sup>a</sup>so to think that I would sink it here.

King. Sir, for my thoughts, you have them ill to friend,

Till your deeds gain them: fairer prove your honor,
Than in my thought it lies.

Dia. Good my lord,
Ask him upon his oath, if he does think
He had not my virginity.

King. What say'st thou to her?

Ber. She's impudent, my lord;
And was a common gamester to the camp.

Dia. He does me wrong, my lord: if I were so,
He might have bought me at a common price:
Do not believe him. O! behold this ring,
Whose high respect, and rich <sup>c</sup>validity,
Did lack a parallel; yet, for all that,
He gave it to a commoner o' the camp,
If I be one.

Count. He blushes, and 'tis his.
Of six preceding ancestors, that gem
Confer'd by testament to the sequent issue,
Hath it been ow'd and worn. This is his wife:
That ring's a thousand proofs.

King. Methought, you said,
You saw one here in court could witness it.

Dia. I did, my lord, but loath am I to produce
So bad an instrument: his name's Parolles.

Laf. I saw the man to-day, if man he be.

King. Find him, and bring him hither.

Ber. What of him?
He's <sup>d</sup>quoted for a most perfidious slave,
With all the spots o' the world tax'd and debauch'd,
Whose nature sickens but to speak a truth.
Am I or that, or this, for what he'll utter,
That will speak anything?

King. She hath that ring of yours.

Ber. I think, she has: certain it is, I lik'd her,
And boarded her i' the wanton way of youth.
She knew her distance, and did angle for me,
Madding my eagerness with her restraint,

As all impediments in fancy's course
Are motives of more fancy; and, in fine,
Her <sup>e</sup>infinite cunning, with her <sup>e</sup>modern grace,
Subdued me to her rate: she got the ring,
And I had that, which any inferior might
At market-price have bought.

Dia. I must be patient:

You, that turn'd off a first so noble wife,
May justly diet <sup>f</sup>me. I pray you yet,
(Since you lack virtue, I will lose a husband)
Send for your ring; I will return it home,
And give me mine again.

Ber. I have it not.

King. What ring was yours, I pray you?

Dia. Sir, much like
The same upon your finger.

King. Know you this ring? this ring was his of late.

Dia. And this was it I gave him, being a-bed.

King. The story then goes false, you threw it him
Out of a casement.

Dia. I have spoke the truth.

Enter PAROLLES.

Ber. My lord, I do confess, the ring was hers.

King. You boggle shrewdly, every feather starts
Is this the man you speak of? [you.—

Dia. Ay, my lord.

King. Tell me, sirrah, but tell me true, I charge you,
Not fearing the displeasure of your master,
(Which, on your just proceeding, I'll keep off)
By him, and by this woman here, what you know?

Par. So please your majesty, my master hath been an honorable gentleman: tricks he hath had in him, which gentlemen have.

King. Come, come; to the purpose. Did he love this woman?

Par. 'Faith, sir, he did love her; but how?

King. How, I pray you.

Par. He did love her, sir, as a gentleman loves a woman.

King. How is that?

Par. He loved her, sir, and loved her not.

King. As thou art a knave, and no knave.—
What an equivocal <sup>g</sup>companion is this!

Par. I am a poor man, and at your majesty's command.

Laf. He's a good drum, my lord, but a naughty orator.

Dia. Do you know, he promised me marriage?

Par. 'Faith, I know more than I'll speak.

King. But wilt thou not speak all thou know'st?

Par. Yes, so please your majesty. I did go between them, as I said; but more than that, he loved her,—for, indeed, he was mad for her, and talked of Satan, and of limbo, and of furies, and I know not what: yet I was in that credit with them at that time, that I knew of their going to bed, and of other motions, as promising her marriage, and things that would derive me ill will to speak of: therefore, I will not speak what I know. [Canst

King. Thou hast spoken all already, unless thou Say they are married. But thou art too <sup>h</sup>fine
In thy evidence; therefore, stand aside.—
This ring, you say, was yours?

Dia. Ay, my good lord.

King. Where did you buy it? or who gave it you?

Dia. It was not given me, nor I did not buy it.

King. Who lent it you?

Dia. It was not lent me neither.

King. Where did you find it then?

Dia. I found it not!

King. If it were yours by none of all these ways,
How could you give it him?

Dia. I never gave it him.

Laf. This woman's an easy glove, my lord: she goes off and on at pleasure.

King. This ring was mine: I gave it his first wife.

Dia. It might be yours, or hers, for aught I know.

King. Take her away: I do not like her now.

To prison with her; and away with him.—

Unless thou tell'st me where thou had'st this ring,
Thou diest within this hour.

Dia. I'll never tell you.

King. Take her away.

Dia. I'll put in bail, my liege.

King. I think thee now some common <sup>a</sup>customer.

Dia. By Jove, if ever I knew man, 'twas you.

King. Wherefore hast thou accus'd him all this while?

Dia. Because he's guilty, and he is not guilty.

He knows I am no maid, and he'll swear to't:

I'll swear I am a maid, and he knows not.

Great king, I am no strumpet, by my life!

I am either maid, or else this old man's wife.

[Pointing to LAFEU.]

King. She does abuse our ears. To prison with her!

Dia. Good mother, fetch my bail.—[Exit Widow.]
Stay, royal sir:

The jeweller that <sup>b</sup>owes the ring is sent for,

And he shall surety me. But for this lord,

Who hath abus'd me, as he knows himself,

Though yet he never harm'd me, here I 'quit him.

He knows himself my bed he hath defil'd,

And at that time he got his wife with child:

Dead though she be, she feels her young one kick:

So there's my riddle, one that's dead is quick;

And now behold the meaning.

Re-enter Widow, with HELENA.

King. Is there no <sup>c</sup>exorcist
Beguiles the truer office of mine eyes?

Is't real, that I see?

Hel. No, my good lord:

'Tis but the shadow of a wife you see;

The name, and not the thing.

Ber. Both, both! O, pardon! <sup>1</sup>[Kneeling.]

Hel. O! my good lord, when I was like this maid,
I found you wondrous kind. There is your ring;

And, look you, here's your letter: this it says:

"When from my finger you can get this ring,
And are by me with child," &c.—This is done:

Will you be mine, now you are doubly won?

Ber. If she, my liege, can make me know this clearly, <sup>2</sup>[Rising.]

I'll love her dearly, ever, ever dearly.

Hel. If it appear not plain, and prove untrue,

Deadly divorce step between me and you!—

O! my dear mother, do I see you living?

Laf. Mine eyes smell onions, I shall weep anon.

—Good Tom Drum, [To PAROLLES.] lend me a handkerchief: so, I thank thee. Wait on me home, I'll make sport with thee: let thy courtesies alone, they are scurvy ones.

King. Let us from point to point this story know,

To make the even truth in pleasure flow.— [cr,

[To DIANA.] If thou be'st yet a fresh uncropped flow-

Choose thou thy husband, and I'll pay thy dowry;

For I can guess, that by thy honest aid

Thou kept'st a wife herself, thyself a maid.

Of that, and all the progress, more and less,

Resolutely more leisure shall express:

All yet seems well; and if it end so meet,

The bitter past, more welcome is the sweet.

[Flourish.]

•EPILOGUE BY THE KING.

The king's a beggar, now the play is done.

All is well ended, if this suit be won,

That you express content; which we will pay,

With strife to please you, day exceeding day:

Ours be your patience then, and yours our <sup>d</sup>parts;

Your gentle hands lend us, and take our hearts.

<sup>d</sup> That is, hear us without interruption, and take our parts.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—An Apartment in the DUKE's Palace.

Enter DUKE, CURIO, Lords. <sup>3</sup>Music playing.

Duke. If music be the food of love, play on:
Give me excess of it; that, surfeiting,
The appetite may sicken, and so die.
That strain again;—it had a dying fall:
O! it came o'er my ear like the sweet south,
That breathes upon a bank of violets,
Stealing, and giving odor.—Enough! no more:

'Tis not so sweet now, as it was before.
O, spirit of love! how quick and fresh art thou,
That, notwithstanding thy capacity
Receiveth as the sea, nought enters there,
Of what <sup>a</sup>validity and pitch soe'er,
But falls into abatement and low price,
Even in a minute! so full of shapes is fancy,
That it alone is <sup>b</sup>high-fantastical.

Cur. Will you go hunt, my lord?

What, Curio?

Cur.

The hart.

Duke. Why, so I do, the noblest that I have.
O! when mine eyes did see Olivia first,
Methought she purg'd the air of pestilence:
That instant was I turn'd into a hart,
And my desires, like fell and cruel hounds, [her?
E'er since pursue me.—How now! what news from

Enter VALENTINE.

Val. So please my lord, I might not be admitted,
But from her handmaid do return this answer:—
The clement itself, till seven years' <sup>c</sup>heut,
Shall not behold her face at ample view;
But, like a cloistress, she will veiled walk,
And water once a day her chamber round
With eye-offending brine: all this, to season
A brother's dead love, which she would keep fresh
And lasting in her sad remembrance.

Duke. O! she that hath a heart of that fine frame,
To pay this debt of love but to a brother,
How will she love, when the rich golden shaft
Hath kill'd the flock of all affections else

That live in her: when liver, brain, and <sup>a</sup>heart,
These sovereign thrones, are all supplied, and fill'd,
(Her sweet perfections) with one <sup>b</sup>self king.—
Away, before me to sweet beds of flowers;
Love-thoughts lie rich, when canopied with bowers.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Sea-coast.

Enter VIOLA, Captain, and Sailors.

Vio. What country, friends, is this?

Cap. This is Illyria, lady.

Vio. And what should I do in Illyria?
My brother he is in Elysium. [sailors?]

Perchance, he is not drown'd:—what think you,

Cap. It is perchance that you yourself were sav'd.

Vio. O, my poor brother! and so, perchance, may he be. [chance,

Cap. True, madam: and, to comfort you with Assure yourself, after our ship did split,
When you, and those poor number saved with you,
Hung on our driving boat, I saw your brother,
Most provident in peril, bind himself
(Courage and hope both teaching him the practice)
To a strong mast, that lived upon the sea;
Where, like Arion on the dolphin's back,
I saw him hold acquaintance with the waves
So long as I could see.

Vio. For saying so there's gold.

Mine own escape unfoldeth to my hope,
Whereto thy speech serves for authority,
The like of him. Know'st thou this country?

Cap. Ay, madam, well; for I was bred and born,
Not three hours' travel from this very place.

Vio. Who governs here?

Cap. A noble duke, in nature
As in name.

Vio. What is his name?

Cap. Orsino.

Vio. Orsino! I have heard my father name him:
He was a bachelor then.

Cap. And so is now, or was so very late;
For but a month ago I went from hence,
And then 'twas fresh in murmur, (as, you know,
What great ones do the less will prattle of)
That he did seek the love of fair Olivia.

Vio. What's she?

Cap. A virtuous maid, the daughter of a count
That died some twelvemonth since; then leaving her
In the protection of his son, her brother,
Who shortly also died: for whose dear love,
They say, she hath abjur'd the company,
And sight of men.

Vio. O! that I serv'd that lady,
And might not be delivered to the world,
Till I had made mine own occasion mellow,
What my estate is.

Cap. That were hard to compass,
Because she will admit no kind of suit,
No, not the duke's.

Vio. There is a fair behavior in thee, captain,
And though that nature with a beauteous wall
Doth oft close in pollution, yet of thee
I will believe, thou hast a mind that suits
With this thy fair and outward character.
I pry'thce, (and I'll pay thee bounteously)
Conceal me what I am, and be my aid
For such disguise as haply shall become
The form of my intent. I'll serve this duke:
Thou shalt present me as an eunuch to him.
It may be worth thy pains; for I can sing,

And speak to him in many sorts of music,
That will allow me very worth his service.
What else may hap to time I will commit;
Only, shape thou thy silence to my wit.

Cap. Be you his eunuch, and your mute I'll be:

When my tongue blabs, then let mine eyes not see.
Vio. I thank thee. Lead me on. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Room in OLIVIA'S House.

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH, and MARIA.

Sir To. What a plague means my niece, to take the death of her brother thus? I am sure care's an enemy to life.

Mar. By my troth, sir Toby, you must come in earlier o' nights: your cousin, my lady, takes great exceptions to your ill hours.

Sir To. Why, let her except before excepted.

Mar. Ay, but you must confine yourself within the modest limits of order.

Sir To. Confine? I'll confine myself no finer than I am. These clothes are good enough to drink in, and so be these boots too: an they be not, let them hang themselves in their own straps.

Mar. That quaffing and drinking will undo you:
I heard my lady talk of it yesterday, and of a foolish knight, that you brought in one night here to be her wooer.

Sir To. Who? Sir Andrew Ague-cheek?

Mar. Ay, he.

Sir To. He's as <sup>d</sup>tall a man as any's in Illyria.

Mar. What's that to the purpose?

Sir To. Why, he has three thousand ducats a year.

Mar. Ay, but he'll have but a year in all these ducats: he's a very fool, and a prodigal.

Sir To. Fie, that you'll say so! he plays o' the voil-de-gamboys, and speaks three or four languages word for word without book, and hath all the good gifts of nature.

Mar. He hath, indeed,—all most natural; for, besides that he's a fool, he's a great quarreller; and,
but that he hath the gift of a coward to allay the gust he hath in quarrelling, 'tis thought among the prudent he would quickly have the gift of a grave.

Sir To. By this hand, they are scoundrels, and substractors that say so of him. Who are they?

Mar. They that add, moreover, he's drunk nightly in your company.

Sir To. With drinking healths to my niece. I'll drink to her, as long as there is a passage in my throat, and drink in Illyria. He's a coward, and a coistril, that will not drink to my niece, till his brains turn o' the toe like a parish-top. What, wench! Castiliano vulgo; for here comes Sir
Andrew Ague-face.

Enter Sir ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.

Sir And. Sir Toby Belch! how now, sir Toby Belch?

Sir To. Sweet sir Andrew.

Sir And. Bless you, fair shrew.

Mar. And you too, sir.

Sir To. Accost, sir Andrew, accost.

Sir And. What's that?

Sir To. My niece's chamber-maid.

Sir And. Good mistress Accost, I desire better acquaintance.

Mar. My name is Mary, sir.

Sir And. Good mistress Mary Accost,—

<sup>a</sup> The liver, brain, and heart, were considered the seats of passion, judgment, and sentiment.—<sup>b</sup> Selfsame.

less fellow.—<sup>f</sup> A large top was formerly kept in every village, to be whipped in frosty weather, that the peasants might be kept warm and out of mischief when they could not work.

Sir To. You mistake, knight: accost is front her, board her, woo her, assail her.

Sir And. By my troth, I would not undertake her in this company. Is that the meaning of accost?

Mar. Fare you well, gentlemen.

Sir To. An thou let <sup>1</sup>her part so, sir Andrew, would thou might'st never draw sword again!

Sir And. An you part so, mistress, I would I might never draw sword again. Fair lady, do you think you have fools in hand?

Mar. Sir, I have not you by the hand.

Sir And. Marry, but you shall have; and here's my hand.

Mar. Now, sir, thought is free. I pray you, bring your hand to the buttery-bar, and let it drink.

Sir And. Wherefore, sweet heart? what's your metaphor?

Mar. It's dry, sir.

Sir And. Why, I think so: I am not such an ass, but I can keep my hand dry. But what's your jest?

Mar. A dry jest, sir.

Sir And. Are you full of them?

Mar. Ay, sir; I have them at my fingers' ends: marry, now I let go your hand, I am barren.

[Exit MARIA.]

Sir To. O knight! thou lack'st a cup of canary. When did I see thee so put down?

Sir And. Never in your life, I think; unless you see canary put me down. Methinks, sometimes I have no more wit than a Christian, or an ordinary man has; but I am a great eater of beef, and, I believe, that does harm to my wit.

Sir To. No question.

Sir And. An I thought that, I'd forswear it. I'll ride home to-morrow, sir Toby.

Sir To. Pourquoi, my dear knight?

Sir And. What is pourquoi? do or not do? I would I had bestowed that time in the tongues, that I have in fencing, dancing, and bear-baiting. O, had I but followed the arts!

Sir To. Then <sup>2</sup>hadst thou an excellent head of hair.

Sir And. Why, would that have mended my hair?

Sir To. Past question; for, thou seest, it will not curl by nature.

Sir And. But it becomes me well enough, does't not?

Sir To. Excellent: it hangs like flax on a distaff, and I hope to see a housewife take thee between her legs, and spin it off.

Sir And. Faith, I'll home to-morrow, sir Toby: your niece will not be seen; or, if she be, it's four to one she'll none of me. The count himself, here hard by, woos her.

Sir To. She'll none o' the count: she'll not match above her degree, neither in estate, years, nor wit; I have heard her swear it. Tut, there's life in't, man.

Sir And. I'll stay a month longer. I am a fellow o' the strangest mind i' the world: I delight in masques and revels sometimes altogether.

Sir To. Art thou good at these <sup>3</sup>kick-shaws, knight?

Sir And. As any man in Illyria, whatsoever he be, under the degree of my betters: and yet I will not compare with an old man.

Sir To. What is thy excellence in a <sup>4</sup>galliard, knight?

Sir And. Faith, I can cut a caper.

Sir To. And I can cut the mutton to't.

Sir And. And, I think, I have the back-trick, simply as strong as any man in Illyria.

Sir To. Wherefore are these things hid? wherefore have these gifts a curtain before them? are they like to take dust, like mistress Mall's picture? why dost thou not go to church in a galliard, and come home in a <sup>6</sup>coranto? My very walk should be a jig: I would not so much as make water, but in a <sup>7</sup>sink-a-pace. What dost thou mean? is it a world to hide virtues in? I did think, by the excellent constitution of thy leg, it was formed under the star of a galliard.

Sir And. Ay, 'tis strong, and it does indifferent well in a <sup>8</sup>dun-colored stock. Shall we set about some revels?

Sir To. What shall we do else? were we not born under Taurus?

Sir And. Taurus? that's sides and heart.

Sir To. No, sir; it is legs and <sup>9</sup>thighs. Let me see thee caper. <sup>10</sup>[Sir AND. dances again.] Ha! higher: ha, ha! — excellent! [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Room in the Duke's Palace.

Enter VALENTINE, and VIOLA in man's attire.

Val. If the duke continue these favors towards you, Cesario, you are like to be much advanced: he hath known you but three days, and already you are no stranger.

Vio. You either fear his humor, or my negligence, that you call in question the continuance of his love. Is he inconstant, sir, in his favors?

Val. No, believe me.

Enter DUKE, CURIO, and Attendants.

Vio. I thank you. Here comes the count.

Duke. Who saw Cesario, ho?

Vio. On your attendance, my lord; here.

Duke. Stand you awhile aloof. <sup>11</sup>[Curio, &c. retire.]

—Cesario,

Thou know'st no less but all: I have unclasp'd To thee the book even of my secret soul; Therefore, good youth, address thy <sup>12</sup>gait unto her: Be not denied access, stand at her doors, And tell them, there thy fixed foot shall grow, Till thou have audience.

Vio. Sure, my noble lord,

If she be so abandon'd to her sorrow, As it is spoke, she never will admit me.

Duke. Be clamorous, and leap all civil bounds, Rather than make unprofitable return.

Vio. Say I do speak with her, my lord, what then?

Duke. Oh! then unfold the passion of my love: Surprise her with discourse of my dear faith:

It shall become thee well to act my woes;

She will attend it better in thy youth,

Than in a nuncio of more grave aspect.

Vio. I think not so, my lord.

Duke. Dear lad, believe it,

For they shall yet belie thy happy years, That say thou art a man: Diana's lip Is not more smooth, and <sup>13</sup>rubious; thy small pipe Is as the maiden's organ, shrill, and sound, And all is <sup>14</sup>semblative a woman's part.

I know, thy constellation is right apt For this affair. — Some four, or five, attend him;

All, if you will, for I myself am best,

When least in company. — Prosper well in this,

And thou shalt live as freely as thy lord

To call his fortunes thine.

Vio. I'll do my best,
To woo your lady: [Aside.] yet, 'O, 'barful strife!
Whoe'er I woo, myself would be his wife. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A Room in OLIVIA'S House.

Enter MARIA, and Clown.

Mar. Nay; either tell me where thou hast been, or I will not open my lips so wide as a bristle may enter in way of thy excuse. My lady will hang thee for thy absence.

Clo. Let her hang me: he that is well hung in this world needs to fear no colors.

Mar. Make that good.

Clo. He shall see none to fear.

Mar. A good blenten answer. I can tell thee where that saying was born, of I fear no colors.

Clo. Where, good mistress Mary?

Mar. In the wars; and that may you be bold to say in your foolery.

Clo. Well, God give them wisdom, that have it; and those that are fools, let them use their talents.

Mar. Yet you will be hanged for being so long absent: or, to be turned away, is not that as good as a hanging to you?

Clo. Many a good hanging prevents a bad marriage; and for turning away, let summer bear it out.

Mar. You are resolute, then?

Clo. Not so neither; but I am resolved on two points.

Mar. That, if one break, the other will hold; or, if both break, your <sup>d</sup>gaskins fall.

Clo. Apt, in good faith; very apt. Well, go thy way: if sir Toby would leave drinking, thou wert as witty a piece of Eve's flesh as any in Illyria.

Mar. Peace, you rogue, no more o' that. Here comes my lady: make your excuses wisely; you were best. [Exit.]

Enter OLIVIA and MALVOLIO.

Clo. Wit, an't be thy will, put me into good fooling! Those wits, that think they have thee, do very oft prove fools; and I, that am sure I lack thee, may pass for a wise man: for what says Quinapalus? Better a witty fool, than a foolish wit.—God bless thee, lady!

Oli. Take the fool away.

Clo. Do you not hear, fellows? Take away the lady.

Oli. Go to, you're a dry fool; I'll no more of you: besides, you grow dishonest.

Clo. Two faults, <sup>e</sup>madonna, that drink and good counsel will amend: for give the dry fool drink, then is the fool not dry; bid the dishonest man mend himself, if he mend, he is no longer dishonest: if he cannot, let the botcher mend him. Any thing that's mended is but patched: virtue that transgresses is but patched with sin; and sin that amends is but patched with virtue. If that this simple syllogism will serve, so; if it will not, what remedy? As there is no true cuckold but calamity, so beauty's a flower.—The lady bade take away the fool; therefore, I say again, take her away.

Oli. Sir, I bade them take away you.

Clo. Misprision in the highest degree!—Lady, cu-cullus non facit monachum: that's as much as to say, I wear not motley in my brain. Good madonna, give me leave to prove you a fool.

Oli. Can you do it?

Clo. Dexterously, good madonna.

Oli. Make your proof.

Clo. I must catechize you for it, madonna. Good my mouse of virtue, answer me.

Oli. Well, sir, for want of other idleness I'll bide your proof.

Clo. Good madonna, why mourn'st thou?

Oli. Good fool, for my brother's death.

Clo. I think, his soul is in hell, madonna.

Oli. I know his soul is in heaven, fool.

Clo. The more fool, madonna, to mourn for your brother's soul being in heaven.—Take away the fool, gentlemen.

Oli. What think you of this fool, Malvolio? doth he not mend?

Mal. Yes; and shall do, till the pangs of death shake him: infirmity, that decays the wise, doth ever make the better fool.

Clo. God send you, sir, a speedy infirmity, for the better increasing your folly! Sir Toby will be sworn that I am no fox, but he will not pass his word for twopence that you are no fool.

Oli. How say you to that, Malvolio?

Mal. I marvel your ladyship takes delight in such a barren rascal: I saw him put down the other day with an ordinary fool, that has no more brain than a stone. Look you now, he's out of his guard already: unless you laugh and minister occasion to him, he is gagged. I protest, I take these wise men, that crow so at these set kind of fools, <sup>2</sup>to be no better than the fools' <sup>3</sup>zanies.

Oli. O, you are sick of self-love, Malvolio, and taste with a distempered appetite. To be generous, guiltless, and of free disposition, is to take those things for <sup>4</sup>bird-bolts, that you deem cannon-bullets. There is no slander in an allowed fool, though he do nothing but rail; nor no railing in a known discreet man, though he do nothing but reprove.

Clo. Now, Mercury endue thee with <sup>5</sup>leaving, for thou speakest well of fools.

Re-enter MARIA.

Mar. Madam, there is at the gate a young gentleman much desires to speak with you.

Oli. From the count Orsino, is it?

Mar. I know not, madam: 'tis a fair young man, and well attended.

Oli. Who of my people hold him in delay?

Mar. Sir Toby, madam, your kinsman.

Oli. Fetch him off, I pray you: he speaks nothing but madman. Fie on him! [Exit MARIA.] Go you, Malvolio: if it be a suit from the count, I am sick, or not at home; what you will, to dismiss it. [Exit MALVOLIO.] Now you see, sir, how your fooling grows old, and people dislike it.

Clo. Thou hast spoke for us, madonna, as if thy eldest son should be a fool, whose skull Jove cram with brains; for <sup>3</sup>here comes one of thy kin, that has a most weak pia <sup>k</sup>mater.

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH.

Oli. By mine honor, half drunk.—What is he at the gate, cousin?

Sir To. A gentleman.

Oli. A gentleman! What gentleman?

Sir To. 'Tis a gentleman here.—A plague o' these pickle-herrings!—How now, sot?

Clo. Good sir Toby,—

* "Barful strife," i. e., a struggle full of impediments.—

Oli. Cousin, cousin, how have you come so early by this lethargy.

Sir To. Lechery! I defy lechery. There's one at the gate.

Oli. Ay, marry; what is he?

Sir To. Let him be the devil, an he will, I care not: give me faith, say I. Well, it's all one. [Exit.]

Oli. What's a drunken man like, fool?

Clo. Like a drown'd man, a fool, and a madman: one draught above heat makes him a fool, the second mads him, and a third drowns him.

Oli. Go thou and seek the coroner, and let him sit o' my coz, for he's in the third degree of drink; he's drown'd: go, look after him.

Clo. He is but mad yet, madonna; and the fool shall look to the madman. [Exit Clown.]

Re-enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. Madam, yond' young fellow swears he will speak with you. I told him you were sick: he takes on him to understand so much, and therefore comes to speak with you. I told him you were asleep: he seems to have a fore-knowledge of that too, and therefore comes to speak with you. What is to be said to him, lady? he's fortified against any denial.

Oli. Tell him, he shall not speak with me.

Mal. He has been told so; and he says, he'll stand at your door like a sheriff's<sup>a</sup> post,<sup>1</sup> or be the supporter to a bench, but he'll speak with you.

Oli. What kind of man is he?

Mal. Why, of man kind.

Oli. What manner of man?

Mal. Of very ill manner: he'll speak with you, will you, or no.

Oli. Of what personage, and years is he?

Mal. Not yet old enough for a man, nor young enough for a boy; as a<sup>b</sup> squash is before 'tis a peascod, or a<sup>c</sup> codling when 'tis almost an apple: 'tis with him e'en standing water, between boy and man. He is very well-favored, and he speaks very shrewdly: one would think, his mother's milk were scarce out of him.

Oli. Let him approach. Call in my gentlewoman.

Mal. Gentlewoman, my lady calls. [Exit.]

Re-enter MARIA.

Oli. Give me my veil: come, throw it o'er my face. We'll once more hear Orsino's embassy.

Enter VIOLO.

Vio. The honorable lady of the house, which is she?

Oli. Speak to me; I shall answer for her. Your will?

Vio. Most radiant, exquisite, and unmatchable beauty.—I pray you, tell me, if this be the lady of the house, for I never saw her: I would be loath to cast away my speech; for, besides that it is excellently well penned, I have taken great pains to<sup>d</sup> con it. Good beauties, let me sustain no scorn; I am very e<sup>e</sup>comptible even to the least f<sup>f</sup>sinister usage.

Oli. Whence came you, sir?

Vio. I can say little more than I have studied, and that question's out of my part. Good gentle one, give me modest assurance if you be the lady of the house, that I may proceed in my speech.

Oli. Are you a comedian?

Vio. No, my profound heart; and yet, by the very fangs of malice I swear, I am not that I play. Are you the lady of the house?

Oli. If I do not usurp myself, I am.

Vio. Most certain, if you are she, you do usurp yourself; for what is yours to bestow, is not yours to reserve. But this is from my commission. I will on with my speech in your praise, and then show you the heart of my message.

Oli. Come to what is important in't: I forgive you the praise.

Vio. Alas! I took great pains to study it, and 'tis poetical.

Oli. It is the more like to be feigned: I pray you, keep it in. I heard, you were saucy at my gates, and allowed your approach, rather to wonder at you than to hear you. If you be not mad, be gone; if you have reason, be brief: 'tis not that time of moon with me to make one in so skipping a dialogue.

Mar. Will you hoist sail, sir? here lies your way.

Vio. No, good swabber; I am to<sup>h</sup> hull here a little longer.—Some mollification for your<sup>i</sup> giant, sweet lady. Tell me your mind: I am a messenger.

Oli. Sure, you have some hideous matter to deliver, when the courtesy of it is so fearful. Speak your office.

Vio. It alone concerns your ear. I bring no overture of war, no taxation of homage. I hold the olive in my hand: my words are as full of peace as matter.

Oli. Yet you began rudely. What are you? What would you?

Vio. The rudeness that hath appear'd in me, have I learn'd from my entertainment. What I am, and what I would, are as secret as maidenhead: to your ears, divinity; to any other's, profanation.

Oli. Give us the place alone. We will hear this divinity. [Exit MARIA.] Now, sir; what is your text?

Vio. Most sweet lady,—

Oli. A comfortable doctrine, and much may be said of it. Where lies your text?

Vio. In Orsino's bosom.

Oli. In his bosom! In what chapter of his bosom?

Vio. To answer by the method, in the first of his heart.

Oli. O! I have read it: it is heresy. Have you no more to say?

Vio. Good madam, let me see your face.

Oli. Have you any commission from your lord to negotiate with my face? You are now out of your text: but we will draw the curtain, and show you the picture. Look you, sir; such a one<sup>2</sup> I am at this present: is't not well done? [Unveiling.]

Vio. Excellently done, if God did all.

Oli. 'Tis in grain, sir: 'twill endure wind and weather.

Vio. 'Tis beauty truly<sup>3</sup> blent, whose red and white Nature's own sweet and cunning hand laid on.

Lady, you are the cruellest she alive, If you will lead these graces to the grave, And leave the world no copy.

Oli. O! sir, I will not be so hard-hearted. I will give out divers schedules of my beauty: it shall be inventoried, and every particle, and utensil, labelled to my will; as, item, two lips indifferent red; item, two grey eyes with lids to them; item, one neck, one chin, and so forth. Were you sent hither to<sup>4</sup> praise me?

Vio. <sup>5</sup>I see what you are: you are too proud; But, if you were the devil, you are fair.

My lord and master loves you: O! such love
 Should be but recompens'd, though you were crown'd
 The nonpareil of beauty!

Ol. How does he love me?

Vio. With adorations, fertile tears,
 With groans that thunder love, with sighs of fire.

Ol. Your lord does know my mind; I cannot love
 him:

Yet I suppose him virtuous, know him noble,
 Of great estate, of fresh and stainless youth;
 In voices well divulg'd, free, learn'd, and valiant,
 And in dimension, and the shape of nature,
 A gracious person; but yet I cannot love him.
 He might have took his answer long ago.

Vio. If I did love you in my master's flame,
 With such a suffering, such a deadly life,
 In your denial I would find no sense,
 I would not understand it.

Ol. Why, what would you?

Vio. Make me a willow cabin at your gate,
 And call upon my soul within the house;
 Write loyal cantons of contemned love,
 And sing them loud even in the dead of night;
 Halloo your name to the reverberate hills,
 And make the babbling c gossip of the air
 Cry out, Olivia! O! you should not rest
 Between the elements of air and earth,
 But you should pity me.

Ol. You might do much. What is your parentage?

Vio. Above my fortunes, yet my state is well:
 I am a gentleman.

Ol. Get you to your lord:
 I cannot love him. Let him send no more,
 Unless, perchance, you come to me again,
 To tell me how he takes it. Fare you well:
 I thank you for your pains. Spend this for me.

<sup>2</sup> [Offering her purse.]

Vio. I am no fee'd post, lady; keep your purse:
 My master, not myself, lacks recompense.
 Love make his heart of flint that you shall love,
 And let your fervor, like my master's, be Plac'd in contempt! Farewell, fair cruelty. [Exit.]

Ol. What is your parentage?

"Above my fortunes, yet my state is well:
 I am a gentleman."—I'll be sworn thou art:
 Thy tongue, thy face, thy limbs, actions, and spirit,
 Do give thee five-fold e blazon.—Not too fast!—soft!

Unless the master were the man.—How now?
 Even so quickly may one catch the plague.
 Methinks, I feel this youth's perfections,
 With an invisible and subtle stealth,
 To creep in at mine eyes. Well, let it be.—
 What, ho! Malvolio.—

Re-enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. Here, madam, at your service.

Ol. Run after that same peevish messenger,
 The county's man: he left this ring behind him,
 Would I, or not: tell him, I'll none of it.
 Desire him not to flatter with his lord,
 Nor hold him up with hopes: I am not for him.
 If that the youth will come this way to-morrow,
 I'll give him reason for't. Hie thee, Malvolio.

Mal. Madam, I will. [Exit.]

Ol. I do I know not what, and fear to find
 Mine eye too great a flatterer for my mind.
 Fate, show thy force: ourselves we do not owe;
 What is decreed must be, and be this so! [Exit.]

<sup>a</sup> "In voices well divulg'd," i.e., well spoken of by the world.—<sup>b</sup> Cantos; verses.—<sup>c</sup> That is, the echo.—<sup>d</sup> "Fee'd post," i.e., paid messenger.—<sup>e</sup> Proclamation of gentility.—<sup>f</sup> Silly; foolish.—<sup>g</sup> That is, we are not our own masters.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Sea-coast.

Enter ANTONIO and SEBASTIAN.

Ant. Will you stay no longer? nor will you not,
 that I go with you?

Seb. By your patience, no. My stars shine darkly over me: the malignancy of my fate might, perhaps, distemper yours; therefore, I shall crave of you your leave, that I may bear my evils alone. It were a bad recompense for your love, to lay any of them on you.

Ant. Let me yet know of you, whither you are bound.

Seb. No, 'sooth, sir. My determinate voyage is mere extravagancy; but I perceive in you so excellent a touch of modesty, that you will not extort from me what I am willing to keep in: therefore, it charges me in manners the rather to express myself. You must know of me then, Antonio, my name is Sebastian, which I called Roderigo. My father was that Sebastian of Messina, whom, I know, you have heard of: he left behind him, myself, and a sister, both born in an hour. If the heavens had been pleased, would we had so ended! but, you, sir, altered that; for some hour before you took me from the breach of the sea was my sister drowned.

Ant. Alas, the day!

Seb. A lady, sir, though it was said she much resembled me, was yet of many accounted beautiful:
 but, though I could not with self-estimation wander so far to believe that, yet thus far I will boldly publish her—she bore a mind that envy could not but call fair. She is drowned already, sir, with salt water, though I seem to drown her remembrance again with more.

Ant. Pardon me, sir, your bad entertainment.

Seb. O, good Antonio! forgive me your trouble.

Ant. If you will not murder me for my love, let me be your servant.

Seb. If you will not undo what you have done, that is, kill him whom you have recovered, desire it not. Fare ye well at once: my bosom is full of kindness; and I am yet so near the manners of my mother, that upon the least occasion more, mine eyes will tell tales of me. I am bound to the count
 Orsino's court: farewell. [Exit.]

Ant. The gentleness of all the gods go with thee!
 I have many enemies in Orsino's court;
 Else would I very shortly see thee there;
 But, come what may, I do adore thee so,
 That danger shall seem sport, and I will go. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Street.

Enter VIOLA; MALVOLIO following.

Mal. Were not you even now with the countess Olivia?

Vio. Even now, sir: on a moderate pace I have since arrived but hither.

Mal. She returns this ring to you, sir: you might have saved me my pains, to have taken it away yourself. She adds, moreover, that you should put your lord into a desperate assurance she will none of him. And one thing more; that you be never so hardy to come again in his affairs, unless it be to report your lord's taking of this: receive it so.

Vio. She took no ring of me!—I'll none of it.

Mal. Come, sir; you peevishly threw it to her

and her will is, it should be so returned: if it be worth stooping for, there it lies in your eye; if not, be it his that finds it. [Exit.]

Vio. I left no ring with her: what means this lady! Fortune forbid my outside have not charm'd her! She made good view of me; indeed, so much, That, methought, her eyes had lost her tongue, For she did speak in starts distractedly. She loves me, sure: the cunning of her passion Invites me in this churlish messenger. None of my lord's ring? why, he sent her none. I am the man:—if it be so, as 'tis, Poor lady, she were better love a dream. Disguise, I see, thou art a wickedness, Wherein the pregnant enemy does much. How easy is it, for the proper false In women's waxen hearts to set their forms! Alas! our frailty is the cause, not we, For such as we are made, if such we be. How will this fadge? My master loves her dearly; And I, poor monster, fond as much on him; And she, mistaken, seems to dote on me. What will become of this? As I am man, My state is desperate for my master's love; As I am woman, now, alas the day! What thriftless sighs shall poor Olivia breathe! O time! thou must untangle this, not I; It is too hard a knot for me t' untie. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—A Room in OLIVIA's House.

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH and Sir ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.

Sir To. Approach, sir Andrew: not to be a-bed after midnight is to be up betimes; and diluculo surgere, thou know'st,—

Sir And. Nay, by my troth, I know not; but I know, to be up late, is to be up late.

Sir To. A false conclusion: I hate it as an unfilled can. To be up after midnight, and to go to bed then, is early; so that, to go to bed after midnight, is to go to bed betimes. <sup>2</sup>Does not our life consist of the four elements?

Sir And. Faith, so they say; but, I think, it rather consists of eating and drinking.

Sir To. Thou art a scholar; let us therefore eat and drink.—Marian, I say!—a stoop of wine!

Enter Clown.

Sir And. Here comes the fool, i' faith.

Clow. How now, my hearts! Did you never see the picture of we three?

Sir To. Welcome, ass. Now let's have a catch.

Sir And. By my troth, the fool has an excellent breast. I had rather than forty shillings I had such a leg, and so sweet a breath to sing, as the fool has. In sooth, thou wast in very gracious fooling last night, when thou spokest of Pigrogromitus, of the Vapians passing the equinoctial of Queebus: 'twas very good, i' faith. I sent thee sixpence for thy lemon: hadst it?

Clow. I did impeticate thy gratuity; for Malvolio's nose is no whipstock: my lady has a white hand, and the Myrmidons are no bottle-ale houses.

Sir And. Excellent! Why, this is the best fooling, when all is done. Now, a song.

Sir To. Come on: there is sixpence for you; let's have a song.

Sir And. There's a testril of me, too: <sup>5</sup>if one knight give away sixpence so will I give another: go to, a song.

Clow. Would you have a love-song, or a song of good life?

Sir To. A love-song, a love-song.

Sir And. Ay, ay; I care not for good life.

SONG.

Clow. O, mistress mine! where are you roaming?

<sup>6</sup>O! stay, for here your true love's coming,

That can sing both high and low.

Trip no farther, pretty sweeting;

Journeys end in lovers' meeting,

Every wise man's son doth know.

Sir And. Excellent good, i' faith.

Sir To. Good, good.

Clow. What is love? 'tis not hereafter;

Present mirth hath present laughter;

What's to come is still unsure:

In delay there lies no plenty;

Then come kiss me, sweet and twenty.

Youth's a stuff will not endure.

Sir And. A mellifluous voice, as I am true knight.

Sir To. A contagious breath.

Sir And. Very sweet and contagious, i' faith.

Sir To. To hear by the nose, it is dulcet in contagion. But shall we make the welkin dance indeed? Shall we rouse the night-owl in a catch, that will draw three souls out of one weaver? shall we do that?

Sir And. An you love me, let's do't: I am 'a dog at a catch.

Clow. By'r lady, sir, and some dogs will catch well.

Sir And. Most certain. Let our catch be, "Thou Knave."

Clow. "Hold thy peace, thou knave," knight? I shall be constrain'd in't to call the knave, knight.

Sir And. 'Tis not the first time I have constrain'd one to call me knave. Begin, fool: it begins, "Hold thy peace."

Clow. I shall never begin, if I hold my peace.

Sir And. Good i' faith. Come, begin.

[They sing a catch.]

Enter MARIA.

Mar. What a catterwauling do you keep here? If my lady have not called up her steward, Malvolio, and bid him turn you out of doors, never trust me.

Sir To. My lady's a Cataian; we are politicians; Malvolio's a Peg-a-Ramsey, and "Three merry men be we." Am not I consanguineous? am I not of her blood? <sup>1</sup>Tilly-valley, lady! "There dwelt a man in Babylon, lady, lady!" [Singing.]

Clow. Beshrew me, the knight's in admirable fooling.

Sir And. Ay, he does well enough, if he be disposed, and so do I too: he does it with a better grace, but I do it more natural.

Sir To. "O! the twelfth day of December,"—

[Singing.]

Mar. For the love o' God, peace!

Enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. My masters, are you mad? or what are you? Have you no wit, manners, nor honesty, but

to gabble like tinkers at this time of night? Do ye make an alehouse of my lady's house, that ye squeak out your <sup>a</sup>coziers' catches without any mitigation or remorse of voice? Is there no respect of place, persons, nor time, in you?

Sir To. We did keep time, sir, in our catches.

Mal. Sir Toby, I must be round with you. My lady bade me tell you, that, though she harbors you as her kinsman, she's nothing allied to your disorders. If you can separate yourself and your misdemcanors, you are welcome to the house; if not, an it would please you to take leave of her, she is very willing to bid you farewell.

Sir To. "Farewell, dear heart, since I must need be gone."

Mar. Nay, good sir Toby.

Clo. "His eyes do show his days are almost done."

Mal. Is't even so?

Sir To. "But I will never die."

Clo. Sir Toby, there you lie.

Mal. This is much credit to you.

Sir To. "Shall I bid him go?"

Clo. "What an if you do?"

Sir To. "Shall I bid him go, and spare not?"

Clo. "O! no, no, no, you dare not."

Sir To. Out o' tune!—Sir, ye lie. Art any more than a steward? Dost thou think, because thou art virtuous, there shall be no more cakes and ale?

Clo. Yes, by saint Anne; and ginger shall be hot i' the mouth too.

Sir To. Thou'rt i' the right.—Go, sir: rub your <sup>d</sup>chain with crumbs:—A stoop of wine, Maria!

Mal. Mistress Mary, if you prized my lady's favor at any thing more than contempt, you would not give means for this unceivil <sup>e</sup>rule: she shall know of it by this hand.
[Exit.]

Mar. Go shake your ears.

Sir And. 'Twere as good a deed as to drink when a man's a-hungry, to challenge him to the field, and then to break promise with him, and make a fool of him.

Sir To. Do't knight: I'll write thee a challenge, or I'll deliver thy indignation to him by word of mouth.

Mar. Sweet sir Toby, be patient for to-night. Since <sup>2</sup>that youth of the count's was to-day with my lady, she is much out of quiet. For monsieur Malvolio, let me alone with him: if I do not gull him into a nayword, and make him a common recreation, do not think I have wit enough to lie straight in my bed. I know, I can do it.

Sir To. Possess <sup>2</sup>us, possess us: tell us something of him.

Mar. Marry, sir, sometimes he is a kind of Puritan.

Sir And. O! if I thought that, I'd beat him like a dog.

Sir To. What! for being a Puritan? thy exquisite reason, dear knight?

Sir And. I have no exquisite reason for't, but I have reason good enough.

Mar. The devil a Puritan that he is, or any thing constantly, but a time pleaser; an <sup>a</sup>affectioned ass, that <sup>c</sup>ous state without book, and utters it by great swaths: the best persuaded of himself; so crammed, as he thinks, with excellences, that it is his ground of faith, that all that look on him love him; and on that vice in him will my revenge find notable cause to work.

Sir To. What wilt thou do?

Mar. I will drop in his way some obscure epistles of love; wherein, by the color of his beard, the shape of his leg, the manner of his gait, the <sup>k</sup>expression of his eye, forehead, and complexion, he shall find himself most feelingly personated. I can write very like my lady, your niece; on a forgotten matter we can hardly make distinction of our hands.

Sir To. Excellent! I smell a device.

Sir And. I have't in my nose, too.

Sir To. He shall think, by the <sup>l</sup>letter that thou wilt drop, that <sup>h</sup>it comes from my niece, and that she is in love with him.

Mar. My purpose is, indeed, a horse of that color.

Sir And. And your horse, now, would make him an ass.

Mar. Ass I doubt not.

Sir And. O! 'twill be admirable.

Mar. Sport royal, I warrant you: I know, my physick will work with him. I will plant you two, and let the fool make a third, where he shall find the letter: observe his construction of it. For this night, to bed, and dream on the event. Farewell.
[Exit.]

Sir To. Good night, <sup>1</sup>Penthesilea.

Sir And. Before me, she's a good wench.

Sir To. She's a beagle, true-bred, and one that adores me: what o' that?

Sir And. I was adored once too.

Sir To. Let's to bed, knight.—Thou hadst need send for more money.

Sir And. If I cannot recover your niece, I am a foul way out.

Sir To. Send for money, knight: if thou hast her not i' the end, call me <sup>m</sup>cut.

Sir And. If I do not, never trust me; take it how you will.

Sir To. Come, come: I'll go burn some sack, 'tis too late to go to bed now. Come, knight; come, knight.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Room in the DUKE's Palace.

Enter DUKE, VIOLA, CURIO, and others.

Duke. Give me some music. <sup>6</sup>[Music.]—Now, good morrow, friends.—

Now, good Cesario, but that piece of song, That old and antique song, we heard last night; Methought, it did relieve my passion much, More than light airs, and <sup>7</sup>recollected terms, Of these most brisk and giddy-paced <sup>7</sup>tunes: Come; but one verse.

Cur. He is not here, so please your lordship, that should sing it.

Duke. Who was it?

Cur. Feste, the jester, my lord: a fool, that the lady Olivia's father took much delight in. He is about the house.

Duke. Seek him out, and play the tune the while.

[Exit CURIO.—Music <sup>8</sup>again.]

Come hither, boy: if ever thou shalt love,
<sup>9</sup>[To VIOLA.]

In the sweet pangs of it remember me;
For such as I am all true lovers are:
Unstaid and skittish in all motions else,
Save in the constant image of the creature
That is below'd.—How dost thou like this tune?

Viola. It gives a very echo to the <sup>a</sup>seat
Where Love is thrond.

Duke. Thou dost speak masterly.
My life upon't, young though thou art, thine eye
Hath stay'd upon some favor that it loves;
Hath it not, boy?

Viola. A little, by your <sup>b</sup>favor.

Duke. What kind of woman is't?

Viola. Of your complexion.

Duke. She is not worth thee, then. What years i' faith?

Viola. About your years, my lord. [take

Duke. Too old, by heaven. Let still the woman
An elder than herself; so wears she to him,
So sways she level in her husband's heart:
For, boy, however we do praise ourselves,
Our fancies are more giddy and unfirm,
More longing, wavering, sooner lost and <sup>1</sup>won,
Than women's are.

Viola. I think it well, my lord.

Duke. Then, let thy love be younger than thyself,
Or thy affection cannot hold the bent;
For women are as roses, whose fair flower,
Being once display'd, doth fall that very hour.

Viola. And so they are; alas! that they are so;
To die, even when they to perfection grow!

Re-enter CURIO, and Clown.

Duke. O, fellow! come, the song we had last
Mark it, Cesario; it is old, and plain: [night.—
The spinners and the knitters in the sun, [bones,
And the <sup>c</sup>free maids, that weave their thread with
Do use to chant it: it is silly <sup>d</sup>sooth,
And dallies with the innocence of love,
Like the old <sup>e</sup>age.

Clo. Are you ready, sir?

Duke. Ay; pr'ythee, sing. [Music.

THE SONG.

Clo. Come away, come away, death,
And in sad cypress let me be laid;
Fly away, fly away, breath;
I am slain by a fair cruel maid.
My shroud of white, stuck all with yew,

O! prepare it:
My part of death no one so true
Did share it.

Not a flower, not a flower sweet,
On my black coffin let there be strown;
Not a friend, not a friend greet
My poor corpse, where my bones shall be thrown:
A thousand thousand sighs to save,

Lay me, O! where
Sad true lover never find my grave,
To weep there.

Duke. There's for thy pains. <sup>2</sup>[Giving him money.

Clo. No pains, sir: I take pleasure in singing, sir.

Duke. I'll pay thy pleasure then.

Clo. Truly, sir, and pleasure will be paid, one time or another.

Duke. <sup>3</sup>I give thee now leave to leave me.

Clo. Now, the melancholy god protect thee, and the tailor make thy doublet of changeable taffata, for thy mind is a very <sup>f</sup>opal!—I would have men of such constancy put to sea, that their business might be every thing, and their intent every where; for that's it, that always makes a good voyage of nothing.—Farewell. [Exit Clown.

Duke. Let all the rest give place.—

[Exit Curio and Attendants.

Once more, Cesario,

Get thee to yond' same sovereign cruelty:

Tell her, my love, more noble than the world,

Prizes not quantity of dirty lands:

The parts that fortune hath bestow'd upon her,

Tell her, I hold as giddily as fortune;

But 'tis that miracle, and queen of gems,

That nature <sup>g</sup>pranks her in, attracts my soul.

Viola. But, if she cannot love you, sir?

Duke. I cannot be so answer'd.

Viola. Sooth, but you must.

Say, that some lady, as perhaps there is,
Hath for your love as great a pang of heart
As you have for Olivia: you cannot love her;
You tell her so; must she not then be answer'd?

Duke. There is no woman's sides

Can bide the beating of so strong a passion
As love doth give my heart; no woman's heart
So big to hold so much: they lack retention.

Alas! their love may be call'd appetite,

No motion of the liver, but the palate;

That suffers surfeit, cloyment, and revolt;

But mine is all as hungry as the sea,

And can digest as much. Make no compare

Between that love a woman can bear me,

And that I owe Olivia.

Viola. Ay, but I know,—

Duke. What dost thou know?

Viola. Too well what love women to men may owe:

In faith, they are as true of heart as we.

My father had a daughter lov'd a man,

As it might be, perhaps, were I a woman,

I should your lordship.

Duke. And what's her history?

Viola. A blank, my lord. She never told her love,—

But let concealment, like a worm i' the bud,

Feed on her damask cheek: she pin'd in thought:

And, with a green and yellow melancholy,

She sat like patience on a <sup>h</sup>monument,

Smiling at grief. Was not this love, indeed?

We men may say more, swear more; but, indeed,

Our shows are more than will, for still we prove

Much in our vows, but little in our love.

Duke. But died thy sister of her love, my boy?

Viola. I am all the daughters of my father's house,

And all the brothers too; and yet I know not.—

Sir, shall I to this lady?

Duke. Ay, that's the theme.

To her in haste: give her this jewel; say,

My love can give no place, bide no <sup>i</sup>denay. [Exit.

SCENE V.—OLIVIA'S Garden.

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH, Sir ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK, and FABIAN.

Sir To. Come thy ways, signior Fabian.

Fab. Nay, I'll come: if I lose a scruple of this sport, let me be boiled to death with melancholy.

Sir To. Would'st thou not be glad to have the niggardly, rascally sheep-biter come by some notable shame?

Fab. I would exult, man: you know, he brought me out o' favor with my lady about a bear-baiting here.

Sir To. To anger him, we'll have the bear again, and we will fool him black and blue;—shall we not,
Sir Andrew?

<sup>g</sup> That is, that beauty which nature decks her in.—<sup>h</sup> Like monumental sculpture.—<sup>i</sup> Denial.

Duke means countenance; but Viola uses the word ambiguously.—<sup>c</sup> "Free maids," i.e., chaste maids, employed in mak-varies its hues, according to the light in which it is viewed.

Sir And. An we do not, it is pity of our lives.

Enter MARIA.

Sir To. Here comes the little villain.—How now, my <sup>a</sup>metal of India?

Mar. Get ye all three into the box-tree. Malvolio's coming down this walk: he has been yonder i' the sun, practising behavior to his own shadow, this half hour. Observe him, for the love of mockery; for, I know, this letter will make a contemplative idiot of him. Close, in the name of jesting! [The men hide themselves.] Lie thou there; [I drops a letter] for here comes the trout that must be caught with tickling. [Exit MARIA.]

Enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. 'Tis but fortune; all is fortune. Maria once told me, she did affect me; and I have heard herself come thus near, that, should she <sup>b</sup>fancy, it should be one of my complexion. Besides, she uses me with a more exalted respect than any one else that follows her. What should I think on't?

Sir To. Here's an over-weening rogue!

Fab. O, peace! Contemplation makes a rare turkeycock of him: how he jets under his advanced plumes!

Sir And. 'Slight, I could so beat the rogue.—

Sir To. Peace! I say.

Mal. To be count Malvolio.—

Sir To. Ah, rogue!

Sir And. Pistol him, pistol him.

Sir To. Peace! peace!

Mal. There is example for't: the lady of the Strachly married the yeoman of the wardrobe.

Sir And. Fire on him, Jezebel.

Fab. O, peace! now he's deeply in: look, how imagination <sup>c</sup>blows him.

Mal. Having been three months married to her, sitting in for a state,—

Sir To. O, for a stone bow, to hit him in the eye!

Mal. Calling my officers about me, in my branched velvet gown, having come from a <sup>d</sup>day-bed, where I have left Olivia sleeping:—

Sir To. Fire and brimstone!

Fab. O, peace! peace!

Mal. And then to have the <sup>e</sup>honor of state; and after a demure travel of regard,—telling them, I know my place, as I would they should do theirs,—to ask for my kinsman Toby—

Sir To. Bolts and shackles!

Fab. O, peace, peace, peace! now, now.

Mal. Seven of my people, with an obedient start, make out for him. I frown the while; and, perchance, wind up my watch, or play with my—some rich jewel. Toby approaches; court'sies there to me.

Sir To. Shall this fellow live?

Fab. Though our silence be drawn from us <sup>f</sup>by th' cars, yet peace!

Mal. I extend my hand to him thus, quenching my familiar smile with an austere regard of control.

Sir To. And does not Toby take you a blow o' the lips then?

Mal. Saying, "Cousin Toby, my fortunes, having cast me on your niece, give me this prerogative of speech."—

Sir To. What, what?

Mal. "You must amend your drunkenness."

Sir To. Out, seab!

Fab. Nay, patience, or we break the sinews of our plot.

Mal. "Besides, you waste the treasure of your time with a foolish knight."

Sir And. That's me, I warrant you.

Mal. "One sir Andrew."

Sir And. I knew 'twas I; for many do call me fool.

Mal. [Seeing the letter.] What employment have we here?

Fab. Now is the woodcock near the gin.

Sir To. O, peace! and the spirit of humors intimate reading aloud to him!

Mal. [Taking up the letter.] By my life, this is my lady's hand! these be her very C's, her U's, and her T's; and thus makes she her great P's. It is, in contempt of question, her hand.

Sir And. Her C's, her U's, and her T's: Why that?

Mal. [Reads.] "To the unknown beloved, this, and my good wishes!" her very phrases!—By your leave, wax.—Soft!—and the inpressure her Lucrece, with which she uses to seal: 'tis my lady. To whom should this be?

Fab. This wins him, liver and all.

Mal. [Reads.] "Jove knows, I love;

But who?

Lips do not move:

No man must know."

"No man must know."—What follows? the number's <sup>g</sup>altered.—"No man must know:"—if this should be thee, Malvolio?

Sir To. Marry, hang thee, <sup>h</sup>brock!

Mal. [Reads.] "I may command, where I adore;

But silence, like a Lucrece knife,

With bloodless stroke my heart doth gore:

M, O, A, I, doth sway my life,"

Fab. A fusian riddle.

Sir To. Excellent wench, say I.

Mal. "M, O, A, I, doth sway my life."—Nay, but first, let me see,—let me see,—let me see.

Fab. What a dish of poison has she dressed him!

Sir To. And with what wing the <sup>i</sup>stannyl cheeks at it!

Mal. "I may command where I adore." Why, she may command me: I serve her; she is my lady. Why, this is evident to any <sup>k</sup>formal capacity. There is no obstruction in this.—And the end,—what should that alphabetical position portend? if I could make that resemble something in me,—Softly!—M, O, A, I.—

Sir To. O! ay, make up that. He is now at a cold scent.

Fab. <sup>j</sup>Sowter will ery upon't, for all this, though it be <sup>l</sup>not as rank as a fox.

Mal. M,—Malvolio:—M,—why that begins my name.

Fab. Did not I say, he would work it out? the cur is excellent at faults.

Mal. M.—But then there is no consonancy in the sequel; that suffers under probation: A should follow, but O does.

Fab. And O! shall end, I hope.

Sir To. Ay, or I'll cudgel him, and make him cry, O!

Mal. And then I comes behind.

Fab. Ay, on you had any eye behind you, you might see more detraction at your heels, than fortunes before you.

Mal. M, O, A, I:—this simulation is not as the former;—and yet, to crush this a little, it would bow to me, for every one of these letters are in my name. Soft! here follows prose.—[Reads.] “If this fall into thy hand, revolve. In my stars I am above thee; but be not afraid of greatness: some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them. Thy fates open their hands; let thy blood and spirit embrace them. And, to inure thyself to what thou art like to be, cast thy humble <sup>a</sup>slough, and appear fresh. Be <sup>b</sup>opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants: let thy tongue <sup>c</sup>tang arguments of state: put thyself into the trick of singularity. She thus advises thee, that sighs for thee. Remember who commended thy yellow stockings, and wished to see thee ever <sup>d</sup>cross-gartered: I say, remember. Go to, thou art made, if thou desirest to be so; if not, let me see thee a steward still, the fellow of servants, and not worthy to touch fortune’s fingers. Farewell. She that would alter services with thee,

The fortunate-unhappy.” Day-light and <sup>e</sup>champaign discovers not more: this is open. I will be proud, I will read politic authors, I will baffle sir Toby, I will wash off gross acquaintance, I will be <sup>f</sup>point-device the very man. I do not now fool myself, to let imagination jade me, for every reason excites to this, that my lady loves me. She did commend my yellow stockings of late; she did praise my leg being cross-gartered; and in this she manifests herself to my love, and with a kind of injunction drives me to these habits of her liking. I thank my stars I am happy. I will be strange, stout, in yellow stockings, and cross-gartered, even with the swiftness of putting on. Jove, and my stars be praised!—Here is yet a postscript. [Reads.] “Thou canst not choose but know who I am. If thou entertainest my love, let it appear in thy smiling: thy smiles become thee well; therefore in my presence still smile, dear my sweet, I pry thee.”—Jove, I thank thee.—I will smile: I will do every thing that thou wilt have me. [Exit.]

Fab. I will not give my part of this sport for a pension of thousands to be paid from the <sup>g</sup>Sophy.

Sir To. I could marry this wench for this device.

Sir And. So could I too.

Sir To. And ask no other dowry with her, but such another jest.

Sir And. Nor I neither.

Enter MARIA.

Fab. Here comes my noble gull-catcher.

Sir To. Wilt thou set thy foot o’ my neck?

Sir And. Or o’ mine either?

Sir To. Shall I <sup>h</sup>play my freedom at <sup>i</sup>tray-trip, and become thy bond-slave?

Sir And. I’faith, or I either?

Sir To. Why, thou hast put him in such a dream, that when the image of it leaves him he must run mad.

Mar. Nay, but say true: does it work upon him?

Sir To. Like aqua-vitæ with a midwife.

Mar. If you will then see the fruits of the sport, mark his first approach before my lady: he will come to her in yellow stockings, and ’tis a color she abhors; and cross-gartered, a fashion she detests; and he will smile upon her, which will now be so unsuitable to her disposition, being addicted to a melancholy as she is, that it cannot but turn him into a notable contempt. If you will see it, follow me.

Sir To. To the gates of <sup>j</sup>Tartarus, thou most excellent devil of wit!

Sir And. I’ll make one too.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—OLIVIA’S Garden.

Enter VIOLA, and Clown<sup>2</sup> playing on pipe and tabor.

Vio. Save thee, friend, and thy music. Dost thou live by thy tabor?

Clow. No, sir; I live by the church.

Vio. Art thou a churchman?

Clow. No such matter, sir: I do live by the church; for I do live at my house, and my house doth stand by the church.

Vio. So thou may’st say, the king <sup>3</sup>lives by a beggar, if a beggar dwell near him; or, the church stands by thy tabor, if thy tabor stand by the church.

Clow. You have said, sir.—To see this age!—A sentence is but a <sup>k</sup>cheveril glove to a good wit: how quickly the wrong side may be turned outward!

Vio. Nay, that’s certain: they, that dally nicely with words, may quickly make them wanton.

Clow. I would, therefore, my sister had had no name, sir.

Vio. Why, man?

Clow. Why, sir, her name’s a word; and to dally with that word, might make my sister wanton. But, indeed, words are very rascals, since bonds disgraced them.

Vio. Thy reason, man?

Clow. Troth, sir, I can yield you none without words; and words are grown so false, I am loath to prove reason with them.

Vio. I warrant thou art a merry fellow, and carest for nothing.

Clow. Not so, sir, I do care for something; but in my conscience, sir, I do not care for you: if that be to care for nothing, sir, I would it would make you invisible.

Vio. Art not thou the lady Olivia’s fool?

Clow. No, indeed, sir; the lady Olivia has no folly: she will keep no fool, sir, till she be married; and fools are as like husbands, as pilchards are to herrings, the husband’s the bigger. I am, indeed, not her fool, but her corrupter of words.

Vio. I saw thee late at the count Orsino’s.

Clow. Foolery, sir, does walk about the orb, like the sun: it shines every where. I would be sorry, sir, but the fool should be as oft with your master, as with my mistress: I think I saw your wisdom there.

Vio. Nay, an thou pass upon me, I’ll no more with thee. Hold; there’s expenses for thee.

Clow. Now Jove, in his next commodity of hair, send thee a beard.

Vio. By my troth, I’ll tell thee: I am almost sick for one, though I would not have it grow on my chin. Is thy lady within?

Clow. Would not a pair of these have bred, sir?

Vio. Yes, being kept together, and put to use.

Clow. I would play lord <sup>5</sup>Pandarus of Phrygia, sir, to bring a Cressida to this Troilus.

Vio. I understand you, sir: ’tis well begg’d.

Clo. The matter, I hope, is not great, sir, begging but a beggar: Cressida was a beggar. My lady is within, sir. I will construe to them whence you come; who you are, and what you would, are out of my welkin: I might say element, but the word is over-worn. [Exit.]

Vio. This fellow's wise enough to play the fool, And to do that well craves a kind of wit: He must observe their mood on whom he jests, The quality of persons, and the time, Not, like the "haggard," check at every feather That comes before his eye. This is a practice As full of labor as a wise man's art; For folly, that he wisely shows, is fit, But wise men's folly fall'n quite taints their wit.

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH and Sir ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.

Sir To. Save you, gentlemen.

Vio. And you, sir.

Sir And. Dieu vous garde, monsieur.

Vio. Et vous aussi: votre serviteur.

Sir And. I hope, sir, you are; and I am yours.

Sir To. Will you encounter the house? my niece is desirous you should enter, if your trade be to her.

Vio. I am bound to your niece, sir: I mean, she is the best of my voyage.

Sir To. Taste your legs, sir: put them to motion.

Vio. My legs do better understand me, sir, than I understand what you mean by bidding me taste my legs.

Sir To. I mean, to go, sir, to enter.

Vio. I will answer you with gait and entrance. But we are "prevented."

Enter OLIVIA and MARIA.

Most excellent accomplished lady, the heavens rain odors on you!

Sir And. That youth's a rare courtier. "Rain odors?" well.

Vio. My matter hath no voice, lady, but to your own most "pregnant and vouchsafed ear."

Sir And. "Odors," "pregnant," and "vouchsafed:"—I'll get 'em all three ready.

Oli. Let the garden door be shut, and leave me to my hearing.

[Exit Sir TOBY, Sir ANDREW, and MARIA.] Give me your hand, sir.

Vio. My duty, madam, and most humble service.

Oli. What is your name?

Vio. Cesario is your servant's name, fair princess.

Oli. My servant, sir? 'Twas never merry world, Since lowly feigning was call'd compliment.

You're servant to the count Orsino, youth.

Vio. And he is yours, and his must needs be yours: Your servant's servant is your servant, madam.

Oli. For him, I think not on him: for his thoughts, 'Would they were blanks, rather than fill'd with me!

Vio. Madam, I come to whet your gentle thoughts On his behalf.—

Oli. O! by your leave, I pray you:

I bide you never speak again of him; But, would you undertake another suit, I had rather hear you to solicit that, Than music from the spheres.

Vio. Dear lady,—

Oli. Give me leave, 'beseech you. I did send, After the last "enchantment" you did here,

A ring in chase of you: so did I abuse Myself, my servant, and, I fear me, you. Under your hard construction must I sit, To force that on you, in a "shamefac'd cunning," Which you knew none of yours: what might you Have you not set mine honor at the stake, [think?] And baited it with all th' unmuzzled thoughts That tyrannous heart can think? To one of your "receiving"

Enough is shown; a "cyprus," not a bosom, Hides my heart. So, let me hear you speak.

Vio. I pity you.

Oli. That's a degree to love.

Vio. No, not a "grise"; for 'tis a vulgar proof, That very oft we pity enemies.

Oli. Why then, methinks, 'tis time to smile again.

O world, how apt the poor are to be proud!

If one should be a prey, how much the better

To fall before the lion, than the wolf? [Clock strikes.]

The clock upbraids me with the waste of time.—

Be not afraid, good youth, I will not have you;

And yet, when wit and youth is come to harvest,

Your wife is like to reap a proper man.

There lies your way, due west.

Vio. Then westward ho!

Grace, and good disposition 'tend your ladyship.

You'll nothing, madam, to my lord by me?

Oli. Stay:

I prythee, tell me, what thou think'st of me.

Vio. That you do think you are not what you are.

Oli. If I think so, I think the same of you.

Vio. Then think you right: I am not what I am.

Oli. I would, you were as I would have you be!

Vio. Would it be better, madam, than I am?

I wish it might; for now I am your fool.

Oli. O! what a deal of scorn looks beautiful

In the contempt and anger of his lip!

A murderous guilt shows not itself more soon

Than love that would seem hid: love's night is noon.

Cesario, by the roses of the spring,

By maidenhood, honor, truth, and every thing,

I love thee so, that, 'maugre all "my pride,"

Nor wit, nor reason, can my passion hide.

Do not extort thy reasons from this clause,

For, that I woo, thou therefore hast no cause;

But rather, reason thus with reason fetter:

Love sought is good, but given unsought is better.

Vio. By innocence I swear, and by my youth,

I have one heart, one bosom, and one truth,

And that no woman has; nor never none

Shall mistress be of it, save I alone.

And so adieu, good madam: never more

Will I my master's tears to you deplore. [move]

Oli. Yet come again; for thou, perhaps, may'st

That heart, which now abhors, to like his love.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Room in OLIVIA's House.

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH, Sir ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK, and FABIAN.

Sir And. No, faith, I'll not stay a jot longer.

Sir To. Thy reason, dear venom: give thy reason.

Fab. You must needs yield your reason, sir Andrew.

Sir And. Marry, I saw your niece do more favors to the count's serving man, than ever she bestowed upon me: I saw't i' the orchard.

Sir To. Did she see thee the while, old boy? tell me that.

Sir And. As plain as I see you now.

Fab. This was a great argument of love in her toward you.

Sir And. 'Slight! will you make an ass o' me?

Fab. I will prove it legitimate, sir, upon the oaths of judgment and reason.

Sir To. And they have been grand jury-men since before Noah was a sailor.

Fab. She did show favor to the youth in your sight only to exasperate you, to awake your dormouse valor, to put fire in your heart, and brimstone in your liver. You should then have accosted her, and with some excellent jests, fire-new from the mint, you should have banged the youth into dumbness. This was looked for at your hand, and this was balked: the double gilt of this opportunity you let time wash off, and you are now sailed into the north of my lady's opinion; where you will hang like an icicle on a Dutchman's beard, unless you do redeem it by some laudable attempt, either of valor, or policy.

Sir And. An't be any way, it must be with valor, for policy I hate: I had as lief be a <sup>a</sup>Brownist as a politician.

Sir To. Why then, build me thy fortunes upon the basis of valor: challenge me the count's youth to fight with him; hurt him in eleven places: my niece shall take note of it; and assure thyself, there is no love-broker in the world can more prevail in man's commendation with woman, than report of valor.

Fab. There is no way but this, sir Andrew.

Sir And. Will either of you bear me a challenge to him?

Sir To. Go, write it in a martial hand; be <sup>b</sup>curs'd and brief; it is no matter how witty, so it be eloquent, and full of invention: taunt him with the licence of ink: if thou thou'st him some thrice, it shall not be amiss; and as many lies as will lie in thy sheet of paper, although the sheet were big enough for the bed of <sup>c</sup>Ware in England, set 'em down. Go, about it. Let there be gall enough in thy ink, though thou write with a goose-pen, no matter. About it.

Sir And. Where shall I find you?

Sir To. We'll call thee at the <sup>d</sup>cubiculo. Go.

[Exit Sir ANDREW.]

Fab. This is a dear manakin to you, sir Toby.

Sir To. I have been dear to him, lad; some two thousand strong, or so.

Fab. We shall have a rare letter from him; but you'll not deliver it.

Sir To. Never trust me then; and by all means stir on the youth to an answer. I think, oxen and <sup>e</sup>wain-ropes cannot <sup>f</sup>hale them together. For <sup>g</sup>sir Andrew, if he were opened, and you find so much blood in his liver as will clog the foot of a flea, I'll eat the rest of the anatomy.

Fab. And his <sup>h</sup>opposite, the youth, bears in his visage no great pretence of cruelty.

Enter MARIA.

Sir To. Look, where the youngest wren of <sup>i</sup>nine comes.

Mar. If you desire the spleen, and will laugh yourselves into stitches, follow me. Yond' gull Malvolio is turned heathen, a very renegade; for there is no Christian, that means to be saved by believing rightly, can ever believe such impossible passages of grossness. He's in yellow stockings.

Sir To. And cross-gartered?

Mar. Most villainously; like a pedant that keeps a school i' the church.—I have dogged him like his murderer. He does obey every point of the letter that I dropped to betray him: he does smile his face into more lines, than are in the new map, with the augmentation of the <sup>j</sup>Indies. You have not seen such a thing as 'tis; I can hardly forbear hailing things at him. I know, my lady will strike him: if she do, he'll smile, and tak' for a great favor.

Sir To. Come, bring us, bring us where he is.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Street.

Enter SEBASTIAN and ANTONIO.

Seb. I would not, by my will, have troubled you; But, since you make your pleasure of your pains, I will no farther chide you.

Ant. I could not stay behind you: my desire, More sharp than filed steel, did spur me forth; And not all love to see you, (though so much, As might have drawn one to a longer voyage) But jealousy what might befall your travel, Being skillless in these parts; which to a stranger, Unguided, and unfriended, often prove Rough and inhospitable: my willing love, The rather by these arguments of fear, Set forth in your pursuit.

Seb. My kind Antonio, I can no other answer make, but, thanks, <sup>2</sup>And thanks, still thanks; and very oft good turns Are shuffled off with such incurrent pay; But, were my <sup>3</sup>wealth, as is my conscience, firm, You should find better dealing. What's to do? Shall we go see the reliques of this town?

Ant. To-morrow, sir: best first go see your lodging.

Seb. I am not weary, and 'tis long to night.

I pray you, let us satisfy our eyes With the memorials, and the things of fame, That do renown this city.

Ant. 'Would, you'd pardon me. I do not without danger walk these streets. Once, in a sea-fight 'gainst the <sup>4</sup>county's galleys I did some service; of such note, indeed, That, were I ta'en here, it would scarce be answer'd.

Seb. Belike, you slew great number of his people.

Ant. The offence is not of such a bloody nature, Albeit the quality of the time, and quarrel, Might well have given us bloody argument. It might have since been answer'd in repaying What we took from them; which, for traffick's sake, Most of our city did: only myself stood out; For which, if I be <sup>k</sup>lapsed in this place, I shall pay dear.

Seb. Do not, then, walk too open.

Ant. It doth not fit me. Hold, sir; here's my purse. In the south suburbs, at the Elephant, Is best to lodge: I will bespeak our diet, [Edge, Whiles you beguile the time, and feed your knowl- With viewing of the town: there shall you have me.

Seb. Why I your purse?

Ant. Haply your eye shall light upon some toy You have desire to purchase; and your store, I think, is not for idle markets, sir.

Seb. I'll be your purse-bearer, and leave you for an hour.

Ant. To the Elephant.—

Seb. I do remember.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—OLIVIA's Garden.

Enter OLIVIA and MARIA.

Oli. I have sent after him: he says, he'll come. How shall I feast him? what bestow of him? For youth is bought more oft, than begg'd, or borrow'd. I speak too loud.—

Where is Malvolio?—he is sad, and a civil, And suits well for a servant with my fortunes.— Where is Malvolio?

Mar. He is coming, madam; but in very strange manner. He is sure possess'd, madam.

Oli. Why, what's the matter? does he rave?

Mar. No, madam; he does nothing but smile: your ladyship were best to have some guard about you, if he come, for sure the man is tainted in's wits.

Oli. Go call him hither. <sup>1</sup>[Exit MARIA.].—I am If sad and merry madness equal be,— [as mad as he,

Enter MALVOLIO and MARIA.

How now, Malvolio?

Mar. Sweet lady, ha, ha! [Smiles ridiculously.]

Oli. Smil'st thou?

I sent for thee upon a <sup>2</sup>bad occasion.

Mal. Sad, lady? I could be sad. This does make some obstruction in the blood, this cross-gartering; but what of that? if it please the eye of one, it is with me as the very true sonnet <sup>3</sup>hath it, "Please one, and please all."

Oli. Why, how dost thou, man? what is the matter with thee?

Mal. Not black in my mind, though yellow in my legs. It did come to his hands, and commands shall be executed: I think we do know the sweet Roman hand.

Oli. Wilt thou go to bed, Malvolio?

Mal. To bed? ay, sweet-heart, and I'll come to thee.

Oli. God comfort thee! Why dost thou smile so, and kiss thy hand so oft?

Mar. How do you, Malvolio?

Mal. At your request! Yes; nightingales answer daws.

Mar. Why appear you with this ridiculous boldness before my lady?

Mal. "Be not afraid of greatness."—'Twas well writ.

Oli. What meanest thou by that, Malvolio?

Mal. "Some are born great,"—

Oli. Ha?

Mal. "Some achieve greatness,"—

Oli. What say'st thou?

Mal. "And some have greatness thrust upon them."

Oli. Heaven restore thee!

Mal. "Remember, who commended thy yellow stockings;"—

Oli. Thy yellow stockings?

Mal. "And wished to see thee cross-gartered."

Oli. Cross-gartered?

Mal. "Go to: thou art made, if thou desirest to be so;"—

Oli. Am I made?

Mal. "If not, let me see thee a servant still."

Oli. Why, this is very midsummer <sup>c</sup>madness.

Enter Servant.

Ser. Madam, the young gentleman of the count Orsino's is returned. I could hardly entreat him back: he attends your ladyship's pleasure.

Oli. I'll come to him. [Exit Servant.] Good Maria, let this fellow be looked to. Where's my cousin Toby? Let some of my people have a special care of him. I would not have him miscarry for the half of my dowry. [Exeunt OLIVIA and MARIA.]

Mal. Oh, ho? do you come near me now? no worse man than sir Toby to look to me! This concurs directly with the letter: she sends him on purpose, that I may appear stubborn to him; for she incites me to that in the letter. "Cast thy humble slough," says she;—"be opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants,—let thy tongue tang with arguments of state,—put thyself into the trick of singularity:"—and consequently sets down the manner how; as, a sad face, a reverend carriage, a slow tongue, in the habit of some sir of note, and so forth. I have <sup>d</sup>limed her; but it is Jove's doing, and Jove make me thankful. And when she went away now, "Let this fellow be looked to:" a fellow! not Malvolio, nor after my degree, but fellow. Why, everything adheres together, that no dram of a scruple, no scruple of a scruple, no obstacle, no incredulous or unsafe circumstance—What can be said? Nothing that can be can come between me, and the full prospect of my hopes. Well, Jove, not I, is the doer of this, and he is to be thanked.

Re-enter MARIA, with Sir TOBY BELCH, and FABIAN.

Sir To. Which way is he, in the name of sanctity? If all the devils in hell be drawn in little, and Legiun himself possess him, yet I'll speak to him.

Fab. Here he is, here he is.—How is't with you, sir? how is't with you, man?

Mal. Go off; I discard you: let me enjoy my <sup>e</sup>privacy: go off.

Mar. Lo, how hollow the fiend speaks within him! did not I tell you?—Sir Toby, my lady prays you to have a care of him.

Mal. Ah, ha! does she so?

Sir To. Go to, go to: peace! peace! we must deal gently with him; let me alone.—How do you, Malvolio? how is't with you? What, man! defy the devil: consider, he's an enemy to mankind.

Mal. Do you know what you say?

Mar. La, you! an you speak ill of the devil, how he takes it at heart. Pray God, he be not bewitched!

Fab. Carry his water to the wise woman.

Mar. Marry, and it shall be done to-morrow morning, if I live. My lady would not lose him for more than I'll say.

Mal. How now, mistress?

Mar. O lord!

Sir To. Pr'ythee, hold thy peace: this is not the way. Do you not see you move him? let me alone with him.

Fab. No way but gentleness; gently, gently: the fiend is rough, and will not be roughly used.

Sir To. Why, how now, my 'bawcock? how dost thou, <sup>f</sup>chuck?

Mal. Sir!

Sir To. Ay, Biddy, come with me. What, man! 'tis not for gravity to play at <sup>g</sup>cherry-pit with Satan. Hang him, foul <sup>h</sup>collier!

<sup>e</sup> "Fellow" was used for companion, as well as in a derogatory sense.—"My bawcock," i. e., my fine fellow.—"Chuck," is a term of endearment.—<sup>b</sup> "Cherry-pit" was played by pitching cherry-stones into a hole.—<sup>c</sup> "Collier," in Shakespeare's time, was a term of the highest reproach.

Mar. Get him to say his prayers; good sir Toby, get him to pray.

Mal. My prayers, miux!

Mar. No, I warrant you; he will not hear of godliness.

Mal. Go, hang yourselves all! you are idle shallow things: I am not of your element. You shall know more hereafter. [Exit.]

Sir To. Is't possible?

Fab. If this were played upon a stage now, I could condemn it as an improbable fiction.

Sir To. His very genius hath taken the infection of the device, man.

Mar. Nay, pursue him now, lest the device take air, and taint.

Fab. Why, we shall make him mad, indeed.

Mar. The house will be the quieter.

Sir To. Come, we'll have him in a dark <sup>a</sup>room, and bound. My niece is already in the belief that he's mad: we may carry it thus, for our pleasure, and his penance, till our very pastime, tired out of breath, prompts us to have mercy on him; at which time, we will bring the device to the bar, and crown thee for a finder of madmen. But see, but see.

Enter Sir ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.

Fab. More matter for a May <sup>b</sup>morning.

Sir And. Here's the challenge; read it: I warrant, there's vinegar and pepper in't.

Fab. Is't so saucy?

Sir And. Ay, is't, I warrant him: do but read.

Sir To. Give me. [Reads.] "Youth; whatsoever thou art, thou art but a scurvy fellow."

Fab. Good, and valiant.

Sir To. "Wonder not, nor admire not in thy mind, why I do call thee so, for I will show thee no reason for't."

Fab. A good note, that keeps you from the blow of the law.

Sir To. "Thou comest to the lady Olivia, and in my sight she uses thee kindly: but thou liest in thy throat; that is not the matter I challenge thee for."

Fab. Very brief, and <sup>1</sup>to exceeding good senseless.

Sir To. "I will way-lay thee going home; where, if it be thy chance to kill me,"—

Fab. Good.

Sir To. "Thou killest me like a rogue and a villain."

Fab. Still you keep o' the windy side of the law: good.

Sir To. "Fare thee well; and God have mercy upon one of our souls! He may have mercy upon mine; but my hope is better, and so look to thyself. Thy friend, as thou usest him, and thy sworn enemy, ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK." If this letter move him not, his legs cannot. I'll give't him.

Mar. You may have very fit occasion for't: he is now in some commerce with my lady, and will by and by depart.

Sir To. Go <sup>2</sup>to, sir Andrew; scout me for him at the corner of the orchard, like a bum-bailie. So soon as ever thou seest him, draw, and, as thou drawest, swear horrible; for it comes to pass oft, that a terrible oath, with a swaggering accent, sharply twanged off, gives manhood more approbation than ever profit itself would have earned him. Away!

Sir And. Nay, let me alone for swearing. [Exit.]

Sir To. Now, will not I deliver his letter; for the behavior of the young gentleman gives him out to be of good capacity and breeding: his employment between his lord and my niece confirms no less; therefore this letter, being so excellently ignorant, will breed no terror in the youth: he will find it comes from a clodpole. But, sir, I will deliver his challenge by word of mouth; set upon Ague-cheek a notable report of valor, and drive the gentleman, (as, I know, his youth will aptly receive it) into a most hideous opinion of his rage, skill, fury, and impetuosity. This will so fright them both, that they will kill one another by the look, like cockatrices.

Fab. Here he comes with your niece. Give them way, till he take leave, and presently after him.

Sir To. I will meditate the while upon some horrid message for a challenge.

[Exeunt Sir TOBY, FABIAN, and MARIA.]

Re-enter OLIVIA, with VIOLA.

Oli. I have said too much unto a heart of stone, And laid mine honor too <sup>c</sup>unchary on't. There's something in me that reproves my fault But such a headstrong potent fault it is, That it but mocks reproof.

Vio. With the same <sup>d</sup>behavior that your passion bears, Go on my master's griefs.

Oli. Here; wear this <sup>d</sup>jewel for me: 'tis my pic- Refuse it not, it hath no tongue to vex you; [Ture. And, I beseech you, come again to-morrow. What shall you ask of me, that I'll deny,

That, honor sav'd, may upon asking give?

Vio. Nothing but this; your true love for my master.

Oli. How with mine honor may I give him that, Which I have given to you?

Vio.

I will acquit you.

Oli. Well, come again to-morrow. Fare thee well: A fiend like thee might bear my soul to hell. [Exit.]

Re-enter Sir TOBY BELCH, and FABIAN.

Sir To. Gentleman, God save thee.

Vio. And you, sir.

Sir To. That defence thou hast, betake thee to't: of what nature the wrongs are thou hast done him, I know not; but thy interceptor, full of despight, bloody as the hunter, attends thee at the orchard end. Dismount thy <sup>e</sup>tuck; be <sup>f</sup>yaire in thy preparation, for thy assailant is quick, skilful, and deadly.

Vio. You mistake, sir: I am sure, no man hath any quarrel to me. My remembrance is very free and clear from any image of offence done to any man.

Sir To. You'll find it otherwise, I assure you: therefore, if you hold your life at any price, betake you to your guard; for your <sup>g</sup>opposite hath in him what youth, strength, skill, and wrath, can furnish man withal.

Vio. I pray you, sir, what is he?

Sir To. He is <sup>3</sup>a knight, dubbed with unhatch'd rapier, and on carpet <sup>h</sup>consideration, but he is a devil in private brawl: souls and bodies hath he divorced three, and his incensment at this moment is so implacable, that satisfaction can be none but by pangs of death and sepulchre. Hob, <sup>i</sup>nob, is his word; give't, or take't.

Vio. I will return again into the house, and desire some conduct of the lady: I am no fighter. I have heard of some kind of men, that put quarrels purposely on others to taste their valor; belike, this is a man of that <sup>k</sup>quirk.

Sir To. Sir, no; his indignation derives itself out of a very competent injury: therefore, get you on, and give him his desire. Back you shall not to the house, unless you undertake that with me, which with as much safety you might answer him: therefore, on, <sup>a</sup>strip your sword stark naked; for meddle you must, that's certain, or forswear to wear iron about you.

Vio. This is as uncivil, as strange. I beseech you, do me this courteous office, as to know of the knight what my offence to him is: it is something of my negligence, nothing of my purpose.

Sir To. I will do so. Signior Fabian, stay you by this gentleman till my return. [Exit Sir Toby.]

Vio. Pray you, sir, do you know of this matter?

Fab. I know, the knight is incensed against you, even to a mortal <sup>a</sup>arbitrement, but nothing of the circumstance more.

Vio. I beseech you, what manner of man is he?

Fab. Nothing of that wonderful promise, to read him by his form, as you are like to find him in the proof of his valor. He is, indeed, sir, the most skilful, bloody, and fatal <sup>b</sup>opposite that you could possibly have found in any part of Illyria. Will you walk towards him? I will make your peace with him, if I can.

Vio. I shall be much bound to you for't: I am one, that would rather go with sir priest, than sir knight: I care not who knows so much of my mettle. [Exeunt.]

Sir To. Why, man, he's a very devil, I have not seen such a <sup>c</sup>virago. I had a pass with him, rapier, scabbard, and all, and he gives me the <sup>d</sup>stuck in, with such a mortal motion, that it is inevitable; and on the answer, he <sup>e</sup>pays you as surely as your feet hit the ground they step on. They say, he has been fencer to the Sophy.

Sir And. Pox on't, I'll not meddle with him.

Sir To. Ay, but he will not now be pacified: Fabian can scarce hold him yonder.

Sir And. Plague on't; an I thought he had been valiant, and so cunning in fence, I'd have seen him damned ere I'd have challenged him. Let him let the matter slip, and I'll give him my horse, grey Capulet.

Sir To. I'll make the motion. Stand here; make a good show on't. This shall end without the perdition of souls. [Aside.] Marry, I'll ride your horse as well as I ride you.

I have his horse [To FAB.] to take up the quarrel. I have persuaded him, the youth's a devil.

Fab. He is as horribly <sup>c</sup>conceited of him; [To Sir Toby] and pants, and looks pale, as if a bear were at his heels.

Sir To. There's no remedy, sir: [To VIOLA] he will fight with you for oath's sake. Marry, he hath better bethought him of his quarrel, and he finds that now scarce to be worth talking of: therefore, draw for the supportance of his vow: he protests, he will not hurt you.

Vio. [Aside.] Pray God defend me! A little thing would make me tell them how much I lack of a man.

Fab. Give ground, if you see him furious.

Sir To. Come, sir Andrew, there's no remedy: the gentleman will, for his honor's sake, have one bout with you: he cannot by the <sup>e</sup>duello avoid it; but he has promised me, as he is a gentleman and a soldier, he will not hurt you. Come on; to't.

Sir And. Pray God, he keep } <sup>4</sup> [They draw, and his oath! } go back from

Vio. I do assure you, 'tis } each other. } against my will.

Enter ANTONIO.

Ant. Put up your sword.—If this young gentleman Have done offence, I take the fault on me:

If you offend him, I for him defy you. [Drawing.]

Sir To. You, sir? why, what are you?

Ant. One, sir, that for his love dares yet do more, Than you have heard him brag to you he will.

Sir To. Nay, if you be an <sup>b</sup>undertaker, I am for you. <sup>5</sup> [Drawing.]

Enter Officers.

Fab. O, good sir Toby, hold! here come the officers.

Sir To. I'll be with you anon.

Vio. Pray, sir; put your sword up, if you please.

Sir And. Marry, will I, sir:—and, for that I promised you, I'll be as good as my word. He will bear you easily, and reins well.

1 Off. This is the man: do thy office.

2 Off. Antonio, I arrest thee at the suit Of count Orsino.

Ant. You do mistake me, sir.

1 Off. No, sir, no jot: I know your <sup>i</sup>favor well, Though now you have no sea-cap on your head.— Take him away: he knows, I know him well.

Ant. I must obey.—[To VIOLA.] This comes with seeking you;

But there's no remedy: I shall answer it. What will you do? Now my necessity Makes me to ask you for my purse. It grieves me Much more for what I cannot do for you, Than what befalls myself. You stand amaz'd, But be of comfort.

2 Off. Come, sir, away.

Ant. I must entreat of you some of that money.

Vio. What money, sir?

For the fair kindness you have show'd me here, And part, being prompted by your present trouble, Out of my lean and low ability I'll lend you something. My <sup>a</sup>having is not much: I'll make division of my present with you. Hold, there's half my coffer.

Ant. Will you deny me now?

Is't possible, that my deserts to you Can lack persuasion? Do not tempt my misery, Lest that it make me so unsound a man, As to upbraid you with those kindnesses That I have done for you.

Vio. I know of none;

Nor know I you by voice, or any feature.

I hate ingratitude more in a man, Than lying vainness, babbling drunkenness, Or any taint of vice whose strong corruption Inhabits our frail blood.

Ant. O, heavens themselves!

2 Off. Come, sir: I pray you, go. [See here,

Ant. Let me speak a little. This youth, that you I snatch'd one half out of the jaws of death;

Reliev'd him with such sanctity of love, And to his image, which, methought, did promise Most <sup>b</sup>veritable worth, did I devotion. [away!

1 Off. What's that to us? The time goes by:

Ant. But, O, how vile an idol proves this god!—

Thou hast, Sebastian, done good feature shame.
In nature there's no blemish, but the mind;
None can be call'd deform'd, but the unkind:
Virtue is beauty; but the beauteous evil
Are empty trunks, <sup>a</sup>o'erflourish'd by the devil.

I Off. The man grows mad: away with him!
Come, come, sir.

Ant. Lead me on. [Exeunt Officers, with ANTONIO.]
Vio. Methinks, his words do from such passion fly,
That he believes himself; so do not <sup>b</sup>I.

Prove true, imagination, O! prove true,
That I, dear brother, be now ta'en for you!

Sir To. Come hither, knight; come hither, Fabian:
we'll whisper o'er a couplet or two of most sage saws.

Vio. He nam'd Sebastian: I my brother know
Yet living in my <sup>c</sup>glass; even such, and so,
In favor was my brother; and he went
Still in this fashion, color, ornament,
For him I imitate. O! if it prove,
Tempests are kind, and salt waves fresh in love!

[Exit.]

Sir To. A very dishonest paltry boy, and more a coward than a hare. His dishonesty appears, in leaving his friend here in necessity, and denying him; and for his cowardship, ask Fabian.

Fab. A coward, a most devout coward; religious in it.

Sir And. 'Slid, I'll after him again, and beat him.
Sir To. Do; cuff him soundly, but never draw thy sword.

Sir And. An I do not,— [Exit]

Fab. Come, let's see the event.

Sir To. I dare lay any money 'twill be nothing yet.
[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Street before OLIVIA's House.

Enter SEBASTIAN and CLOWN.

Clo. Will you make me believe that I am not sent for you?

Seb. Go to, go to; thou art a foolish fellow:
Let me be clear of thee.

Clo. Well held out, 't' faith! No, I do not know you; nor I am not sent to you by my lady to bid you come speak with her; nor your name is not master Cesario; nor this is not my nose neither.—Nothing, that is so, is so.

Seb. I pr'ythee, vent thy folly somewhere else:
Thou know'st not me.

Clo. Vent my folly! He has heard that word of some great man, and now applies it to a fool. Vent my folly! I am afraid this great <sup>1</sup>lubberly world will prove a cockney. I pr'ythee now, ungird thy strangeness, and tell me what I shall vent to my lady. Shall I vent to her that thou art coming?

Seb. I pr'ythee, foolish <sup>d</sup>Greek, depart from me.
There's money for thee: if you tarry longer,
I shall give worse payment.

Clo. By my troth, thou hast an open hand.—These wise men, that give fools money, get themselves a good report after fourteen years' <sup>e</sup>purchase.

Enter SIR ANDREW, SIR TOBY, and FABIAN.

Sir And. Now, sir, have I met you again? there's for you. [Striking SEBASTIAN.]

myself, because I dare not hope that my brother still lives.—
<sup>c</sup>That is, in the reflection of her own figure.—<sup>d</sup>Foolish Greek, and "merry Greek," were ancient proverbial expressions applied to boon companions.—<sup>e</sup>That is, at a very extravagant price.

Seb. Why, there's for thee, and there, and there.
Are all the people mad? [Beating SIR ANDREW.]
Sir To. Hold, sir, or I'll throw your dagger o'er the house.

Clo. This will I tell my lady straight. I would not be in some of your coats for two-pence.

[Exit CLOWN.]

Sir To. Come on, sir: hold! [Holding SEBASTIAN.]
Sir And. Nay, let him alone; I'll go another way to work with him: I'll have an action of battery against him, if there be any law in Illyria. Though
I struck him first, yet it's no matter for that.

Seb. Let go thy hand.

Sir To. Come, sir, I will not let you go. Come, my young soldier, put up your iron: you are well fleshed. Come on.

Seb. I will be free from thee. What would'st thou now? <sup>2</sup>[Breaking away.]
If thou dar'st tempt me farther, draw thy sword.

Sir To. What, what! Nay then, I must have an ounce or two of this malapert blood from you.

Enter OLIVIA.

Oli. Hold, Toby! on thy life, I charge thee, hold!
Sir To. Madam—

Oli. Will it be ever thus? Ungracious wretch!
Fit for the mountains, and the barbarous caves,
Where manners ne'er were preach'd. Out of my
Be not offended, dear Cesario.— [sigh!—

<sup>1</sup>Rudesby, begone!—I pr'ythee, gentle friend,
[Exeunt SIR TOBY, SIR ANDREW, and FABIAN.]

Let thy fair wisdom, not thy passion, sway
In this uncivil, and unjust <sup>a</sup>extent

Against thy peace. Go with me to my house;
And hear thou there how many fruitless pranks
This ruffian hath <sup>b</sup>botch'd up, that thou thereby May'st smile at this. Thou shalt not choose but go:
Do not deny. <sup>1</sup>Beshrew his soul for me,
He started one poor <sup>k</sup>heart of mine in thee.

Or I am mad, or else this is a dream.

Let fancy still my sense in Lethe steep;
If it be thus to dream, still let me sleep.

Oli. Nay, come, I pr'ythee. Would thou'dst be rul'd by me!

Seb. Madam, I will.

Oli. O! say so, and so be. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in OLIVIA's House.

Enter MARIA and CLOWN.

Mar. Nay, I pr'ythee, put on this gown, and this beard: make him believe thou art sir Topas, the curate: do it quickly; I'll call sir Toby the whilst.

[Exit MARIA.]

Clo. Well, I'll put it on, and I will <sup>a</sup>dissemble myself in't: and I would I were the first that ever dissembled in such a gown. <sup>4</sup>[Putting it on.] I am not tall enough to become the function well, nor lean enough to be thought a good student; but to be said an honest man, and a good housekeeper, goes as fairly as to say a careful man, and a great scholar.
The <sup>a</sup>competitors enter.

Enter SIR TOBY BELCH and MARIA.

Sir To. Jove bless thee, master parson.
Clo. Bonos dies, sir Toby: for as the old hermit of Prague, that never saw pen and ink, very wittily

<sup>1</sup>"Rudesby," i. e., rude fellow.—<sup>a</sup>Violence.—<sup>b</sup>"Botch'd up," i. e., made up.—<sup>1</sup>Ill betide.—<sup>2</sup>Heart and hart were formerly written alike.—<sup>3</sup>What relish is in this? i. e., what judgment am I to make of it?—<sup>4</sup>Disguise.—<sup>a</sup>Confederates.

said to a niece of king Gorboduc, "That, that is, is;" so I, being master parson, am master parson, for what is that, but that? and is, but is?

Sir To. To him, sir Topas.

Clo. What, ho! I say.—Peace in this prison.

Sir To. The knave counterfeits well; a good knave.

Mal. [Within.] Who calls there?

Clo. Sir Topas, the curate, who comes to visit Malvolio the lunatic.

Mal. Sir Topas, sir Topas, good sir Topas, go to my lady.

Clo. Out, hyperbolical fiend! how vexest thou this man. Talkest thou nothing but of ladies?

Sir To. Well said, master parson.

Mal. Sir Topas, never was man thus wronged. Good sir Topas, do not think I am mad: they have laid me here in hideous darkness.

Clo. Fie, thou dishonest Sathan! I call thee by the most modest terms; for I am one of those gentle ones, that will use the devil himself with courtesy. Say'st thou that house is dark?

Mal. As hell, sir Topas.

Clo. Why, it hath <sup>a</sup>bay-windows transparent as barricadoes, and the clear stories towards the south-north are as lustrous as ebony; and yet complainest thou of obstruction?

Mal. I am not mad, sir Topas. I say to you, this house is dark.

Clo. Madman, thou errest: I say there is no darkness but ignorance, in which thou art more puzzled than the Egyptians in their fog.

Mal. I say, this house is as dark as ignorance, though ignorance were as dark as hell; and I say, there was never man thus abused. I am no more mad than you are: make the trial of it in any constant <sup>b</sup>question.

Clo. What is the opinion of Pythagoras concerning wild-fowl?

Mal. That the soul of our grandam might haply inhabit a bird.

Clo. What thinkest thou of his opinion?

Mal. I think nobly of the soul, and no way approve his opinion.

Clo. Fare thee well: remain thou still in darkness. Thou shalt hold the opinion of Pythagoras, ere I will allow of thy wits, and fear to kill a <sup>c</sup>woodcock, lest thou disposess the soul of thy grandam. Fare thee well. <sup>2</sup>[Closing the door.]

Mal. Sir Topas! sir Topas!—

Sir To. My most exquisite sir Topas.

Clo. Nay, I am for all <sup>d</sup>waters.

Mar. Thou might'st have done this without thy beard, and gown: he sees thee not.

Sir To. To him in thine own voice, and bring me word how thou findest him: I would, we were <sup>3</sup>all well rid of this knavery. If he may be conveniently delivered, I would he were; for I am now so far in offence with my niece, that I cannot pursue with any safety this sport to the upshot. Come by and by to my chamber. [Exeunt Sir TOBY and MARIA.]

Clo. "Hey Robin, jolly Robin,

Tell me how thy lady does." [Singing.]

Mal. Fool!

Clo. "My lady is unkind, perdy."

Mal. Fool!

Clo. "Alas, why is she so?"

Mal. Fool, I say.

Clo. "She loves another"—Who calls, ha?

Mal. Good fool, as ever thou wilt deserve well at my hand, help me to a candle, and pen, ink, and paper. As I am a gentleman, I will live to be thankful to thee for't.

Clo. Master Malvolio!

Mal. Ay, good fool.

Clo. Alas, sir, how fell you besides your five wits?

Mal. Fool, there was never man so notoriously abused: I am as well in my wits, fool, as thou art.

Clo. But as well? then you are mad, indeed, if you be no better in your wits than a fool.

Mal. They have here <sup>e</sup>propertied me; keep me in darkness, send ministers to me, asses! and do all they can to face me out of my wits.

Clo. Advise you what you say: the minister is here. <sup>5</sup>[Speaking as sir Topas.—Malvolio, Malvolio, thy wits the heavens restore! endeavor thyself to sleep, and leave thy vain bibble babble.

Mal. Sir Topas,—

Clo. Maintain no words with him, good <sup>f</sup>fellow. —Who, I, sir? not I, sir. God b' wi' you, good sir Topas.—Marry, amen.—I will, sir, I will.

Mal. Fool, fool, fool, I say.

Clo. Alas, sir, be patient. What say you, sir? I am <sup>g</sup>shent for speaking to you.

Mal. Good fool, help me to some light, and some paper: I tell thee, I am as well in my wits, as any man in Illyria.

Clo. Well-a-day, that you were, sir!

Mal. By this hand, I am. Good fool, some ink, paper, and light, and convey what I will set down to my lady: it shall advantage thee more than ever the bearing of letter did.

Clo. I will help you to't. But tell me true, are you not mad indeed? or do you but counterfeit?

Mal. Believe me, I am not: I tell thee true.

Clo. Nay, I'll ne'er believe a madman, till I see his brains. I will fetch you light, and paper, and ink.

Mal. Fool, I'll requite it in the highest degree: I pry'thee, be gone.

Clo. <sup>6</sup>[Singing.] I am gone, sir,

And anon, sir,

I'll be with you again,

<sup>7</sup>With a trice,

<sup>8</sup>Like the old <sup>h</sup>vice,

Your need to sustain;

Who with dagger of lath,

In his rage and his wrath,

Cries, Ah, ha! to the devil:

Like a mad lad,

Pare thy nails, dad,

Adieu, Goodman Drivel. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—OLIVIA'S Garden.

Enter SEBASTIAN.

Seb. This is the air; that is the glorious sun; This pearl she gave me, I do feel't, and see't; And though 'tis wonder that enrups me thus, Yet 'tis not madness. Where's Antonio then? I could not find him at the Elephant;— Yet there he was, and there I found this <sup>i</sup>credit, That he did range the town to seek me out. His counsel now might do me golden service:

For though my soul disputes well with my sense,
That this may be some error, but no madness,
Yet doth this accident and flood of fortune
So far exceed all instance, all<sup>a</sup> discourse,
That I am ready to distrust mine eyes,
And wrangle with my reason, that persuades me
To any other trust but that I am mad;
Or else the lady's mad: yet, if 'twere so, [ers,
She could not sway her house, command her<sup>b</sup> follow-
Take, and give back,<sup>1</sup> and thus despatch affairs,
With such a smooth, discreet, and stable bearing,
As I perceive, she does. There's something in't,
That is<sup>c</sup> deceivable. But here the lady comes.

Enter OLIVIA and a Priest.

Oli. Blame not this haste of mine. If you mean
Now go with me, and with this holy man, [well,
Into the<sup>d</sup> chantry by; there, before him,
And underneath that consecrated roof,
Plight me the full assurance of your faith;
That my most jealous and too doubtful soul
May live at peace: he shall conceal it,
“Whiles you are willing it shall come to note,
What time we will our celebration keep
According to my birth.—What do you say?

Seb. I'll follow this good man, and go with you,
And, having sworn truth, ever will be true.

Oli. Then lead the way, good father; and heavens
so shine,
That they may fairly note this act of mine! [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Street before OLIVIA's House.

Enter Clown and FABIAN.

Fab. Now, as thou lov'st me, let me see his letter.

Clo. Good master Fabian, grant me another request.

Fab. Any thing.

Clo. Do not desire to see this letter.

Fab. This is, to give a dog, and in recompense desire my dog again.

Enter DUKE, VIOLA, and Attendants.

Duke. Belong you to the lady Olivia, friends?

Clo. Ay, sir; we are some of her trappings.

Duke. I know thee well: how dost thou, my good fellow?

Clo. Truly, sir, the better for my foes, and the worse for my friends.

Duke. Just the contrary; the better for thy friends.

Clo. No, sir, the worse.

Duke. How can that be?

Clo. Marry, sir, they praise me, and make an ass of me: now, my foes tell me plainly I am an ass; so that by my foes, sir, I profit in the knowledge of myself, and by my friends I am abused; so that, conclusions to be as kisses, if your four negatives make your two<sup>e</sup> affirmatives, why then, the worse for my friends, and the better for my foes.

Duke. Why, this is excellent.

Clo. By my troth, sir, no; though it please you to be one of my friends.

Duke. Thou shalt not be the worse for me: there's gold.

Clo. But that it would be double-dealing, sir, I would you could make it another.

Duke. O! you give me ill counsel.

Clo. Put your grace in your pocket, sir, for this once, and let your flesh and blood obey it.

Duke. Well, I will be so much a sinner to be a double-dealer: there's another.

Clo. Primo, secundo, tertio, is a good play; and the old saying is, the third pays for all: the<sup>2</sup> trip-let, sir, is a good tripping measure; or the bells of St. Bennet, sir, may put you in mind—one, two, three.

Duke. You can fool no more money out of me at this throw: if you will let your lady know I am here to speak with her, and bring her along with you, it may awake my bounty further.

Clo. Marry, sir, lullaby to your bounty, till I come again. I go, sir; but I would not have you to think, that my desire of having is the sin of covetousness; but, as you say, sir, let your bounty take a nap, I will awake it anon. [Exit Clown.

Enter ANTONIO and Officers.

Off. Here comes the man, sir, that did rescue me.

Duke. That face of his I do remember well; Yet, when I saw it last, it was besmeared, As black as Vulcan, in the smoke of war.

A<sup>3</sup> bawbling vessel was he captain of,
For shallow draught and bulk unprizable,
With which such<sup>4</sup> scathful grapple did he make
With the most noble bottom of our fleet,
That very envy, and the tongue of loss,
Cried fame and honor on him.—What's the matter?

Off. Orsino, this is that Antonio,
That took the Phoenix, and her<sup>5</sup> freight, from Candy;
And this is he, that did the Tiger board,
When your young nephew Titus lost his leg.
Here in the streets, desperate of shame and<sup>6</sup> state,
In private<sup>7</sup> mbrabble did we apprehend him.

Off. He did me kindness, sir, drew on my side,
But, in conclusion, put strange speech upon me;
I know not what 'twas, but distraction.

Duke. Notable pirate, thou salt-water thief,
What foolish boldness brought thee to their mercies,
Whom thou, in terms so bloody, and so<sup>8</sup> dear,
Hast made thine enemies?

Ant. Orsino, noble sir,
Be pleas'd that I shake off these names you give me:
Antonio never yet was thief, or pirate,
Though, I confess, on base and ground enough,
Orsino's enemy. A witchcraft drew me hither:
That most ingrateful boy there, by your side,
From the rude sea's enrag'd and foamy mouth
Did I redeem: a wreck past hope he was.

His life I gave him, and did thereto add
My love, without retention, or restraint,
All his in dedication: for his sake,
Did I expose myself, pure for his love,
Into the danger of this adverse town;
Drew to defend him, when he was beset:
Where being apprehended, his false cunning
(Not meaning to partake with me in danger)
Taught him to face me out of his acquaintance,
And grew a twenty-years-reMOVED thing,
While one would wink; denied me mine own purse,
Which I had recommended to his use
Not half an hour before.

Vio. How can this be?

Duke. When came he to this town?

Ant. To-day, my lord; and for three months before,
No interim, not a minute's vacancy,
Both day and night did we keep company.

Enter OLIVIA and Attendants.

Duke. Here comes the countess: now heaven walks on earth!—

But for thee, fellow; fellow, thy words are madness:
Three months this youth hath tended upon me;
But more of that anon.—Take him aside.

Oli. What would my lord, but that he may not have,
Wherein Olivia may seem serviceable?—
Cesario, you do not keep promise with me.

Vio. Madam?

Duke. Gracious Olivia,—

Oli. What do you say, Cesario?—Good my lord,—

Vio. My lord would speak, my duty hushes me.

Oli. If it be aught to the old tune, my lord,—

It is as <sup>a</sup> fat and fulsome to mine ear,
As howling after music.

Duke. Still so cruel?

Oli. Still so constant, lord.

Duke. What, to perverseness? you uncivil lady,
To whose ingrate and unauspicious altars
My soul the faithful<sup>t</sup> offerings hath breath'd out,
That e'er devotion tender'd. What shall I do?

Oli. Even what it please my lord, that shall become
him.

Duke. Why should I not, had I the heart to do it,
Like to the Egyptian<sup>b</sup> thief at point of death,
Kill what I love? a savage jealousy,
That sometimes savors nobly.—But hear me this:
Since you to non-regardance cast my faith,
And that I partly know the instrument
That screws me from my true place in your favor,
Live you the marble-breasted tyrant still;
But this your minion, whom, I know, you love,
And whom, by heaven I swear, I tender dearly,
Him will I tear out of that cruel eye,
Where he sits crowned in his master's spite.—
Come boy, with me: my thoughts are ripe in mischief:
I'll sacrifice the lamb that I do love,
To spite a raven's heart within a dove. [Going.]

Vio. And I, most jocund, apt, and willingly,
To do you rest a thousand deaths would die.

[Following.]

Oli. Where goes Cesario?

Vio. After him I love,
More than I love these eyes, more than my life,
More, by all mores, than e'er I shall love wife.
If I do feign, you witnesses above
Punish my life for tainting of my love!

Oli. Ah me! detested? how am I beguil'd!

Vio. Who does beguile you? who does do you wrong?

Oli. Hast thou forgot thyself? Is it so long?—
Call forth the holy father? [Exit an Attendant.]

Duke. Come away. [To VIOLA.]

Oli. Whither, my lord?—Cesario, husband, stay.
Duke. Husband?

Oli. Ay, husband: can he that deny?

Duke. Her husband, sirrah?

Vio. No, my lord, not I.

Oli. Alas! it is the baseness of thy fear,
That makes thee strangle thy propriety.
Fear not, Cesario: take thy fortunes up;
Be that thou know'st thou art, and then thou art
As great as that thou fear'st.—O, welcome, father!

Re-enter Attendant with the Priest.

Father, I charge thee, by thy reverence,
Here to unfold (though lately we intended
To keep in darkness, what occasion now
Reveals before 'tis ripe) what thou dost know,
Hath newly past between this youth and me.

Priest. A contract<sup>1</sup> and eternal bond of love,
Confirm'd by mutual joinder of your hands,
Attested by the holy close of lips,
Strengthen'd by interchangement of your<sup>d</sup> rings;
And all the ceremony of this compact
Seal'd in my function, by my testimony:
Since when, my watch hath told me, toward my grave
I have travelled but two hours.

Duke. O, thou dissembling cub! what wilt thou be,
When time hath sow'd a grizzle on thy<sup>e</sup> case?
Or will not else thy craft so quickly grow,
That thine own trip shall be thine overthrow?
Farewell, and take her; but direct thy feet,
Where thou and I henceforth may never meet.

Vio. My lord, I do protest,—

Oli. O! do not swear:
Hold little faith, though thou hast too much fear.

Enter Sir ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK, with his head broken.

Sir And. For the love of God, a surgeon! send one presently to sir Toby.

Oli. What's the matter?

Sir And. He has broke my head across, and has given sir Toby a bloody coxcomb too. For the love of God, your help! I had rather than forty pound I were at home.

Oli. Who has done this, sir Andrew?

Sir And. The count's gentleman, one Cesario.
We took him for a coward, but he's the very devil incarnate.

Duke. My gentleman, Cesario?

Sir And. Od's lifelings! here he is.—You broke my head for nothing; and that that I did, I was set out to do't by sir Toby.

Vio. Why do you speak to me? I never hurt you:
You drew your sword upon me, without cause;
But I bespake you fair, and hurt you not.

Sir And. If a bloody coxcomb be a hurt, you have hurt me: I think you set nothing by a bloody coxcomb.

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH, drunk, led by the Clown.
Here comes sir Toby halting: you shall hear more:
but if he had not been in drink, he would have tickled you 'othergates than he did.

Duke. How now, gentleman; how is't with you?
Sir To. That's all one: he has hurt me, and there's the end on't.—Sot, did'st see Dick surgeon, sot?

Clow. O! he's drunk, sir Toby, an hour ago his eyes were set at eight i' the morning.

Sir To. Then he's a rogue, and a passy-measures pavin. I hate a drunken rogue.

Oli. Away with him! Who hath made this havoc with them?

Sir And. I'll help you, sir Toby, because we'll be dressed together.

Sir To. Will you help? An ass-head, and a cox-comb, and a knave! a thin-faced knave, a gull!

Oli. Get him to bed, and let his hurt be look'd to.

[Eccent Clown, Sir TOBY, and Sir ANDREW.]

Seb. I am sorry, madam, I have hurt your kinsman;

The story is related by Heliodorus.—<sup>c</sup> Strangle thy propriety," i. e., disown thy property.

ring.—<sup>2</sup> "Thy ease," i. e., thy exterior.—<sup>3</sup> Otherwise.—<sup>4</sup> The
"passy-measures pavin" was a grave, solemn dance; and sir
Toby means that the surgeon is a rogue, and a grave, solemn coxcomb.

But had it been the brother of my blood,
I must have done no less with wit and safety.
You throw a strange regard upon me, and by that I do perceive it hath offended you:
Pardon me, sweet one, even for the vows
We made each other but so late ago.

Duke. One face, one voice, one habit, and two
A natural<sup>a</sup> perspective, that is, and is not. [persons;]

Seb. Antonio! O, my dear Antonio!
How have the hours rack'd and tortur'd me,
Since I have lost thee!

Ant. Sebastian are you?

Seb. Fear'st thou that, Antonio?

Ant. How have you made division of yourself?—
An apple cleft in two is not more twin

Than these two creatures. Which is Sebastian?

Oli. Most wonderful!

Seb. Do I stand there? I never had a brother;
Nor can there be that deity in my nature,
Of here and everywhere. I had a sister,
Whom the blind waves and surges have devour'd.—
[To Viola.] Of<sup>b</sup> charity, what kin are you to me?
What countryman? what name? what parentage?

Vio. Of Messaline: Sebastian was my father;
Such a Sebastian was my brother too,
So went he<sup>c</sup> suited to his watery tomb.
If spirits can assume both form and suit,
You come to fright us.

Seb. A spirit I am indeed;

But am in that dimension grossly clad,
Which from the tomb I did participate.

Were you a woman, as the rest goes even,
I should my tears let fall upon your cheek,
And say—thrice welcome, drowned Viola!

Vio. My father had a mole upon his brow.

Seb. And so had mine.

Vio. And died that day, when Viola from her birth
Had number'd thirteen years.

Seb. O! that record is lively in my soul.

He finished, indeed, his mortal act

That day that made my sister thirteen years.

Vio. If nothing<sup>d</sup> lets to make us happy both,

But this my masculine usurp'd attire,
Do not embrace me, till each circumstance
Of place, time, fortune, do cohere, and jump,
That I am Viola: which to confirm,
I'll bring you to a<sup>e</sup> captain's in this town,
Where lie my maiden weeds; by whose gentle help
I was preserv'd to serve this noble count.
All the occurrences of my fortune since
Hath been between this lady, and this lord.

Seb. So comes it, lady, [To OLIVIA.] you have
But nature to her bias<sup>f</sup> true in that. [been mistook;
You would have been contracted to a maid,
Nor are you therein, by my life, deceiv'd;
You are betroth'd both to a maid and man.

Duke. Be not amaz'd; right noble is his blood.—
If this be so, and yet the glass seems true,
I shall have share in this most happy wreck.

Boy, [To VIOLA.] thou hast said to me a thousand
Thou never should'st love woman like to me. [times,

Vio. And all those sayings will I over-swear,
And all those swearings keep as true in soul,
As doth that orb'd continent, the fire
That severs day from night.

Duke. Give me thy hand;

And let me see thee in thy woman's weeds.

Vio. The captain, that did bring me first on shore,
Hath my maid's garments: he, upon some action,
Is now in durance at Malvolio's suit,

A gentleman, and follower of my lady's.

Oli. He shall enlarge him.—Fetch Malvolio
And yet, alas! now I remember me, [hither:—
They say, poor gentleman, he's much distract.
A most<sup>g</sup> distracting frenzy of mine own
From my remembrance clearly banish'd his.—

Re-enter Clown, with a letter.

How does he, sirrah?

Clow. Truly, madam, he holds Beelzebub at the stave's end, as well as a man in his case may do.
He has here writ a letter to you: I should have given it you to-day morning; but as a madman's epistles are no gospels, so it<sup>h</sup> skills not much when they are delivered.

Oli. Open it, and read it.

Clow. Look then to be well edified, when the fool delivers the madman:—[Reads.] "By the Lord, madam,"—

Oli. How now? art thou mad?

Clow. No, madam, I do but read madness: an your ladyship will have it as it ought to be, you must allow<sup>i</sup> vox.

Oli. Pr'ythee, read i' thy right wits.

Clow. So I do, madonna; but to read his right wits, is to read thus: therefore<sup>j</sup> perpend, my princess, and give ear.

Oli. Read it you, sirrah.

[To FABIAN.

Fab. [Reads.] "By the Lord, madam, you wrong me, and the world shall know it: though you have put me into darkness, and given your drunken cousin rule over me, yet have I the benefit of my senses as well as your ladyship. I have your own letter that induced me to the semblance I put on; with the which I doubt not but to do myself much right, or you much shame. Think of me as you please.
I leave my duty a little unthought of, and speak out of my injury.

"The madly-used MALVOLIO."

Oli. Did he write this?

Clow. Ay, madam.

Duke. This savors not much of distraction.

Oli. See him deliver'd, Fabian: bring him hither.

[Exit FABIAN.

My lord, so please you, these things further thought
To think me as well a sister as a wife, [on,
One day shall crown the<sup>k</sup> alliance, and so please you,
Here at my house, and at my proper cost. [offer.—

Duke. Madam, I am most apt t'<sup>l</sup> embrace your [To VIOLA.] Your master quits you; and, for your service done him,

So much against the<sup>m</sup> mettle of your sex,
So far beneath your soft and tender breeding,
And since you call'd me master for so long,
Here is my hand; you shall from this time be
Your master's mistress.

Oli. A sister:—you are she.

Re-enter FABIAN, with MALVOLIO,<sup>n</sup> with straw about him, as from prison.

Duke. Is this the madman?

Oli. Ay, my lord, this same.

How now, Malvolio?

Mal. Madam, you have done me wrong,
Notorious wrong.

Oli. Have I, Malvolio? no.

Mal. Lady, you have. Pray you peruse that letter:
You must not now deny it is your hand,
Write from it, if you can, in hand, or phrase;
Or say, 'tis not your seal, nor your invention:

You can say none of this. Well, grant it then,
And tell me, in the modesty of honor,
Why you have given me such clear lights of favor,
Bade me come smiling, and cross-garter'd to you,
To put on yellow stockings, and to frown
Upon sir Toby, and the <sup>a</sup>lighter people?
And, acting this in an obedient hope,
Why have you suffer'd me to be imprison'd,
Kept in a dark house, visited by the priest,
And made the most notorious <sup>b</sup>geek, and gull,
That e'er invention play'd on? Tell me why.

Oli. Alas! Malvolio, this is not my writing,
Though, I confess, much like the character;
But, out of question, 'tis Maria's hand:
And now I do bethink me, it was she [ing,
First told me thou wast mad; <sup>1</sup>thou cam'st in smil-
And in such forms which here were <sup>2</sup>preimpos'd
Upon thee in the letter. Pr'ythee, be content:
This <sup>c</sup>practice hath most shrewdly pass'd upon thee;
But when we know the grounds and authors of it,
Thou shalt be both the plaintiff and the judge
Of thine own cause.

Fab. Good madam, hear me speak;
And let no quarrel, nor no brawl to come,
Taint the condition of this present hour,
Which I have wonder'd at. In hope it shall not,
Most freely I confess, myself, and Toby,
Set this device against Malvolio here,
Upon some stubborn and uncourteous parts
We had conceived against him. Maria writ
The letter at sir Toby's great <sup>d</sup>importance;
In recompense whereof he hath married her.
How with a sportful malice it was follow'd,
May rather pluck on laughter than revenge,
If that the injuries be justly weigh'd,
That have on both sides past.

Oli. Alas, poor <sup>3</sup>soul, how have they <sup>e</sup>baffled thee!

Clo. Why "some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness <sup>4</sup>thrust upon them." I was one, sir, in this interlude; one sir Topas, sir; but that's all one.—"By the Lord, fool,

I am not mad;"—But do you remember? "Madam, why laugh you at such a barren rascal? an you smile not, he's gagg'd:" And thus the whirligig of time brings in his revenges.

Mal. I'll be reveng'd on the whole pack of you.
[Exit.

Oli. He hath been most notoriously abus'd.

Duke. Pursue him, and entreat him to a peace.
He hath not told us of the captain yet;
When that is known and golden time <sup>f</sup>convents,
A solemn combination shall be made
Of our dear souls:—mean time, sweet sister,
We will not part from hence.—Cesario, come;
For so you shall be, while you are a man,
But when in other habits you are seen,
Orsino's mistress, and his fancy's queen. [Exeunt.

Clown sings, <sup>5</sup>to pipe and tabor.

*When that I was and a little tiny boy,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
A foolish thing was but a toy,
For the rain it raineth every day.*

*But when I came to man's estate,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
'Gainst knarves and thieves men shut their gate,
For the rain it raineth every day.*

*But when I came, alas! to wife,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
By swaggering could I never thrive,
For the rain it raineth every day.*

*But when I came unto my bed,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
With toss-pots still <sup>6</sup>I had drunken head,
For the rain it raineth every day.*

*A great while ago the world begun,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
But that's all one, our play is done,
And we'll strive to please you every day.*

<sup>f</sup> "Convents," i. e., shall serve, agree, be convenient.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Sicilia. An Antechamber in LEONTES' Palace.

Enter CAMILLO and ARCHIDAMUS.

Arch. If you shall chance, Camillo, to visit Bohemia, on the like occasion whereon my services are now on foot, you shall see, as I have said, great difference betwixt our Bohemia and your Sicilia.

Cam. I think, this coming summer, the king of Sicilia means to pay Bohemia the visitation which he justly owes him.

Arch. Wherein our entertainment shall shame us, we will be justified in our loves: for, indeed,—

Cam. Beseech you,—

Arch. Verily, I speak it in the freedom of my knowledge: we cannot with such magnificence—in so rare—I know not what to say.—We will give you sleepy drinks, that your senses, unintelligent of our insufficiency, may, though they cannot praise us, as little accuse us.

Cam. You pay a great deal too dear for what's given freely.

Arch. Believe me, I speak as my understanding instructs me, and as mine honesty puts it to utterance.

Cam. Sicilia cannot show himself over-kind to Bohemia. They were trained together in their childhoods; and there rooted betwixt them then such an affection, which cannot choose but branch now. Since their more mature dignities, and royal necessities, made separation of their society, their encounters, though not personal, have been <sup>2</sup>so royally <sup>3</sup>attorney'd, with interchange of gifts, letters, loving embassies, that they have seemed to be to—gether, though absent, shook hands, as over a vast, and embraced, as it were, from the ends of opposed winds. The heavens continue their loves!

Arch. I think, there is not in the world either malice, or matter, to alter it. You have an unspeakable comfort of your young prince Mamillius: it is a gentleman of the greatest promise that ever came into my note.

Cam. I very well agree with you in the hopes of him. It is a gallant child; one that, indeed, physics the subject, makes old hearts fresh: they, that went on crutches ere he was born, desire yet their life to see him a man.

Arch. Would they else be content to die?

Cam. Yes; if there were no other excuse why they should desire to live.

Arch. If the king had no son they would desire to live on crutches till he had one. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room of State in the Palace.

Enter LEONTES, POLIXENES, HERMIONE, MAMILLIUS, CAMILLO, and Attendants.

Pol. Nine changes of the watery star have been The shepherd's note, since we have left our throne Without a burden: time as long again Would be fill'd up, my brother, with our thanks; And yet we should for perpetuity Go hence in debt: and therefore, like a cipher, Yet standing in rich place, I multiply With one we thank you many thousands more That go before it.

Leon. Stay your thanks awhile And pay them when you part.

Pol. Sir, that's to-morrow. I am question'd by my fears, of what may chance, Or breed upon our absence: may there blow No sneaping winds at home, to make us say, "This is put forth too early." Besides, I have stay'd To tire your royalty.

Leon. We are tougher, brother, Than you can put us to't.

Pol. No longer stay.

Leon. One seven-night longer.

Pol. Very sooth, to-morrow.

Leon. We'll part the time between's then; and in I'll no gain-saying. [that]

Pol. Press me not, beseech you.<sup>3</sup> There is no tongue that moves, none, none i' the world, So soon as yours, could win me: so it should now, Were there necessity in your request, although 'Twere needful I denied it. My affairs Do even drag me homeward; which to hinder, Were in your love a whip to me, my stay To you a charge, and trouble: to save both, Farewell, our brother.

Leon. Tongue-tied, our queen? speak you.

Her. I had thought, sir, to have held my peace, until You had drawn oaths from him, not to stay. You, sir, Charge him too coldly: tell him, you are sure All in Bohemia's well: this satisfaction The by-gone day proclaim'd. Say this to him, He's beat from his best ward.

Leon. Well said, Hermione. [He walks apart.]

Her. To tell he longs to see his son were strong: But let him say so then, and let him go; But let him swear so, and he shall not stay, We'll thrack him hence with distaffs. [adventure Yet of your royal presence [To POLIXENES.] I'll

The borrow of a week. When at Bohemia You take my lord, I'll give him my commission, To <sup>d</sup>let him there a month behind the <sup>e</sup>gest Prefix'd for's parting: yet, good <sup>d</sup>deed, Leontes, I love thee not a <sup>f</sup>jar o' the clock behind What lady should her lord. You'll stay?

Pol.

Her. Nay, but you will?

Pol.

I may not, verily.

Her. Verily!

You put me off with limber vows; but I, [Oaths, Though you would seek t' unsphere the stars with Should yet say, "Sir, no going." Verily, You shall not go: a lady's verily is As potent as a lord's. Will you go yet? Force me to keep you as a prisoner, Not like a guest, so you shall pay your fees, [you? When you depart, and save your thanks. How say My prisoner, or my guest? by your dread verily, One of them you shall be.

Pol.

Your guest then, madam: To be your prisoner should import offending; Which is for me less easy to commit, Than you to punish.

Her.

Not your jailor, then, But your kind hostess. Come, I'll question you Of my lord's tricks, and yours, when you were boys; You were pretty lordlings then.

Pol.

We were, fair queen, Two lads, that thought there was no more behind, But such a day to-morrow as to-day, And to be boy eternal.

Her. Was not my lord the verier wag o' the two?

Pol. We were as twin'd lambs, that did frisk i' the sun,

And bleat the one at th' other: what we chang'd, Was innocence for innocence; we knew not The doctrine of ill-doing, nor dream'd That any did. Had we pursued that life, And our weak spirits ne'er been higher rear'd With stronger blood, we should have answer'd heaven Boldly, "not guilty;" the imposition <sup>b</sup>clear'd, Hereditary ours.

Her.

By this we gather, You have tripp'd since.

Pol.

O! my most sacred lady, Temptations have since then been born to's; for In those unfledg'd days was my wife a girl: Your precious self had then not cross'd the eyes Of my young play-fellow.

Her.

Grace to <sup>i</sup>boot! Of this make no conclusion, lest you say, Your queen and I are devils: yet, go on; Th' offences we have made you do, we'll answer; If you first sin'd with us, and that with us You did continue fault, and that you slipp'd not With any, but with us.

Leon.

Is he won yet? <sup>5</sup>[Coming forward.]

Her.

He'll stay, my lord. Leon. At my request he would not. Hermione, my dearest, thou never spok'st To better purpose.

Her.

Never?

Leon.

Never, but once.

Her. What? have I twice said well? when was't before?

I pry'thee, tell me. Cram's with praise, and make's

As fat as tame things: one good deed, dying tongue—
Slaughters a thousand waiting upon that. [less,
Our praises are our wages: you may ride's
With one soft kiss a thousand furlongs, ere
With spur we 'clear an acre. But to the 'good:—
My last good deed was to entreat his stay:
What was my first? it has an elder sister,
Or I mistake you: O, would her name were Grace!
But once before I spoke to the purpose: When?
Nay, let me have't; I long.

Leon. Why, that was when
Three crabbed months had sour'd themselves to death,
Ere I could make thee open thy white hand,
And 'clap thyself my love: then didst thou utter
"I am yours for ever."

Her. It is Grace, indeed.—
Why, lo you now, I have spoke to the purpose twice:
The one for ever earn'd a royal husband,
Th' other for some while a friend.

[Giving her hand to POLIXENES.

Leon. Too hot, too hot! [Aside.
To mingle friendship far is mingling bloods.
I have tremor cordis on me:—my heart dances,
But not for joy,—not joy.—This entertainment
May a free face put out; derive a liberty
From heartiness, from 'bounty's fertile bosom,
And well become the agent: 't may, I grant;
But to be paddling palms, and pinching fingers,
As now they are; and making practis'd smiles,
As in a looking-glass;—and then to sigh, as 'twere
The 'mort o' the deer; O! that is entertainment
My bosom likes not, nor my brows.—Mamillius,
Art thou my boy?

Mam. Ay, my good lord.

Leon. 'C' fecks?
Why, that's my 'd bawcock. What! hast smutch'd
They say, it is a copy out of mine. [thy nose?—
Come, captain,

We must be neat; not neat, but cleanly, captain:
And yet the steer, the heifer, and the calf,
Are all call'd neat.—Still 'virginalling

[Observing POLIXENES and HERMIONE.
Upon his palm!—How now, you wanton calf:
Art thou my calf?

Mam. Yes, if you will, my lord.

Leon. Thou want'st a rough 'pash, and the 'shoots that I have,

To be 'full like me:—yet, they say, we are Almost as like as eggs: women say so,
That will say anything: but were they false
As 'our dead blacks, as wind, as waters; false
As dice are to be wish'd, by one that fixes
No bourn 'twixt his and mine; yet were it true
To say this boy were like me.—Come, sir page,
Look on me with your 'welkin eye: sweet villain!
Most dear'st! my 'collop!—Can thy dam!—may't be Affection? thy intention stabs the 'centre:
Thou dost make possible things not so held,
Communicat'st with dreams;—(how can this be?)—
With what's unreal thou coactive art,
And fellow'st nothing. Then, 'tis very 'm credent,
Thou may'st co-join with something; and thou dost,
And that beyond commission; and I find it,
And that to the infection of my brains,
And hardening of my brows.

Pol. What means Sicilia?

Her. He something seems unsettled.

Pol. How, my lord?

Leon. What cheer? how is't with you, best brother?
<sup>5</sup>[Holding his forehead.

Her. You look

As if you held a brow of much distraction:

Are you moved, my lord?

Leon. No, in good earnest.—

How sometimes nature will betray its folly, <sup>6</sup>[Aside.

Its tenderness, and make itself a pastime

To harder bosoms! Looking on the lines? [To them.

Of my boy's face, my thoughts I did recoil

Twenty-three years, and saw myself unbreech'd,

In my green velvet coat; my dagger muzzled,

Lest it should bite its master, and so prove,

As ornaments oft do, too dangerous.

How like, methought, I then was to this kernel,

This 'squash, this gentleman.—Mine honest friend,

Will you take eggs for 'money?

Mam. No, my lord, I'll fight. [My brother,

Leon. You will? why, happy man be his 'dole!—

Are you so fond of your young prince, as we Do seem to be of ours?

Pol. If at home, sir,

He's all my exercise, my mirth, my matter:

Now my sworn friend, and then mine enemy;

My parasite, my soldier, statesman, all.

He makes a July's day short as December;

And with his varying childness cures in me

Thoughts that would thicken my blood.

Leon. So stands this squire

Offic'd with me. We two will walk, my lord,

And leave you to your graver steps.—Hermione,

How thou lov'st us, show in our brother's welcome:

Let what is dear in Sicily, be cheap.

To thee thyself, and my young rover, he's 'Apparent to my heart.

Her. If you would seek us,

We are yours 'i the garden: shall's attend you there?

Leon. To your own tents dispose you: you'll be found,

Be you beneath the sky.—[Aside.] I am angling now,

Though you perceive me not how I give line,

Go to, go to!

How she holds up the 'neb, the bill to him;

And arms her with the boldness of a wife

To her 'allowing husband. Gone already!

[Exeunt POLIXENES, HERMIONE, and Attendants.
Luch-thick, knee-deep, o'er head and ears a 'fork'd one!

Go play, boy, play;—thy mother plays, and I

Play too, but so disgraced a part, whose issue

Will hiss me to my grave: contempt and clamor

Will be my knell.—Go play, boy, play.—There have

Or I am much deceiv'd, cuckolds ere now; [been,

And many a man there is, (even at this present,

Now, while I speak this) holds his wife by th' arm,

That little thinks she has been shuic'd in's absence,

And his pond fish'd by his next neighbor, by

Sir Smile, his neighbor. Nay, there's comfort in't,

Whiles other men have gates, and those gates open'd,

As mine, against their will. Should all despair

That have revolted wives, the tenth of mankind

Would hang themselves. Physic for't there is none:

It is a bawdy planet, that will strike

Where 'tis predominant; and 'tis powerful, think it,

From east, west, north, and south: be it concluded,

No barricado for a belly: know it;

<sup>a</sup> "Squash," here means an unripe pea-pod.—<sup>b</sup> "Will you take eggs for money?" i. e., Will you suffer yourself to be imposed upon?—<sup>c</sup> That is, may happiness be his portion!—<sup>d</sup> 'Heir apparent; next claimant.—<sup>e</sup> Mouth.—<sup>f</sup> Approving.—<sup>g</sup> "A forked one," i. e., a horned one; a cuckold.

It will let in and out the enemy,
With bag and baggage. Many a thousand on's
Have the disease, and feel't not.—How now, boy?

Mam. I am like you, they say.

Leon. Why, that's some comfort.—

What! Camillo there?

Cam. Ay, my good lord.

Leon. Go play, Mamillius. Thou'rt an honest man.

[Exit MAMILLIUS.]

Camillo, this great sir will yet stay longer.

Cam. You had much ado to make his anchor hold:

When you cast out, it still came <sup>a</sup>home.

Leon. Didst note it?

Cam. He would not stay at your petitions; made
His business more material.

Leon. Didst perceive it?—

They're here with me <sup>b</sup>already; whispering, "round-
"Sicilia is a"—so-forth. 'Tis far gone, [ing,
When I shall <sup>d</sup>gust it last.—How cam't, Camillo,
That he did stay?

Cam. At the good queen's entreaty.

Leon. At the queen's, be't: good should be perti-
But so it is, it is not. Was this taken [nent;
By any understanding pate but thine?

For thy conceit is soaking, will draw in
More than the common blocks:—not noted, is't,
But of the finer natures? by some severals,
Of head-piece extraordinary? lower <sup>c</sup>messes,
Perchance, are to this business purblind: say.

Cam. Business, my lord? I think, most understand Bohemia stays here longer.

Leon. Ha?

Cam. Stays here longer.

Leon. Ay, but why?

Cam. To satisfy your highness, and the entreaties
Of our most gracious mistress.

Leon. Satisfy

The entreaties of your mistress?—satisfy?—
Let that suffice. I have trusted thee, Camillo,
With all the nearest things to my heart, as well
My chamber-councils, wherein, priest-like, thou
Hast cleans'd my bosom: I from thee departed Thy penitent reform'd; but we have been Deceiv'd in thy integrity, deceiv'd
In that which seems so.

Cam. Be it forbid, my lord!

Leon. To bide upon't,—thou art not honest; or,
If thou inclin'st that way, thou art a coward,
Which <sup>f</sup>foxes honesty behind, restraining
From course requir'd; or else thou must be counted
A servant grafted in my serious trust,
And therein negligent; or else a fool,
That seek's a game play'd home, the rich stake drawn,
And tak'st it all for jest.

Cam. My gracious lord,

I may be negligent, foolish, and fearful:
In every one of these no man is free,
But that his negligence, his folly, fear,
Amongst the infinite doings of the world,
Sometime puts forth. In your affairs, my lord,
If ever I were wilful-negligent,
It was my folly; if industriously
I play'd the fool, it was my negligence,
Not weighing well the end; if ever fearful
To do a thing, where I the issue doubted,
Whereof the execution did cry out
Against the non-performance, 'twas a fear
Which oft infects the wisest. These, my lord,

Are such allow'd infirmities, that honesty
Is never free of: but, beseech your grace,
Be plainer with me: let me know my trespass
By its own visage; if I then deny it,
'Tis none of mine.

Leon.

Have not you seen, Camillo,
(But that's past doubt; you have, or your eye-glass
Is thicker than a cuckold's horn) or heard,
(For, to a vision so apparent, rumor
Cannot be mute) or thought, (for cogitation
Resides not in that man that does not think it)
My wife is slippery? If thou wilt confess,
Or else be impudently negative,
To have nor eyes, nor ears, nor thought, then say,
My wife's a hobbyhorse; deserves a name
As rank as any flax-wench, that puts to Before her troth-pledge: say't, and justify't.

Cam. I would not be a stander-by, to hear
My sovereign mistress clouded so, without
My present vengeance taken. 'Shrew my heart,
You never spoke what did become you less
Than this; which to reiterate, were sin
As deep as <sup>g</sup>that, though true.

Leon.

Is whispering nothing?
Is leaning cheek to cheek? is meeting noses?
Kissing with inside lip? stopping the career
Of laughter with a sigh? (a note infallible
Of breaking honesty) horsing foot on foot?
Skulking in corners? wishing clocks more swift?
Hours, minutes? noon, midnight? and all eyes blind
With the pin and web, but theirs, theirs only,
That would unseen be wicked? is this nothing?
Why, then the world, and all that is in't, is nothing;
The covering sky is nothing; Bohemia nothing;
My wife is nothing; nor nothing have these nothings
If this be nothing.

Cam.

Good my lord, be cur'd
Of this disease'd opinion, and betimes;
For 'tis most dangerous.

Leon.

Say, it be; 'tis true.

Leon.

No, no, my lord. It is; you lie, you lie:
I say, thou liest, Camillo, and I hate thee;
Pronounce thee a gross lout, a mindless slave,
Or else a hovering temporizer, that
Canst with thine eyes at once see good and evil,
Inclining to them both: Were my wife's liver
Infected as her life, she would not live
The running of one <sup>i</sup>glass.

Cam.

Who does infect her?
Leon. Why he, that wears her like <sup>l</sup>a medal, hang-
About his neck, Bohemia: who—if I [ing
Had servants true about me, that bare eyes
To see alike mine honor as their profits,
Their own particular thrifts, they would do that
Which should undo more doing: ay, and thou,
His cup-bearer,—whom I from meaner form [see
Have bench'd, and rear'd to worship, who may'st
Plainly, as heaven sees earth, and earth sees heaven,
How I am galled,—might'st bespice a cup,
To give mine enemy a lasting wink,
Which draught to me were cordial.

Cam.

<sup>2</sup>Sure, my lord,
I could do this, and that with no <sup>k</sup>rash potion,
But with a lingering dram, that should not work
<sup>4</sup>Maliciously, like poison; but I cannot Believe this crack to be in my dread mistress,
So sovereignly being honorable.
I have lov'd thee.—

<sup>g</sup> "As deep as that," i. e., as deep as that of which you accuse her.—<sup>h</sup> "The pin and web," i. e., the cataract in its early stage.—<sup>i</sup> Hour.—<sup>j</sup> "Rash," i. e., hasty.—<sup>k</sup> "Maliciously," i. e., malignantly; with effects openly hurtful.

Leon. Make that thy <sup>a</sup> question, and go rot!
Dost think, I am so muddy, so unsettled,
To appoint myself in this vexation? sully
The purity and whiteness of my sheets,
(Which to preserve is sleep; which, being spotted,
Is gods, thorns, nettles, tails of wasps.)
Give scandal to the blood o' the prince, my son,
(Who, I do think is mine, and love as mine)
Without ripe moving to't? Would I do this?
Could man so b<sup>b</sup>lench?

Cam. I must believe you, sir:
I do; and will fetch off Bohemia for't;
Provided, that when he's remov'd, your highness
Will take again your queen, as yours at first,
Even for your son's sake; and thereby for sealing
The injury of tongues, in courts and kingdoms
Known and allied to yours.

Leon. Thou dost advise me,
Even so as I mine own course have set down.
I'll give no blemish to her honor, none.

Cam. My lord,
Go then; and with a countenance as clear
As friendship wears at feasts, keep with Bohemia,
And with your queen. I am his cupbearer;
If from me he have wholesome beverage,
Account me not your servant.

Leon. This is all:
Do't, and thou hast the one half of my heart;
Do't not, thou split'st thine own.

Cam. I'll do't, my lord.
Leon. I will seem friendly, as thou hast advis'd me.
[Exit.]

Cam. O, miserable lady!—But, for me,
What case stand I in? I must be the poisoner
Of good Polixenes; and my ground to do't
Is the obedience to a master; one,
Who, in rebellion with himself, will have
All that are his so too.—To do this deed,
Promotion follows: if I could find example
Of thousands that had struck anointed kings,
And flourish'd after, I'd not do't; but since
Nor brass, nor stone, nor parchment, bears not one,
Let villainy itself forswear't. I must Forsake the court: to do't, or no, is certain
To me a break-neck. Happy star, reign now!
Here comes Bohemia.

Enter POLIXENES.

Pol. This is strange. Methinks,
My favor here begins to warp. Not speak?—
Good-day, Camillo.

Cam. Hail, most royal sir!

Pol. What is the news? to the court?

Cam. None rare, my lord.

Pol. The king hath on him such a countenance,
As he had lost some province, and a region
Lov'd as he loves himself: even now I met him
With customary compliment, when he,
Waiting his eyes to the contrary, and falling
A lip of much contempt, speeds from me, and
So leaves me to consider what is breeding
That changes thus his manners.

Cam. I dare not know, my lord. [dare not]

Pol. How! dare not? do not! Do you know, and Be intelligent to me? 'Tis thereabouts;
For, to yourself, what you do know, you must,
And cannot say, you dare not. Good Camillo,
Your chang'd complexions are to me a mirror,
Which shows me mine chang'd too; for I must be A party in this alteration, finding Myself thus alter'd with 't.

Cam. There is a sickness
Which puts some of us in distemper; but I cannot name the disease, and it is caught
Of you, that yet are well.

Pol. How caught of me?
Make me not sighted like the basilisk:
I have look'd on thousands, who have sped the better
By my regard, but kill'd none so. Camillo,—
As you are certainly a gentleman; thereto
Clerk-like, experienc'd, which no less adorns
Our gentry than our parents' noble names,
In whose <sup>c</sup> success we are <sup>d</sup> gentle,—I beseech you,
If you know aught which does behove my knowledge
Thereof to be inform'd, imprison it not
In ignorant concealment.

Cam. I may not answer.

Pol. A sickness caught of me, and yet I well?
I must be answer'd.—Dost thou hear, Camillo,
I conjure thee, by all the parts of man
Which honor does acknowledge,—whereof the least
Is not this suit of mine,—that thou declare
What <sup>e</sup> incident thou dost guess of harm
Is creeping toward me; how far off, how near;
Which way to be prevented, if to be;
If not, how best to bear it.

Cam. Sir, I will tell you;
Since I am charg'd in honor, and by him
That I think honorable. Therefore, mark my counsel,
Which must be even as swiftly follow'd, as I mean to utter it, or both yours and <sup>f</sup> I
Cry, "lost," and so good-night.

Pol. On, good Camillo.
Cam. I am appointed 'him to murder you.

Pol. By whom, Camillo?

Cam. By the king.

Pol. For what?
Cam. He thinks, nay, with all confidence he swears,
As he had seen't, or been an instrument
To <sup>g</sup> vice you to't—that you have touch'd his queen Forbiddenly.

Pol. O! then my best blood turn
To an infected jelly, and my name
Be yok'd with <sup>h</sup> his that did betray the Best!
Turn then my freshest reputation to
A savor, that may strike the dullest nostril
Where I arrive; and my approach be shunn'd,
Nay, hated too, worse than the great'st infection
That e'er was heard, or read!

Cam. Swear <sup>i</sup> this though over
By each particular star in heaven, and
By all their influences, you may as well
Forbid the sea for to obey the moon,
As, or by oath, remove, or counsel, shake,
The fabric of his folly, whose foundation
Is pil'd upon his 'faith, and will continue
The standing of his body.

Pol. How should this grow?

Cam. I know not; but, I am sure, 'tis safer to Avoid what's grown, than question how 'tis born.
If therefore you dare trust my honesty,
That lies enclosed in this trunk, which you
Shall bear along in pawn'd, away to-night.
Your followers I will whisper to the business;
And will, by twos and threes, at several posterns, Clear them o' the city. For myself, I'll put
My fortunes to your service, which are here
By this discovery lost. Be not uncertain;
For, by the honor of my parents, I

"<sup>f</sup> Him," i. e., by him.—<sup>g</sup> "To vice you," i. e., to screw you.—<sup>h</sup> "With his," i. e., with that of Judas.—<sup>i</sup> "Upon his faith," i. e., upon his settled belief.

Have utter'd truth, which if you seek to prove,
I dare not stand by; nor shall you be safer
Than one condemned by the king's own mouth,
Thereon his execution sworn.

Pol. I do believe thee:
I saw his heart in 's face. Give me thy hand:
Be pilot to me, and thy places shall Still neighbor <sup>a</sup> mine. My ships are ready, and My people did expect my hence departure
Two days ago.—This jealousy
Is for a precious creature: as she's rare,
Must it be great; and, as his person's mighty,
Must it be violent; and, as he does conceive
He is dishonor'd by a man which ever
Profess'd to him, why, his revenges must
In that be made more bitter. Fear o'ershades me:
Good expedition be my friend: <sup>1</sup> heaven comfort
The gracious queen, part of his <sup>2</sup> dream, but nothing
Of his ill-ta'en suspicion! Come, Camillo:
I will respect thee as a father, if Thou bear'st my life off hence. Let us avoid.

Cam. It is in mine authority to command
The keys of all the posterns. Please your highness
To take the urgent hour. Come, sir: away!

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Same.

Enter HERMIONE, MAMILLIUS, and Ladies.

Her. Take the boy to you: he so troubles me,
'Tis past enduring.

1 Lady. Come, my gracious lord:
Shall I be your play-fellow?

Mam. No, I'll none of you.

1 Lady. Why, my sweet lord?

Mam. You'll kiss me hard, and speak to me as if I were a baby still.—I love you better.

2 Lady. And why so, my lord?

Mam. Not for because
Your brows are blacker; yet black brows, they say,
Become some women best, so that there be not Too much hair there, but in a semi-circle,
Or a half-moon made with a pen.

2 Lady. Who taught this?

Mam. I learn'd it out of women's faces.—Pray
What color are your eye-brows? [now,

1 Lady. Blue, my lord.

Mam. Nay, that's a mock: I have seen a lady's
That has been blue, but not her eye-brows. [nose

2 Lady. Hark ye.

The queen, your mother, rounds apace: we shall Present our services to a fine new prince,
One of these days, and then you'd wanton with us,
If we would have you.

1 Lady. She is spread of late
Into a goodly bulk: good time encounter her!

Her. What wisdom stirs amongst you? Come, sir;
I am for you again: pray you, sit by us, [now
And tell's a tale.

Mam. Merry, or sad, shall't be?

Her. As merry as you will.

Mam. A sad tale's best for winter.
I have one of sprites and goblins.

Her. Let's have that, good sir.
Come on; sit down:—come on, and do your best
To fright me with your sprites: you're powerful at it.

Mam. There was a man,—

Her. Nay, come, sit down; then on.

Mam. Dwelt by a church-yard.—I will tell it softly;
Yond' crickets shall not hear it.

Her. Come on then,

And give't me in mine ear.

Enter LEONTES, ANTIGONUS, Lords, and others.

Leon. Was he met there? his train? Camillo with him?

1 Lord. Behind the tuft of pines I met them: never Saw I men scour so on their way. I eyed them
Even to their ships.

Leon. How bless'd am I <sup>3</sup> [Aside.

In my just <sup>b</sup> censure! in my true opinion!—

Alack, for lesser <sup>c</sup> knowledge!—How accurs'd,

In being so blest!—There may be in the cup

A <sup>d</sup> spider steep'd, and one may <sup>d</sup> drink a part,

And yet partake no venom, for his knowledge

Is not infected; but if one present

The abhor'd ingredient to his eye, make known

How he hath drunk, he cracks his gorge, his sides,

With violent <sup>e</sup> hefts.—I have drunk, and seen the Camillo was his help in this, his pander.— [spider.

There is a plot against my life, my crown:

All's true that is mistrusted:—that false villain,

Whom I employ'd, was pre-employ'd by him.

He has discover'd my design, and I

Remain a 'pinch'd thing; yea, a very trick

For them to play at will.—How came the posterns

<sup>5</sup> [To them.

So easily open?

1 Lord. By his great authority;
Which often hath no less prevail'd than so,
On your command.

Leon. I know't too well.—

Give me the boy. [To HERMIONE.] I am glad, you did not nurse him:

Though he does bear some signs of me, yet you
Have too much blood in him.

Her. What is this? sport?

Leon. Bear the boy hence; and he shall not come about
Away with him: and let her sport herself [her.
With that she's big with; for tis Polixenes
Has made these swell thus.

Her. But, I'd say he had not,
And, I'll be sworn, you would believe my saying,
Howe'er you lean to the wayward.

Leon. You, my lords,

Look on her, mark her well; be but about

To say, "she is a goodly lady," and

The justice of your hearts will thereto add,

"'Tis pity she's not honest, honorable:"

Praise her but for this her without-door form, [straight

(Which, on my faith, deserves high speech) and

The shrug, the hum, or ha (these petty brands,

That calumny doth use,—O, I am out!

That merry does, for calumny will <sup>e</sup> scar

Virtue itself)—These shrugs, these hums and ha's,

When you have said, "she's goodly," come between,

Ere you can say "she's honest." But be't known,

From him that has most cause to grieve it should be,

She's an adultress.

Her. Should a villain say so,

The most replenish'd villain in the world,

He were as much more villain: you, my lord,

Do but mistake.

Leon. You have mistook, my lady,

<sup>a</sup> "Still neighbor mine," i. e., still be near my person, or near me in dignity.

Polixenes for Leontes. O, thou thing!
Which I'll not call a creature of thy place,
Lest barbarism, making me the precedent,
Should a like language use to all degrees,
And mannerly distinguishment leave out
Betwixt the prince and beggar!—I have said
She's an adulteress; I have said with whom:
More, she's a traitor; and Camillo is
A feodary with her, and one that knows
What she should shame to know herself,
<sup>b</sup>But with her most vile principal, that she's A bed-swarver, even as bad as those
That vulgars give bold'st titles; ay, and privy
To this their late escape.

Her. No, by my life,
Privy to none of this. How will this grieve you,
When you shall come to clearer knowledge, that
You thus have publish'd me? Gentle my lord,
You scarce can right me thoroughly then, to say
You did mistake.

Leon. No; if I mistake
In those foundations which I build upon,
The centre is not big enough to bear
A schoolboy's <sup>c</sup>top.—Away with her to prison!
He, who shall speak for her, is afar off guilty,
But that he <sup>d</sup>speaks.

Her. There's some ill planet reigns:
I must be patient, till the heavens look
With an aspect more favorable.—Good my lords,
I am not prone to weeping, as our sex
Commonly are, the want of which vain dew,
Perchance, shall dry your pities; but I have
That honorable grief lodg'd here, which burns
Worse than tears drown. Beseech you all, my lords,
With thoughts so qualified as your charities
Shall best instruct you, measure me;—and so
The king's will be perform'd.

Leon. Shall I be heard? [To the Guards.]

Her. Who is't that goes with me?—beseech your
My women may be with me; for, you see, [highness,
My plight requires it. Do not weep, good fools;
There is no cause: when you shall know, your mis-
Has deserv'd prison, then abound in tears, [tress
As I come out: this action, I now go <sup>e</sup>on,
Is for my better grace.—Adieu, my lord:
I never wish'd to see you sorry; now,
I trust, I shall.—My women, come; you have leave.

Leon. Go, do our bidding: hence!

[Exeunt Queen and Ladies.]

I Lord. Beseech your highness, call the queen again.

Ant. Be certain what you do, sir, lest your justice
Prove violence; in the which three great ones suffer,
Yourself, your queen, your son.

I Lord. For her, my lord,
I dare my life lay down, and will do't, sir,
Please you t' accept it, that the queen is spotless
I' the eyes of heaven, and to you: I mean,
In this which you accuse her.

Ant. If it prove She's otherwise, I'll keep <sup>f</sup>me <sup>g</sup>stable where
I lodge my wife; I'll go in couples with her;
Than when I feel, and see her, no further trust her;
For every inch of woman in the world
Ay, every dram of woman's flesh, is false,
If she be.

Leon. Hold your peaces!

I Lord.

Good my lord,—

Ant. It is for you we speak, not for ourselves.
You are abus'd, and by some putter-on,
That will be damn'd for't; would I knew the villain,
I would <sup>h</sup>lamback him. Be she honor-flaw'd,—
I have three daughters; the eldest is eleven,
The second, and the third, nine, and some <sup>i</sup>five;
If this prove true, they'll pay for't: by mine honor,
I'll geld them all: fourteen they shall not see,
To bring false generations: they are co-heirs,
And I had rather glib myself, than they Should not produce fair issue.

Leon.

Cease! no more.

You smell this business with a sense as cold
As is a dead man's nose; but I do see't, and feel't,
As you feel doing thus, and see withal
The instruments that <sup>j</sup>feel.

Ant.

If it be so,

We need no grave to bury honesty:
There's not a grain of it the face to sweeten
Of the whole dungy earth.

Leon.

What! lack I credit?

I Lord. I had rather you did lack, than I, my lord,
Upon this ground; and more it would content me
To have her honor true, than your suspicion,
Be blam'd for't how you might.

Leon.

Why, what need we

Commune with you of this, but rather follow
Our forceful <sup>k</sup>instigation? Our prerogative
Calls not your counsels, but our natural goodness
Imparts this; which, if you (or stupified,
Or seeming so in skill) cannot, or will not,
Relish a truth like us, inform yourselves,
We need no more of your advice: the matter,
The loss, the gain, the ordering on't, is all Properly ours.

Ant.

And I wish, my liege,

You had only in your silent judgment tried it,
Without more overture.

Leon.

How could that be?

Either thou art most ignorant by age,
Or thou wert born a fool. Camillo's flight,
Added to their familiarity,
(Which was as gross as ever touch'd conjecture,
That lack'd sight only, nought for <sup>l</sup>approbation
But only seeing, all other circumstances [ing:
I made up to the deed] doth push on this proceed-
Yet, for a greater confirmation,
(For in an act of this importance 'twere
Most piteous to be wild) I have despatch'd in post,
To sacred Delphos, to Apollo's temple,
Cleomenes and Dion, whom you know
Of stuff <sup>m</sup>sufficiency. Now, from the oracle
They will bring all; whose spiritual counsel had,
Shall stop, or spur me. Have I done well?

I Lord. Well done, my lord.

Leon. Though I am satisfied, and need no more
Than what I know, yet shall the oracle
Give rest to the minds of others; such as he,
Whose ignorant credulity will not Come up to the truth. So have we thought it good,
From our free person she should be confin'd,
Lest that the treachery of the two fled hence
Be left her to perform. Come, follow us;
We are to speak in public; for this business
Will raise us all.

Ant. [Aside.] To laughter, as I take it,
If the good truth were known. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. The outer Room of a Prison.

Enter PAULINA and Attendants.

Paul. The keeper of the prison,—call to him :
[Exit an Attendant.]

Let him have knowledge who I am.—Good lady!
No court in Europe is too good for thee,
What dost thou then in prison?—Now, good sir,

Re-enter Attendant, with the Jailor.

You know me, do you not?

Jailor. For a worthy lady,

And one whom much I honor.

Paul. Pray you then,

Conduct me to the queen.

Jailor. I may not, madam: to the contrary
I have express commandment.

Paul. Here's <sup>a</sup>ado,
To lock up honesty and honor from
Th' access of gentle visitors!—Is't lawful, pray you,
To see her women? any of them? Emilia?

Jailor. So please you, madam,
To put apart these your attendants, I Shall bring Emilia forth.

Paul. I pray now, call her.—
Withdraw yourselves. [Exeunt Attend.]

Jailor. And, madam,
I must be present at your conference.

Paul. Well, be't so, pry'thee. [Exit Jailor.]
Here's such ado to make no stain a stain,
As passes coloring.

Re-enter Jailor, with EMILIA.

Dear gentlewoman,

How fares our gracious lady?

Emil. As well as one so great, and so forlorn,
May hold together. On her frights, and griefs,
(Which never tender lady hath borne greater)
She is, something before her time, deliver'd.

Paul. A boy?

Emil. A daughter; and a goodly babe,
Lusty, and like to live: the queen receives
Much comfort in't, says, "My poor prisoner,
I am innocent as you."

Paul. I dare be sworn: [them!]
These dangerous, <sup>1</sup>unsane <sup>2</sup>lunies<sup>1</sup> the king, beshrew
He must be told on't, and he shall: the office
Becomes a woman best; I'll take't upon me.
If I prove honey-mouth'd, let my tongue blister,
And never to my red-look'd anger be
The trumpet any more.—Pray you, Emilia,
Commend my best obedience to the queen:
If she dares trust me with her little babe,
I'll show't the king, and undertake to be
Her advocate to the loud'st. We do not know
How he may soften at the sight o' the child:
The silence often of pure innocence
Persuades, when speaking fails.

Emil. Most worthy madam,
Your honor, and your goodness, <sup>2</sup>are so evident,
That your free undertaking cannot miss
A thriving issue: there is no lady living
So meet for this great errand. Please your ladyship
To visit the next room, I'll presently
Acquaint the queen of your most noble offer,
Who, but to-day, <sup>3</sup>hammer'd of this design,

But durst not tempt a minister of honor,
Lest she should be denied.

Paul. Tell her, Emilia,
I'll use that tongue I have: if wit flow from it,
As boldness from my bosom, let it not be doubted
I shall do good.

Emil. Now, be you blest for it!
I'll to the queen.—Please you, come something nearer.

Jailor. Madam, if't please the queen to send the
I know not what I shall incur to pass it, [babe,
Having no warrant.

Paul. You need not fear it, sir:
The child was prisoner to the womb, and is,
By law and process of great nature, thence Freed and enfranchis'd; not a party to
The anger of the king, nor guilty of,
If any be, the trespass of the queen.

Jailor. I do believe it.

Paul. Do not you fear: upon mine honor, I
Will stand betwixt you and danger. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter LEONTES, ANTIGONUS, Lords, and other Attendants.

Leon. Nor night, nor day, no rest. It is but weakness

To bear the matter thus, mere weakness. If
The cause were not in being, part o' the cause,
She th' adul'tress; for the harlot king
Is quite beyond mine arm, out of the blank
And <sup>4</sup>level of my brain, plot-proof; but she
I can hook to me: say, that she were gone,
Given to the fire, a moiety of my rest
Might come to me again.—Who's there?

I Atten.

My lord.

Leon. How does the boy?

I Atten. He took good rest to-night:
'Tis hop'd, his sickness is discharg'd.

Leon. To see his nobleness!
Conceiving the dishonor of his mother,
He straight declin'd, droop'd, took it deeply,
Fasten'd and fix'd the shame on't in himself,
Threw off his spirit, his appetite, his sleep,
And downright languish'd.—Leave me <sup>5</sup>solely:—go, See how he fares. [Exit Attend.—Fie, fie! no thought of 'him:—

The very thought of my revenges that way
Recoil upon me: in himself too mighty,
And in his parties, his alliance; let him be,
Until a time may serve for present vengeance,
Take it on her. Camillo and Polixenes
Laugh at me; make their pastime at my sorrow:
They should not laugh, if I could reach them; nor Shall she, within my power.

Enter PAULINA, <sup>3</sup>behind, with a Child.

I Lord.

You must not enter.

Paul. Nay, rather, good my lords, be second to me.
Fear you his tyrannous passion more, alas,
Than the queen's life? a gracious innocent soul,
More <sup>6</sup>free than he is jealous.

Ant.

That's enough.

I Atten. Madam, he hath not slept to-night; commanded

None should come at him.

Paul.

Not so hot, good sir:

I come to bring him sleep. 'Tis such as you,—
That creep like shadows by him, and do sigh
At each his needless heavings,—such as you

<sup>e</sup> "Leave me solely," i. e., leave me alone.—<sup>f</sup> "No thought of him," i. e., of Polixenes.—<sup>g</sup> Chaste; pure.

Nourish the cause of his awaking: I
Do come with words as medicinal as true,
Honest as either, to purge him of that humor,
That presses him from sleep.

Leon. What noise there, ho?

Paul. No noise, my lord; but needful conference,
[Coming forward.]

About some gossips for your highness.

Leon. How?—

Away with that audacious lady. Antigonus,
I charg'd thee, that she should not come about me:
I knew she would.

Ant. I told her so, my lord,
On your displeasure's peril, and on mine,
She should not visit you.

Leon. What! canst not rule her?

Paul. From all dishonesty he can: in this,
(Unless he take the course that you have done, Commit me for committing honor) trust it,
He shall not rule me.

Ant. Lo, you now! you hear.
When she will take the rein, I let her run;
But she'll not stumble.

Paul. Good my liege, I come,—
And, I beseech you, hear me, who professes
Myself your loyal servant, your physician,
Your most obedient counsellor, yet that dares
Less appear so in comforting your evils,
Than such as most seem yours,—I say, I come
From your good queen.

Leon. Good queen!

Paul. Good queen, my lord, good queen: I say, good queen;
And would by combat make her good, so were I
A man, the worst about you.

Leon. Force her hence.

Paul. Let him that makes but trifles of his eyes
First hand me. On mine own accord I'll off,
But first I'll do my errand.—The good queen,
For she is good, hath brought you forth a daughter:
Here 'tis; commends it to your blessing.

[Laying down the Child.]

Leon. Out!
A mankind witch! Hence with her, out o' door:
A most intelligencing bawd!

Paul. Not so:
I am as ignorant in that, as you
In so entitling me, and no less honest
Than you are mad; which is enough, I'll warrant,
As this world goes, to pass for honest.

Leon. Traitors!
Will you not push her out? Give her the bastard.—
Thou, dotard, [To ANTIGONUS.] thou art a womantir'd, unroosted

By thy dame Partlet here.—Take up the bastard:
Take't up, I say; give't to thy crone.

Paul. For ever
Unvenerable be thy hands, if thou
Tak'st up the princess by that forced baseness
Which he has put upon't!

Leon. He trends his wife.
Paul. So I would you did; then, 'twere past all You'd call your children yours. [doubt,

Leon. A nest of traitors!
Ant. I am none, by this good light.

Paul. Nor I; nor any,
But one that's here, and that's himself; for he

The sacred honor of himself, his queen's,
His hopeful son's, his babe's, betrays to slander,
Whose sting is sharper than the sword's, and will not (For, as the case now stands, it is a curse
He cannot be compell'd to't) once remove
The root of his opinion, which is rotten
As ever oak, or stone, was sound.

Leon. A callat,
Of boundless tongue, who late hath beat her husband,
And now baits me!—This brat is none of mine:
It is the issue of Polixenes.
Hence with it; and, together with the dam,
Commit them to the fire.

Paul. It is yours;
And, might we lay the old proverb to your charge,
So like you, 'tis the worse.—Behold, my lords,
Although the print be little, the whole matter
And copy of the father: eye, nose, lip,
The trick of his frown, his forehead; nay, the valley,
The pretty dimples of his chin, and cheek; his smiles;
The very mould and frame of hand, nail, finger.—
And, thou, good goddess Nature, which hast made it
So like to him that got it, if thou hast
The ordering of the mind too, 'mongst all colors
No 'yellow in't; lest she suspect, as he does,
Her children not her husband's.

Leon. A gross hag!—
And, a lozel, thou art worthy to be hang'd,
That wilt not stay her tongue.

Ant. Hang all the husbands
That cannot do that feat, you'll leave yourself
Hardly one subject.

Leon. Once more, take her hence.

Paul. A most unworthy and unnatural lord
Can do no more.

Leon. I'll ha' thee burn'd.

Paul. I care not:
It is an heretic that makes the fire,
Not she which burns in't. I'll not call you tyrant;
But this most cruel usage of your queen
(Not able to produce more accusation
Than your own weak hing'd fancy) something savors
Of tyranny, and will ignore make you,
Yea, scandalous to the world.

Leon. On your allegiance,
Out of the chamber with her. Were I a tyrant,
Where were her life? she durst not call me so,
If she did know me one. Away with her!

Paul. I pray you, do not push me; I'll be gone.
Look to your babe, my lord; 'tis yours: Jove send her
A better guiding spirit!—What need these hands?—
You, that are thus so tender o'er his follies,
Will never do him good, not one of you.
So, so:—farewell; we are gone. [Exit.]

Leon. Thou, traitor, hast set on thy wife, to this.—
My child? away with't!—even thou, that hast
A heart so tender o'er it, take it hence,
And see it instantly consum'd with fire:
Even thou, and none but thou. Take it up straight.
Within this hour bring me word 'tis done,
(And by good testimony) or I'll seize thy life,
With what thou else call'st thine. If thou refuse,
And wilt encounter with my wrath, say so;
The bastard-brains with these my proper hands
Shall I dash out. Go, take it to the fire,
For thou sett'st on thy wife.

Ant. I did not, sir:
These lords, my noble fellows, if they please,
Can clear me in't.

1 Lord. We can: my royal liege,

<sup>b</sup> "A callat," i. e., a lewd woman.—<sup>c</sup> "Yellow" is the color of jealousy.—<sup>d</sup> "A lozel" is a worthless fellow, a vagabond.

He is not guilty of her coming hither.

Leon. You're liars all.

1 Lord. Beseech your highness, give us better credit. We have always truly serv'd you, and beseech <sup>1</sup> you So to esteem of us; and on our knees we beg, (As recompense of our dear services, Past, and to come) that you do change this purpose; Which, being so horrible, so bloody, must Lead on to some foul issue. We all kneel.

Leon. <sup>2</sup>Am I a feather for each wind that blows? Shall I live on, to see this bastard kneel And call me father? Better burn it now, Than curse it then. But, be it; let it live:— It shall not neither.—You, sir, come you hither;

[To ANTIGONUS.]

You, that have been so tenderly officious With lady Margery, your midwife, there, To save this bastard's life,—for 'tis a bastard, So sure as thy beard's grey,—what will you adventure To save this brat's life?

Ant. Any thing, my lord, That thy ability may undergo, And nobleness impose: at least, thus much; I'll pawn the little blood which I have left, To save the innocent: any thing possible.

Leon. It shall be possible. Swear by this <sup>a</sup> sword, Thou wilt perform my bidding.

Ant. I will, my lord.

Leon. Mark, and perform it, seest thou; for the Of any point in't shall not only be [<sup>b</sup> fail

Death to thyself, but to thy lewd-tongued wife, Whom for this time we pardon. We enjoin thee, As thou art liegeman to us, that thou carry This female bastard hence; and that thou bear it To some remote and desert place, quite out Of our dominions; and that there thou leave it, Without more mercy, to its own protection, And favor of the climate. As by strange fortune It came to us, I do in justice charge thee, On thy soul's peril and thy body's torture, That thou commend it <sup>c</sup> strangely to some place, Where chance may nurse, or end it. Take it up.

Ant. I swear to do this, though a present death Had been more merciful.—Come on, poor babe:

Some powerful spirit instruct the kites and ravens, To be thy nurses! Wolves, and bears, they say, Casting their savageness aside, have done Like offices of pity.—Sir, be prosperous In more than this deed doth require!—And <sup>d</sup> blessing Against this cruelty fight on thy side, Poor thing, condemn'd to <sup>e</sup> loss! [Exit with the Child.]

Leon. No; I'll not rear

Another's issue.

1 Atten. Please your highness, posts From those you sent to the oracle are come An hour since: Cleomenes and Dion, Being well arriv'd from Delphos, are both landed, Hasting to the court.

1 Lord. So please you, sir, their speed Hath been beyond account.

Leon. Twenty-three days They have been absent: 'tis good speed, foretels, The great Apollo suddenly will have The truth of this appear. Prepare you, lords: Summon a session, that we may arraign Our most disloyal lady; for, as she hath Been publicly accus'd, so shall she have

A just and open trial. While she lives, My heart will be a burden to me. Leave me, And think upon my bidding. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Same. A Street in some Town.

Enter CLEOMENES and DION.

Cleo. The climate's delicate, the air most sweet, Fertile the isle, the temple much surpassing The common praise it bears.

Dion. I shall report, For most it caught me, the celestial habits, (Methinks, I so should term them) and the reverence Of the grave wearers. O, the sacrifice! How ceremonious, solemn, and unearthly It was i' the offering!

Cleo. But, of all, the burst And the ear-deafening voice o' the oracle, Kin to Jove's thunder, so surpris'd my sense, That I was nothing.

Dion. If th' event o' the journey Prove as successful to the queen,—O, be't so!— As it hath been to us rare, pleasant, speedy, The time is worth the use <sup>on't</sup>.

Cleo. Great Apollo, Turn all to the best! These proclamations, So forcing faults upon Hermione, I little like.

Dion. The violent carriage of it Will clear, or end, the business: when the oracle, (Thus by Apollo's great divine seal'd up) Shall the contents discover, something rare, [ses;— Even then, will rush to knowledge.—Go,—fresh hor.— And gracious be the issue. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Court of Justice.

Enter LEONTES, Lords, and Officers.

Leon. This sessions (to our great grief we pronounce)

Even pushes 'gainst our heart: the party tried, The daughter of a king; our wife, and one Of us too much belov'd. Let us be clear'd Of being tyrannous, since we so openly Proceed in justice, which shall have due course, Even to the guilt, or the purgation.— Produce the prisoner.

Off. It is his highness's pleasure, that the queen Appear in person here in court. [Silence.]

Enter HERMIONE, 'to her trial, guarded; PAULINA and Ladies attending.

Leon. Read the indictment.

Off. "Hermione, queen to the worthy Leontes, king of Sicilia, thou art here accused and arraigned of high treason, in committing adultery with Polixenes, king of Bohemia; and conspiring with Camillo to take away the life of our sovereign lord the king, thy royal husband: the <sup>a</sup> pretence whereof being by circumstances partly laid open, thou, Hermione, contrary to the faith and allegiance of a true subject, didst counsel and aid them, for their better safety, to fly away by night."

Hcr. Since what I am to say, must be but that Which contradicts my accusation, and The testimony on my part no other But what comes from myself, it shall scarce boot me

<sup>1</sup> "The time is worth the use on't," i. e., the event will be a recompense for the time spent.—<sup>2</sup> "Pretence," i. e., design: Intention

To say "Not guilty;" mine integrity,
Being counted falsehood, shall, as I express it,
Be so receiv'd. But thus:—If powers divine
Behold our human actions, (as they do)
I doubt not, then, but innocence shall make False accusation blush, and tyranny
Tremble at patience.—You, my lord, best know,
(Who least will seem to do so) my past life
Hath been as continent, as chaste, as true,
As I am now unhappy; which is more
Than history can pattern, though devis'd,
And play'd to take spectators. For behold me,
A fellow of the royal bed, which owe
A moiety of the throne, a great king's daughter,
The mother to a hopeful prince, here standing
To prate and talk for life, and honor, 'fore
Who please to come and hear. For life, I prize it
As I weigh grief, which I would spare: for honor,
'Tis a derivative from me to mine,
And only that I stand for. I appeal
To your own conscience, sir, before Polixenes
Came to your court, how I was in your grace,
How merited to be so; since he came,
With what encounter so uncurrent I
Have stray'd, 't' appear thus: if one jot beyond
The bound of honor, or, in act, or will,
That way inclining, harden'd be the hearts
Of all that hear me, and my near'st of kin
Cry "Fie!" upon my grave.

Leon. I ne'er heard yet,
That any of these bolder vices wanted
Less impudence to gainsay what they did,
Than to perform it first.

Her. That's true enough:
Though 'tis a saying, sir, not due to me.

Leon. You will not own it.

Her. More than mistress of,
Which comes to me in name of fault, I must not
At all acknowledge. For Polixenes,
(With whom I am accus'd) I do confess,
I lov'd him, as in honor he requir'd,
With such a kind of love as might become
A lady like me; with a love, even such,
So and no other, as yourself commanded:
Which not to have done, I think, had been in me
Both disobedience and ingratitude [spoke,
To you, and toward your friend, whose love had Even since it could speak from an infant, freely,
That it was yours. Now, for conspiracy,
I know not how it tastes, though it be dish'd
For me to try how: all I know of it
Is, that Camillo was an honest man;
And why he left your court, the gods themselves,
Wotting no more than I, are ignorant.

Leon. You knew of his departure, as you know
What you have underta'en to do in his absence.

Her. Sir,
You speak a language that I understand not:
My life stands in the level of your dreams,
Which I'll lay down.

Leon. Your actions are my dreams:
You had a bastard by Polixenes,
And I but dream'd it.—As you were past all shame,
(Those of your fact are so) so past all truth,
Which to deny concerns more than avails; for as

Thy brat hath been cast out, like to itself,
No father owning it, (which is, indeed,
More criminal in thee than it) so thou
Shalt feel our justice, in whose easiest passage
Look for no less than death.

Her. Sir, spare your threats:
The bug, which you would fright me with, I seek.
To me can life be no commodity:
The crown and comfort of my life, your favor,
I do give lost; for I do feel it gone,
But know not how it went. My second joy,
And first-fruits of my body, from his presence
I am barr'd, like one infectious. My third comfort,
Starr'd most unluckily, is from my breast,
The innocent milk in its most innocent mouth,
Haled out to murder: myself on every post
Proclaim'd a strumpet: with immodest hated,
The child-bed privilege denied, which longs
To women of all fashion: lastly, hurried
Here to this place, i' the open air, before
I have got strength of limit. Now, my liege,
Tell me what blessings I have here alive,
That I should fear to die? Therefore, proceed.
But yet hear this; mistake me not.—No: life,
I prize it not a straw; but for mine honor,
(Which I would free) if I shall be condemn'd
Upon surmises, all proofs sleeping else
But what your jealousies awake, I tell you,
'Tis rigor, and not law.—Your honors all,
I do refer me to the oracle:
Apollo be my judge.

Lord. This your request
Is altogether just. Therefore, bring forth,
And in Apollo's name, his oracle. [Enter 2 Officers.

Her. The emperor of Russia was my father:
O! that he were alive, and here beholding
His daughter's trial; that he did but see
The flatness of my misery, yet with eyes
Of pity, not revenge!

Re-enter Officers, with CLEOMENES and DION.

Off. You here shall swear upon this sword of just-
That you, Cleomenes and Dion, have [vice,
Been both at Delphos; and from thence have brought
This seal'd-up oracle, by the hand deliver'd
Of great Apollo's priest; and that, since then,
You have not dar'd to break the holy seal,
Nor read the secrets in't.

Cleo. Dion.

All this we swear.

Leon. Break up the seals, and read.

Off. [Reads.] "Hermione is chaste, Polixenes blameless, Camillo a true subject, Leontes a jealous tyrant, his innocent babe truly begotten; and the king shall live without an heir, if that which is lost be not found."

Lords. Now, blessed be the great Apollo!

Her.

Praised!

Leon. Hast thou read truth?

Off. Ay, my lord; even so

As it is here set down.

Leon. There is no truth at all i' the oracle

The sessions shall proceed: this is mere falsehood.

Enter a Servant, in haste.

Serv. My lord the king, the king!

Leon.

What is the business?

Serv. O sir! I shall be hated to report it:

The prince your son, with mere conceit and fear
Of the queen's speed is gone.

* That is, my virtue being accounted wickedness, my assertion of it will pass but for a lie.—b Own; possess.—c That is, my life, which is only grief, I would willingly spare, or lay down.—d "Uncurrent," i. e., unlawful.—e "To stand in the level," (a metaphor from gunnery), is to be the object at which direct aim is taken.—f "Those of your fact," i. e., they who have done like you.—g "Concerns more than avails," i. e., will be useless; will prove nothing.

<sup>b</sup> Bugbear.—<sup>c</sup> "Starr'd most unluckily," i. e., ill-starred.—<sup>d</sup> Dragged.—<sup>e</sup> "Strength of limit," i. e., strength sufficient to go abroad after accouchement.—<sup>f</sup> Completeness.—<sup>g</sup> "Of the queen's speed," i. e., of the event of the queen's trial.

Leon. How! gone?
Leon. Apollo's angry, and the heavens themselves
Do strike at my injustice. <sup>2</sup>How now there!
Paul. This news is mortal to the queen.—Look
And see what death is doing. [down,

Leon. Take her hence:
Her heart is but o'ercharg'd; she will recover.—
I have too much believ'd mine own suspicion:—
Beseech you, tenderly apply to her
Some remedies for life.—Apollo, pardon

[Exeunt PAULINA and Ladies, with HERM.]
My great profaneness 'gainst thine oracle!—
I'll reconcile me to Polixenes,
New woo my queen, recall the good Camillo,
Whom I proclaim a man of truth, of mercy;
For, being transported by my jealousies
To bloody thoughts and to revenge, I chose
Camillo for the minister, to poison
My friend Polixenes: which had been done,
But that the good mind of Camillo tardied
My swift command; though I with death, and with Reward, did threaten and encourage him,
Not doing it, and being done: he, most humane,
And fill'd with honor, to my kingly guest
Unclasp'd my practice; quit his fortunes here,
Which you knew great, and to the hazard
Of all uncertainties himself <sup>a</sup>commended,
No richer than his honor.—How he glisters
<sup>b</sup>Through my rust! and how his piety
Does my deeds make the blacker!

Re-enter PAULINA.

Paul. Woe the while!
O, cut my lace, lest my heart, cracking it,
Break too!

<sup>1</sup> Lord. What fit is this, good lady?

Paul. What studied torments, tyrant, hast for me?
What wheels? racks? fires? <sup>2</sup>What flaying? burning, boiling

In lead, or oil? what old, or newer torture
Must I receive, whose every word deserves
To taste of thy most worst? Thy tyranny,
Together working with thy jealousies,—
Fancies too weak for boys, too green and idle
For girls of nine,—O! think what they have done,
And then run mad, indeed; stark mad, for all
Thy by-gone fooleries were but spices of it.
That thou betray'dst Polixenes, 'twas nothing;
That did but show thee of a fool, inconstant,
And damnable ungrateful: nor was't much,
Thou would'st have poison'd good Camillo's honor,
To have him kill a king; poor trespasses,
More monstrous standing by! whereof I reckon
The casting forth to crows thy baby daughter,
To be or none, or little; though a devil
Would have shed water out of <sup>c</sup>fire, ere don't:
Nor is't directly laid to thee, the death
Of the young prince, whose honorable thoughts
(Thoughts high for one so tender) cleft the heart
That could conceive a gross and foolish sire
Blemish'd his gracious dam: this is not, no,
Laid to thy answer: but the last,—O, lords!
When I have said, cry, woe!—the queen, the queen,
The sweet'st, dear'st creature's dead; and ven-
Not dropp'd down yet. [gauce for't

<sup>1</sup> Lord. The higher powers forbid!

Paul. I say, she's dead; I'll swear't: if word, nor Prevail not, go and see. If you can bring [oath,
Tincture, or lustre, in her lip, her eye,
Heat outwardly, or breath within, I'll serve you

As I would do the gods.—But, O thou tyrant!
Do not repent these things, for they are heavier
Than all thy woes can stir; therefore, betake thee
To nothing but despair. A thousand knees
Ten thousand years together, naked, fasting,
Upon a barren mountain, and still winter,
In storm perpetual, could not move the gods
To look that way thou wert.

Leon. Go on; go on;
Thou canst not speak too much: I have deserv'd
All tongues to talk their bitterest.

<sup>1</sup> Lord. Say no more:
Howe'er the business goes, you have made fault
I' the boldness of your speech.

Paul. I am sorry for't:
All faults I make, when I shall come to know them,
I do repent. Alas! I have show'd too much
The rashness of a woman. He is touch'd [help,
To the noble heart.—What's gone, and what's past
Should be past grief: do not receive affliction
At <sup>a</sup>repetition, I beseech you; rather,
Let me be punish'd, that have minded you
Of what you should forget. Now, good my liege,
Sir, royal sir, forgive a foolish woman:
The love I bore your queen,—lo, fool again!—
I'll speak of her no more, nor of your children;
I'll not remember you of my own lord,
Who is lost too. Take your patience to you,
And I'll say nothing.

Leon. Thou didst speak but well,
When most the truth, which I receive much better,
Than to be pitied of thee. Pr'ythee, bring me
To the dead bodies of my queen, and son.
One grave shall be for both: upon them shall
The causes of their death appear, unto
Our shame perpetual. Once a day I'll visit
The chapel where they lie; and tears shed there Shall be my recreation: so long as nature
Will bear up with this exercise, so long
I daily vow to use it. Come, and lead me
To these sorrows. [Exeunt

SCENE III.—Bohemia. A Desert Country near the Sea.

Enter ANTIGONUS, with the Babe; and a Mariner.

Ant. Thou art <sup>a</sup>perfect, then, our ship hath touch'd
The deserts of Bohemia? [upon

Mar. Ay, my lord; and fear
We have landed in ill time: the skies look grimly,
And threaten present blusters. In my conscience,
The heavens with that we have in hand are angry,
And frown upon us.

Ant. Their sacred wills be done!—Go, get aboard;
Look to thy bark: I'll not be long, before
I call upon thee.

Mar. Make your best haste, and go not Too far i' the land; 'tis like to be loud weather:
Besides, this place is famous for the creatures
Of prey that keep upon't.

Ant. Go thou away:
I'll follow instantly.

Mar. I am glad at heart
To be so rid o' the business. [Exit.

Ant. Come, poor babe:—
I have heard, (but not believ'd) the spirits o' the dead
May walk again: if such thing be, thy mother
Appear'd to me last night, for ne'er was dream
So like a waking. To me comes a creature,
Sometimes her head on one side, some another;
I never saw a vessel of like sorrow,

<sup>a</sup> Committed.—<sup>b</sup> Through.—<sup>c</sup> That is, would have shed tears of pity.

<sup>d</sup> "Thou art perfect," i. e., thou art well assured.

So fill'd, and so 'o'er-running: in pure white robes,
 Like very sanctity, she did approach
 My cabin where I lay, thrice bow'd before me,
 And, gasping to begin some speech, her eyes
 Became two spouts: the fury spent, anon
 Did this break from her:—"Good Antigonus,
 "Since fate, against thy better disposition,
 "Hath made thy person for the thrower-out
 "Of my poor babe, according to thine oath,
 "Places remote enough are in Bohemia,
 "There 'twould, and leave it crying; and, for the babe
 "Is counted lost for ever, Perdita,
 "I prythee, call't: for this ungentle business,
 "Put on thee by my lord, thou ne'er shalt see
 "Thy wife Paulina more:"—and so, with shrieks
 She melted into air. Affrighted much,
 I did in time collect myself, and thought
 This was so, and no slumber. Dreams are toys;
 Yet for this once, yea, superstitiously,
 I will be squar'd by this. I do believe,
 Hermione hath suffer'd death; and that
 Apollo should, this being indeed the issue
 Of king Polixenes, it should here be laid,
 Either for life or death, upon the earth
 Of its right father.—Blossom, speed thee well!

[Laying down the Babe.

There lie; and there thy character: there these,
 [Laying down a bundle.

Which may, if fortune please, both breed thee, pretty,
 And still rest thine.—The storm begins.—Poor wretch!

That for thy mother's fault art thus expos'd? [Thunder.
 To loss, and what may follow.—Weep I cannot,
 But my heart bleeds, and most accurs'd am I,
 To be by oath enjoind to this.—Farewell!
 The day frowns more and more: thou art like to have
 A lullaby too rough. I never saw [clamor?
 The heavens so dim by day. [Bear roars.] A savage
 Well may I get aboard!—This is the chase;
 I am gone for ever. [Exit, pursued by a bear.

Enter an old Shepherd.

Shep. I would there were no age between ten and three-and-twenty, or that youth would sleep out the rest; for there is nothing in the between but getting wenches with child, wronging the ancientry, stealing, fighting.—Hark you now!—Would any but these boiled-brains of nineteen, and two-and twenty, hunt this weather? They have scared away two of my best sheep; which, I fear, the wolf will sooner find, than the master: if any where I have them, 'tis by the sea-side, browzing of ivy. Good luck, an't be thy will! what have we here? [Taking up the *Babe.] Mercy on's, a <sup>d</sup>barn; a very pretty barn!
 A boy, or a child, I wonder? A pretty one; a very pretty one. Sure some scape: though I am not bookish, yet I can read waiting-gentlewoman in the scape. This has been some stair-work, some trunk-work, some behind-door-work: they were warmer that got this, than the poor thing is here. I'll take it up for pity; yet I'll tarry till my son come: he hallooed but even now.—Whoa, ho ho!

Enter Clown.

Clow. Hilloa, loa!

Shep. What! art so near? If thou'lt see a thing to talk on when thou art dead and rotten, come hither. What ail'st thou, man?

Clow. I have seen two such sights, by sea, and by land!—but I am not to say it is a sea, for it is now the sky: betwixt the firmament and it you cannot thrust a bodkin's point.

Shep. Why, boy, how is it?

Clow. I would, you did but see how it chafes, how it rages, how it takes up the shore! but that's not to the point. O, the most piteous cry of the poor souls! sometimes to see 'em, and not to see 'em:
 now the ship boring the moon with her mainmast;
 and anon swallowed with yest and froth, as you'd thrust a cork into a hogshead. And then for the land service:—to see how the bear tore out his shoulder bone; how he cried to me for help, and said, his name was Antigonus, a nobleman.—But to make an end of the ship:—to see how the sea <sup>e</sup>flapdragoned it;—but, first, how the poor souls roared, and the sea mocked them;—and how the poor gentleman roared, and the bear mocked him, both roaring louder than the sea, or weather.

Shep. Name of mercy! when was this, boy?

Clow. Now, now; I have not winked since I saw these sights: the men are not yet cold under water, nor the bear half dined on the gentleman: he's at it now.

Shep. Would I had been by, to have helped the old man!

Clow. I would you had been by the ship's side, to have helped her: there your charity would have lacked footing.

Shep. Heavy matters! heavy matters! but look thee here, boy. Now bless thyself: thou met'st with things dying, I with things new born. Here's a sight for thee; look thee: a 'bearing-cloth' for a squire's child! Look thee here: take up, take up, boy; open't. So, let's see. It was told me, I should be rich by the fairies: this is some <sup>e</sup>changeling.—
 Open't: what's within, boy?

Clow. You're a made old man: if the sins of your youth are forgiven you, you're well to live. Gold!
 all gold!

Shep. This is fairy gold, boy, and 'twill prove so: up with it, keep it close; home, home, the <sup>h</sup>next way. We are lucky, boy; and to be so still requires nothing but secrecy.—Let my sheep go.—Come, good boy, the <sup>h</sup>next way home.

Clow. Go you the next way with your findings: I'll go see if the bear be gone from the gentleman, and how much he hath eaten: they are never <sup>i</sup>curst, but when they are hungry. If there be any of him left,
 I'll bury it.

Shep. That's a good deed. If thou may'st discern by that which is left of him, what he is, fetch me to the sight of him.

Clow. Marry, will I; and you shall help to put him i' the ground.

Shep. 'Tis a lucky day, boy, and we'll do good deeds on't. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

Enter TIME, the Chorus.

Time. I, that please some, try all; both joy, and terror,
 Of good and bad; that make, and unfold error,
 Now take upon me, in the name of Time,
 To use my wings. Impute it not a crime

<sup>a</sup> "Thy character," i. e., the writing afterwards discovered with Perdita.—<sup>b</sup> The "clamor" was the cry of the dogs and hunters.—<sup>c</sup> "The chase," i. e., the animal pursued.—<sup>d</sup> Child.

<sup>e</sup> "Flap-dragoned it," i. e., swallowed it, as the ancient toppers swallowed flap-dragons.—<sup>f</sup> A "bearing-cloth" was a mantle of fine cloth in which a child was carried to be baptized.—<sup>g</sup> "Some changeling," i. e., a child left behind by the fairies, in the room of one which they had stolen.—<sup>h</sup> Nearest.
 —<sup>i</sup> Mischievous.

To me, or my swift passage, that I slide
 O'er sixteen years, and leave the growth untried
 Of that wide gap; since it is in my power
 To o'erthrow law, and in one self-born hour
 To plant and o'erwhelm custom. Let me pass
 The same I am, ere ancient'st order was,
 Or what is now receiv'd: I witness to
 The times that brought them in; so shall I do
 To the freshest things now reigning, and make stale
 The glistering of this present, as my tale
 Now seems to it. Your patience this allowing,
 I turn my glass, and give my scene such growing,
 As you had slept between. Leontes leaving
 Th' effects of his fond jealousies, so grieving
 That he shuts up himself, imagine <sup>a</sup> me, Gentle spectators, that I now may be
 In fair Bohemia; and remember well,
 I mention'd a son o' the king's, which Florizel
 I now name to you; and with speed so pace
 To speak of Perdita, now grown in grace
 Equal with wondering: What of her ensues,
 I list not prophesy; but let Time's news [daughter,
 Be known, when 'tis brought forth. A shepherd's
 And what to her adheres, which follows after,
 Is th' <sup>b</sup> argument of Time. Of this allow,
 If ever you have spent time worse ere now:
 If never, yet that Time himself doth say,
 He wishes earnestly you never may. [Exit.

SCENE I.—The Same. A Room in the Palace of POLIXENES.

Enter POLIXENES and CAMILLO.

Pol. I pray thee, good Camillo, be no more importunate: 'tis a sickness denying thee any thing, a death to grant this.

Cam. It is fifteen years, since I saw my country: though I have, for the most part, been aired abroad, I desire to lay my bones there. Besides, the penitent king, my master, hath sent for me; to whose feeling sorrows I might be some allay, or I o'erween to think so, which is another spur to my departure.

Pol. As thou lovest me, Camillo, wipe not out the rest of thy services, by leaving me now. The need I have of thee, thine own goodness hath made: better not to have had thee, than thus to want thee. Thou, having made me businesses, which none without thee can sufficiently manage, must either stay to execute them thyself, or take away with thee the very services thou hast done; which if I have not enough considered, (as too much I cannot) to be more thankful to thee shall be my study, and my profit therein, the heaping 'friendships. Of that fatal country, Sicilia, prythee speak no more, whose very naming punishes me with the remembrance of that penitent, as thou call'st him, and reconciled king, my brother; whose loss of his most precious queen, and children, are even now to be afresh lamented. Say to me, when saw'st thou the prince Florizel, my son? Kings are no less unhappy, their issue not being gracious, than they are in losing them when they have approved their virtues.

Cam. Sir, it is three days, since I saw the prince. What his happier affairs may be, are to me unknown; but I have <sup>1</sup> musingly noted, he is of late much retired from court, and is less frequent to his princely exercises than formerly he hath appeared.

Pol. I have considered so much, Camillo, and with some care; so far, that I have eyes under my service, which look upon his removedness: from whom I have this intelligence; that he is seldom from the house of a most homely shepherd; a man, they say, that from very nothing, and beyond the imagination of his neighbors, is grown into an unspicable estate.

Cam. I have heard, sir, of such a man, who hath a daughter of most rare note: the report of her is extended more than can be thought to begin from such a cottage.

Pol. That's likewise part of my intelligence, but, I fear, the <sup>d</sup> angle that plucks our son thither. Thou shalt accompany us to the place, where we will, not appearing what we are, have some question with the shepherd; from whose simplicity, I think it not uneasy to get the cause of my son's resort thither. Prythee, be my present partner in this business, and lay aside the thoughts of Sicilia.

Cam. I willingly obey your command. [selves.

Pol. My best Camillo!—We must disguise our-

SCENE II.—The Same. A Road near the Shepherd's Cottage.

Enter <sup>a</sup> AUTOLYCUS, singing.

When daffodils begin to peer,— <sup>2</sup>[1 Tune.

With, heigh! the dory over the dale,—

Why, then comes in the sweet o' the year;

For the red blood reigns in the winter's 'pale.

The white sheet bleaching on the hedge,—

With, heigh! the sweet birds, O, how they sing!—

Doth set my <sup>3</sup> priggings<sup>4</sup> tooth on edge;

For a quart of ale is a dish for a king

The lark, that tirra-lirra chants,—

With heigh! with heigh! the thrush and the jay,

Are summer songs for me and my <sup>5</sup> 'aunts,

While we lie tumbling in the hay.

I have served prince Florizel, and, in my time, wore <sup>1</sup> three-pile; but now I am out of service:

But shall I go mourn for that, my dear? <sup>4</sup>[2 Tune.

The pale moon shines by night;

And when I wander here and there,

I then do most go right.

If tinkers may have leave to live, <sup>5</sup>[3 Tune.

And bear the sow-skin budget,

Then my account I well may give,

And in the stocks avouch it.

My traffic is sheets; when the kite builds, look to lesser <sup>6</sup> linnen. My father named me, Autolycus; who, being, as I am, littered under Mercury, was likewise a snapper-up of unconsidered trifles. With die, and <sup>1</sup> drab, I purchased this caparison, and my revenue is the silly <sup>2</sup> wheat. Gallows, and knock, are too powerful on the highway; beating, and hanging, are terrors to me: for the life to come, I sleep out the thought of it.—A prize! a prize!

Enter Clown.

Clo. Let me see:—Every 'leven wether <sup>3</sup> tods:

every tod yields—pound and odd shilling; fifteen hundred shorn, what comes the wool to?

Aut. [Aside.] If the springe hold, the cock's mine.

Clo. I cannot do't without <sup>a</sup>counters.—Let me see; what am I to buy for our sheep-shearing feast? "Three pound of sugar; five pound of currants; rice"—What will this sister of mine do with rice? But my father hath made her mistress of the feast, and she lays it on. She hath made me four-and-twenty nosegays for the shearers; three-man <sup>b</sup>soung-men all, and very good ones, but they are most of them <sup>c</sup>means and bases; but one Puritan amongst them, and he sings psalms to hornpipes. I must have saffron, to color the <sup>d</sup>warden pies; mace,—dates, none; that's out of my note: "nutmegs, seven: a race or two of ginger;" but that I may beg:—"four pound of prunes, and as many of raisins o' the sun."

Aut. O, that ever I was born!

[Groveling on the ground.]

Clo. I' the name of me!—

Aut. O, help me, help me! pluck but off these rags, and then, death, death!

Clo. Alack, poor soul! thou hast need of more rags to lay on thee, rather than have these off.

Aut. O, sir! the loathsomeness of them offends me more than the stripes I have received, which are mighty ones, and millions.

Clo. Alas, poor man! a million of beating may come to a great matter.

Aut. I am robbed, sir, and beaten; my money and apparel ta'en from me, and these detestable things put upon me.

Clo. What, by a horse-man, or a foot-man?

Aut. A foot-man, sweet sir, a foot-man.

Clo. Indeed, he should be a foot-man, by the garments he hath left with thee: if this be a horse-man's coat, it hath seen very hot service. Lend me thy hand, I'll help thee: come; lend me thy hand.

[Helping him up.]

Aut. O! good sir, tenderly, O!

Clo. Alas, poor soul!

Aut. O, good sir! softly, good sir. I fear, sir, my shoulder-blade is out.

Clo. How now? canst stand?

Aut. Softly, dear sir: [Cuts his purse.] good sir, softly. You ha' done me a charitable office.

Clo. Dost lack any money? I have a little money for thee.

Aut. No, good, sweet sir: no, I beseech you, sir. I have a kinsman not past three quarters of a mile hence, unto whom I was going: I shall there have money, or any thing I want. Offer me no money, I pray you: that kills my heart.

Clo. What manner of fellow was he that robbed you?

Aut. A fellow, sir, that I have known to go about with <sup>a</sup>trol-my-dames: I knew him once a servant of the prince. I cannot tell, good sir, for which of his virtues it was, but he was certainly whipped out of the court.

Clo. His vices, you would say: there's no virtue whipped out of the court: they cherish it, to make it stay there, and yet it will no more but abide.

Aut. Vices I would say, sir. I know this man well: he hath been since an ape-bearer; then a process-server, a bailiff; then he compassed a <sup>b</sup>motion of the prodigal son, and married a tinker's wife within a mile where my land and living lies; and, having flown over many knavish professions, he settled only in rogue: some call him Autolycus.

Clo. Out upon him! <sup>b</sup>Prig, for my life, prig: he haunts wakes, fairs, and bear-baitings.

Aut. Very true, sir; he, sir, he: that's the rogue, that put me into this apparel.

Clo. Not a more cowardly rogue in all Bohemia: if you had but looked big, and spit at him, he'd have run.

Aut. I must confess to you, sir, I am no fighter: I am false of heart that way, and that he knew, I warrant him.

Clo. How do you now?

Aut. Sweet sir, much better than I was: I can stand, and walk. I will even take my leave of you, and pace softly toward my kinsman's.

Clo. Shall I bring thee on the way?

Aut. No, good-faced sir; no, sweet sir.

Clo. Then fare thee well. I must go buy spices for our sheep-shearing. [Exit Clown.]

Aut. Prosper you, sweet sir!—Your purse is not hot enough to purchase your spice. I'll be with you at your sheep-shearing too. If I make not this cheat bring out another, and the shearers prove sheep, let me be <sup>c</sup>enrolled, and my name put in the book of virtue!

Jog on, jog on, the foot-path way,

And merrily <sup>b</sup>hent the stile-a:

A merry heart goes all the day,

Your sad tires in a mile-a.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Shepherd's Cottage.

Enter FLORIZEL and PERDITA.

Flo. These, your unusual weeds, to each part of Do give a life: no shepherdess, but Flora [you Peering in April's front. This, your sheep-shearing, Is as a meeting of the petty gods, And you the queen on't.

Per.

<sup>a</sup>Sure, my gracious lord, To chide at your <sup>k</sup>extremes it not becomes me; O! pardon, that I name them: your high self, The gracious <sup>l</sup>mark o' the land, you have obscur'd With a swain's wearing, and me, poor lowly maid, Most goddess-like prank'd up. But that our feasts In every mess have folly, and the feeders Digest it with a custom, I should blush To see you so attir'd, <sup>o</sup>so worn, I think, To show myself a <sup>m</sup>glass.

Flo.

I bless the time, When my good falcon made her flight across Thy father's ground.

Per.

Now, Jove afford you cause! To me the <sup>a</sup>difference forges dread; your greatness Hath not been us'd to fear. Even now I tremble To think, your father, by some accident, Should pass this way, as you did. O, the fates! How would he look, to see his work, so noble, Vilely bound up? What would he say? Or how Should I, in these my borrow'd <sup>o</sup>flaunts, behold The sternness of his presence?

Flo.

Apprehend Nothing but jollity. The gods themselves, Humbling their deities to love, have taken

The shapes of beasts upon them : Jupiter
Became a bull, and bellow'd ; the green Neptune
A ram, and bleated ; and the fire-rob'd god,
Golden Apollo, a poor humble swain,
As I seem now. Their transformations
Were never for a piece of beauty rarer,
Nor 'any way so chaste ; since my desires
Run not before mine honor, nor my lusts
Burn hotter than my faith.

Per. O ! but, sir,
Your resolution cannot hold, when 'tis
Oppos'd, as it must be, by the power of the king.
One of these two must be necessities, [purpose,
Which then will speak—that you must change this
Or I my life.

Flo. Thou dearest Perdita,
With these <sup>a</sup>forc'd thoughts, I prythee, darken not
The mirth o' the feast : or I'll be thine, my fair,
Or not my father's ; for I cannot be Mine own, nor any thing to any, if
I be not thine : to this I am most constant,
Though destiny say, no. Be merry, <sup>2</sup>girl ;
Strange such thoughts as these with any thing
That you behold the while. Your guests are coming :
Lift up your countenance, as 'twere the day
Of celebration of that nuptial, which
We two have sworn shall come.

Per. O, lady fortune,
Stand you auspicious !

Enter Shepherd, with POLIXENES and CAMILLO, disguised ; Clown, MOPSA, DORCAS, and others.

Flo. See, your guests approach :
Address yourself to entertain them sprightly,
And let's be red with mirth.

Shep. Fie, daughter ! when my old wife liv'd, upon
This day she was both pantler, butler, cook ;
Both dame and servant ; welcom'd all ; serv'd all ;
Would sing her song, and dance her turn ; now here,
At upper end o' the table, now, i' the middle ;
On his shoulder, and his ; her face o' fire
With labor, and the thing she took to quench it,
She would to each one sip. You are retir'd,
As if you were a feasted one, and not
The hostess of the meeting : pray you, bid
These unknown friends to 's welcome ; for it is
A way to make us better friends, more known.
Come ; quench your blushes, and present yourself
That which you are, mistress o' the feast : come on,
And bid us welcome to your sheep-shearing,
As your good flock shall prosper.

Per. [To POL.] Sir, welcome.
It is my father's will, I should take on me
The hostess-ship o' the day :—[To CAM.] You're welcome, sir.—

Give me those flowers there, Dorcas.—Reverend sirs,
For you there's rosemary, and rue ; these keep Seeming and <sup>b</sup>savor all the winter long ;
Grace, and remembrance, be to you both,
And welcome to our shearing !

Pol. Shepherdess,
(A fair one are you) well you fit our ages
With flowers of winter.

Per. Sir, the year growing ancient,—
Not yet on summer's death, nor on the birth
Of trembling winter,—the fairest flowers o' the season
Are our carnations, and streak'd gilly-flowers,
Which some call nature's bastards : of that kind
Our rustic garden's barren, and I care not
To get slips of them.

Pol. Wherefore, gentle maiden,

Do you neglect them ?

Per. <sup>c</sup>For I have heard it said,
There is an <sup>d</sup>art which, in their priedness, shares
With great creating nature.

Pol. Say, there be ;
Yet nature is made better by no mean,
But nature makes that mean : so, o'er that art,
Which, you say, adds to nature, is an art
That nature makes. You see, sweet maid, we marry
A gentler scion to the wildest stock,
And make conceive a bark of baser kind
By bud of nobler race : this is an art
Which does mend nature,—change it rather ; but
The art itself is nature.

Per. So it is.

Pol. Then make your garden rich in <sup>e</sup>gilly-flowers,
And do not call them bastards.

Per. I'll not put
The dibble in earth to set one slip of them :
No more than, were I painted, I would wish
This youth should say, 'twere well, and only therefore Desire to breed by me.—Here's flowers for you ;
Hot lavender, mints, savory, marjoram ;
The marigold, that goes to bed wi' the sun,
And with him rises weeping : these are flowers
Of middle summer, and, I think, they are given
To men of middle age. You are very welcome.

Cam. I should leave grazing, were I of your flock,
And only live by gazing.

Per. Out, alas !
You'd be so lean, that blasts of January
Would blow you through and through.—Now, my fair'st friend,

I would, I had some flowers o' the spring, that might Become your time of day ; and yours, and yours,
That wear upon your virgin branches yet
Your maidenheads growing :—O Proserpina !
For the flowers now, that, frighted, thou let'st fall
From Dis's waggon ! daffodils,
That come before the swallow dares, and take
The winds of March with beauty ; violets dim,
But sweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes,
Or Cytherea's breath ; pale primroses,
That die unmarried ere they can behold
Bright Phoebus in his strength, a malady
Most incident to maids ; bold oxlips, and
The crown imperial ; lilies of all kinds,
The flower-de-luce being one. O ! these I lack,
To make you garlands of, and, my sweet friend,
To strew him o'er and o'er.

Flo. What ! like a corse ?

Per. No, like a bank, for love to lie and play on,
Not like a corse ; or if,—not to be buried, [ers.
But quick, and in mine arms. Come, take your flow-
Metinks, I play as I have seen them do
In Whitsun-pastorals : sure, this robe of mine
Does change my disposition.

Flo. What you do
Still betters what is done. When you speak, sweet,
I'd have you do it ever : when you sing,
I'd have you buy and sell so ; so give alms ;
Pray so ; and, for the ordering your affairs,
To sing them too. When you do dance, I wish you
A wave o' the sea, that you might ever do
Nothing but that ; move still, still so,
And own no other function : each your doing,
So singular in each particular,

<sup>a</sup> "Forc'd," i. e., far-fetched.—<sup>b</sup> "Seeming and savor," i. e., appearance and smell.

Crowns what you are doing in the present deeds,
That all your acts are queens.

Per. O Doricles!
Your praises are too large: but that your youth,
And the true blood, which peeps <sup>1</sup> so fairly through it,
Do plainly give you out an unstain'd shepherd,
With wisdom I might fear, my Doricles,
You wou'd me the false way.

Flo. I think, you have
As little skill to <sup>a</sup> fear, as I have purpose
To put you to't.—But, come; our dance, I pray.
Your hand, my Perdita: so turtles pair,
That never mean to part.

Per. <sup>b</sup> I'll swear for 'em.
Pol. This is the prettiest low-born lass, that ever
Ran on the green-sward: nothing she does, or <sup>2</sup> says,
But smacks of something greater than herself;
Too noble for this place.

Cam. He tells her something,
<sup>3</sup> That wakes her blood:—look on't. Good sooth,
The queen of curds and cream. [she is
Clo. Come on, strike up.

Dor. Mopsa must be your mistress: marry, gar-
To mend her kissing with.— [lick,
Mop. Now, in good time—

Clo. Not a word, a word: we stand upon our <sup>c</sup> manners.—

Come, strike up. [Music.
[Here a dance of Shepherds and Shepherdesses.
Pol. Pray, good shepherd, what fair swain is this,
Which dances with your daughter?

Shep. They call him Doricles, and boasts himself
To have a worthy <sup>d</sup> breeding; but I have it
Upon his own report, and I believe it: [ter:
He looks like <sup>e</sup> sooth. He says, he loves my daugh-
I think so too; for never gaz'd the moon
Upon the water, as he'll stand, and read,
As 'twere, my daughter's eyes; and, to be plain,
I think, there is not half a kiss to choose,
Who loves another best.

Pol. She dances <sup>f</sup> featly.
Shep. So she does anything, though I report it,
That should be silent. If young Doricles
Do light upon her, she shall bring him that
Which he not dreams of.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. O master! if you did but hear the pedler at the door, you would never dance again after a tabor and pipe; no, the bagpipe could not move you. He sings several tunes faster than you'll tell money; he utters them as he had eaten ballads, and all men's ears grew to his tunes.

Clo. He could never come better: he shall come in. I love a ballad but even too well; if it be dol-ful matter, merrily set down, or a very pleasant thing indeed, and sung lamentably.

Serv. He hath songs, for man, or woman, of all sizes: no <sup>g</sup> milliner can so fit his customers with gloves. He has the prettiest love-songs for maids; so without bawdry, which is strange; with such delicate burdens of "dildos" and <sup>h</sup> "fadings,"
"jump her and thump her;" and where some stretch'd-mouth rascal would, as it were, mean mischief, and break a foul <sup>i</sup> jape, <sup>j</sup> in the manner, he makes the maid to answer, "Whoop, do me no harm, good man;" puts him off, slights him with "Whoop, do me no harm, good <sup>k</sup> man."

Pol. This is a brave fellow.

Clo. Believe me, thou talkest of an admirableconcocted fellow. Has he any <sup>l</sup> embroidered wares?

Serv. He hath ribands of all the colors <sup>m</sup> of the rainbow; <sup>n</sup> points, more than all the lawyers in Bohemia can learnedly handle, though they come to him by the gross; <sup>o</sup> inkles, <sup>p</sup> caddisses, cambrics, lawns: why, he sings them over, as they were gods or goddesses. You would think a smock were a she-angel, he so chants to the <sup>q</sup> sleeve-band, and the work about the <sup>r</sup> square on't.

Clo. Pr'ythee, bring him in, and let him approach singing.

Per. Forewarn him, that he use no scurrilous words in's times.

Clo. You have of these pedlers, that have more in them than you'd think, sister.

Per. Ay, good brother, or go about to think.

Enter AUTOLYCUS, singing.

*Lawn, as white as driven snow;
Cyprus, black as <sup>s</sup> c'er was crow;
Gloves, as sweet as damask roses;
Masks for faces, and for noses;
Bugle-bracelet, necklace amber,
Perfume for a lady's <sup>t</sup> chamber:
Golden quoifs, and stomachers,
For my lads to give their dears;
Pins and <sup>u</sup> poking-sticks of steel,
What waits lack from head to heel:
Come, buy of me, come; come buy, come buy,
Buy, lads, or else your lasses cry:
Come, buy.*

Clo. If I were not in love with Mopsa, thou should'st take no money of me; but being enthrall'd as I am, it will also be the bondage of certain ribands and gloves.

Mop. I was promised them against the feast, but they come not too late now.

Dor. He hath promised you more than that, or there be liars.

Mop. He hath paid you all he promised you:
may be, he has paid you more, which will shame
you to give him again.

Clo. Is there no manners left among maids? will they wear their <sup>v</sup> plaquets, where they should bear their faces? Is there not milking time, when you are going to bed, or <sup>w</sup> kiln-hole, to <sup>x</sup> whisper off these secrets, but you must be tittle-tattling before all our guests? 'Tis well they are whispering. <sup>y</sup> Charm your tongues, and not a word more.

Mop. I have done. Come, you promised me a tawdry lace, and a pair of <sup>z</sup> sweet gloves.

Clo. Have I not told thee, how I was cozened by the way, and lost all my money?

Aut. And, indeed, sir, there are cozeners abroad;
therefore, it behoves men to be wary.

Clo. Fear not thou, man, thou shalt lose nothing
here.

Aut. I hope so, sir; for I have about me many parcels of charge.

Clo. What hast here? ballads?

<sup>a</sup> "You have as little skill to fear," i. e., you as little know how to fear that I am false, as, &c.—<sup>b</sup> "I'll swear for 'em," a phrase of acquiescence, like, I'll warrant you.—<sup>c</sup> "We stand upon our manners," i. e., we are on our good behavior.—<sup>d</sup> "Sooth," i. e., truth.—<sup>e</sup> Nimble; dexterously.—<sup>f</sup> The business of milliners was formerly carried on by men.—<sup>g</sup> The "fadings" was a dance.—<sup>h</sup> "Jape," i. e., jest.

Mop. Pray now, buy some: I love a ballad in print o'-life, for then we are sure they are true.

Aut. Here's one to a very doleful tune, How a usurer's wife was brought to bed of twenty money-bags at a burden; and how she longed to eat adders' heads, and toads <sup>a</sup> carbonadoed.

Mop. Is it true, think you?

Aut. Very true; and but a month old.

Dor. Bless me from marrying a usurer!

Aut. Here's the midwife's name to't, one mistress Taleporter, and five or six honest wives' that were present. Why should I carry lies abroad?

Mop. Pray you now, buy it.

Clo. Come on, lay it by: and let's first see more ballads; we'll buy the other things anon.

Aut. Here's another ballad, of a fish, that appeared upon the coast, on Wednesday the fourscore of April, forty thousand fathom above water, and sung this ballad against the hard hearts of maids: it was thought she was a woman, and was turned into a cold fish, <sup>b</sup>for she would not exchange flesh with one that loved her. The ballad is very pitiful, and as true.

Dor. Is it true too, think you?

Aut. Five justices' hands at it, and witnesses more than my pack will hold.

Clo. Lay it by too: another.

Aut. This is a merry ballad, but a very pretty one.

Mop. Let's have some merry ones.

Aut. Why this is a passing merry one, and goes to the tune of, "Two maids wooing a man." There's scarce a maid westward but she sings it: 'tis in request, I can tell you.

Mop. We can both sing it: if thou'lt bear a part, thou shalt hear it: 'tis in three parts.

Dor. We had the tune on't a month ago.

Aut. I can bear my part; you must know, 'tis my occupation: have at it with you.

SONG.

Aut. Get you hence, for I must go,
<sup>1</sup> Whither fits not you to know.

Dor. Whither?

Mop. O! whither?

Dor. Whither?

Mop. It becomes thy oath full well,
Thou to me thy secrets tell.

Dor. Me too: let me go thither.

Mop. Or thou go'st to the grange, or mill:

Dor. If to either, thou dost ill.

Aut. Neither.

Dor. What, neither?

Aut. Neither.

Dor. Thou hast sworn my love to be;

Mop. Thou hast sworn it more to me:

Then, whither go'st? say, whither?

Clo. We'll have this song out anon by ourselves. My father and the gentlemen are in <sup>c</sup>sad talk, and we'll not trouble them: come, bring away thy pack after me. Wenches, I'll buy for you both. Pedler, let's have the first choice.—Follow me, girls.

<sup>2</sup> [Exeunt Cloven, DORCAS, and MOPSA.]

Aut. And you shall pay well for 'em. [Aside.]

Will you buy any tape,

Or lace for your cape,

My dainty duck, my dear-a?

Any silk, any thread,

Any toys for your head,

Of the new'st, and fin'st, fin'st wear-a?

Come to the pedler;

Money's a medler,

That doth utter all men's ware-a.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Master, there is three carters, three shepherds, three neat-herds, three swine-herds, that have made themselves all men of <sup>e</sup>hair: they call themselves <sup>f</sup>saltiers; and they have a dance which the wenches say is a gallimaufry of gambols, because they are not in't; but they themselves are o' the mind, (if it be not too rough for some, that know little but bowling) it will please plentifully.

Shep. Away! we'll none on't: here has been too much homely foolery already.—I know, sir, we weary you.

Pol. You weary those that refresh us. Pray, let's see these four threes of herdsmen.

Serv. One three of them, by their own report, sir, bath danced before the king; and not the worst of the three, but jumps twelve foot and a half by the <sup>g</sup>squire.

Shep. Leave your prating. Since these good men are pleased, let them come in: but quickly now.

Serv. Why, they stay at door, sir.

[Exit.]

Re-enter Servant, with Twelve Rustics, habited like Satyrs. They dance, and then exeunt.

Pol. O father! you'll know more of that hereafter.—

Is it not too far gone?—'Tis time to part them.—He's simple, and tells much. How now, fair shepherd! Your heart is full of something, that does take <sup>h</sup>herd? Your mind from feasting. Sooth, when I was young, And <sup>4</sup>handled love as you do, I was wont [sack'd To load my she with knacks: I would have ran the pedler's silken treasury, and have pour'd it To her acceptance; you have let him go, And nothing <sup>h</sup>marted with him. If your lass Interpretation should abuse, and call this Your lack of love, or bounty, you were <sup>i</sup>straitned For a reply, at least, if you make a care Of happy holding her.

Flo. Old sir, I know

She prizes not such trifles as these are. The gifts she looks from me are pack'd and lock'd Up in my heart, which I have given already, But not deliver'd.—O! hear me breathe my life Before this ancient sir, who, it should seem, Hath sometimes lov'd: I take thy hand; this hand, As soft as dove's down, and as white as it, Or Ethiopian's tooth, or the fann'd snow, that's <sup>k</sup>bolted By the northern blasts twice o'er.

Pol. What follows this?—

How prettily the young swain seems to wash The hand, was fair before!—I have put you out.—But, to your protestations: let me hear What you profess.

Flo. Do, and be witness to't.

Pol. And this my neighbor too?

Flo. And he, and more. Then he, and men; the earth, the heavens, and all; That were I crown'd the most imperial monarch, Thereof most worthy; were I the fairest youth That ever made eye sverve; had <sup>l</sup>sense, and knowledge, More than was ever man's, I would not prize them, Without her love: for her employ them all, Commend them, and condemn them, to her service,

Or to their own perdition.

Pol. Fairly offer'd.

Cam. This shows a sound affection.

Shep. But, my daughter,

Say you the like to him?

Per. I cannot speak

So well, nothing so well; no, nor mean better:

By the pattern of mine own thoughts I cut out

The purity of his.

Shep. Take hands; a bargain:—

<sup>1</sup>Joining their hands.

And, friends unknown, you shall bear witness to't.

I give my daughter to him, and will make

Her portion equal his.

Flo. O! that must be

! the virtue of your daughter: one being dead,

I shall have more than you can dream of yet;

Enough then for your wonder. But, come on;

Contract us 'fore these witnesses.

Shep. Come, your hand;

And, daughter, yours.

Pol. Soft, swain, awhile, beseech you.

Have you a father?

Flo. I have; but what of him?

Pol. Knows he of this?

Flo. He neither does, nor shall.

Pol. Methinks, a father

Is at the nuptial of his son a guest

That best becomes the table. Pray you, once more:

Is not your father grown incapable

Of reasonable affairs? is he not stupid

With age, and altering rheums? Can he speak? hear?

Know man from man? <sup>2</sup>dispose his own estate?

Lies he not bed-rid? and again, does nothing,

But what he did being childish?

Flo. No, good sir:

He has his health, and ampler strength, indeed,

Than most have of his age.

Pol. By my white beard,

You offer him, if this be so, a wrong

Something unfilial. Reason, my son,

Should choose himself a wife; but as good reason,

The father, (all whose joy is nothing else

But fair posterity) should hold some counsel

In such a business.

Flo. I yield all this;

But for some other reasons, my grave sir,

Which 'tis not fit you know, I not acquaint

My father of this business.

Pol. Let him know't.

Flo. He shall not.

Pol. Pr'ythee, let him.

Flo. No, he must not.

Shep. Let him, my son: he shall not need to grieve

At knowing of thy choice.

Flo. Come, come, he must not.—

Mark our contract.

Pol. Mark your divorce, young sir,
[Discovering himself.]

Whom son I dare not call: thou art too base

To be acknowledg'd. Thou a sceptre's heir,

That thus affect'st a sheep-hook!—Thou old traitor,

I am sorry, that by hanging thee I can

But shorten thy life one week.—And thou fresh piece

Of excellent witchcraft, who of force must know

The royal fool thou cop'st with—

<sup>3</sup>Per. O, my heart!

Pol. I'll have thy beauty scratch'd with briars, and made

More homely than thy state.—For thee, fond boy,

If I may ever know, thou dost sigh [never

That thou no more shalt never see this <sup>4</sup>knack, (as <sup>a</sup>Tuy.

I mean thou shalt) we'll bar thee from succession;

Not hold thee of our blood, no not our kin,

<sup>b</sup>Far than Deucalion off:—mark thou my words.

Follow us to the court.—Thou, churl, for this time,

Though full of our displeasure, yet we free thee

From the dead blow of it.—And you, enchantment,—

Worthy enough a herdsman; yea, him too,

That makes himself, but for our honor therein,

Unworthy thee,—if ever henceforth thou

These rural latches to his entrance open,

Or hoop his body more with thy embraces,

I will devise a death as cruel for thee,

As thou art tender to't.

[Exit.]

Per. Even here undone!

I was not much afraid; for once, or twice,

I was about to speak, and tell him plainly,

The self-same sun that shines upon his count,

Hides not his visage from our cottage, but

Looks on alike.—Will't please you, sir, be gone?

[To FLORIZEL.]

I told you, what would come of this. Beseech you,

Of your own state take care: this dream of mine,

Being now awake, I'll queen it no inch farther,

But milk my ewes, and weep.

Cam. Why, how now, father?

Speak, ere thou diest.

Shep.

I cannot speak, nor think,
Nor dare to know that which I know.—O, sir!

[To FLORIZEL]

You have undone a man of fourscore three,

That thought to fill his grave in quiet; yea,

To die upon the bed my father died,

To lie close by his honest bones: but now,

Some hangman must put on my shroud, and lay me

Where no priest shovels in <sup>c</sup>dust.—O cursed wretch!

[To PERDITA.]

That knew'st this was the prince, and would'st adventure

To mingle faith with him.—Undone! undone!

If I might die within this hour, I have liv'd

To die when I desire. [Exit.]

Flo.

Why look you so upon me?

I am but sorry, not afraid; delay'd,

But nothing alter'd. What I was, I am:

More straining on, for plucking back; not following

My <sup>d</sup>leash unwillingly.

Cam.

Gracious my lord,

You know your father's temper: at this time

He will allow no speech, (which, I do guess,

You do not purpose to him) and as hardly

Will he endure your sight as yet, I fear:

Then, till the fury of his highness settle,

Come not before him.

Flo.

I not purpose it.

I think, Camillo?

Cam.

Even he, my lord.

Per. How often have I told you 'twould be thus?

How often said my dignity would last

But till 'twere known?

Flo.

It cannot fail, but by

The violation of my faith; and then,

Let nature crush the sides o' the earth together,

And mar the seeds within.—Lift up thy looks:—

From my succession wipe me, father; I

Am heir to my affection.

Cam.

Be advis'd.

Flo. I am; and by my <sup>e</sup>fancy: if my reason

Will thereto be obedient, I have reason;

If not, my senses, better pleas'd with madness,

—<sup>e</sup>Love.

Do bid it welcome.

Cam. This is desperate, sir.

Flo. So call it; but it does fulfil my vow: I needs must think it honesty. Camillo, Not for Bohemia, nor the pomp that may Be therewith gleam'd; for all the sun sees, or The close earth wombs, or the profound seas hide In unknown fathoms, will I break my oath To this my fair belov'd. Therefore, I pray you, As you have ever been my father's honor'd friend, When he shall miss me, (as, in faith, I mean not To see him any more) cast your good counsels Upon his passion: let myself and fortune Tug for the time to come. This you may know, And so deliver.—I am put to sea With her, whom here I cannot hold on shore; And, most opportune to our need, I have A vessel rides fast by, but not prepar'd For this design. What course I mean to hold Shall nothing benefit your knowledge, nor Concern me the reporting.

Cam. O, my lord!

I would your spirit were easier for advice, Or stronger for your need.

Flo. Hark, Perdita.—

[To CAMILLO.] I'll hear you by and by.

<sup>1</sup> [ They talk apart.

Cam. He's irremovable;

Resolv'd for flight. Now were I happy, if His going I could frame to serve my turn; Save him from danger, do him love and honor, Purchase the sight again of dear Sicilia, And that unhappy king, my master, whom I so much thirst to see.

Flo. Now, good Camillo,

I am so fraught with <sup>2</sup>serious business, that I leave out ceremony. [ Going.

Cam. Sir, I think,

You have heard of my poor services, if the love That I have borne your father?

Flo. Very nobly

Have you deserv'd: it is my father's music, To speak your deeds; not little of his care To have them recompens'd, as thought on.

Cam. Well, my lord,

If you may please to think I love the king, And, through him, what's nearest to him, which is Your gracious self, embrace but my direction, (If your more ponderous and settled project May suffer alteration) on mine honor I'll point you where you shall have such receiving As shall become your highness; where you may Enjoy your mistress; (from the whom, I see, There's no disjunction to be made, but by, As heavens forefend, your ruin) marry her; And (with my best endeavors in your absence) Your <sup>3</sup>discontenting father strive to qualify, And bring him up to liking.

Flo. How, Camillo,

May this, almost a miracle, be done? That I may call thee something more than man, And, after that, trust to thee.

Cam. Have you thought on

A place whereto you'll go?

Flo. Not any yet;

But as th' unthought-on <sup>4</sup>accident is guilty 'C To what we wildly do, so we profess Ourselves to be the slaves of chance, and flies Of every wind that blows.

Cam. Then list to me:

This follows. If you will not change your purpose, But undergo this flight, make for Sicilia, And there present yourself, and your fair princess, (For so, I see, she must be) 'fore Leontes: She shall be habited, as it becomes The partner of your bed. Methinks, I see Leontes, opening his free arms, and weeping His welcomes forth; asks thee, the son, forgiveness, As 'twere i' the father's person; kisses the hands Of your fresh princess; o'er and o'er divides him 'Twixt his unkindness and his kindness; th' one He chides to hell, and bids the other grow Faster than thought, or time.

Flo. Worthy Camillo, What color for my visitation shall I Hold up before him?

Cam. Sent by the king, your father, To greet him, and to give him comforts. Sir, The manner of your bearing towards him, with What you, as from your father, shall deliver, Things known betwixt us three, I'll write you down: The which shall point you forth at every <sup>5</sup>sitting What you must say, that he shall not perceive, But that you have your father's bosom there, And speak his very heart.

Flo. I am bound to you.

There is some sap in this.

Cam. A course more promising Than a wild dedication of yourselves To unpath'd waters, undream'd shores; most certain, To miseries enough: no hope to help you, But, as you shake off one, to take another: Nothing so certain as your anchors, who Do their best office, if they can but stay you Where you'll be loath to be. Besides, you know, Prosperity's the very bond of love, Whose fresh complexion, and whose heart together, Affliction alters.

Per. One of these is true:

I think, affliction may subdue the cheek, But not take <sup>6</sup>in the mind.

Cam. Yea, say you so? There shall not, at your father's house, these seven Be born another such. [ years,

Flo. My good Camillo, She is as forward of her breeding, as She is i' the rear of <sup>7</sup>birth.

Cam. I cannot say, 'tis pity She lacks instructions, for she seems a mistress To most that teach.

Per. Your pardon, sir; for this I'll blush you thanks.

Flo. My prettiest Perdita.— But, O, the thorns we stand upon!—Camillo, Preserver of my father, now of me, The medicine of our house, how shall we do? We are not furnish'd like Bohemia's son, Nor shall <sup>8</sup>appear't in Sicilia—

Cam. My lord, Fear none of this. I think, you know, my fortunes Do all lie there; it shall be so my care To have you royally appointed, as if The scene you play were <sup>9</sup>true. For instance, sir, That you may know you shall not want,—one word.

Enter AUTOLYCUS.

Aut. Ha, ha! what a fool honesty is! and trust, his sworn brother, a very simple gentleman! I have sold all my trumpery: not a counterfeit stone, not a riband, glass, a pomander, brooch, table-book, hal-lad, knife, tape, glove, shoe-tie, bracelet, horn-ring, to keep my pack from fasting: they thronged who should buy first; as if my trinkets had been hal-lowed, and brought a benediction to the buyer: by which means, I saw whose purse was best in picture, and what I saw, to my good use I remembered. My clown (who wants but something to be a reasonable man) grew so in love with the wenches' song, that he would not stir his <sup>b</sup>pettitoes, till he had both tune and words; which so drew the rest of the herd to me, that all their other senses stuck in ears: you might have pinched a placket, it was senseless; 'twas nothing to geld a coldpiece of a purse; I would have filed keys off, that hung in chains: no hearing, no feeling, but my sir's song, and admiring the nothing of it; so that, in this time of lethargy, I picked and cut most of their festival purses, and had not the old man come in with a <sup>c</sup>whoo-bub against his daughter and the king's son, and scared my <sup>d</sup>choughs from the chaff, I had not left a purse alive in the whole army.

[CAMILLO, FLORIZEL, and PERDITA, come forward.]

Cam. Nay, but my letters, by this means being there

So soon as you arrive, shall clear that doubt.

Flo. And those that you'll procure from king Le-

Cam. Shall satisfy your father. [Ontes?]

Per. Happy be you! [Cus.]

All that you speak shows fair.

Cam. Whom have we here?— [Seeing AUTOLY.]

We'll make an instrument of this: omit

Nothing may give us aid.

Aut. If they have overheard me now,—why hanging.

Cam. How now, good fellow! Why shakest thou so? Fear not, man; here's no harm intended to thee.

Aut. I am a poor fellow, sir.

Cam. Why, be so still; here's nobody will steal that from thee: yet, for the outside of thy poverty, we must make an exchange: therefore, discease thee instantly, (thou must think, there's a necessity in't) and change garments with this gentleman. Though the pennyworth on his side be the worst, yet hold thee, there's some <sup>e</sup>boot. <sup>1</sup>[Giving money.]

Aut. I am a poor fellow, sir.—[Aside.] I know ye well enough.

Cam. Nay, pr'ythee, dispatch: the gentleman is half <sup>f</sup>ayed already.

Aut. Are you in earnest, sir?—[Aside.] I smell the trick of it.

Flo. Dispatch, I pr'ythee.

Aut. Indeed, I have had earnest; but I cannot with conscience take it.

Cam. Unbuckle, unbuckle.—

[FLO. and AUTOL. exchange garments.]

Fortunate mistress, (let my prophecy Come home to you!) you must retire yourself Into some covert: take your sweetheart's hat, And pluck it o'er your brows; muffle your face; Dismantle you, and as you can, disliken The truth of your own seeming, that you may (For I do fear eyes ever) to ship-board Get undescried.

Per. I see, the play so lies,

That I must bear a part.

Cam. No remedy.—

Have you done there?

Flo. Should I now meet my father,

He would not call me son.

Cam. Nay, you shall have no hat.—

<sup>2</sup>[Gives it to PERDITA.]

Come, lady, come.—Farewell, my friend.

Aut. Adieu, sir.

Flo. O Perdita! what have we twin forgot <sup>3</sup>?
Pray you, a word. <sup>4</sup>[They talk apart.]

Cam. What I do next shall be to tell the king Of this escape, and whither they are bound; Wherein, my hope is, I shall so prevail, To force him after: in whose company I shall review Sicilia, for whose sight I have a woman's longing.

Flo. Fortune speed us!—
Thus we set on, Camillo, to the sea-side.

Cam. The swifter speed, the better.

[Exeunt FLORIZEL, PERDITA, and CAMILLO.]

Aut. I understand the business; I hear it. To have an open ear, a quick eye, and a nimble hand, is necessary for a cut-purse: a good nose is requisite also, to smell out work for the other senses. I see, this is the time that the unjust man doth thrive. What an exchange had this been without boot! what a boot is here with this exchange! Sure, the gods do this year connive at us, and we may do any thing extempore. The prince himself is about a piece of iniquity; stealing away from his father, with his clog at his heels. If I thought it were a piece of honesty to acquaint the king withal, I would not do't: I hold it the more knavery to conceal it, and therein am I constant to my profession.

Enter Clown and Shepherd.

Aside, aside!—here is more matter for a hot brain. Every lane's end, every shop, church, session, hanging, yields a careful man work.

Clow. See, what a man you are now! There is no other way, but to tell the king she's a <sup>5</sup>change-ling and none of your flesh and blood.

Shep. Nay, but hear me.

Clow. Nay, but hear me.

Shep. Go to, then.

Clow. She being none of your flesh and blood, your flesh and blood has not offended the king; and so your flesh and blood is not to be punished by him. Show those things you found about her; those secret things, all but what she has with her. This being done, let the law go whistle; I warrant you.

Shep. I will tell the king all, every word, yea, and his son's pranks too; who, I may say, is no honest man, neither to his father, nor to me, to go about to make me the king's brother-in-law.

Clow. Indeed, brother-in-law was the furthest off you could have been to him; and then your blood had been the dearer, by I know how much an ounce.

Aut. [Aside.] Very wisely, puppies!

Shep. Well, let us to the king: there is that in this <sup>6</sup>fardel will make him scratch his beard.

Aut. [Aside.] I know not what impediment this complaint may be to the fight of my master.

Clow. Pray heartily he be at palace.

Aut. [Aside.] Though I am not naturally honest, I am so sometimes by chance:—let me pocket up my pedler's <sup>7</sup>excrement.—[Takes off his false beard.] How now, rustics! whither are you bound?

Shep. To the palace, an it like your worship.

Aut. Your affairs there? what? with whom? the condition of that <sup>8</sup>fardel, the place of your dwelling, your names, your ages, of what <sup>9</sup>having, breeding, and any thing that is fitting to be known discover.

Clo. We are but plain fellows, sir.

Aut. A lie: you are rough and hairy. Let me have no lying: it becomes none but tradesmen, and they often give us soldiers the lie; but we pay them for it with stamped coin, not stabbing steel: therefore, they do not give us the <sup>a</sup> lie.

Clo. Your worship had like to have given us one, if you had not taken yourself with the <sup>b</sup> manner.

Shep. Are you a courtier, an't like you, sir?

Aut. Whether it like me, or no, I am a courtier. Seest thou not the air of the court in these enfoldings? hath not my gait in it the measure of the <sup>c</sup> court? receives not thy nose court-odor from me? reflect I not on thy baseness court-contempt? Think'st thou, for that I insinuate, or <sup>d</sup> touze from thee thy business, I am therefore no courtier? I am courtier, cap-a-pie; and one that will either push on, or pluck back thy business there: whereupon, I command thee to open thy affair.

Shep. My business, sir, is to the king.

Aut. What advocate hast thou to him?

Shep. I know not, an't like you.

Clo. Advocate's the court-word for a pheasant: say, you have none.

Shep. None, sir: I have no pheasant, cock, nor hen.

Aut. How bless'd are we that are not simple men! Yet nature might have made me as these are, Therefore I'll not disdain.

Clo. This cannot but be a great courtier.

Shep. His garments are rich, but he wears them not handsomely.

Clo. He seems to be the more noble in being fantastical: a great man, I'll warrant; I know, by the picking on's teeth.

Aut. The fardel there? what's i' the fardel? Wherefore that box?

Shep. Sir, there lie such secrets in this fardel, and box, which none must know but the king; and which he shall know within this hour, if I may come to the speech of him.

Aut. Age, thou hast lost thy labor.

Shep. Why, sir?

Aut. The king is not at the palace: he is gone aboard a new ship to purge melancholy, and air himself: for, if thou be'st capable of things serious, thou must know, the king is full of grief.

Shep. So 'tis said, sir; about his son, that should have married a shepherd's daughter.

Aut. If that shepherd be not in 'hand-fast, let him fly: the curses he shall have, the tortures he shall feel, will break the back of man, the heart of monster.

Clo. Think you so, sir?

Aut. Not he alone shall suffer what wit can make heavy, and vengeance bitter, but those that are germane to him, though removed fifty times, shall all come under the hangman: which, though it be great pity, yet it is necessary. An old sheep-whistling rogue, a ram-tender, to offer to have his daughter come into grace! Some say, he shall be stoned; but that death is too soft for him, say I. Draw our throne into a sheep-cote? all deaths are too few, the sharpest too easy.

Clo. Has the old man e'er a son, sir, do you hear, an't like you, sir?

Aut. He has a son, who shall be flayed alive, then, 'mounted over with honey, set on the head of a wasp's nest; <sup>1</sup> there stand, till he be three quarters and a dram dead; then recovered again with aqua-vita, or some other hot-infusion; then, raw as he is, and in the hottest day prognostication <sup>2</sup> proclaims, shall he be set against a brick-wall, the sun looking with a southward eye upon him, where he is to behold him with flies blown to death. But what talk we of these traitorous rascals, whose miseries are to be smiled at, their offences being so capital? Tell me, (for you seem to be honest plain men) what you have to the king? being something gently <sup>b</sup> considered, I'll bring you where he is aboard, tender your persons to his presence, whisper him in your behalfs; and, if it be in man, besides the king, to effect your suits, here is man shall do it.

Clo. He seems to be of great authority: close with him, give him gold; and though authority be a stubborn bear, yet he is oft led by the nose with gold. Show the inside of your purse to the outside of his hand, and no more ado. Remember, stoned, and flayed alive!

Shep. An't please you, sir, to undertake the business for us, here is that gold I have: I'll make it as much more, and leave this young man in pawn, till I bring it you.

Aut. After I have done what I promised?

Shep. Ay, sir.

Aut. Well, give me the moiety.—Are you a party in this business?

Clo. In some sort, sir: but though my case be a pitiful one, I hope I shall not be flayed out of it.

Aut. O! that's the case of the shepherd's son: hang him, he'll be made an example.

Clo. Comfort, good comfort! We must to the king, and show our strange sights: he must know, 'tis none of your daughter nor my sister; we are gone else. Sir, I will give you as much as this old man does, when the business is performed; and remain, as he says, your pawn, till it be brought you.

Aut. I will trust you. Walk before toward the seaside: go on the right hand; I will but look upon the hedge, and follow you.

Clo. We are blessed in this man, as I may say, even blessed.

Shep. Let's before, as he bids us. He was provided to do us good. [Exeunt Shepherd and Clown.]

Aut. If I had a mind to be honest, I see, fortune would not suffer me: she drops booties in my mouth. I am courted now with a double occasion—gold, and a means to do the prince my master good; which, who knows how that may turn <sup>2</sup> luck to my advancement? I will bring these two moles, these blind ones, aboard him: if he think it fit to shore them again, and that the complaint they have to the king concerns him nothing, let him call me rogue for being so far officious; for I am proof against that title, and what shame else belongs to't. To him I will present them: there may be matter in it. [Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Sicilia. A Room in the Palace of LEONTES.

Enter LEONTES, CLEOMENES, DION, PAULINA, and Others.

Cleo. Sir, you have done enough, and have performed

<sup>1</sup> The hottest day foretold in the almanack.—<sup>2</sup> "Being something gently considered," i. e., for a gentlemanly consideration, or a handsome bribe.

A saint-like sorrow: no fault could you make,
Which you have not redeem'd; indeed, paid down
More penitence than done trespass. At the last,
Do, as the heavens have done, forget your evil;
With them, forgive yourself.

Leon. Whilst I remember
Her, and her virtues, I cannot forget
My blemishes in them, and so still think of
The wrong I did myself; which was so much,
That heirless it hath made my kingdom, and Destroy'd the sweet'st companion, that e'er man
Bred his hopes out of: true.

Paul. Too true, my lord:
If one by one you wedded all the world,
Or from the all that are took something good,
To make a perfect woman, she you kill'd
Would be unparallel'd.

Leon. I think so. Kill'd!
She I kill'd? I did so; but thou strik'st me
Sorely, to say I did: it is as bitter
Upon thy tongue, as in my thought. Now, good now, Say so but seldom.

Cleo. Not at all, good lady:
You might have spoken a thousand things that would
Have done the time more benefit, and grac'd
Your kindness better.

Paul. You are one of those,
Would have him wed again.

Dion. If you would not so,
You pity not the state, nor the remembrance
Of his most sovereign name; consider little,
What dangers, by his highness' fail of issue,
May drop upon his kingdom, and devour
Uncertain lookers-on. What were more holy,
Than to rejoice the former queen is a well?
What holier than, for royalty's repair,
For present comfort, and for future good,
To bless the bed of majesty again
With a sweet fellow to 't?

Paul. There is none worthy,
Respecting her that's gone. Besides, the gods
Will have fulfill'd their secret purposes;
For has not the divine Apollo said,
Is't not the tenor of his oracle,
That king Leontes shall not have an heir,
Till his lost child be found? which, that it shall,
Is all as monstrous to our human reason,
As my Antigonus to break his grave,
And come again to me; who, on my life,
Did perish with the infant. 'Tis your counsel,
My lord should to the heavens be contrary,
Oppose against their wills.—Care not for issue;
The crown will find an heir: Great Alexander
Left his to the worthiest, so his successor
Was like to be the best.

Leon. Good Paulina,—
Who hast the memory of Hermione,
I know, in honor,—O, that ever I
Had squar'd me to thy counsel!—then, even now,
I might have look'd upon my queen's full eyes,
Have taken treasure from her lips,—

Paul. And left them
More rich, for what they yielded.

Leon. Thou speak'st truth.
No more such wives; therefore, no wife: one worse,
And better us'd, would make her sainted spirit
Aguin possess her corpse; and, on this stage,
(Where we offenders now appear) soul-vex'd,
Begin, "And why to b me?"

Paul. Had she such power,
She had just cause.

Leon. She had; and would incense me
To murder her I married.

Paul. I should so:
Were I the ghost that walk'd, I'd bid you mark
Her eye, and tell me for what dull part in't
You chose her? then I'd shriek, that even your ears
Should 'rife to hear me, and the words what follow'd
Should be, "Remember mine."

Leon. Stars, stars!
And all eyes else dead coals.—Fear thou no wife;
I'll have no wife, Paulina.

Paul. Will you swear
Never to marry, but by my free leave?

Leon. Never, Paulina; so be bless'd my spirit!

Paul. Then, good my lords, bear witness to his oath.

Cleo. You tempt him over-much.

Paul. Unless another,
As like Hermione as is her picture,
* Affront his eye.

Cleo. Good madam, I have done.

Paul. Yet, if my lord will marry,—if you will, sir,
No remedy, but you will—give me the office
To choose you a queen. She shall not be so young
As was your former; but she shall be such
As, walk'd your first queen's ghost, it should take joy
To see her in your arms.

Leon. My true Paulina,
We shall not marry, till thou bidd'st us.

Paul. That
Shall be when your first queen's again in breath:
Never till then.

Enter a Gentleman.

Gent. One that gives out himself prince Florizel, Son of Polixenes, with his princess, (she
The fairest I have yet beheld,) desires access
To your high presence.

Leon. What! with him? he comes not Like to his father's greatness: his approach,
So out of circumstance and sudden, tells us
'Tis not a visitation fram'd, but forc'd
By need, and accident. What train?

Gent. But few,
And those but mean.

Leon. His princess, say you, with him?

Gent. Ay; the most peerless piece of earth, I think,
That e'er the sun shone bright on.

Paul. O Hermione!
As every present time doth boast itself
Above a better, gone, so must thy grace
Give way to what's seen now. Sir, you yourself
Have said and writ 'so, but your writing now
Is colder than that theme—She had not been,
Nor was not to be equal'd;—thus your verse
Flow'd with her beauty once: 'tis 'shrewdly ebb'd,
To say you have seen a better.

Gent. Pardon, madam:
The one I have almost forgot, (your pardon)
The other, when she has obtain'd your eye,
Will have your tongue too. This is a creature,
Would she begin a sect, might quench the zeal
Of all professors else, make proselytes
Of whom she but did follow.

Paul. How! not women?

Gent. Women will love her, that she is a woman
More worth than any man; men, that she is
The rarest of all women.

Leon. Go, Cleomenes;
Yourself, assisted with your honor'd friends,

* At rest; dead.—b "And why to me," i. e., and why such treatment to me!

* Instigate.—<sup>d</sup> Split.—<sup>e</sup> Encounter; meet.—<sup>f</sup> "So" relates to what follows; that she had not been equal'd.—<sup>g</sup> "Colder than that theme," i. e., than the case of Hermione, the subject of your writing.—<sup>b</sup> Vexatiously.

Bring them to our embracement.—Still 'tis strange,
[Exeunt CLEOMENES, Lords, and Gentleman.]
He thus should steal upon us.

Paul. Had our Prince
(Jewel of children) seen this hour, he had pair'd
Well with this lord: there was not full a month
Between their births.

Leon. Pr'ythee, no more: cease! thou know'st,
He dies to me again, when talk'd of: sure,
When I shall see this gentleman, thy speeches
Will bring me to consider that, which may Unfurnish me of reason.—They are come.—

Re-enter CLEOMENES, with FLORIZEL, PERDITA, and Others.

Your mother was most true to wedlock, prince,
For she did print your royal father off,
Conceiving you. Were I but twenty-one,
Your father's image is so hit in you,
His very air, that I should call you brother,
As I did him; and speak of something, wildly
By us perform'd before. Most dearly welcome!
And your fair princess, goddess!—O, alas!
I lost a couple, that 'twixt heaven and earth
Might thus have stood, begetting wonder as,
You, gracious couple, do. And then I lost
(All mine own folly) the society,
Amity too, of your brave father; whom,
Though bearing misery, I desire my life
Once more to look on him.

Flo. By his command
Have I here touch'd Sicilia; and from him
Give you all greetings, that a king, as friend,
Can send his brother; and, but infirmity
(Which waits upon worn times) hath something seiz'd
His wish'd ability, he had himself
The lands and waters 'twixt your throne and his Measur'd to look upon you, whom he loves
(He bade me say so) more than all the sceptres,
And those that bear them, living.

Leon. O, my brother!
Good gentleman, the wrongs I have done thee stir
Afresh within me; and these thy offices,
So rarely kind, are as interpreters
Of my behind-hand slackness.—Welcome hither,
As is the spring to th' earth. And hath he, too,
Expos'd this paragon to the fearful usage
(At least ungentle) of the dreadful Neptune,
To greet a man not worth her pains, much less
Th' adventure of her person?

Flo. Good, my lord,
She came from Libya.

Leon. Where the warlike Smalus,
That noble, honor'd lord, is fear'd, and lov'd?

Flo. Most royal sir, from thence; from him, whose daughter

His tears proclaim'd his, parting with her: thence (A prosperous south-wind friendly) we have cross'd,
To execute the charge my father gave me,
For visiting your highness. My best train
I have from your Sicilian shores dismiss'd,
Who for Bohemia bend, to signify,
Not only my success in Libya, sir,
But my arrival, and my wife's, in safety
Here, where we are.

Leon. The blessed gods
Purge all infection from our air, whilst you
Do climate here! You have a noble father,
A graceful gentleman, against whose person,
So sacred as it is, I have done sin;
For which the heavens, taking angry note,
Have left me issueless; and your father's bless'd

(As he from heaven merits it) with you,
Worthy his goodness. What might I have been,
Might I a son and daughter now have look'd on,
Such goodly things as you?

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Most noble sir,
That which I shall report will bear no credit,
Were not the proof so nigh. Please you, great sir,
Bohemia greets you from himself by me;
Desires you to 'attach his son, who has (His dignity and duty both cast off)
Fled from his father, from his hopes, and with
A shepherd's daughter.

Leon. Where's Bohemia? speak.
Lord. Here in your city; I now came from him:
I speak amazedly, and it becomes
My marvel, and my message. To your court Whiles he was hastening (in the chase, it seems,
Of this fair couple) meets he on the way
The father of this seeming lady, and
Her brother, having both their country quitted
With this young prince.

Flo. Camillo has betray'd me
Whose honor, and whose honesty, till now,
Endur'd all weathers.

Lord. Lay't so to his charge:
He's with the king your father.

Leon. Who? Camillo?
Lord. Camillo, sir: I spake with him, who now
Has these poor men in question. Never saw I
Wretches so quake: they kneel, they kiss the earth,
Forswear themselves as often as they speak:
Bohemia stops his ears, and threatens them
With divers deaths in death.

Per. O, my poor father!—
The heaven sets spies upon us, will not have
Our contract celebrated.

Leon. You are married?
Flo. We are not, sir, nor are we like to be;
The stars, I see, will kiss the valleys first:
The odds for high and low's alike.

Leon. My lord,
Is this the daughter of a king?

Flo. She is,
When once she is my wife.

Leon. That once, I see, by your good father's speed,
Will come on very slowly. I am sorry,
Most sorry, you have broken from his liking,
Where you were tied in duty; and as sorry,
Your choice is not so rich in worth as beauty,
That you might well enjoy her.

Flo. Dear, look up:
Though fortune, visible an enemy,
Should chase us with my father, power no jot
Hath she to change our loves.—Beseech you, sir,
Remember since you ow'd no more to time
Than I do now; with thought of such affections,
Step forth mine advocate: at your request,
My father will grant precious things as trifles.

Leon. Would he do so, I'd beg your precious mis-
Which he counts but a trifle. [Tress,

Paul. Sir, my liege,
Your eye hath too much youth in't: not a month
'Fore your queen died, she was more worth such Than what you look on now. [gazes

Leon. I thought of her,
Even in these looks I made.—But your petition
[To FLORIZEL.

Is yet unanswered. I will to your father:
Your honor not o'erthrown by your desires,

I am a friend to them, and you; upon which errand I now go toward him. Therefore, follow me, And mark what way I make. Come, good my lord.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. Before the Palace.

Enter AUTOLYCUS and a Gentleman.

Aut. Beseech you, sir, were you present at this relation?

1 Gent. I was by at the opening of the <sup>a</sup>fardel, heard the old shepherd deliver the manner how he found it: whereupon, after a little amazement, we were all commanded out of the chamber; only this, methought I heard the shepherd say, he found the child.

Aut. I would most gladly know the issue of it.

1 Gent. I make a broken delivery of the business; but the changes I perceived in the king, and Camillo, were very notes of admiration: they seemed almost, with staring on one another, to tear the cases of their eyes; there was speech in their dumbness, language in their very gesture; they looked, as they had heard of a world ransomed, or one destroyed. A notable passion of wonder appeared in them; but the wisest beholder, that knew no more but seeing, could not say, if the <sup>b</sup>importance were joy, or sorrow, but in the extremity of the one it must needs be.

Enter another Gentleman.

Here comes a gentleman, that, haply, knows more. The news, Rogero?

2 Gent. Nothing but bonfires. The oracle is fulfilled; the king's daughter is found: such a deal of wonder is broken out within this hour, that ballad-makers cannot be able to express it.

Enter a third Gentleman.

Here comes the lady Paulina's steward: he can deliver you more.—How goes it now, sir? This news, which is called true, is so like an old tale, that the verity of it is in strong suspicion. Has the king found his heir?

3 Gent. Most true, if ever truth were pregnant by circumstance: that which you'll hear you'll swear you see, there is such unity in the proofs. The mantle of queen Hermione;—her jewel about the neck of it;—the letters of Antigonus found with it, which they know to be his character;—the majesty of the creature, in resemblance of the mother;—the <sup>c</sup>affection of nobleness, which nature shows above her breeding, and many other evidences, proclaim her with all certainty to be the king's daughter. Did you see the meeting of the two kings?

2 Gent. No.

3 Gent. Then you have lost a sight, which was to be seen, cannot be spoken of. There might you have beheld one joy crown another; so, and in such manner, that, it seemed, sorrow wept to take leave of them, for their joy waded in tears. There was casting up of eyes, holding up of hands, with countenance of such distraction, that they were to be known by garment, not by <sup>d</sup>favor. Our king, being ready to leap out of himself for joy of his found daughter, as if that joy were now become a loss, cries, "O, thy mother, thy mother!" then asked Bohemia forgiveness; then embraces his son-in-law; then again worries he his daughter with <sup>e</sup>clipping her: now he thanks the old shepherd, which stands by, like a weather-beaten <sup>f</sup>conduit of many kings' reigns. I never heard of such another encounter, which lames report to follow it, and undoes description to <sup>1</sup>show it.

2 Gent. What, pray you, became of Antigonus, that carried hence the child?

3 Gent. Like an old tale still, which will have matter to rehearse, though credit be asleep, and not an ear open. He was torn to pieces with a bear: this avouches the shepherd's son, who has not only his innocence (which seems much) to justify him, but a handkerchief, and rings of his that Paulina knows.

1 Gent. What became of his bark, and his followers?

3 Gent. Wrecked, the same instant of their master's death, and in the view of the shepherd: so that all the instruments, which aided to expose the child, were even then lost, when it was found. But, O! the noble combat, that <sup>2</sup>twixt joy and sorrow was fought in Paulina! She had one eye declined for the loss of her husband, another elevated that the oracle was fulfilled: she lifted the princess from the earth, and so locks her in embracing, as if she would pin her to her heart, that she might no more be in danger of losing <sup>3</sup>her.

1 Gent. The dignity of this act was worth the audience of kings and princes, for by such was it acted.

3 Gent. One of the prettiest touches of all, and that which angled for mine eyes (caught the water, though not the fish) was, when at the relation of the queen's death, (with the manner how she came to't, <sup>4</sup>heavily confessed, and lamented by the king) how attentiveness wounded his daughter; till, from one sign of dolour to another, she did, with an alas! I would fain say, bleed tears, for, I am sure, my heart wept blood. Who was most <sup>5</sup>marble there changed color; some swooned, all sorrowed: if all the world could have seen it, the wo had been universal.

1 Gent. Are they returned to the court?

3 Gent. No: the princess hearing of her mother's statue, which is in the keeping of Paulina,—a piece many years in doing, and now newly performed by that rare Italian master, Julio Romano; who, had he himself <sup>6</sup>eternity and could put breath into his work, would beguile nature of her custom, so perfectly he is her ape: he so near to Hermione hath done Hermione, that, they say, one would speak to her, and stand in hope of answer. Thither with all greediness of affection, are they gone, and there they intend to sup.

2 Gent. I thought, she had some great matter there in hand, for she hath privately, twice or thrice a day, ever since the death of Hermione, visited that <sup>7</sup>removed house. Shall we thither, and with our company piece the rejoicing?

1 Gent. Who would be thence, that has the benefit of access? every wink of an eye, some new grace will be born: our absence makes us unthriftly to our knowledge. Let's along. [Exeunt Gentlemen.]

Aut. Now, had I not the dash of my former life in me, would preferment drop on my head. I brought the old man and his son aboard the prince; told him I heard them talk of a fardel, and I know not what; but he at that time, over-fond of the shepherd's daughter, (so he then took her to be) who began to be much sea-sick, and himself little better, extremity of weather continuing, this mystery remained undiscovered. But 'tis all one to me; for had I been the finder out of this secret, it would not have relished among my other discredits.

Enter Shepherd and Clown, in new apparel.

Here come those I have done good to against my will, and already appearing in the blossoms of their fortune.

Shep. Come, boy; I am past more children; but thy sons and daughters will be all gentlemen born.

Clo. You are well met, sir. You denied to fight with me this other day, because I was no gentleman born: see you these clothes? say, you see them not, and think me still no gentleman born: you were best say, these robes are not gentlemen born. Give me the lie, do, and try whether I am not now a gentleman born.

Aut. I know, you are now, sir, a gentleman born.

Clo. Ay, and have been so any time these four hours.

Shep. And so have I, boy.

Clo. So you have;—but I was a gentleman born before my father, for the king's son took me by the hand, and called me, brother; and then the two kings called my father, brother; and then the prince, my brother, and the princess, my sister, called my father, father; and so we wept; and there was the first gentleman-like tears that ever we shed.

Shep. We may live, son, to shed many more.

Clo. Ay; or else 'twere hard luck, being in so preposterous estate as we are.

Aut. I humbly beseech you, sir, to pardon me all the faults I have committed to your worship, and to give me your good report to the prince my master.

Shep. Pr'ythee, son, do; for we must be gentle, now we are gentlemen.

Clo. Thou wilt amend thy life?

Aut. Ay, an it like your good worship.

Clo. Give me thy hand: I will swear to the prince, thou art as honest a true fellow as any is in Bohemia.

Shep. You may say it, but not swear it.

Clo. Not swear it, now I am a gentleman? Let boors and 'franklins say it, I'll swear it.

Shep. How if it be false, son?

Clo. If it be ne'er so false, a true gentleman may swear it in the behalf of his friend:—And I'll swear to the prince, thou art a tall fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt not be drunk; but I know, thou art no tall fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt be drunk; but I'll swear it, and I would thou would'st be a tall fellow of thy hands.

Aut. I will prove so, sir, to my power.

Clo. Ay, by any means prove a tall fellow: if I do not wonder how thou dares venture to be drunk, not being a tall fellow, trust me not.—<sup>c</sup>[Trumpets.] Hark! the kings and the princes, our kindred, are going to see the queen's picture. Come, follow us: we'll be thy good masters. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Chapel in PAULINA'S House.

Enter LEONTES, POLIXENES, FLORIZEL, PERDITA, CAMILLO, PAULINA, Lords, and Attendants.

Leon. O! grave and good Paulina, the great comfort I have had of thee! [fort]

Paul. What, sovereign sir, I did not well, I meant well. All my services, You have paid home; but that you have vouchsaf'd With your crown'd brother, and these your contracted Heirs of your kingdoms, my poor house to visit, It is a surplus of your grace, which never

My life may last to answer.

Leon.

O Paulina!

We honor you with trouble. But we came To see the statue of our queen: your gallery Have we pass'd through, not without much content In many singularities, but we saw not That which my daughter came to look upon, The statue of her mother.

Paul.

As she liv'd peerless,

So her dead likeness, I do well believe, Exceeds whatever yet you look'd upon, Or hand of man hath done; therefore I keep it Lonely, apart. But here it is: prepare To see the life as lively mock'd, as ever Still sleep mock'd death: behold! and say, 'tis well. [PAULINA undraws a curtain, and discovers a statue.]

I like your silence: it the more shows off Your wonder: but yet speak:—first you, my liege. Comes it not something near?

Leon.

Her natural posture.—

Chide me, dear stone, that I may say, indeed, Thou art Hermione; or, rather, thou art she In thy not chiding, for she was as tender As infancy, and grace.—But yet, Paulina, Hermione was not so much wrinkled; nothing So aged, as this seems.

Pol.

O! not by much.

Paul. So much the more our carver's excellence: Which lets go by some sixteen years, and makes her As she liv'd now.

Leon.

As now she might have done,

So much to my good comfort, as it is Now piercing to my soul. O! thus she stood, Even with such life of majesty, (warm life, As now it coldly stands) when first I woo'd her. I am ashamed: does not the stone rebuke me, For being more stone than it?—O, royal piece! There's magic in thy majesty, which has My evils conjur'd to remembrance; and From thy admiring daughter took the spirits, Standing like stone with thee.

Per.

And give me leave,

And do not say 'tis superstition, that <sup>4</sup>[Kneeling. I kneel, and <sup>5</sup>thus implore her blessing.—Lady, Dear queen, that ended when I but began, Give me that hand of yours to kiss.

Paul.

O, patience!

The statue is but newly fix'd, the color's Not dry.

Cam. My lord, your sorrow was too sore laid on, Which sixteen winters cannot blow away, So many summers dry: scarce any joy Did ever so long live; no sorrow, But kill'd itself much sooner.

Pol.

Dear my brother,

Let him that was the cause of this have power To take off so much grief from you, as he Will give up in himself.

Paul.

Indeed, my lord,

If I had thought, the sight of my poor image Would thus have wrought you, (for the stone is mine) I'd not have show'd it. <sup>6</sup>[Offers to draw.]

Leon.

Do not draw the curtain.

Paul. No longer shall you gaze on't, lest you May think anon it moves. [fancy]

Leon.

Let be, let be!

Would I were dead, but that, methinks, already 'I am but dead, stone looking upon stone.—What was he that did make it?—See, my lord, Would you not deem it breath'd, and that those veins

* A "franklin" was a frecholder, or yeoman.—<sup>b</sup> Bold; courageous.

<sup>c</sup> Agitated.

Did verily bear blood?

Pol. Masterly done:
The very life seems warm upon her lip.

Leon. The figure of her eye has motion <sup>a</sup> in't, <sup>b</sup> As we are mock'd with art.

Paul. I'll draw the curtain.
My lord's almost so far transported, that <sup>1</sup> [Offers again to draw.]

He'll think anon it lives.

Leon. O, sweet Paulina!
Make me to think so twenty years together:
No settled senses of the world can match
The pleasure of that madness. Let 't alone. [but]
Paul. I am sorry, sir, I have thus far stirr'd you;
I could afflict you farther.

Leon. Do, Paulina,
For this affliction has a taste as sweet
As any cordial comfort.—Still, methinks,
There is an air comes from her: what fine chisel
Could ever yet cut breath? Let no man mock me,
For I will kiss her.

Paul. Good my lord, forbear. <sup>2</sup> [She stays him.]
The ruddiness upon her lip is wet:
You'll mar it, if you kiss it; stain your own
With oily painting. Shall I draw the curtain?
Leon. No, not these twenty years.

Per. So long could I Stand by, a looker on.

Paul. Either forbear,
Quit presently the chapel, or resolve you
For more amazement. If you can behold it,
I'll make the statue move indeed; descend,
And take you by the hand; but then you'll think,
(Which I protest against) I am assisted
By wicked powers.

Leon. What you can make her do,
I am content to look on: what to speak,
I am content to hear; for 'tis as easy
To make her speak, as move.

Paul. It is requir'd,
You do awake your faith. Then, all stand still.
On, those that think it is unlawful business
I am about; let them depart.

Leon. Proceed:
No foot shall stir.

Paul. Music awake her. Strike!— [Music.]
'Tis time; descend; be stone no more: approach;
Strike all that look upon with marvel. Come;
I'll fill your grave up: stir; nay, come away;
Bequeath to death your numbness, for from him
Dear life redeems you.—You perceive, she stirs.

[HERMIONE descends <sup>3</sup> slowly from the pedestal.]
Start not: her actions shall be holy, as
You hear my spell is lawful: do not shun her,
Until you see her die again, for then
You kill her double. Nay, present your hand:

When she was young you woo'd her; now, in age,
Is she become the suitor?

Leon. O! she's warm. [Embracing her.]
If this be magic, let it be an art
Lawful as eating.

Pol. She embraces him.

Cam. She hangs about his neck.

If she pertain to life, let her speak too.

Pol. Ay; and make it manifest where she has liv'd,
Or how sto'n from the dead?

Paul. That she is living,
Were it but told you, should be hooted at
Like an old tale; but it appears she lives,
Though yet she speak not. Mark a little while.—
Please you to interpose, fair madam: kneel,
And pray your mother's blessing.—Turn, good lady,
Our Perdita is found. [PERDITA kneels to HERMIONE.]

Her. You gods, look down,
And from your sacred vials pour your graces
Upon my daughter's head!—Tell me, mine own, Where hast thou been preserv'd? where lived? how found

Thy father's court? for thou shalt hear, that I,
Knowing by Paulina that the oracle
Gave hope thou wast in being, have preserv'd
Myself to see the issue.

Paul. There's time enough for that,
Lest they desire upon this push to trouble
Your joys with like relation.—Go together,
Your precious <sup>c</sup> winners all: your exultation
<sup>d</sup> Partake to every one. I, an old turtle,
Will wing me to some wither'd bough, and there
My mate, that's never to be found again,
Lament till I am lost.

Leon. O peace, Paulina!
Thou should'st a husband take by my consent,
As I by thine, a wife: this is a match,
And made between's by vows. Thou hast found mine;
But how is to be question'd, for I saw her,
As I thought, dead; and have in vain said many
A prayer upon her grave: I'll not seek far
(For him, I partly know his mind) to find thee
An honorable husband.—Come, Camillo,
<sup>4</sup> And take her hand, <sup>e</sup> whose worth, and honesty,
Is richly noted, and here justified
By us, a pair of kings.—Let's from this place.—
What!—Look upon my brother:—both your pardons,
That e'er I put between your holy looks
My ill-suspicion.—This your son-in-law,
And son unto the king, (whom heavens directing)
Is troth-pledged to your daughter.—Good Paulina,
Lead us from hence, where we may leisurely
Each one demand, and answer to his part Perform'd in this wide gap of time, since first
We were dissever'd. Hastily lead away. [Exeunt.]

<sup>a</sup> That is, though her eye be fixed, it seems to have motion in it.—<sup>b</sup> "As" for as if.

<sup>c</sup> "You precious winners," i. e., you who by this discovery have gained what you desired.—<sup>d</sup> Participate.—<sup>e</sup> "Whoso" relates to Camillo.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Northampton. A Room of State in the Palace.

Enter KING JOHN, Queen ELINOR, PEMBROKE, ESSEX, SALISBURY, and Others, with CHATILLON.

K. John. Now, say, Chatillon, what would France with us? [France,

Chat. Thus, after greeting, speaks the king of In my <sup>a</sup>behavior, to the majesty,
The borrow'd majesty, of England here.

Eli. A strange beginning!—borrow'd majesty?

K. John. Silence, good mother: hear the embassy.

Chat. Philip of France, in right and true behalf Of thy deceased brother Geoffrey's son,
Arthur Plantagenet, lays most lawful claim

To this fair island, and the territories,
To Ireland, Poitiers, Anjou, Touraine, Maine;
Desiring thee to lay aside the sword
Which sways usurpingly these several titles,
And put the same into young Arthur's hand,
Thy nephew, and right royal sovereign.

K. John. What follows, if we disallow of this?

Chat. The proud <sup>b</sup>control of fierce and bloody war,
To enforce these rights so forcibly withheld.

K. John. Here have we war for war, and blood for blood, Controlment for controlment: so answer France.

Chat. Then take my king's defiance from my mouth,
The farthest limit of my embassy.

K. John. Bear mine to him, and so depart in peace.

Be thou as lightning in the eyes of France;

For ere thou canst report I will be there,

The thunder of my cannon shall be heard.

So, hence! Be thou the trumpet of our wrath,

<sup>a</sup> "In my behavior," i. e., in the words and actions I am now going to use.

<sup>b</sup> "Proud control," i. e., constraint; compulsion.

And <sup>1</sup> sudden presage of your own decay.—
An honorable conduct let him have:
Pembroke, look to't. Farewell, Chatillon.

[Exit CHATILLON and PEMBROKE.]

Eli. What now, my son? have I not ever said,
How that ambitious Constance would not cease,
Till she had kindled France, and all the world,
Upon the right and party of her son?
This might have been prevented, and made whole,
With very easy arguments of love,
Which now the <sup>a</sup> manage of two kingdoms must
With fearful bloody issue arbitrate.

K. John. Our strong possession, and our right for us.

Eli. Your strong possession, much more than your right,

Or else it must go wrong with you, and me:
So much my conscience whispers in your ear,
Which none but heaven, and you, and I, shall hear.

Enter the Sheriff of Northamptonshire, who whispers
ESSEX.

Essex. My liege, here is the strangest controversy,
Come from the country to be judg'd by you,
That e'er I heard: shall I produce the men?

K. John. Let them approach.— [Exit Sheriff.]
Our abbeyes, and our priories, shall pay

Re-enter Sheriff, with ROBERT FAULCONBRIDGE, and PHILIP, his bastard Brother.

This expedition's charge.—What men are you?

Bast. Your faithful subject I; a gentleman
Born in Northamptonshire, and eldest son,
As I suppose, to Robert Faulconbridge,
A soldier, by the honor-giving hand
Of Cœur-de-lion knighted in the field.

K. John. What art thou?

Rob. The son and heir to that same Faulconbridge.

K. John. Is that the elder, and art thou the heir?
You came not of one mother, then, it seems.

Bast. Most certain of one mother, mighty king;
That is well known, and, as I think, one father:
But, for the certain knowledge of that truth,
I put you o'er to heaven, and to my mother:
Of that I doubt, as all men's children may.

Eli. Out on thee, rude man! thou dost shame thy mother,

And wound her honor with this diffidence.

Bast. I, madam? no, I have no reason for it:
That is my brother's plea, and none of mine;
The which if he can prove, 'a pops me out
At least from fair five hundred pound a year.
Heaven guard my mother's honor, and my land!

K. John. A good blunt fellow.—Why, being younger born,

Doth he lay claim to thine inheritance?

Bast. I know not why, except to get the land.
But once he slander'd me with bastardy:
But whe'r I be as true begot, or no,
That still I lay upon my mother's head;
But, that I am as well begot, my liege,
(Fair fall the bones that took the pains for me!)

Compare our faces, and be judge yourself.
If old sir Robert did beget us both,
And were our father, and this son like him,
O! old sir Robert, father, on my knee
I give heaven thanks, I was not like to thee.

K. John. Why, what a madcap hath heaven lent us here!

Eli. He hath a <sup>b</sup> trick of Cœur-de-lion's face;
The accent of his tongue affecteth him.
Do you not read some tokens of my son
In the large composition of this man?

<sup>a</sup> Conduct; administration.—<sup>b</sup> "A trick," i. e., a peculiar cast of the features.

K. John. Mine eye hath well examined his parts,
And finds them perfect Richard.—Sirrah, speak;
What doth move you to claim your brother's land?

Bast. Because he hath a half-face, like my father,
With that half-face would he have all my land:
A 'half-face'd groat five hundred pound a year!

Rob. My gracious liege, when that my father liv'd,
Your brother did employ my father much.

Bast. Well, sir; by this you cannot get my land:
Your tale must be, how he employ'd my mother.

Rob. And once despatch'd him in an embassy
To Germany, there, with the emperor,
To treat of high affairs touching that time.
The advantage of his absence took the king,
And in the mean time sojourn'd at my father's;

Where how he did prevail I shame to speak,
But truth is truth: large lengths of seas and shores
Between my father and my mother lay,
As I have heard my father speak himself,
When this same lusty gentleman was got.
Upon his death-bed he by will bequeath'd
His lands to me; and took it, on his death,
That this, my mother's son, was none of his:
And, if he were, he came into the world
Full fourteen weeks before the course of time.
Then, good my liege, let me have what is mine,
My father's land, as was my father's will.

K. John. Sirrah, your brother is legitimate:
Your father's wife did after wedlock bear him;
And if she did play false, the fault was hers,
Which fault lies on the hazards of all husbands
That marry wives. Tell me, how if my brother,
Who, as you say, took pains to get this son,
Had of your father claim'd this son for his?

In sooth, good friend, your father might have kept
This calf, bred from his cow, from all the world;
In sooth, he might: then, if he were my brother's,
My brother might not claim him, nor your father,
Being none of his, refuse him.—This <sup>d</sup> concludes,—
My mother's son did get your father's heir;
Your father's heir must have your father's land.

Rob. Shall, then, my father's will be of no force
To dispossess that child which is not his?

Bast. Of no more force to dispossess me, sir,
Than was his will to get me, as I think.

Eli. Whether hadst thou rather be a Faulconbridge,
And, like thy brother, to enjoy thy land,
Or the reputed son of Cœur-de-lion,
Lord of thy <sup>e</sup> presence, and no land beside?

Bast. Madam, an if my brother had my shape,
And I had his, sir Robert 'his, like him;
And if my legs were two such riding-rods,
My arms such cel-skins stuff'd; my face so thin,
That in mine ear I durst not stick a rose,
Lest men should say, "Look, where <sup>f</sup> three-farthings goes,"

And, <sup>h</sup> to his shape, were heir to all this land,
Would I might never stir from off this place,
I'd give it every foot to have this face:
I would not be sir 'Nob in any case.

Eli. I like thee well. Wilt thou forsake thy fortune,
Bequeath thy land to him, and follow me?
I am a soldier, and now bound to France.

Bast. Brother, take you my land, I'll take my chance.

Your face hath got five hundred pounds a year,
Yet sell your face for five pence, and 'tis dear.—

<sup>c</sup> A "half-face" is a profile.—<sup>d</sup> "This concludes," i. e., this is the conclusion to be drawn.—<sup>e</sup> "Lord of thy presence," i. e., of the respect due to thy rank.—<sup>f</sup> "Sir Robert his" is used for Sir Robert's.—<sup>g</sup> The "three-farthing" pieces of Queen Elizabeth had a rose on the reverse side.—<sup>h</sup> "To," i. e., in addition to.—Robert.

Madam, I'll follow you unto the death.

Eli. Nay, I would have you go before me thither.

Bast. Our country manners give our betters way.

K. John. What is thy name?

Bast. Philip, my liege; so is my name begun;

Philip, good old sir Robert's wife's eldest son.

K. John. From henceforth bear his name whose form thou bearest.

Kneel thou down Philip, but arise more great:

<sup>1</sup>[Bast. kneels and rises.]

Arise sir Richard, and Plantagenet.

Bast. Brother, by the mother's side, give me your hand:

My father gave me honor, yours gave land.—

Now blessed be the hour, by night or day,

When I was got sir Robert was away.

Eli. The very spirit of Plantagenet!—

I am thy grandame, Richard: call me so. [though?]

Bast. Madam, by chance, but not by truth: what something about, a little from the right,

In at the window, or else o'er the hatch:

Who dares not stir by day, must walk by night,

And have is have, however men do catch.

Near or far off, well won is still well shot,

And I am I, howe'er I was begot.

K. John. Go, Faulconbridge: now hast thou thy desire;

A landless knight makes thee a landed squire.—

Come, madam, and come, Richard: we must speed For France, for France, for it is more than need.

Bast. Brother, adieu: good fortune come to thee, For thou wast got i' the way of honesty.

[Exeunt all but the Bastard.]

A foot of honor better than I was,

But many, <sup>2</sup>ah, many foot of land the worse.

Well, now can I make any Joan a lady:—

"Good <sup>3</sup>den, sir Richard,"—"God-a-mercy, fellow;"

And if his name be George, I'll call him Peter;

For new-made honor doth forget men's names:

'Tis too <sup>4</sup>respective, and too sociable,

For your <sup>5</sup>conversion. Now your traveller,

He and his tooth-pick at my worship's <sup>6</sup>mess;

And when my knightly stomach is suffic'd,

Why then I suck my teeth, and catechize

My picked man of <sup>7</sup>countries:—"My dear sir,"

Thus leaning on mine elbow I begin,

"I shall beseech you"—that is question now;

And then comes answer like an <sup>8</sup>ABC-book:—

"O sir," says answer, "at your best command;

At your employment; at your service, sir:—"

"No, sir," says question, "I, sweet sir, at yours:"

And so, ere answer knows what question would,

Saving in dialogue of compliment,

And talking of the Alps, and Apennines,

The Pyreneans, and the river Po,

It draws toward supper, in conclusion so.

But this is worshipful society,

And fits <sup>9</sup>a mounting spirit, like myself;

For he is but a bastard to the time,

That doth not smack of <sup>10</sup>observation;

And so am I, whether I smack, or no;

And not alone in habit and device,

Exterior form, outward accoutrement,

But from the inward motion to deliver

Sweet, sweet, sweet poison for the age's tooth:

Which, though I will not practise to deceive,

Yet, to avoid deceit, I mean to learn,

For it shall strew the footsteps of my rising.—

But who comes in such haste, in riding robes?

What woman-post is this? hath she no husband,

That will take pains to blow a horn before her?

Enter Lady FAULCONBRIDGE and JAMES GURNEY.

O me! it is my mother.—How now, good lady!

What brings you here to court so hastily?

Lady F. Where is that slave, thy brother? where is he,

That holds in chase mine honor up and down?

Bast. My brother Robert? old sir Robert's son?

Colbrand the giant, that same mighty man?

Is it sir Robert's son, that you seek so? [by,

Lady F. Sir Robert's son! Ay, thou unreverend

Sir Robert's son: why scorn'st thou at sir Robert?

He is sir Robert's son, and so art thou.

Bast. James Gurney, wilt thou give us leave awhile?

Gur. Good leave, good Philip.

Bast. Philip?—sparrow!—James,

There's <sup>11</sup>toys abroad: anon I'll tell thee more.

[Exit GURNEY.]

Madam, I was not old sir Robert's son:

Sir Robert might have eat his part in me

Upon Good-Friday, and ne'er broke his fast.

Sir Robert could do well: marry, to confess,

<sup>12</sup>Could not get me; sir Robert could not do it:

We know his handy-work.—Therefore, good mother,

To whom am I beholding for these limbs?

Sir Robert never help to make this leg.

Lady F. Hast thou conspired with thy brother, too,

That for thine own gain should'st defend mine honor?

What means this scorn, thou most untoward knave?

Bast. Knight, knight, good mother,—<sup>13</sup>Basiliaco like.

What! I am dubb'd; I have it on my shoulder.

But, mother, I am not sir Robert's son;

I have disclaim'd sir Robert, and my land;

Legitimation, name, and all is gone.

Then, good my mother, let me know my father:

Some proper man, I hope; who was it, mother?

Lady F. Hast thou denied thyself a Faulconbridge?

Bast. As faithfully as I deny the devil.

Lady F. King Richard Cœur-de-lion was thy father.

By long and vehement suit I was seduc'd

To make room for him in my husband's bed.—

Heaven! lay not my transgression to my charge.

Thou art the issue of my dear offence,

Which was so strongly urg'd, past my defence.

Bast. Now, by this light, were I to get again,

Madam, I would not wish a better father.

Some sins do bear their privilege on earth,

And so doth yours; your fault was not your folly:

Needs must you lay your heart at his dispose,

Subjected tribute to commanding love,

Against whose fury and unmatched force

The awless lion could not wage the fight,

Nor keep his princely heart from Richard's hand.

He, that perforce robs lions of their <sup>14</sup>hearts,

May easily win a woman's. Ay, my mother,

With all my heart I thank thee for my father.

Who lives, and dares but say thou didst not well

When I was got, I'll send his soul to hell.

Come, lady, I will show thee to my kin;

And they shall say, when Richard me begot,

If thou hadst said him nay, it had been sin:

Who says it was, he lies: I say, 'twas not.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—France. Before the Walls of Angiers.

Enter, on one side, the Archduke of AUSTRIA, and Forces; on the other, PHILIP, King of France, and Forces; LEWIS, CONSTANCE, ARTHUR, and Attendants.

Lew. Before Angiers well met, brave Austria.—

Arthur, that great fore-runner of thy blood,
Richard, that rob'd'd the lion of his heart,
And fought the holy wars in Palestine,
By this brave duke came early to his grave:

And, for amends to his posterity,
At our <sup>a</sup>importance hither is he come,
To spread his colors, boy, in thy behalf;
And to rebuke the usurpation

Of thy unnatural uncle, English John:

Embrace him, love him, give him welcome hither.

Arth. God shall forgive you Cœur-de-lion's death,

The rather, that you give his offspring life,

Shadowing <sup>1</sup>his right under your wings of war.

I give you welcome with a powerless hand,

But with a heart full of <sup>2</sup>unstrained love:

Welcome before the gates of Angiers, duke.

Lew. A noble boy! Who would not do thee right?

Aust. Upon thy cheek lay I this zealous kiss,

As seal to this indenture of my love;

That to my home I will no more return,

Till Angiers, and the right thou hast in France,

Together with that pale, that white-fac'd shore,

Whose foot spurns back the ocean's roaring tides,

And coops from other lands her islanders,

Even till that England, hedg'd in with the main,

That water-walled bulwark, still secure

And confident from foreign purposes,

Even till that utmost corner of the west

Salute thee for her king: till then, fair boy,

Will I not think of home, but follow arms. [thanks,

Const. O! take his mother's thanks, a widow's

Till your strong hand shall help to give him strength,

To make a <sup>b</sup>more requital to your love. [swords

Aust. The peace of heaven is theirs, that lift their

In such a just and charitable war. [be bent

K. Phi. Well then, to work. Our cannon shall

Against the brows of this resisting town:—

Call for our chiefest men of discipline,

To cull the plots of best <sup>c</sup>advantages.

We'll lay before this town our royal bones,

Wade to the market-place in Frenchmen's blood,

But we will make it subject to this boy.

Const. Stay for an answer to your embassy,

Lest unadvis'd you stain your swords with blood.

My lord Chatillon may from England bring

That right in peace, which here we urge in war;

And then we shall repent each drop of blood,

That hot rash haste so <sup>3</sup>indiscreetly shed.

Enter CHATILLON.

K. Phi. A wonder, lady!—lo, upon thy wish,

Our messenger, Chatillon, is arriv'd.—

What England says, say briefly, gentle lord;

We coldly pause for thee: Chatillon, speak.

Chat. Then turn your forces from this paltry siege,

And stir them up against a mightier task.

England, impatient of your just demands,

Hath put himself in arms: the adverse winds,

Whose leisure I have stay'd, have given him time

To land his legions all as soon as I.

His marches are <sup>d</sup>expedient to this town;

His forces strong, his soldiers confident.

With him along has come the mother-queen,

<sup>4</sup>As <sup>e</sup>Até stirring him to blood and strife:
With her her niece, the lady Blanch of Spain;
With them a bastard of the king's deceased,
And all th' unsettled humors of the land:

Rash, inconsiderate, fiery volunteers,
With ladies' faces, and fierce dragon's spleens,
Have sold their fortunes at their native homes,
Bearing their birthrights proudly on their backs,
To make a hazard of new fortunes here.

In brief, a braver choice of dauntless spirits,
Than now the English bottoms have 'twait o'er,
Did never float upon the swelling tide,
To do offence and <sup>f</sup>seath in Christendom.

[Drums heard. <sup>5</sup>

The interruption of their churlish drums

Cuts off more circumstance: they are at hand,

To parley, or to fight; therefore, prepare.

K. Phi. How much unlook'd for is this expedition!

Aust. By how much unexpected, by so much

We must awake endeavor for defence,

For courage mounteth with occasion:

Let them be welcome, then; we are prepared.

Enter King JOHN, ELINOR, BLANCH, the Bastard, PEMBROKE, and Forces.

K. John. Peace be to France, if France in peace

Our just and lineal entrance to our own: [permit

If not, bleed France, and peace ascend to heaven;

Whiles we, God's wrathful agent, do correct

Their proud contempt that beats his peace to heaven.

K. Phi. Peace be to England, if that war return

From France to England, there to live in peace.

England we love; and, for that England's sake,

With burden of our armor here we sweat.

This toil of ours should be a work of thine;

But thou from loving England art so far,

That thou hast <sup>h</sup>under-wrought <sup>6</sup>her lawful king,

Cut off the <sup>i</sup>sequence of posterity,

Outfaced infant state, and done a rape

Upon the maiden virtue of the crown.

Look here upon thy brother Geoffrey's face:

[Pointing to ARTHUR.

These eyes, these brows, were moulded out of his:

This little abstract doth contain that large,

Which died in Geoffrey, and the hand of time

Shall draw this <sup>k</sup>brief into as huge a volume.

That Geoffrey was thy elder brother born,

And this his son: England was Geoffrey's right,

And this is Geoffrey's. In the name of God,

How comes it, then, that thou art call'd a king,

When living blood doth in these temples beat,

Which owe the crown that thou o'ermasterest?

K. John. From whom hast thou this great commis-

To draw my answer from thy articles? [son, France,

K. Phi. From that <sup>l</sup>supernal Judge, that stirs

In any breast of strong authority, [good thoughts

To look into the blots and stains of right.

That Judge hath made me guardian to this boy;

Under whose warrant I impeach thy wrong,

And by whose help I mean to chastise it.

K. John. Alack! thou dost usurp authority.

K. Phi. Excuse: it is to beat usurping France.

Eli. Who is it, thou dost call usurper, France?

Const. Let me make answer:—thy usurping son.

Eli. Out, insolent! thy bastard shall be king,

That thou may'st be a queen, and check the world!

Const. My bed was ever to thy son as true,

As thine was to thy husband, and this boy

Liker in feature to his father Geoffrey,

<sup>a</sup>Importunity.—<sup>b</sup>Greater.—<sup>c</sup>That is, to mark the best station to overawe the town.—<sup>d</sup>Expeditious; immediate.

Than thou and John, in manners being as like,
As rain to water, or devil to his dam.

My boy a bastard! By my soul, I think,
His father never was so true begot:

It cannot be, an if thou wert his mother. [father.

Eli. There's a good mother, boy, that blots thy

Const. There's a good grandam, boy, that would Aust. Peace! [blot thee.

Bast. Hear the crier.

Aust. What the devil art thou?

Bast. One that will play the devil, sir, with you,
An 'a may catch your 'hide and you alone.

You are the hare of whom the proverb goes,
Whose valor plucks dead lions by the beard.
I'll smoke your skin-coat, and I catch you right:
Sirrah, look to't; i' faith, I will, i' faith.

Blanch. O! well did he become that lion's robe,
That did disrobe the lion of that robe.

Bast. It lies as sightly on the back of him,
As great Alcides' shoes upon an ass.—

But, ass, I'll take that burden from your back,
Or lay on that shall make your shoulders crack.

Aust. What cracker is this same, that deafs our
With this abundance of superfluous breath? [ears

K. Phi. Lewis, determine what we shall do straight.

Lew. Women and fools, break off your confer-
King John, this is the very sum of all: [ence.—
England, and Ireland, Anjou, Touraine, Maine,
In right of Arthur do I claim of thee.

Will thou resign them, and lay down thy arms?

K. John. My life as soon: I do defy thee, France.—
Arthur of Bretagne, yield thee to my hand,
And out of my dear love I'll give thee more,
Than e'er the coward hand of France can win:
Submit thee, boy.

Eli. Come to thy grandam, child.

Const. Do, child, go to it! grandam, child:
Give grandam kingdom, and it! grandam will Give it a plum, a cherry, and a fig:
There's a good grandam.

Arth. Good my mother, peace!
I would that I were low laid in my grave: '[Weeping.
I am not worth this 'coil that's made for me.

Eli. His mother shames him so, poor boy, he weeps.

Const. Now shame upon you, whe'r she does, or no!
His grandam's wrongs, and not his mother's shames,
Draw those heaven-moving pearls from his poor eyes,
Which heaven shall take in nature of a fee:

Ay, with these crystal beads 'shall heaven be brib'd!
To do him justice, and revenge on you. [earth!

Eli. Thou monstrous slanderer of heaven and

Const. Thou monstrous injurer of heaven and Call not me slanderer: thou, and thine, usurp [earth!
The dominations, royalties, and rights,
Of this oppressed boy, 'thy eld'st son's son,
Infortunate in nothing but in thee:

Thy sins are visited 'on this poor child;

The canon of the law is laid on him,

Being but the second generation

Removed from thy sin-conceiving womb.

K. John. Bedlam, have done.

Const. I have but this to say,—

That he is not only plagued for her sin,
But God hath made her sin and her, the plague
On this removed issue, plagu'd for her,
And with her plague her sin: his injury
Her injury the beadle to her sin,
All punish'd in the person of this child,
And all for her, a plague upon her!

Eli. Thou unadvised scold, I can produce

A will, that bars the title of thy son.

Const. Ay, who doubts that? a will! a wicked will;
A woman's will: a canker'd grandam's will!

K. Phi. Peace, lady! pause, or be more temperate.

It ill becometh this presence, to cry 'aim

To these ill-tuned repetitions.—

Some trumpet summon hither to the walls

These men of Angiers: let us hear them speak,
Whose title they admit, Arthur's or John's.

Trumpets sound. Enter Citizens upon the walls.

Cit. Who is it, that hath warn'd us to the walls?
K. Phi. 'Tis France, for England.

K. John. England, for itself.

You men of Angiers, and my loving subjects,—

K. Phi. You loving men of Angiers, Arthur's sub-
Our trumpet call'd you to this gentle 'parle. [jects.

K. John. For our advantage; therefore, hear us

These flags of France, that are advanced here [first.—

Before the eye and prospect of your town,

Have hither march'd to your endamagement:

The cannons have their bowels full of wrath,

And ready mounted are they, to spit forth

Their iron indignation 'gainst your walls:

All preparation for a bloody siege,

And merciless proceeding by these French,

'Come 'fore your city's eyes, your winking gates;

And, but for our approach, those sleeping stones,

That as a waist do girdle you about,

By the compulsion of their ordinance

By this time from their fixed beds of lime

Had been dishabited, and wide havoc made

For bloody power to rush upon your peace.

But, on the sight of us, your lawful king,

Who painfully, with much expedient march,

Have brought a countercheck before your gates,

To save unscratch'd your city's threaten'd cheeks,

Behold, the French amaz'd vouchsafe a parle;

And now, instead of bullets wrapp'd in fire,

To make a shaking fever in your walls,

They shoot but calm words, folded up in smoke,

To make a faithless error in your ears:

Which trust accordingly, kind citizens,

And let us in, your king; whose labor'd spirits,

'Forewearing in this action of swift speed,

Crave harborage within your city walls.

K. Phi. When I have said, make answer to us both.

Lo! in this right hand, whose protection

Is most divinely vow'd upon the right

Of him it holds, stands young Plantagenet,

Son to the elder brother of this man,

And king o'er him, and all that he enjoys.

For this down-trodden equity, we tread

In warlike march these greens before your town;

Being no farther enemy to you,

Than the constraint of hospitable zeal,

In the relief of this oppressed child,

Religiously provokes. Be pleased, then,

To pay that duty, which you truly owe,

To him that 'owes it, namely, this young prince;

And then our arms, like to a muzzled bear,

Save in aspect, have all offence seal'd up:

Our cannons' malice vainly shall be spent

Against th' invulnerable clouds of heaven;

And with a blessed and unwev'd retire,

With unhack'd swords, and helmets all unbruia'd,

We will bear home that lusty blood again,

Which here we came to spout against your town,

And leave your children, wives, and you, in peace.

But if you fondly pass our proffer'd offer,

'Tis not the 'roundure of your old-fac'd walls

* Austria wore a lion's hide, as the spoil of King Richard Cœur-de-lion.—† Bustle; tumult.

* "To cry aim to," i. e., to encourage.—† Conference.—
* Worn out.—† Owens.—‡ Circle; compass.

Can hide you from our messengers of war,
Though all these English, and their discipline,
Were harbor'd in their rude circumference.
Then, tell us; shall your city call us lord,
In that behalf which we have challeng'd it,
Or shall we give the signal to our rage,
And stalk in blood to our possession?

Cit. In brief, we are the king of England's subjects for him, and in his right, we hold this town. [jects:]

K. John. Acknowledge then the king, and let me in.

Cit. That can we not; but he that proves the king, To him will we prove loyal: till that time, Have we rammi'd up our gates against the world.

K. John. Doth not the crown of England prove And, if not that, I bring you witnesses, [the king?] Twice fifteen thousand hearts of England's breed,—

Bast. Bastards, and else. <sup>1</sup> [Aside.

K. John. To verify our title with their lives.

K. Phi. As many, and as well-born bloods as those,—

Bast. Some bastards, too. <sup>2</sup> [Aside.

K. Phi. Stand in his face to contradict his claim.

Cit. Till you compound whose right is worthiest, We for the worthiest hold the right from both.

K. John. Then God forgive the sins of all those That to their everlasting residence [souls, Before the dew of evening fall shall fleet, In dreadful trial of our kingdom's king! [arms!]

K. Phi. Amen, Amen.—Mount, chevaliers! to

Bast. St. George, that *swing'd the dragon, and e'er since,

Sits on his horseback at mine hostess' door,
Teach us some fence! [To AUSTRIA.] Sirrah, were At your den, sirrah, with your lioness, [I at home, I would set an ox-head to your lion's hide, And make a monster of you.

Aust. Peace! no more.

Bast. O! tremble, for you hear the lion roar.

K. John. Up higher to the plain; where we'll set In best appointment all our regiments. [forth]

Bast. Speed, then, to take advantage of the field.

K. Phi. It shall be so;—[To LEWIS.] and at the other hill

Command the rest to stand.—God and our right! [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Alarums and Excursions; then a Retreat. Enter a French Herald, with trumpets, to the gates.

F. Her. You men of Angiers, open wide your gates,
And let young Arthur, duke of Bretagne, in,
Who by the hand of France this day hath made
Much work for tears in many an English mother,
Whose sons lie scatter'd on the bleeding ground:
Many a widow's husband grovelling lies,
Coldly embracing the discolored earth,
And victory, with little loss, doth play
Upon the dancing banners of the French,
Who are at hand, triumphantly display'd,
To enter conquerors, and to proclaim
Arthur of Bretagne, England's king, and yours.

Enter an English Herald, with trumpets.

E. Her. Rejoice, you men of Angiers, ring your bells:

King John, your king, and England's, doth approach,
Commander of this hot malicious day.
Their armors, that march'd hence so silver-bright,
Hither return all gilt with Frenchmen's blood.
There stuck no plume in any English crest,
That is remov'd by <sup>3</sup>any staff of France:

Our colors do return in those same hands,
That did display them when we first march'd forth;
And, like a jolly troop of huntsmen, come
Our lusty English, all with purpled hands,
Dyed in the dying slaughter of their foes.
Open your gates, and give the victors way.

Cit. Heralds, from off our towers we might behold,
From first to last, the onset and retire

Of both your armies; whose equality
By our best eyes cannot be <sup>b</sup>censured: [blows;

Blood hath bought blood, and blows have answer'd
Strength match'd with strength, and power confront—
Both are alike; and both alike we like. [ed power:
One must prove greatest: while they weigh so even,
We hold our town for neither, yet for both.

Enter, at one side, King JOHN, with his power, ELISABETH, BLANCH, and the Bastard; at the other, King PHILIP, LEWIS, AUSTRIA, and forces.

K. John. France, hast thou yet more blood to cast away?

Say, shall the current of our right roam on?
Whose passage, vex'd with thy impediment,
Shall leave his native channel, and o'er-swell
With course disturb'd even thy confining shores,
Unless thou let his silver waters keep
A peaceful progress to the ocean. [blood,

K. Phi. England, thou hast not sav'd one drop of
In this hot trial, more than we of France;
Rather, lost more: and by this hand I swear,
That sways the earth this climate overlooks,
Before we will lay down our just-borne arms,
We'll put thee down, 'gainst whom these arms we
Or add a royal number to the dead, [bear,
Gracing the scroll, that tells of this war's loss,
With slaughter coupled to the name of kings.

Bast. Ha! majesty, how high thy glory towers,
When the rich blood of kings is set on fire.
O! now doth death line his dead chaps with steel;
The swords of soldiers are his teeth, his fangs;
And now he feasts, 'mousing the flesh of men,
In undetermined differences of kings.—

Why stand these royal fronts amazed thus?
Cry, havock, kings! back to the stained field,
You equal potent, <sup>4</sup>fire-yrindled spirits!
Then let confusion of one part confirm
The other's peace; till then, blows, blood, and death!

K. John. Whose party do the townsmen yet admit?

K. Phi. Speak, citizens, for England who's your king? [king.]

Cit. The king of England, when we know the

K. Phi. Know him in us, that here hold up his right.

K. John. In us, that are our own great deputy,
And bear procession of our person here;
Lord of our presence, Angiers, and of you.

Cit. A greater power than we denies all this;
And, till it be undoubted, we do lock
Our former scruple in our strong-barr'd gates,
Kings of our fear; until our <sup>5</sup>fear, resolv'd,
Be by some certain king purg'd and depos'd.

Bast. By heaven, these <sup>6</sup>scroyles of Angiers flout you, kings,

And stand securely on their battlements,
As in a theatre, whence they gape and point
At your industrious scenes and acts of death.

Your royal presences be rul'd by me:
Do like the <sup>7</sup>mutines of Jerusalem,
Be friends awhile, and both conjointly bend
Your sharpest deeds of malice on this town.
By east and west let France and England mount

Their battering cannon, charged to the mouths,
Till their "soul-fearing" clamors have brawld down
The flinty ribs of this contemptuous city:
I'd play incessantly upon these jades,
Even till unfenced desolation

Leave them as naked as the vulgar air.
That done, dissever your united strengths,
And part your mingled colors once again;
Turn face to face, and bloody point to point;
Then, in a moment, fortune shall cull forth
Out of one side her happy minion,
To whom in favor she shall give the day,
And kiss him with a glorious victory.
How like you this wild counsel, mighty states?
Smacks it not something of the policy? [heads,

K. John. Now, by the sky that hangs above our
I like it well.—France, shall we knit our powers,
And lay this Angiers even with the ground,
Then, after, fight who shall be king of it?

Bast. An if thou hast the mettle of a king,
Being wrong'd as we are by this peevish town,
Turn thou the mouth of thy artillery,
As we will ours, against these saucy walls;
And when that we have dash'd them to the ground,
Why, then defy each other, and, pell-mell,
Make work upon ourselves for heaven, or hell.

K. Phi. Let it be so.—Say, where will you assault.

K. John. We from the west will send destruction
Into this city's bosom.

Aust. I from the north.

K. Phi. Our thunder from the south,
Shall rain their drift of bullets on this town.

Bast. O, prudent discipline! From north to south,
Austria and France shoot in each other's mouth.

[Aside.

I'll stir them to it.—Come, away, away! [stay,
Cil. Hear us, great kings: vouchsafe a while to
And I shall show you peace, and fair-fac'd league;
Win you this city without stroke, or wound;
Rescue those breathing lives to die in beds,
That here come sacrifices for the field.
Persever not, but hear me, mighty kings.

K. John. Speak on, with favor: we are bent to hear.

Cil. That daughter there of Spain, the lady Blanch,
Is 'niece to England: look upon the years
Of Lewis the Dauphin, and that lovely maid.

If lusty love should go in quest of beauty,
Where should he find it fairer than in Blanch?
If 'zealous love should go in search of virtue,
Where should he find it purer than in Blanch?
If love ambitious sought a match of birth,
Whose veins bound richer blood than lady Blanch?
Such as she is, in beauty, virtue, birth,
Is the young Dauphin every way complete:
If not complete of, say, he is not she;
And she again wants nothing, to name want,
If want it be not, that she is not he:
He is the half part of a blessed man,
Left to be finished by such a she;
And she a fair divided excellence,
Whose fulness of perfection lies in him.

O! two such silver currents, when they join,
Do glorify the banks that bound them in;
And two such shores to two such streams made one,
Two such controlling bounds shall you be, kings,
To these two princes, if you marry them.
This union shall do more than battery can
To our fast-closed gates; for, at this match,
With swifter 'spleen than powder can enforce,
The mouth of passage shall we fling wide ope,
And give you entrance; but, without this match,

The sea enraged is not half so deaf,
Lions more confident, mountains and rocks
More free from motion: no, not death himself
In mortal fury half so peremptory,
As we to keep this city.

Bast.

Here's a 'd stay,

That shakes the rotten carcase of old death
Out of his rags! Here's a large mouth, indeed,
That spits forth death, and mountains, rocks, and Talks as familiarly of roaring lions, [seas;
As maids of thirteen do of puppy-dogs.
What cannoneer begot this lusty blood?
He speaks plain cannon-fire, and smoke, and bounce;
He gives the bastinado with his tongue:
Our ears are cudgell'd; not a word of his,
But buffets better than a fist of France.
Zounds! I was never so bethump'd with words,
Since I first call'd my brother's father dad.

Elz. Son, list to this conjunction; make this match;
Give with our niece a dowry large enough,
For by this knot thou shalt so surely tie
Thy now unsur'd assurance to the crown,
That yond' green boy shall have no sun to ripe
The bloom that promiseth a mighty fruit.
I see a yielding in the looks of France;
Mark, how they whisper: urge them while their souls
Are capable of this ambition,
Lest zeal, now melted by the windy breath
Of soft petitions, pity, and remorse,
Cool and congeal again to what it was.

Cil. Why answer not the double majesties
This friendly treaty of our threaten'd town?

K. Phi. Speak England first, that hath been forward first

To speak unto this city: what say you? [son,
K. John. If that the Dauphin there, thy princely
Can in this book of beauty read, I love,
Her dowry shall weigh equal with a queen:
For Anjou, and fair Touraine, Maine, Poictiers,
And all that we upon this side the sea,
(Except this city now by us besieg'd)
Find liable to our crown and dignity,
Shall gild her bridal bed, and make her rich
In titles, honors, and promotions,
As she in beauty, education, blood,
Holds hand with any princess of the world. [face.

K. Phi. What say'st thou, boy? look in the lady's

Lew. I do, my lord; and in her eye I find
A wonder, or a wondrous miracle,
The shadow of myself form'd in her eye,
Which, being but the shadow of your son,
Becomes a sun, and makes your son a shadow.
I do protest, I've never lov'd myself,
Till now infixed I 'behold myself
Drawn in the flattering 'table of her eye.

[Whispers with BLANCH.

Bast. Drawn in the flattering table of her eye,
Hang'd in the frowning wrinkle of her brow,
And quarter'd in her heart, he doth espy

Himself love's traitor: this is pity now, [be,
That hang'd, and drawn, and quarter'd, there should
In such a love, so vile a lout as he.

Blanch. My uncle's will in this respect is mine:
If he see aught in you, that makes him like,
That any thing he sees, which moves his liking,
I can with ease translate it to my will;
Or if you will, to speak more properly,
I will enforce it easily to my love.
Farther I will not flatter you, my lord,
That all I see in you is worthy love,

* Soul-appalling.—† Pious.—‡ Speed.

<sup>d</sup> "A stay," i. e., an interruption.—"Table" is used here metaphorically for tablet, or writing-table.

Than this,—that nothing do I see in you, [judge,
Though churlish thoughts themselves should be your
That I can find should merit any hate.

K. John. What say these young ones? What say you, my niece?

Blanch. That she is bound in honor still to do
What you in wisdom still vouchsafe to say.

K. John. Speak then, prince Dauphin: can you love this lady?

Lew. Nay, ask me if I can refrain from love,
For I do love her most unfeignedly. [Maine,

K. John. Then do I give Volquessen, Touraine, Poitiers, and Anjou, these five provinces,
With her to thee; and this addition more,
Full thirty thousand marks of English coin.—
Philip of France, if thou be pleas'd withal,
Command thy son and daughter to join hands.

K. Phi. It likes us well.—Young princes, close your hands. <sup>1</sup> [They join hands.

Aust. And your lips too; for, I am well-assur'd,
That I did so, when I was first <sup>2</sup> assur'd.

K. Phi. Now, citizens of Angiers, open your gates,
Let in that amity which you have made;
For at saint Mary's chapel presently
The rites of marriage shall be solemniz'd.—
Is not the lady Constance in this troop?

I know, she is not; for this match, made up,
Her presence would have interrupted much.
Where is she and her son? tell me, who knows.

Lew. She is sad and <sup>3</sup> passionate at your highness' tent. [made,

K. Phi. And, by my faith, this league, that we have
Will give her sadness very little cure.—

Brother of England, how may we content
This <sup>4</sup> widow'd lady? In her right we came,
Which we, God knows, have turn'd another way,
To our own <sup>5</sup> vantage.

K. John. We will heal up all;

For we'll create young Arthur duke of Bretagne,
And earl of Richmond, and this rich fair town
We make him lord of.—Call the lady Constance:
Some speedy messenger bid her repair
To our solemnity.—I trust we shall,
If not fill up the measure of her will,
Yet in some measure satisfy her so,
That we shall stop her exclamation.
Go we, as well as haste will suffer us,
To this unlook'd for, unprepared pomp.

[Exeunt all but the Bastard.—The Citizens retire from the walls.

Bast. Mad world! mad kings! mad composition!

John, to stop Arthur's title in the whole,
Hath willingly <sup>6</sup> departed with a part;
And France, whose armor conscience buckled on,
Whom zeal and charity brought to the field,
As God's own soldier, <sup>7</sup> rounded in the ear
With that same purpose-changer, that sly devil,
That broker that still breaks the pate of faith,
That daily break-vow, he that wins of all,
Of kings, of beggars, old men, young men, maids,—
Who having no external thing to lose
But the word maid,—cheats the poor maid of that;
That smooth-faced gentleman, tickling <sup>8</sup> commodity,—
Commodity, the bias of the world;
The world, who of itself is <sup>9</sup> poised well,
Made to run even, upon even ground,
Till this advantage, this vile drawing bias,
This sway of motion, this commodity,
Makes it take head from all indifferency,
From all direction, purpose, course, intent:

And this same bias, this commodity,
This bawd, this broker, this all-changing word,
Clapp'd on the outward eye of fickle France,
Hath drawn him from his own determin'd <sup>4</sup> aim,
From a resolv'd and honorable war,
To a most base and vile-concluded peace.
And why rail I on this commodity?
But for because he hath not woo'd me yet:
Not that I have <sup>5</sup> no power to <sup>6</sup> clutch him hand,
When his fair <sup>7</sup> angels would salute my palm;
But <sup>8</sup> for my hand, as unattempted yet,
Like a poor beggar, raileth on the rich,
Well, whiles I am a beggar, I will rail,
And say, there is no sin, but to be rich;
And being rich, my virtue then shall be,
To say, there is no vice but beggary.
Since kings break faith upon commodity,
Gain, be my lord, for I will worship thee. [Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Same. The French King's Tent.

Enter CONSTANCE, ARTHUR, and SALISBURY.

Const. Gone to be married? gone to swear a peace?
False blood to false blood join'd! Gone to be friends?
Shall Lewis have Blanch, and Blanch those provinces?
It is not so; thou hast misspoke, misheard:
Be well advis'd, tell o'er thy tale again:
It cannot be; thou dost but say 'tis so.
I trust, I may not trust thee, for thy word
Is but the vain breath of a common man:
Believe me, I do not believe thee, man:
I have a king's oath to the contrary.
Thou shalt be punish'd for thus frightening me,
For I am sick, and <sup>1</sup> capable of fears;
Oppress'd with wrongs, and therefore full of fears;
A widow, husbandless, subject to fears;
A woman, naturally born to fears;
And though thou now confess, thou didst but jest,
With my vex'd spirits, I cannot take a truce,
But they will quake and tremble all this day.
What dost thou mean by shaking of thy head?
Why dost thou look so sadly on my son?
What means that hand upon that breast of thine?
Why holds thine eye that lamentable rheum,
Like a proud river peering o'er his bounds?
Be these sad signs confirmers of thy words?
Then speak again; not all thy former tale,
But this one word, whether thy tale be true.

Sal. As true, as, I believe, you think them false,
That give you cause to prove my saying true.

Const. O! if thou teach me to believe this sorrow,
Teach thou this sorrow how to make me die;
And let belief and life encounter so,
As doth the fury of two desperate men,
Which in the very meeting fall, and die.—
Lewis marry Blanch! O, boy! then where art thou?
France friend with England! what becomes of me?—
Fellow, be gone; I cannot brook thy sight:
This news hath made thee a most ugly man.

Sal. What other harm have I, good lady, done,
But spoke the harm that is by others done?

Const. Which harm within itself so heinous is,
As it makes harmful all that speak of it.

Arth. I do beseech you, madam, be content.

Const. If thou, that bidd'st me be content, wert
Ugly, and slanderous to thy mother's womb, [grim,
Full of unpleasant blots, <sup>2</sup> unsightly stains,

Lame, foolish, crooked, <sup>a</sup>swart, <sup>b</sup>prodigious,
Patch'd with foul moles, and eye-offending marks,
I would not care, I then would be content;
For then I should not love thee; no, nor thou
Become thy great birth, nor deserve a crown.
But thou art fair; and at thy birth, dear boy,
Nature and fortune join'd to make thee great:
Of nature's gifts thou may'st with lilies boast,
And with the half-blown rose. But fortune, O!
She is corrupted, chang'd, and won from thee:
Sh' adulterates hourly with thine uncle John;
And with her golden hand hath pluck'd on France
To tread down fair respect of sovereignty,
And made his majesty the bawd to theirs.
France is a bawd to fortune, and king John;
That strumpet fortune, that usurping John!—
Tell me, thou fellow, is not France forsworn?
Envenom him with words, or get thee gone,
And leave those woes alone, which I alone
Am bound to under-bear.

Sal. Pardon me, madam,
I may not go without you to the kings. [Thee.]

Const. Thou may'st, thou shalt: I will not go with
I will instruct my sorrows to be proud,
For grief is proud, and makes his owner stoop.
To me, and to the state of my great grief,
Let kings assemble; for my grief's so great,
That no supporter but the huge firm earth
Can hold it up: here I and sorrows sit;
Here is my throne, bid kings come bow to it.

[She sits on the ground.]

Enter King JOHN, King PHILIP, LEWIS, BLANCH, ELINOR, Bastard, AUSTRIA, and Attendants.

K. Phi. 'Tis true, fair daughter; and this blessed Ever in France shall be kept festival: [day,]
To solemnize this day, the glorious sun
Stays in his course, and plays the alchymist,
Turning, with splendor of his precious eye,
The meagre cloddy earth to glittering gold:
The yearly course, that brings this day about,
Shall never see it but a holiday.

Const. A wicked day, and not a holy day! [Rising.]
What hath this day deserv'd? what hath it done,
That it in golden letters should be set,
Among the high <sup>c</sup>tides, in the calendar?
Nay, rather, turn this day out of the week;
This day of shame, oppression, perjury:
Or if it must stand still, let wives with child
Pray, that their burdens may not fall this day,
Lest that their hopes prodigiously be <sup>d</sup>cross'd:
<sup>e</sup>But on this day, let seamen fear no wreck;
No bargains break, that are not this day made;
This day all things begun come to ill end;
Yea, faith itself to hollow falsehood change!

K. Phi. By heaven, lady, you shall have no cause
To curse the fair proceedings of this day.
Have I not pawn'd to you my majesty?

Const. You have beguil'd me with a counterfeit,
Resembling majesty, which, being touch'd and tried,
Proves valueless. You are forsworn, forsworn;
You came in arms to spill mine enemies' blood,
But now in arms you strengthen it with yours:
The grappling vigor, and rough frown of war,
Is cold in amity and faint in peace,
And our oppression hath made up this league.—
Arm, arm, you heavens, against these perjurd kings!
A widow cries: be husband to me, heavens!
Let not the hours of this ungodly day

Wear out the day in peace; but, ere sunset,
Set armed discord 'twixt these perjurd kings!
Hear me! O, hear me!

Aust. Lady Constance, peace!
Const. War! war! no peace! peace is to me a war.

O, Lymoges! O, Austria! thou dost shame
That bloody spoil: thou slave, thou wretch, thou
Thou little valiant, great in villainy! [coward;]
Thou ever strong upon the stronger side!
Thou fortune's champion, that dost never fight
But when her humorous ladyship is by
To teach thee safety! thou art perjurd too,
And sooth'st up greatness. What a fool art thou,
A ramping fool, to brag, and stamp, and swear,
Upon my party! Thou cold-blooded slave,
Hast thou not spoke like thunder on my side?
Been sworn my soldier? bidding me depend
Upon thy stars, thy fortune, and thy strength?
And dost thou now fall over to my foes?
Thou wear a lion's hide! doff it for shame,
And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.

Aust. O, that a man should speak those words to me!
Bast. And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.

Aust. Thou dar'st not say so, villain, for thy life.
Bast. And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant
limbs.

K. John. We like not this: thou dost forget thyself.

Enter PANDULPH.

K. Phi. Here comes the holy legate of the pope.
Pand. Hail, you anointed deputies of heaven.

To thee, king John, my holy errand is.
I Pandulph, of fair Milan cardinal,
And from Pope Innocent the legate here,
Do in his name religiously demand,
Why thou against the church, our holy mother,
So wilfully doth spurn; and, force 'perforce,
Keep Stephen Langton, chosen archbishop
Of Canterbury, from that holy see?
This, in our 'foresaid holy father's name,
Pope Innocent, I do demand of thee.

K. John. What earthly name to 'interrogatories
Can task the free <sup>b</sup>breath of a sacred king?
Thou canst not, cardinal, devise a name
So slight, unworthy, and ridiculous,
To charge me to an answer, as the pope.
Tell him this tale; and from the mouth of England,
Add thus much more,—that no Italian priest
Shall tithe or toll in our dominions;
But as we under heaven are supreme head,
So, under <sup>2</sup>heaven, that great supremacy,
Where we do reign, we will alone uphold,
Without th' assistance of a mortal hand.
So tell the pope; all reverence set apart
To him, and his usurp'd authority.

K. Phi. Brother of England, you blaspheme in this.

K. John. Though you, and all the kings of Christ-
Are led so grossly by this meddling priest, [endom,
Dreading the curse that money may buy out,
And, by the merit of vile gold, dross, dust,
Purchase corrupted pardon of a man,
Who, in that sale, sells pardon from himself;
Though you, and all the rest, so grossly led,
This juggling witchcraft with revenue cherish,
Yet I, alone, alone do me oppose
Against the pope, and count his friends my foes.

Pand. Then, by the lawful power that I have,
Thou shalt stand curs'd, and excommunicate:
And blessed shall he be, that doth revolt

<sup>a</sup> "Swart," i. e., dark; dusky.—<sup>b</sup> Preternatural.—<sup>c</sup> By the "high tides" are meant solemn seasons, times to be observed above others.—<sup>d</sup> "Prodigiously be cross'd," i. e., be disappointed by the production of a prodigy, a monster.—<sup>e</sup> "But" is used here for except.

"Force perforce," i. e., violently; by force.—<sup>f</sup> "To interrogatories," i. e., subjoined to interrogatories.—<sup>g</sup> "Can task the free breath of," i. e., can force an answer from.

From his allegiance to an heretic;
And meritorious shall that hand be call'd,
Canonized, and worshipp'd as a saint,
That takes away by any secret course
Thy hateful life.

Const. O! lawful let it be,
That I have room with Rome to curse awhile.
Good father Cardinal, cry thou amen
To my keen curses; for without my wrong
There is no tongue hath power to curse him right.

Pand. There's law and warrant, lady, for my curse.

Const. And for mine too: when law can do no right,
Let it be lawful that law bar no wrong.
Law cannot give my child his kingdom here,
For he that holds his kingdom holds the law:
Therefore, since law itself is perfect wrong,
How can the law forbid my tongue to curse?

Pand. Philip of France, on peril of a curse,
Let go the hand of that arch-heretic,
And raise the power of France upon his head,
Unless he do submit himself to Rome. [hand.

Eli. Look'st thou pale, France? do not let go thy
Const. Look to that, devil, lest that France repent,
And by disjoining hands hell lose a soul.

Aust. King Philip, listen to the cardinal.

Bast. And hang a calf's-skin on his recreant limbs.

Aust. Well, ruffian, I must pocket up these wrongs, Because—

Bast. Your breeches best may carry them.

K. John. Philip, what say'st thou to the cardinal?
Const. What should he say, but as the cardinal?

Lew. Bethink you, father; for the difference

Is purchase of a heavy curse from Rome,

Or the light loss of England for a friend:

Forego the easier.

Blanch. That's the curse of Rome.

Const. O Lewis, stand fast! the devil tempts thee
In likeness of a new uptrimmed bride. [here,

Blanch. The lady Constance speaks not from her
But from her need. [faith,

Const. O! if thou grant my need,
Which only lives but by the death of faith,
That need must needs infer this principle,
That faith would live again by death of need:
O! then, tread down my need, and faith mounts up;
Keep my need up, and faith is trodden down. [this.

K. John. The king is mov'd, and answers not to
Const. O! be remov'd from him, and answer well.

Aust. Do so, king Philip: hang no more in doubt.

Bast. Hang nothing but a calf's-skin, most sweet lout.

K. Phi. I am perplex'd, and know not what to say.

Pand. What canst thou say, but wilt perplex thee
If thou stand excommunicate, and curs'd? [more,

K. Phi. Good reverend father, make my person
And tell me how you would bestow yourself. [yours,

This royal hand and mine are newly knit,
And the conjunction of our inward souls

Married in league, coupled and link'd together

With all religious strength of sacred vows;

The latest breath that gave the sound of words,

Was deep-sworn faith, peace, amity, true love,

Between our kingdoms, and our royal selves;

And even before this truce, but new before,

No longer than we well could wash our hands,

To clap this royal bargain up of peace,

Heaven knows, they were besmear'd and overstain'd

With slaughter's pencil; where revenge did paint

The fearful difference of incensed kings:

And shall these hands, so lately purg'd of blood,

So newly join'd in love, so strong in both,

Unyoke this seizure, and this kind <sup>b</sup>regret?
Play fast and loose with faith? so jest with heaven,
Make such unconstant children of ourselves,
As now again to snatch our palm from palm;
Unswear faith sworn; and on the marriage bed
Of smiling peace to march a bloody host,
And make a riot on the gentle brow
Of true sincerity? O! holy sir,
My reverend father, let it not be so:
Out of your grace, devise, ordain, impose
Some gentle order, and then we shall be bless'd
To do your pleasure, and continue friends.

Pand. All form is formless, order orderless,
Save what is opposite to England's love.
Therefore, to arms! be champion of our church,
Or let the church, our mother, breathe her curse,
A mother's curse, on her revolting son.
France, thou may'st hold a serpent by the tongue,
A <sup>2</sup>caged lion by the mortal paw,
A fasting tiger safer by the tooth,
Than keep in peace that hand which thou dost hold.

K. Phi. I may disjoin my hand, but not my faith.

Pand. So mak'st thou faith an enemy to faith;

And, like a civil war, set'st oath to oath,

Thy tongue against thy tongue. O! let thy vow

First made to heaven, first made to heaven perform'd;

That is, to be the champion of our church.

What since thou swor'st is sworn against thyself,

And may not be performed by thyself:

For that, which thou hast sworn to do amiss,

Is <sup>3</sup>but amiss when it is truly done;

And being not done, where doing tends to ill,

The truth is then most done not doing it.

The better act of purposes mistook

Is to mistake again: though indirect,

Yet indirection thereby grows direct,

And falsehood falsehood cures; as fire cools fire

Within the scorched veins of one new burn'd.

It is religion that doth make vows kept,

But thou hast sworn against religion, [swear'st,

By what thou swear'st, against the thing thou

And mak'st an oath the surety for thy truth,

Against an oath: the truth, thou art unsure

To swear, swears only not to be forsworn;

Else, what a mockery should it be to swear?

But thou dost swear only to be forsworn;

And most forsworn, to keep what thou dost swear.

Therefore, thy later vows, against thy first,

Is in thyself rebellion to thyself;

And better conquest never canst thou make,

Than arm thy constant and thy nobler parts

Against these giddy loose suggestions:

Upon which better part our prayers come in,

If thou vouchsafe them; but, if not, then know,

The peril of our curses <sup>4</sup>lights on thee,

So heavy, as thou shalt not shake them off,

But in despair die under their black weight.

Aust. Rebellion, flat rebellion!

Bast. Wilt not be?

Will not a calf's-skin stop that mouth of thine?

Lew. Father, to arms!

Blanch. Upon thy wedding day?

Against the blood that thou hast married?

What! shall our feast be kept with slaughter'd men?

Shall braying trumpets, and loud churlish drums,

Clamors of hell, be <sup>c</sup>measures to our pomp?

O husband, hear me!—ah, alack! how new

Is husband in my mouth!—even for that name,

Which till this time my tongue did ne'er pronounce,

Upon my knee I beg, go not to arms <sup>d</sup>[Kneeling.

Against mine uncle.

Made hard with kneeling, I do pray to thee,
Thou virtuous Dauphin, alter not the doom
Fore-thought by heaven. [may

Blanch. Now shall I see thy love. What motive
Be stronger with thee than the name of wife?

Const. That which upholdeth him that thee upholds,
His honor. O! thine honor, Lewis, thine honor.

Lew. I muse, your majesty doth seem so cold,
When such profound respects do pull you on.

Pand. I will denounce a curse upon his head.

K. Phi. Thou shalt not need.—England, I'll fall from thee.

Const. O, fair return of banish'd majesty!

Eli. O, foul revolt of French inconstancy!

K. John. France, thou shalt rue this hour within this hour.

Bast. Old Time the clock-setter, that bald sexton
Is it as he will? well then, France shall rue. [Time,

Blanch. The sun's o'ercast with blood: fair day,
Which is the side that I must go withal? [adieu!

I am with both: each army hath a hand,
And in their rage, I having hold of both,
They whirl asunder, and dismember me.

Husband, I cannot pray that thou may'st win;

Uncle, I needs must pray that thou may'st lose;

Father, I may not wish the fortune thine;

Grandam, I will not wish thy wishes thrive:

Whoever wins, on that side shall I lose;

Assured loss, before the match be play'd.

Lew. Lady, with me; with me thy fortune lies.

Blanch. There where my fortune lives, there my life dies. [er.—

K. John. Cousin, go draw our puissance together.— [Exit Bastard.

France, I am burn'd up with inflaming wrath;

A rage, whose heat hath this condition,

That nothing can allay, nothing but blood,

The blood, and dearest-valu'd blood of France.

K. Phi. Thy rage shall burn thee up, and thou shalt turn

To ashes, ere our blood shall quench that fire.

Look to thyself: thou art in jeopardy.

K. John. No more than he that threatens.—To arms let's hie! [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same. Plains near Angiers.

Alarums, Excursions. Enter the Bastard with AUSTRIA'S Head.

Bast. Now, by my life, this day grows wondrous
Some fiery devil hovers in the sky, [hot;
And pours down mischief. Austria's head, lie there,
While Philip breathes.

Enter King JOHN, ARTHUR, and HUBERT.

K. John. Hubert, keep this boy.—Philip, make My mother is assailed in our tent, [up:
And ta'en, I fear.

Bast. My lord, I rescued her;
Her highness is in safety, fear you not:
But on, my liege; for very little pains
Will bring this labor to an happy end. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same.

Alarums; Excursions; Retreat. Enter King JOHN,
ELINOR, ARTHUR, the Bastard, HUBERT, and Lords.

K. John. So shall it be; your grace shall stay behind, [To ELINOR.
So strongly guarded.—Cousin, look not sad:
[To ARTHUR.

Thy grandam loves thee, and thy uncle will
As dear be to thee as thy father was. [grief.

Arth. O! this will make my mother die with K. John. Cousin, [To the Bastard.] away for England: haste before;

And ere our coming, see thou shake the bags
Of hoarding abbots; <sup>2</sup>their imprison'd <sup>a</sup>angels
Set at liberty: the fat ribs of peace

Must by the hungry now be fed upon:

Use our commission in his utmost force. [back,

Bast. Bell, book, and <sup>b</sup>candle shall not drive me

When gold and silver becks me to come on.

I leave your highness.—Grandam, I will pray

(If ever I remember to be holy,)

For your fair safety: so I kiss your hand.

Eli. Farewell, gentle cousin.

K. John.

Coz, farewell. [Exit Bastard.

Eli. Come hither, little kinsman; hark, a word.

<sup>4</sup>[She talks apart with ARTHUR.

K. John. Come hither, Hubert. O! my gentle Hu-
We owe thee much: within this wall of flesh [bert,

There is a soul counts thee her creditor,

And with advantage means to pay thy love:

And, my good friend, thy voluntary oath

Lives in this bosom, dearly cherished.

Give me thy hand. I had a thing to say,—

But I will fit it with some better time.

By heaven, Hubert, I am almost asham'd

To say what good respect I have of thee.

Hub. I am much bounden to your majesty. [yet;

K. John. Good friend, thou hast no cause to say so

But thou shalt have: and creep time ne'er so slow,
Yet it shall come, for me to do thee good.

I had a thing to say,—but let it go.

The sun is in the heaven, and the proud day,

Attended with the pleasures of the world,

Is all too wanton, and too full of <sup>c</sup>gawds,

To give me audience:—if the midnight bell

Did, with his iron tongue and brazen mouth,

Sound on into the drowsy <sup>e</sup>ear of night:

If this same were a churchyard where we stand,

And thou possessed with a thousand wrongs;

Or if that surly spirit, melancholy,

Had bak'd thy blood, and made it heavy, thick,

(Which, else, runs <sup>f</sup>tingling up and down the veins.

Making that idiot, laughter, keep men's eyes,

And strain their cheeks to idle merriment,

A passion hateful to my purposes,)

Or if that thou could'st see me without eyes,

Hear me without thine ears, and make reply

Without a tongue, using <sup>d</sup>conceit alone,

Without eyes, ears, and harmful sound of words,

Then, in despite of <sup>7</sup>the broad watchful day,

I would into thy bosom pour my thoughts.

But ah! I will not:—yet I love thee well;

And, by my troth, I think, thou lov'st me well.

Hub. So well, that what you bid me undertake,

Though that my death were adjunct to my act,

By heaven, I would do it.

K. John. Do not I know, thou would'st?

Good Hubert! Hubert—Hubert, throw thine eye

On yond<sup>8</sup> young boy: I'll tell thee what, my friend,

He is a very serpent in my way;

And wheresoe'er this foot of mine doth tread,

He lies before me. Dost thou understand me?

Thou art his keeper.

Hub. And I'll keep him so,

That he shall not offend your majesty.

<sup>a</sup> "Angels," i. e., gold coins called angels.—<sup>b</sup> "Bell, book, and candle." <sup>c</sup> "Communication in the church of Rome was accompanied by lighted candles and the tolling of bells, to cause the greater dread."—<sup>d</sup> "Gawds," i. e., showy ornaments.—<sup>e</sup> "Conception."

K. John. Death.

Hub. My lord ?

K. John. A grave.

Hub. He shall not live.

K. John. Enough.

I could be merry now. Hubert, I love thee ;

Well, I'll not say what I intend for thee :

Remember.—Madam, fare you well :

I'll send those powers o'er to your majesty.

Eli. My blessing go with thee !

K. John. For England, cousin : go.

Hubert shall be your man, attend on you

With all true duty.—On toward Calais, ho ! [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Same. The French King's Tent.

Enter King PHILIP, LEWIS, PANDULPH, and Attendants.

K. Phi. So, by a roaring tempest on the flood,
A whole <sup>a</sup>armado of <sup>1</sup>convented sail
Is scatter'd, and disjoin'd from fellowship.

Pand. Courage and comfort ! all shall yet go well.

K. Phi. What can go well, when we have run so

Are we not beaten ? Is not Angiers lost ? [ill ?]

Arthur ta'en prisoner ? divers dear friends slain ?

And bloody England into England gone,

O'erbearing interruption, spite of France ?

Lew. What he hath won, that hath he fortified :

So hot a speed with such advice dispos'd,

Such temperate order in so fierce a cause,

Doth want example. Who hath read, or heard,

Of any kindred action like to this ? [praise,]

K. Phi. Well could I bear that England had this

So we could find some pattern of our shame.

Enter CONSTANCE.

Look, who comes here ? a grave unto a soul ;

Holding th' eternal spirit, against her will,

In the vile prison of afflicted <sup>b</sup>breath.—

I prythee, lady, go away with me.

Const. Lo now ; now see the issue of your peace !

K. Phi. Patience, good lady : comfort, gentle

Constance.

Const. No, I <sup>c</sup>defy all counsel, all redress,

But that which ends all counsel, true redress,

Death, death.—O, amiable lovely death !

Thou odoriferous stench ! sound rottenness !

Arise <sup>2</sup>from forth the couch of lasting night,

Thou hate and terror to prosperity,

And I will kiss thy detestable bones ;

And put my eye-balls in thy vaulty brows ;

And ring these fingers with thy household worms ;

And stop this <sup>d</sup>gap of breath with fulsome dust,<sup>1</sup>

And be a carrion monster like thyself :

Come, grin on me ; and I will think thou smil'st,

And buss thee as thy wife ! Misery's love,

O, come to me !

K. Phi. O, fair affliction, peace !

Const. No, no, I will not, having breath to cry.—

O ! that my tongue were in the thunder's mouth ;

Then with <sup>3</sup>what passion would I shake the world,

And rouse from sleep that fell anatomy,

Which cannot hear a lady's feeble voice,

Which scorns a <sup>4</sup>widow's invocation.

Pand. Lady, you utter madness, and not sorrow.

Const. Thou art not holy to belie me so.

I am not mad : this hair I tear, is mine ;

My name is Constance ; I was Geoffrey's wife ;

Young Arthur is my son, and he is lost !

I am not mad :—I would to heaven, I were,

For then, 'tis like I should forget myself :

O, if I could, what grief should I forget !—

Preach some philosophy to make me mad,

And thou shalt be canoniz'd, cardinal ;

For, being not mad, but sensible of grief,

My reasonable part produces reason

How I may be deliver'd of these woes,

And teaches me to kill or hang myself :

If I were mad, I should forget my son,

Or madly think a babe of clouts were he.

I am not mad : too well, too well I feel

The different plague of each calamity. [note]

K. Phi. Bind up those tresses. O ! what love I

In the fair multitude of those her hairs !

Where but by chance a silver drop hath fallen,

Even to that drop ten thousand wry friends

Do glue themselves in sociable grief ;

Like true, inseparable, faithful <sup>5</sup>lovers,

Sticking together in calamity.

Const. To England, if you will.

K. Phi. Bind up your hairs.

Const. Yes, that I will ; and wherefore will I do it ?

I tore them from their bonds, and cried aloud,

"O, that these hands could so redeem my son,

As they have given these hairs their liberty !"

But now, I envy at their liberty,

And will again commit them to their bonds,

Because my poor child is a prisoner.—

And, father cardinal, I have heard you say,

That we shall see and know our friends in heaven :

If that be true, I shall see my boy again ;

For, since the birth of Cain, the first male child,

To him that did but yesterday <sup>e</sup>suspire,

There was not such a <sup>f</sup>gracious creature born.

But now will canker sorrow eat my bud,

And chase the native beauty from his cheek,

And he will look as hollow as a ghost,

As dim and meagre as an ague's fit,

And so he'll die ; and, rising so again,

When I shall meet him in the court of heaven

I shall not know him : therefore never, never

Must I behold my pretty Arthur more.

Pand. You hold too heinous a respect of grief.

Const. He talks to me, that never had a son.

K. Phi. You are as fond of grief, as of your child.

Const. Grief fills the room up of my absent child,

Lies in his bed, walks up and down with me ;

Puts on his pretty looks, repeats his words,

<sup>g</sup>Remembers me of all his gracious parts,

Stuffs out his vacant garments with his form :

Then, have I reason to be fond of grief.

Fare you well : had you such a loss as I,

I could give better comfort than you do.—

I will not keep this form upon my head,

<sup>6</sup>[Tearing her hair]

When there is such disorder in my wit.

O lord ! my boy, my Arthur, my fair son !

My life, my joy, my food, my all the world,

My widow-comfort, and my sorrow's cure ! [Exit.]

K. Phi. I fear some outrage, and I'll follow her.

[Exit.]

Lew. There's nothing in this world can make me

Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale, [joy :]

Vexing the dull ear of a drowsy man ;

And bitter shame hath spoil'd the sweet world's taste,

That it yields nought, but shame, and bitterness.

Pand. Before the curing of a strong disease,

Even in the instant of repair and health,

The fit is strongest : evils that take leave,

On their departure most of all show evil.

What have you lost by losing of this day ?

Lew. All days of glory, joy, and happiness.

Pand. If you had won it, certainly, you had.

No, no: when fortune means to men most good,
She looks upon them with a threatening eye.
'Tis strange, to think how much King John hath lost

In this which he accounts so clearly one.
Are not you griev'd that Arthur is his prisoner?

Lew. As heartily, as he is glad he hath him.

Pand. Your mind is all as youthful as your blood.

Now hear me speak with a prophetic spirit;
For even the breath of what I mean to speak
Shall blow each dust, each straw, each little rub,
Out of the path which shall directly lead
Thy foot to England's throne; and therefore mark.
John hath seiz'd Arthur; and it cannot be,
That whiles warm life plays in that infant's veins,
The misplac'd John should entertain one hour,
One minute, nay, one quiet breath of rest.

A sceptre, snatch'd with an unruly hand,
Must be as boisterously maintain'd as gain'd;
And he, that stands upon a slippery place,
Makes nice of no vile hold to stay him up:
That John may stand, then Arthur needs must fall;
So be it, for it cannot be but so.

Lew. But what shall I gain by young Arthur's fall?

Pand. You, in the right of lady Blanch your wife,
May then make all the claim that Arthur did.

Lew. And lose it, life and all, as Arthur did.

Pand. How green you are, and fresh in this old world!

John lays you plots; the times conspire with you,
For be that steeps his safety in true blood
Shall find but bloody safety, and untrue.
This act, so evilly born, shall cool the hearts
Of all his people, and freeze up their zeal,
That none so small advantage shall step forth
To check his reign, but they will cherish it:
No natural exhalation in the sky,
No scape of nature, no distemper'd day,
No common wind, no custom'd event,
But they will pluck away his natural cause,
And call them meteors, prodigies, and signs,
Abortives, presages, and tongues of heaven,
Plainly denouncing vengeance upon John.

Lew. May be, he will not touch young Arthur's life,
But hold himself safe in his imprisonment.

Pand. O! sir, when he shall hear of your approach,
If that young Arthur be not gone already,
Even at that news he dies; and then the hearts
Of all his people shall revolt from him,
And kiss the lips of unacquainted change;
And pick strong matter of revolt, and wrath,
Out of the bloody fingers' ends of John.
Methinks, I see this a hurly all on foot:
And, O! what better matter breeds for you,
Than I have nam'd.—The bastard Faulconbridge
Is now in England ransacking the church,
Offending charity: if but a dozen French
Were there in arms, they would be as a <sup>b</sup> call
To train ten thousand English to their side;
Or as a little snow, tumbled about,
Anon becomes a mountain. O, noble Dauphin!
Go with me to the king. 'Tis wonderful,
What may be wrought out of their discontent.
Now that their souls are topful of offence,
For England go; I will whet on the king. [us go:

Lew. Strong reasons make strange <sup>c</sup> actions. Let
If you say, ay, the king will not say, no. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Northampton. A Room in the Castle.

Enter HUBERT and two Attendants.

Hub. Heat me these irons hot; and, look thou
Within the <sup>d</sup> arras: when I strike my foot [stand
Upon the bosom of the ground, rush forth,
And bind the boy, which you shall find with me,
Fast to the chair: be heedful. Hence, and watch.

I Attend. I hope, your warrant will bear out the deed.

Hub. Uncleanly scruples: fear not you: look to't.— [Exeunt Attendants.
Young lad, come forth; I have to say with you.

Enter ARTHUR.

Arth. Good morrow, Hubert.

Hub. Good morrow, little prince.

Arth. As little prince (having so great a title
To be more prince,) as may be.—You are sad.

Hub. Indeed, I have been merrier.

Arth. Mercy on me!

Methinks, no body should be sad but I:

Yet, I remember, when I was in France,
Young gentlemen would be as sad as night,
Only for wantonness. By my <sup>e</sup> christendom,
So I were out of prison, and kept sheep,
I <sup>2</sup> should be merry as the day is long;
And so I would be here, but that I doubt
My uncle practices more harm to me:
He is afraid of me, and I of him.
Is it my fault that I was Geoffrey's son?
No, indeed, is't not; and I would to heaven,
I were your son, so you would love me, Hubert.

Hub. [Aside.] If I talk to him, with his innocent prate
He will awake my mercy, which lies dead:
Therefore I will be sudden, and dispatch.

Arth. Are you sick, Hubert? you look pale to-day.
In sooth, I would you were a little sick;
That I might sit all night, and watch with you:
I warrant, I love you more than you do me.

Hub. [Aside.] His words do take possession of my bosom.—

Read here, young Arthur. [Showing a paper.]

[Aside.] How now, foolish rheum!
Turning dispiteous torture out of door?
I must be brief; lest resolution drop
Out at mine eyes in tender womanish tears.—
Can you not read it? is it not fair writ?

Arth. Too fairly, Hubert, for so foul effect.

Must you with hot irons burn out both mine eyes?

Hub. Young boy, I must.

Arth. And will you?

Hub. And I will.

Arth. Have you the heart? When your head did but ache,

I knit my handkerchief about your brows,
(The best I had, a princess wrought it me,)
And I did never ask it you again:
And with my hand at midnight held your head,
And, like the watchful minutes to the hour,
Still and anon cheer'd up the heavy time,
Saying, What lack you? and, Where lies your grief?
Or, What good love may I perform for you?
Many a poor man's son would have lain still,
And ne'er have spoke a loving word to you;
But you at your sick service had a prince.
Nay you may think my love was crafty love,

<sup>d</sup> Tapestry. — <sup>e</sup> "By my christendom," i. e., by my christening, my baptism.

And call it cunning: do, an if you will.
If heaven be pleas'd that you will use me ill,
Why, then you must.—Will you put out mine eyes?
These eyes, that never did, nor never shall
So much as frown on you?

Hub. I have sworn to do it,
And with hot irons must I burn them out.

Arth. Ah! none but in this iron age would do it.
The iron of itself, though <sup>a</sup>heat red-hot,
Approaching near these eyes would drink my tears,
And quench <sup>1</sup>this fiery indignation,
Even in the matter of mine innocence:
Nay, after that, consume away in rust,
But for containing fire to harm mine eye.
Are you more stubborn-hard than hammer'd iron?
An if an angel should have come to me,
And told me Hubert should put out mine eyes,
I would not have believ'd him; no tongue but Hubert's.

Hub. Come forth. [Stamps.]

Re-enter Attendants, with Cords, Irons, &c.

Do as I bid you do. [out,
Arth. O! save me, Hubert, save me! my eyes are Even with the fierce looks of these bloody men.

Hub. Give me the iron, I say, and bind him here.
<sup>2</sup>[Taking it.]

Arth. Alas! what need you be so boisterous-rough?
I will not struggle; I will stand stone-still.
For heaven's sake, Hubert, let me not be bound.
Nay, hear me, Hubert: drive these men away,
And I will sit as quiet as a lamb;
I will not stir, nor wince, nor speak a word,
Nor look upon the iron angrily.
Thrust but these men away, and I'll forgive you,
Whatever torment you do put me to.

Hub. Go, stand within: let me alone with him.

I Attend. I am best pleas'd to be from such a deed.

[Exeunt Attendants.]

Arth. Alas! I then have chid away my friend;
He hath a stern look, but a gentle heart.—
Let him come back, that his compassion may Give life to yours.

Hub. Come, boy, prepare yourself.

Arth. Is there no remedy?

Hub. None, but to lose your eyes.

Arth. O heaven!—that there were but a mote in
A grain, a dust, a gnat, a wandering hair, [yours,
Any annoyance in that precious sense!
Then, feeling what small things are boisterous there,
Your vile intent must needs seem horrible. [tongue.]

Hub. Is this your promise? go to; hold your
Arth. Hubert, the utterance of a brace of tongues
Must needs want pleading for a pair of eyes:

Let me not hold my tongue; let me not, Hubert:
Or, Hubert, if you will, cut out my tongue,
So I may keep mine eyes. O! spare mine eyes;
Though to no use, but still to look on you.

Lo! by my troth, the instrument is cold,
And would not harm me.

Hub. I can heat it, boy.

Arth. No, in good sooth; the fire is dead with grief,
Being create for comfort, to be us'd
In undeserv'd extremes: see else yourself;
There is no malice in this burning coal;
The breath of heaven hath blown his spirit out,
And strew'd repentant ashes on his head.

Hub. But with my breath I can revive it, boy.

Arth. And if you do, you will but make it bluish,
And glow with shame of your proceedings, Hubert:
Nay, it, perchance, will sparkle in your eyes;
And like a dog that is compell'd to fight,

Snatch at his master that doth <sup>b</sup>tarre him on.
All things that you should use to do me wrong,
Deny their office: only you do lack
That mercy, which fierce fire, and iron, <sup>3</sup>extend,
Creatures of note for mercy-lacking uses.

Hub. Well, see to live; I will not touch thine eyes
For all the treasure that thine uncle <sup>c</sup>owes:
Yet am I sworn, and I did purpose, boy,
With this same very iron to burn them out.

Arth. O! now you look like Hubert: all this while
You were disguised.

Hub. Peace! no more. Adieu.
Your uncle must not know but you are dead:
I'll fill these dogged spies with false reports;
And, pretty child, sleep doubtless, and secure,
That Hubert for the wealth of all the world
Will not offend thee.

Arth. O heaven!—I thank you, Hubert.

Hub. Silence! no more. Go <sup>d</sup>closely in with me;
Much danger do I undergo for thee. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room of State in the Palace.

Enter King JOHN, crowned; PEMBROKE, SALIS-BURY, and other Lords. The King takes his State.

K. John. Here once again we sit, once again crown'd,

And look'd upon, I hope, with cheerful eyes.

Pem. This once again, but that your highness pleas'd,

Was once <sup>e</sup>superfluous: you were crown'd before,
And that high royalty was ne'er pluck'd off;
The faiths of men ne'er stained with revolt;
Fresh expectation troubled not the land,
With any long'd-for change, or better state.

Sal. Therefore, to be possess'd with double pomp,
To <sup>f</sup>guard a title that was rich before,
To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,
To throw a perfume on the violet,
To smooth the ice, or add another hue
Unto the rainbow, or with taper-light
To seek the beauteous eye of heaven to garnish,
Is wasteful, and ridiculous excess.

Pem. But that your royal pleasure must be done,
This act is as an ancient tale new told,
And in the last repeating troublesome,
Being urged at a time unseasonable.

Sal. In this, the antique and well-noted face
Of plain old form is much disfigured;
And, like a shifted wind unto a sail,
It makes the course of thoughts to fetch about,
Startles and frights consideration,
Makes sound opinion sick, and truth suspected,
For putting on so new a fashion'd robe.

Pem. When workmen strive to do better than well,
They do confound their skill in <sup>g</sup>covetousness;
And, oftentimes excusing of a fault
Doth make the fault the worse by the excuse:
As patches, set upon a little breach,
Discredit more in hiding of the fault,
Than did the fault before it was so patch'd.

Sal. To this effect, before you were new-crown'd,
We breath'd our counsel; but it pleas'd your high-
To overbear it, and we are all well-pleas'd; [ness
Since all and every part of what we would,
Doth make a stand at what your highness will.

K. John. Some reasons of this double coronation I have possess'd you with, and think them strong; And more, more strong, <sup>1</sup> thus lessening my fear, I shall induce you with: mean time, but ask What you would have reform'd that is not well, And well shall you perceive, how willingly I will both hear and grant you your requests.

Pent. Then I, as one that am the tongue of these, To <sup>2</sup> sound the purposes of all their hearts, Both for myself and them, but, chief of all, Your safety, for the which myself and <sup>3</sup> they Bend their best studies, heartily request Th' enfranchisement of Arthur; whose restraint Doth move the murmuring lips of discontent To break into this dangerous argument:— If what in rest you have, in right you <sup>4</sup> hold, Why <sup>5</sup> should your fears, which, as they say, attend The steps of wrong, <sup>6</sup> then move you to mew up Your tender kinsman, and to choke his days With barbarous ignorance, and deny his youth The rich advantage of good exercise?— That the time's enemies may not have this To grace occasions, let it be our suit, That you have bid us ask his liberty; Which for our goods we do no farther ask, Than whereupon our weal, on <sup>7</sup> yours depending, Counts it your weal he have his liberty.

K. John. Let it be so: I do commit his youth

Enter HUBERT.

To your direction.—Hubert, what news with you?

[HUBERT <sup>6</sup> talks apart with the King.

Pem. This is the man should do the bloody deed: He show'd his warrant to a friend of mine. The image of a wicked heinous fault Lives in his eye: that close aspect of his Doth show the mood of a much-troubled breast; And I do fearfully believe 'tis done, What we so fear'd he had a charge to do.

Sal. The color of the king doth come and go, Between his purpose and his conscience, Like heralds' twixt two dreadful battles set: His passion is so ripe, it needs must break.

Pem. And when it breaks, I fear, will issue thence The foul corruption of a sweet child's death.

K. John. We cannot hold mortality's strong hand.— Good lords, although my will to give is living, The suit which you demand is gone and dead: He tells us, Arthur is deceas'd to-night.

Sal. Indeed, we fear'd his sickness was past cure.

Pem. Indeed, we heard how near his death he was, Before the child himself felt he was sick. This must be answer'd, either here, or hence. [mo?]

K. John. Why do you bend such solemn brows on Think you, I bear the shears of destiny? Have I commandment on the pulse of life?

Sal. It is apparent foul play; and 'tis shame, That greatness should so grossly offer it. So thrive it in your game; and so farewell.

Pem. Stay yet, lord Salisbury, I'll go with thee, And find th' inheritance of this poor child, His little kingdom of a forced grave. That blood which <sup>8</sup> ow'd the breadth of all this isle, Three foot of it doth hold: bad world the while. This must not be thus borne: this will break out To all our sorrows, and ere long, I doubt, [Exeunt Lords.

K. John. They burn in indignation. I repent: There is no sure foundation set on blood, No certain life achiev'd by others' death.

Enter a Messenger.

A fearful eye thou hast: where is that blood, That I have seen inhabit in those cheeks? So foul a sky clears not without a storm: Pour down thy weather.—How goes all in France?

Mess. From France to England.—Never such a For any foreign preparation, [power Was levied in the body of a land.

The copy of your speed is learn'd by them; For, when you should be told they do prepare, The tidings come that they are all arriv'd. [drunk?]

K. John. O! where hath our intelligence been Where hath it slept? Where is my mother's care, That such an army could be drawn in France, And she not hear of it?

Mess.

My liege, her ear Is stopp'd with dust: the first of April, died Your noble mother; and, as I hear, my lord, The lady Constance in a frenzy died Three days before: but this from rumor's tongue I idly heard; if true, or false, I know not.

K. John. Withhold thy speed, dreadful Occasion! O! make a league with me, till I have pleas'd My discontented peers.—What! mother dead? How wildly, then, walks my <sup>9</sup> estate in France!— Under whose conduct come those powers of France, That thou for truth giv'st out are landed here?

Mess. Under the Dauphin.

Enter the Bastard, and PETER of POMFRET.

K. John. Thou hast made me giddy With these ill-tidings.—Now, what says the world To your proceedings? do not seek to stuff My head with more ill news, for it is full.

Bast. But if you be afraid to hear the worst, Then let the worst, unheard, fall on your head.

K. John. Bear with me, cousin, for I was <sup>10</sup> amaz'd Under the tide; but now I breathe again Aloft the flood, and can give audience To any tongue, speak it of what it will.

Bast. How I have sped among the clergymen, The sums I have collected shall express: But as I travell'd hither through the land, I find the people strangely fantasied; Possess'd with rumors, full of idle dreams, Not knowing what they fear, but full of fear: And here's a prophet, that I brought with me From forth the streets of Pomfret, whom I found With many hundreds treading on his heels; To whom he sung, in rude harsh-sounding rhymes, That ere the next Ascension-day at noon, Your highness should deliver up your crown. [so?]

K. John. Thou idle dreamer, wherefore didst thou

Peter. Foreknowing that the truth will fall out so.

K. John. Hubert, away with him: imprison him; And on that day at noon, whereon, he says, I shall yield up my crown, let him be hang'd. Deliver him to <sup>11</sup> safety, and return, For I must use thee.—O my gentle cousin!

[Exit HUBERT, with PETER.

Hear'st thou the news abroad, who are arriv'd?

Bast. The French, my lord; men's mouths are full of it:

Besides, I met lord Bigot, and lord Salisbury, With eyes as red as new-enkindled fire, And others more, going to seek the grave Of Arthur, who, they say, is kill'd to-night On your suggestion.

K. John. Gentle kinsman, go, And thrust thyself into their companies.

<sup>e</sup> "Walks my estate," i. e., go my affairs.—<sup>f</sup> Confounded.—<sup>g</sup> This "prophet" was a hermit in great repute with the common people.—<sup>h</sup> "To safety," i. e., to safe custody.

I have a way to win their loves again :
Bring them before me.

Bast. I will seek them out.

K. John. Nay, but make haste; the better foot
O! let me have no subject enemies, [before.—
When adverse foreigners affright my towns
With dreadful pomp of stout invasion.
Be Mercury; set feathers to thy heels,
And fly like thought from them to me again.

Bast. The spirit of the time shall teach me speed.
[Exit.

K. John. Spoke like a spritful, noble gentleman.—
Go after him; for he, perhaps, shall need
Some messenger betwixt me and the peers,
And be thou he.

Mess. With all my heart, my liege. [Exit.

K. John. My mother dead!

Re-enter HUBERT.

Hub. My lord, they say, five moons were seen to-
Four fixed; and the fifth did whirl about [night:
The other four in wondrous motion.

K. John. Five moons?

Hub. Old men, and beldames, in the streets
Do prophesy upon it dangerously.

Young Arthur's death is common in their mouths,
And when they talk of him, they shake their heads,
And whisper one another in the ear;

And he that speaks, doth gripe the hearer's wrist,
Whilst he that hears, makes fearful action,

With wrinkled brows, with nods, with rolling eyes.
I saw a smith stand with his hammer, thus,

The whilst his iron did on the anvil cool,
With open mouth swallowing a tailor's news;

Who, with his shears and measure in his hand,
Standing on slippers, (which his nimble haste

Had falsely thrust upon contrary feet)
Told of a many thousand warlike French,

That were embattailed and rank'd in Kent.

Another lean, unwash'd artificer

Cuts off his tale, and talks of Arthur's death.

K. John. Why seek'st thou to possess me with these fears?

Why urgest thou so oft young Arthur's death?

Thy hand hath murder'd him: I had a mighty cause
To wish him dead, but thou hadst none to kill him.

Hub. Had none, my lord! why, did you not provoke me?

K. John. It is the curse of kings, to be attended
By slaves, that take their humors for a warrant

To break into the bloody house of life;

And, on the winking of authority,

To understand a law; to know the meaning

Of dangerous majesty, when, perchance, it frowns

More upon humor than advis'd respect.

Hub. Here is your hand and seal for what I did.

K. John. O! when the last account 'twixt heaven and earth

Is to be made, then shall this hand and seal

Witness against us to damnation.

How oft the sight of means to do ill deeds,

Makes ill deeds done! Had'st not thou been by,

A fellow by the hand of nature mark'd,

<sup>b</sup> Quoted, and sign'd, to do a deed of shame,

This murder had not come into my mind;

But, taking note of thy abhorrd aspect,

Finding thee fit for bloody villainy,

Apt, liable to be employ'd in danger,

I faintly broke with thee of Arthur's death;

And thou, to be endeared to a king,

Made it no conscience to destroy a prince.

Hub. My lord,—

K. John. Had'st thou but sheok thy head, or

When I spake darkly what I purposed;

Or turn'd an eye of doubt upon my face,

<sup>2</sup> Or bid me tell my tale in express words, [off,

Deep shame had struck me dumb, made me break

And those thy fears might have wrought fears in me:

But thou didst understand me by my signs,

And didst in signs again parley with <sup>3</sup> sign;

Yea, without stop, didst let thy heart consent,

And consequently thy rude hand to act

The deed which both our tongues held vile to name.

Out of my sight, and never see me more!

My nobles leave me; and my state is brav'd,

Even at my gates, with ranks of foreign powers:

Nay, in the body of this fleshly land,

This kingdom, this confine of blood and breath,

Hostility and civil tumult reigns

Between my conscience, and my cousin's death.

Hub. Arm you against your other enemies,

I'll make a peace between your soul and you.

Young Arthur is alive: this hand of mine

Is yet a maiden and an innocent hand,

Not painted with the crimson spots of blood.

Within this bosom never enter'd yet

The dreadful motion of a murderous thought,

And you have slander'd nature in my form;

Which, howsoever rude exteriorly,

Is yet the cover of a fairer mind,

Than to be butcher of an innocent child. [peers:

K. John. Doth Arthur live? O! haste thee to tho

Throw this report on their incensed rage,

And make them tame to their obedience.

Forgive me the comment that my passion made

Upon thy feature; for my rage was blind,

And foul imaginary eyes of blood

Presented thee more hideous than thou art.

O! answer not; but to my closet bring

The angry lords, with all expedient haste:

I conjure thee but slowly; run more fast. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. Before the Castle.

Enter ARTHUR, on the Walls.

Arth. The wall is high; and yet will I leap down.—

Good ground, be pitiful, and hurt me not!—

There's few, or none, do know me; if they did,

This ship-boy's semblance hath disguis'd me quite.

I am afraid; and yet I'll venture it.

If I get down, and do not break my limbs,

I'll find a thousand shifts to get away:

As good to die and go, as die and stay. [Leaps down.

O me! my uncle's spirit is in these stones.—

Heaven take my soul, and England keep my bones.

[Dies.

Enter PEMBROKE, SALISBURY, and BIGOT.

Sal. Lords, I will meet him at Saint Edmund's

It is our safety, and we must embrace [Bury:

This gentle offer of the perilous time.

Pem. Who brought that letter from the cardinal?

Sal. The count Melun, a noble lord of France;

Whose private missive of the Dauphin's love,

Is much more general than these lines import.

Big. To-morrow morning let us meet him then.

Sal. Or, rather then set forward: for 'twill be

Two long days' journey, lords, or <sup>d</sup> e'er we meet.

Enter the Bastard.

Bast. Once more to-day well met, <sup>e</sup> distemper'd

lords.

The king by me requests your presence straight,

Sal. The king hath dispossess'd himself of us:
We will not line his 'sin-betained cloak
With our pure honors, nor attend the foot
That leaves the print of blood where'er it walks.
Return, and tell him so: we know the worst.

Bast. Whate'er you think, good words, I think, were best.

Sal. Our griefs, and not our manners, <sup>a</sup>reason now.

Bast. But there is little reason in your grief;
Therefore, 'twere reason you had manners now.

Pem. Sir, sir, impatience hath his privilege.

Bast. 'Tis true; to hurt his master, no man else.
Sal. This is the prison. What is he lies here?

[Seeing ARTHUR.]

Pem. O death! made proud with pure and princely beauty,

The earth had not a hole to hide this deed.

Sal. Murder, as hating what himself hath done,
Doth lay it open to urge on revenge.

Big. Or when he doom'd this beauty to a grave,
Found it too precious-princely for a grave. [held,

Sal. Sir Richard, what think you? Have you be-
Or have you read, or heard? or could you think?

Or do you almost think, although you see,
That you do see? could thought, without this object,

Form such another? This is the very top,

The height, the crest, or crest unto the crest,

Of murder's arms: this is the bloodiest shame,

The wildest savagery, the vilest stroke,

That ever wall-cy'd wrath, or staring rage,

Presented to the tears of soft <sup>b</sup>remorse.

Pem. All murders past do stand excus'd in this;

And this, so sole and so unmatchable,

Shall give a holiness, a purity,

To the yet unbegotten sin of times;

And prove a deadly bloodshed but a jest,

Exemplary by this heinous spectacle.

Bast. It is a damned and a bloody work;

The graceless action of a heavy hand,

If that it be the work of any hand.

Sal. If that it be the work of any hand?—

We had a kind of light, what would ensue:

It is the shameful work of Hubert's hand;

The practice, and the purpose, of the king:

From whose obedience I forbid my soul,

Kneeling before this ruin of sweet life,

And breathing to his breathless excellence

The incense of a vow, a holy vow,

Never to taste the pleasures of the world,

Never to be infected with delight,

Nor conversant with ease and idleness,

Till I have set a glory to this <sup>2</sup>head,

By giving it the worship of revenge.

Pem. Big. Our souls religiously confirm thy words.

Enter HUBERT.

Hub. Lords, I am hot with haste in seeking you.

Arthur doth live: the king hath sent for you.

Sal. O! he is bold, and blushes not at death.—

Avant, thou hateful villain! get thee gone.

Hub. I am no villain.

Sal. Must I rob the law? [Drawing his sword.]

Bast. Your sword is bright, sir: put it up again.

Sal. Not till I sheath it in a murderer's skin.

Hub. Stand back, lord Salisbury; stand back, I

By heaven, I think, my sword's as sharp as yours. [say:]

I would not have you, lord, forget yourself,

Nor tempt the danger of my <sup>c</sup>true defence;

Lest I, by marking <sup>3</sup>but your rage, forget

Your worth, your greatness, and nobility. [Man?]

Big. Out, dunghill! dar'st thou brave a noble-

Hub. Not for my life; but yet I dare defend
My innocent life against an emperor.

Sal. Thou art a murderer.

Hub. Do not <sup>d</sup>prove me so;
Yet, I am none. Whose tongue so'er speaks false,
Not truly speaks; who speaks not truly lies.

Pem. Cut him to pieces.

Bast.

Keep the peace, I say.

Sal. Stand by, or I shall gall you, Faulconbridge.

Bast. Thou wert better gall the devil, Salisbury:

If thou but frown on me, or stir thy foot,

Or teach thy hasty spleen to do me shame,

I'll strike thee dead. Put up thy sword betime,

Or I'll so maul you and your toasting-iron,

That you shall think the devil is come from hell.

Big. What wilt thou do, renowned Faulcon-

Second a villain, and a murderer. [bridge?]

Hub. Lord Bigot, I am none.

Big. Who kill'd this prince?

<sup>4</sup>[Pointing to ARTHUR.]

Hub. 'Tis not an hour since I left him well:

I honor'd him, I lov'd him; and will weep

My date of life out for his sweet life's loss.

Sal. Trust not those cunning waters of his eyes,

For villainy is not without such rheum;

And he, long traded in it, makes it seem

Like rivers of <sup>e</sup>remorse and innocency.

Away, with me, all you whose souls abhor

Th' uncleanly saviors of a slaughter-house.

For I am stifled with this smell of sin.

Big. Away, Toward Bury: to the Dauphin there!

Pem. There, tell the king, he may inquire us out.

[Exeunt Lords.]

Bast. Here's a good world!—knew you of this

Beyond the infinite and boundless reach [fair work?]

Of mercy, if thou didst this deed of death,

Art thou damn'd, Hubert.

Hub. Do but hear me, sir.

Bast. Ha! I'll tell thee what;

Thou art damn'd as black—nay, nothing is so black;

Thou art more deep damn'd than prince Lucifer:

There is not yet so ugly a fiend of hell

As thou shalt be, if thou didst kill this child.

Hub. Upon my soul,—

Bast. If thou didst but consent

To this most cruel act, do but despair;

And if thou want'st a cord, the smallest thread

That ever spider twisted from her womb

Will serve to strangle thee; a rush will be a beam

To hang thee on: or would'st thou drown thyself,

Put but a little water in a spoon,

And it shall be as all the ocean,

Enough to stifle such a villain up.

I do suspect thee very grievously.

Hub. If I in act, consent, or sin of thought

Be guilty of the stealing that sweet breath,

Which was 'embounded in this beauteous clay,

Let hell want pains enough to torture me.

I left him well.

Bast. Go, bear him in thine arms.—

I am amaz'd, methinks; and lose my way

Among the thorns and dangers of this world,—

<sup>5</sup>[HUBERT takes up ARTHUR.]

How easy dost thou take all England up!

From forth this morsel of dead royalty,

The life, the right, and truth of all this realm

Is fled to heaven; and England now is left

To tug and scramble, and to part by the teeth

The <sup>h</sup>unow'd interest of proud swelling state.

<sup>4</sup> "Do not prove me so," i. e., do not provoke me, or try my patience so.—<sup>e</sup> Pity.—<sup>f</sup> Enclosed.—<sup>g</sup> Confounded.—<sup>h</sup> "The unow'd interest," i. e., the interest not now legally possessed by any one.

Now for the bare-pick'd bone of majesty
 Doth dogged war bristle his angry crest,
 And snarlth in the gentle eyes of peace:
 Now powers from home, and discontents at home,
 Meet in one line; and vast confusion waits,
 As doth a raven on a sick-fallen beast,
 The imminent decay of wrested pomp.
 Now happy he, whose cloak and <sup>a</sup>cineture can Hold out this tempest.—Bear away that child,
 And follow me with speed: I'll to the king.
 A thousand businesses are brief in hand,
 And heaven itself doth frown upon the land.
 [Exeunt: 1 HUBERT bearing out ARTHUR's body.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King JOHN, PANDULPH with the crown, and Attendants.

K. John. Thus have I yielded up into your hand
 The circle of my glory.

Pand. Take again. [Giving JOHN the Crown.]
 From this my hand, as holding of the pope,
 Your sovereign greatness and authority.

K. John. Now keep your holy word: go meet the French;

And from his holiness use all your power
 To stop their marches, 'fore we are inflam'd.
 Our discontented <sup>b</sup>counties do revolt,
 Our people quarrel with obedience,
 Swearing allegiance, and the love of soul,
 To stranger blood, to foreign royalty.
 This inundation of mistempered humor
 Rests by you only to be qualified:
 Then pause not; for the present time's so sick,
 That present medicine must be minister'd,
 Or overthrow incurable ensues.

Pand. It was my breath that blew this tempest up,
 Upon your stubborn usage of the pope;
 But since you are a gentle <sup>c</sup>convertite,

My tongue shall hush again this storm of war,
 And make fair weather in your blustering land.
 On this Ascension-day, remember well,
 Upon your oath of service to the pope,

Go I to make the French lay down their arms. [Exit.]

K. John. Is this Ascension-day? Did not the Say that before Ascension-day at noon, [prophet]
 My crown I should give off? Even so I have.

I did suppose it should be on constraint;
 But, heaven be thank'd, it is but voluntary.

Enter the Bastard.

Bast. All Kent hath yielded; nothing there holds
 But Dover castle: London hath receiv'd, [out,]
 Like a kind host, the Dauphin and his powers.
 Your nobles will not hear you, but are gone
 To offer service to your enemy;
 And wild amazement hurries up and down
 The little number of your doubtful friends.

K. John. Would not my lords return to me again,
 After they heard young Arthur was alive? [streets;]

Bast. They found him dead, and cast into the
 An empty casket, where the jewel of life
 By some damn'd hand was robb'd and ta'en away.

K. John. That villain Hubert told me he did live.

Bast. So, on my soul, he did, for aught he knew.
 But wherefore do you droop? why look you sad?
 Be great in act, as you have been in thought;
 Let not the world see fear, and <sup>2</sup>blank distrust,

Govern the motion of a kingly eye:
 Be stirring as the time; <sup>3</sup>meet fire with fire;
 Threaten the threatener, and outface the brow
 Of bragging horror: so shall inferior eyes,
 That borrow their behaviors from the great,
 Grow great by your example, and put on
 The dauntless spirit of resolution.
 Away! and glister like the god of war,
 When he intendeth to <sup>d</sup>become the field:
 Show boldness, and aspiring confidence.
 What! shall they seek the lion in his den,
 And fright him there? and make him tremble there?
 O! let it not be said.—<sup>4</sup>Courage; and run
 To meet displeasure further from the doors,
 And grapple with him ere he come so nigh.

K. John. The legate of the pope hath been with me,
 And I have made a happy peace with him;
 And he hath promis'd to dismiss the powers
 Led by the Dauphin.

Bast. O, inglorious league!
 Shall we, upon the footing of our land,
 Send fair-play <sup>5</sup>offers, and make compromise,
 Insinuation, parley, and base truce,
 To arms invasive? shall a beardless boy,
 A cocker'd silken wanton, brave our fields,
 And flesh his spirit in a warlike soil,
 Mocking the air with colors idly spread,
 And find no check? Let us, my liege, to arms:
 Perchance, the cardinal cannot make your peace;
 Or if he do, let it at least be said,
 They saw we had a purpose of defence. [time.]

K. John. Have thou the ordering of this present

Bast. Away then, with good courage; yet, I know,
 Our party may well <sup>6</sup>meet a prouder foe. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Plain, near St. Edmund's Bury.

Enter, in arms, LEWIS, SALISBURY, MELUN, PEMBROKE, BIGOT, and Soldiers.

Lew. My lord Melun, let this be copied out,
 And keep it safe for our remembrance.
 Return the <sup>7</sup>precedent to these lords again;
 That, having our fair order written down,
 Both they, and we, perusing o'er these notes,
 May know wherefore we took the sacrament,
 And keep our faiths firm and inviolable.

Sal. Upon our sides it never shall be broken.
 And, noble Dauphin, albeit we swear
 A voluntary zeal, and an unurg'd faith,
 To your proceedings; Yet, believe me, prince,
 I am not glad that such a sore of time
 Should seek a plaster by condemn'd revolt,
 And heal the inveterate canker of one wound,
 By making many. O! it grieves my soul,
 That I must draw this metal from my side
 To be a widow-maker; O! and there,
 Where honorable rescue, and defence,
 Cries out upon the name of Salisbury.
 But such is the infection of the time,
 That, for the health and physic of our right,
 We cannot deal but with the very hand
 Of stern injustice and confused wrong.—
 And is't not pity, O, my grieved friends!
 That we, the sons and children of this isle,
 Were born to see so sad an hour as this;
 Wherein we step after a stranger, march
 Upon her gentle bosom, and fill up
 Her enemies' ranks, (I must withdraw, and weep Upon the <sup>8</sup>thought of this enforced cause)
 To grace the gentry of a land remote,

<sup>a</sup> Girdle.—<sup>b</sup> "Counties," i. e., lords and nobility.—<sup>c</sup> Convert.

And follow unacquainted colors here?
 What, here?—O nation, that thou could'st remove!
 That Neptune's arms, who <sup>a</sup>clippeth thee about,
 Would bear thee from the knowledge of thyself,
 And grapple thee unto a pagan shore;
 Where these two Christian armies might combine
 The blood of malice in a vein of league,
 And not to spend it so unneighborly!

Lew. A noble temper dost thou show in this;
 And great affections wrestling in thy bosom
 Do make an earthquake of nobility.
 O! what a noble combat hast thou fought,
 Between compulsion, and a brave <sup>b</sup>respect!
 Let me wipe off this honorable dew,
 That silvery doth progress on thy cheeks.
 My heart hath melted at a lady's tears,
 Being an ordinary inundation;
 But this effusion of such manly drops,
 This shower, blown up by tempest of the soul,
 Startles mine eyes, and makes me more amaz'd
 Than had I seen the vaulty top of heaven
 Figur'd quite o'er with burning meteors.
 Lift up thy brow, renowned Salisbury,
 And with a great heart heave away this storm:
 Commend these waters to those baby eyes,
 That never saw the giant-world enrag'd;
 Nor met with fortune other than at feasts,
 Full <sup>c</sup>of warm blood, of mirth, of gossiping.
 Come, come; for thou shalt thrust thy hand as deep
 Into the purse of rich prosperity,
 As Lewis himself:—so, nobles, shall you all,
 That knit your sinews to the strength of mine.

Enter PANDULPH, attended.

And even <sup>c</sup>there, methinks, an angel spake:
 Look, where the holy legate comes apace,
 To give us warrant from the hand of heaven,
 And on our actions set the name of right
 With holy breath.

Pand.                    Hail, noble prince of France.
 The next is this:—king John hath reconcil'd Himself to Rome; his spirit is come in,
 That so stood out against the holy church,
 The great metropolis and see of Rome:
 Therefore, thy threaten'ing colors now wind up,
 And tame the savage spirit of wild war,
 That, like a lion foster'd up at hand,
 It may lie gently at the foot of peace,
 And be no farther harmful than in show.

Lew. Your grace shall pardon me; I will not back:
 I am too high-born to be <sup>d</sup>propertied,
 To be a secondary at control,
 Or useful serving man, and instrument,
 To any sovereign state throughout the world.
 Your breath first kindled the dead coal of wars
 Between this chastis'd kingdom and myself,
 And brought in matter that should feed this fire;
 And now 'tis far too huge to be blown out
 With that same weak wind which enkindled it.
 You taught me how to know the face of right,
 Acquainted me with interest <sup>e</sup>to this land,
 Yea, thrust this enterprize into my heart,
 And come ye now to tell me, John hath made
 His peace with Rome? What is that peace to me?
 I, by the honor of my marriage-bed,
 After young Arthur, claim this land for mine;
 And now it is half-conquer'd must I back,
 Because that John hath made his peace with Rome?
 Am I Rome's slave? What penny hath Rome borne,

What men provided, what munition sent,
 To underprop this action? is't not I,
 That undergo this charge? who else but I,
 And such as to my claim are liable,
 Sweat in this business, and maintain this war?
 Have I not heard these islanders shout out,
Vive le roy! as I have <sup>f</sup>bank'd their towns?
 Have I not here the best cards for the game,
 To win this easy match, play'd for a crown,
 And shall I now give o'er the yielded set?
 No, on my soul, it never shall be said.

Pand. You look but on the outside of this work.

Lew. Outside or inside, I will not return
 Till my attempt so much be glorified,
 As to my ample hope was promised
 Before I <sup>g</sup>drew this gallant head of war,
 And cull'd these fiery spirits from the world,
 To <sup>h</sup>outlook conquest, and to win renown
 Even in the jaws of danger and of death.—

[Trumpet sounds.]

What lusty trumpet thus doth summon us?

Enter the Bastard, attended.

Bast. According to the fair play of the world,
 Let me have audience: I am sent to speak.—
 My holy lord of Milan, from the king
 I come, to learn how you have dealt for him;
 And, as you answer, I do know the scope
 And warrant limited unto my tongue.

Pand. The Dauphin is too wilful-opposite,
 And will not temporize with my entreaties:
 He flatly says, he'll not lay down his arms.

Bast. By all the blood that ever fury breath'd,
 The youth says well.—Now, hear our English king,
 For thus his royalty doth speak in me.
 He is prepar'd; and reason, too, he should:
 This apish and unmannerly approach,
 This harness'd masque, and unadvised revel,
 This unheard sauciness <sup>i</sup>of boyish troops,
 The king doth smile at; and is well prepar'd
 To whip this dwarfish war, these pigmy arms,
 From out the circle of his territories.
 That hand, which had the strength, even at your door,
 To cudgel you, and make you <sup>j</sup>take the hatch;
 To dive like buckets in concealed wells;
 To crouch in litter of your stable planks;
 To lie like pawns lock'd up in chests and trunks;
 To hug with swine; to seek sweet safety out
 In vaults and prisons; and to thrill, and shake,
 Even at the <sup>k</sup>crowing of your nation's cock,
 Thinking his voice an armed Englishman:
 Shall that victorious hand be feeble here,
 That in your chambers gave you chastisement?
 No! Know, the gallant monarch is in arms;
 And like an eagle o'er his <sup>l</sup>airy towers,
 To souse annoyance that comes near his nest.—
 And you degenerate, you ingrate revolts,
 You bloody Neroes, ripping up the womb
 Of your dear mother England, blush for shame:
 For your own ladies, and pale-visag'd maids,
 Like Amazons come tripping after drums;
 Their thimbles into armed gauntlets chang'd,
 Their needl's to lances, and their gentle hearts
 To fierce and bloody inclination.

[peace:]

Lew. There end thy <sup>m</sup>brave, and turn thy face in
 We grant thou canst outcold us. Fare thee well:
 We hold our time too precious to be spent
 With such a <sup>n</sup>brabbl'.

<sup>a</sup> "Clippeth," i. e., embraceth.—<sup>b</sup> "Between compulsion, and a brave respect," i. e., between the necessity of a reform in the state, and the respect or love he felt for his country.—<sup>c</sup> "And even there," i. e., in what I have now said, "an angel spake:" for "Look," &c.—<sup>d</sup> Appropriated.—<sup>e</sup> "In.

Pand. Give me leave to speak.

Bast. No, I will speak.

Lew. We will attend to neither.—

Strike up the drums! and let the tongue of war
Plead for our interest, and our being here. [out;

Bast. Indeed, your drums, being beaten, will cry
And so shall you, being beaten. Do but start
An echo with the clamor of thy drum,
And even at hand a drum is ready brad'd,
That shall reverberate all as loud as thine;
Sound but another, and another shall,
As loud as thine, rattle the welkin's ear,
And mock the deep-mouth'd thunder: for at hand
(Not trusting to this halting legate here, Whom he hath us'd rather for sport than need)
Is warlike John; and in his forehead sits
A bare-ribb'd death, whose office is this day
To feast upon whole thousands of the French.

Lew. Strike up our drums to find this danger out.

Bast. And thou shalt find it, Dauphin, do not doubt. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Field of Battle.

Alarums. Enter King JOHN and HUBERT.

K. John. How goes the day with us? O! tell me, Hubert.

Hub. Badly, I fear. How fares your majesty?

K. John. This fever, that hath troubled me so long,
Lies heavy on me: O! my heart is sick.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, your valiant kinsman, Faulconbridge,

Desires your majesty to leave the field,
And send him word by me which way you go.

K. John. Tell him, toward Swinstead, to the abbey there.

Mess. Be of good comfort; for the great supply,
That was expected by the Dauphin here,
Are wreck'd three nights ago on Goodwin sands:
This news was brought to Richard but even now.
The French fight coldly, and retire themselves.

K. John. Ah me! this tyrant fever burns me up,
And will not let me welcome this good news.
Set on toward Swinstead; to my litter straight:
Weakness possesseth me, and I am faint. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same. Another Part of the Same.

Enter SALISBURY, PEMBROKE, BIGOT, and Others.

Sal. I did not think the king so stor'd with friends.

Pem. Up once again; put spirit in the French:
If they miscarry, we miscarry too.

Sal. That misbegotten devil, Faulconbridge,

In spite of spite, alone upholds the day. [field.

Enter MELUN wounded, and led by Soldiers.

Mel. Lead me to the revolts of England here.

Sal. When we were happy we had other names.

Pem. It is the count Melun.

Sal. Wounded to death.

Mel. Fly, noble English; you are bought and <sup>1</sup>Untread the road-way of rebellion, [<sup>2</sup>sold:

And welcome home again discarded faith.

Seek out king John, and fall before his feet;

For if the French be lords of this loud day,

<sup>3</sup>He means to recompense the pains you take,

By cutting off your heads. Thus hath he sworn,

And I with him, and many more with me,

Upon the altar at Saint Edmund's Bury;
Even on that altar, where we swore to you
Dear amity and everlasting love.

Sal. May this be possible? may this be true?

Mel. Have I not hideous death within my view,
Retaining but a quantity of life,

Which bleeds away, even as a form of wax

<sup>4</sup>Resolveth from his figure 'gainst the fire?

What in the world should make me now deceive,

Since I must lose the use of all deceit?

Why should I then be false, since it is true

That I must die here, and live hence by truth?

I say again, if Lewis do win the day,

He is forsworn, if e'er those eyes of yours

Behold another day break in the east:

But even this night, whose black contagious breath

Already smokes above the burning crest

Of the old, feeble, and day-wearied sun,

Even this ill night, your breathing shall expire,

Paying the fine of rated treachery,

Even with a treacherous fine of all your lives,

If Lewis by your assistance win the day.

Commend me to one Hubert, with your king;

The love of him,—and this respect besides,

For that my grandsire was an Englishman,—

Awakes my conscience to confess all this.

In lieu whereof, I pray you, bear me hence

From forth the noise and rumor of the field;

Where I may think the remnant of my thoughts

In peace, and part this body and my soul

With contemplation and devout desires.

Sal. We do believe thee, and beshrew my soul,

But I do love the favor and the form

Of this most fair occasion, by the which

We will untread the steps of damned flight;

And, like a bated and retired flood,

Leaving our <sup>5</sup>rankness and irregular course,

Stoop low within those bounds we have o'erlook'd,

And calmly run on in obedience,

Even to our ocean, to our great king John.—

My arm shall give thee help to bear thee hence,

For I do see the cruel pangs of death [flight,

And happy <sup>7</sup>newness, that intends old right.

[Exeunt, leading off MELUN.

SCENE V.—The Same. The French Camp.

Enter LEWIS and his Train.

Lew. The sun of heaven, methought, was loath to
But stay'd, and made the western welkin blush, [set,
When English measur'd backward their own ground,
In faint retire. O! bravely came we off,
When with a volley of our needless shot,
After such bloody toil we bid good night,
And wound our tattering colors clearly up,
Last in the field, and almost lords of it!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Where is my prince, the Dauphin?

Lew.

Here.—What news?

Mess. The count Melun is slain: the English lords,
By his persuasion, are again fallen off;

And your <sup>8</sup>supplies which you have wished so long,
Are cast away, and sunk, on Goodwin sands.

Lew. Ah, foul <sup>9</sup>shrewd news!—Beshrew thy very
I did not think to be so sad to-night, [heart!

As this hath made me.—Who was he, that said,

King John did fly an hour or two before

The stumbling night did part our weary powers?

Mess. Whoever spoke it, it is true, my lord.

ness.—<sup>5</sup> Innovation.—<sup>6</sup> Bad.

Lenc. Well; keep good <sup>a</sup> quarter, and good care,
The day shall not be up so soon as I, [to-night;
To try the fair adventure of to-morrow. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—An open Place in the Neighborhood of Swinstead-Abbey.

Enter the Bastard and HUBERT, severally.

Hub. Who's there? speak, ho! speak quickly,

Bast. A friend.—What art thou? [or I shoot.

Hub. Of the part of England.

Bast. Whither dost thou go?

Hub. What's that to thee? Why may not I deof thine affairs, as well as thou of mine?

Bast. Hubert, I think.

Hub. Thou hast a <sup>b</sup> perfect thought:

I will, upon all hazards, well believe
Thou art my friend, that know'st my tongue so well.
Who art thou?

Bast. Who thou wilt: and, if thou please,
Thou may'st befriend me so much, as to think
I come one way of the Plantagenets. [night,

Hub. Unkind remembrance! thou, and cyeless
Have done me shame.—Brave soldier, pardon me,
That any accent breaking from thy tongue
Should 'scape the true acquaintance of mine ear.

Bast. Come, come; <sup>c</sup> sans compliment, what news abroad?

Hub. Why, here walk I, in the black brow of night,
To find you out.

Bast. Brief, then; and what's the news?

Hub. O! my sweet sir, news fitting to the night,
Black, fearful, comfortless, and horrible.

Bast. Show me the very wound of this ill news:
I am no woman; I'll not swoon at it.

Hub. The king, I fear, is poison'd by a monk:
I left him almost speechless, and broke out
To acquaint you with this evil, that you might
The better arm you to the sudden time,
Than if you had at <sup>d</sup> leisure known of this.

Bast. How did he take it? who did taste to him?

Hub. A monk, I tell you; a resolved villain,
Whose bowels suddenly burst out: the king
Yet speaks, and, peradventure, may recover. [ty?

Bast. Whom didst thou leave to tend his majes-

Hub. Why, know you not? the lords are all come
And brought prince Henry in their company; [back,
At whose request the king hath pardon'd them,
And they are all about his majesty.

Bast. Withhold thine indignation, mighty heaven,
And tempt us not to bear above our power.
I'll tell thee, Hubert, half my power this night,
Passing these flats, are taken by the tide;
These Lincoln washes have devoured them:
Myself well-mounted hardly have escap'd.
Away, before: conduct me to the king;
I doubt, he will be dead or ere I come. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—The Orchard of Swinstead-Abbey.

Enter Prince HENRY, SALISBURY, and BIGOT.

P. Hen. It is too late: the life of all his blood
Is touch'd corruptibly; and his pure brain
(Which some suppose the soul's frail dwelling-house)
Doth, by the idle comments that it makes,
Foretell the ending of mortality.

Enter PEMBROKE.

Pem. His highness yet doth speak; and holds
That being brought into the open air, [belief,

It would allay the burning quality
Of that fell poison which assaileth him.

P. Hen. Let him be brought into the orchard here.—
Doth he still rage? [Exit BIGOT.

Pem. He is more patient

Than when you left him: even now he sung.

P. Hen. O, vanity of sickness! fierce extremes
In their continuance will not feel themselves.
Death, having prey'd upon the outward parts,
Leaves them <sup>1</sup> unvisited; and his siege is now
Against the mind, the which he pricks and wounds
With many legions of strange fantasies,
Which, in their throng and press to that last hold,
Confound themselves. 'Tis strange that death should
I am the cygnet to this pale faint swan, [sing.
Who chants a doleful hymn to his own death,
And from the organ-pipe of frailty sings
His soul and body to their lasting rest.

Sal. Be of good comfort, prince; for you are born
To set a form upon that <sup>e</sup> indigest,
Which he hath left so shapeless and so rude.

Re-enter BIGOT and Attendants: King JOHN brought in a Chair.

K. John. Ay, marry, now my soul hath elbow-
It would not out at windows, nor at doors. [room;
There is so hot a summer in my bosom,
That all my bowels crumble up to dust:
I am a scribbled form, drawn with a pen
Upon a parchment, and against this fire
Do I shrink up.

P. Hen. How fares your majesty?

K. John. Poison'd,—ill-fare;—dead, forsook, cast
And none of you will bid the winter come, [off,
To thrust his icy fingers in my maw;
Nor let my kingdom's rivers take their course
Through my burn'd bosom; nor entreat the north
To make his bleak winds kiss my parched lips,
And comfort me with cold.—I do not ask you much:
I beg cold comfort; and you are so <sup>f</sup> strait,
And so ingrateful, you deny me that.

P. Hen. O, that there were some virtue in my
That might relieve you! [tears,

K. John. The salt in them is hot.—
Within me is a hell; and there the poison
Is, as a fiend, confin'd to tyrannize
On unreprieveable condemned blood.

Enter the Bastard.

Bast. O! I am scalded with my violent motion,
And <sup>g</sup> spleen of speed to see your majesty.

K. John. O cousin! thou art come to set mine
The tackle of my heart is crack'd and burn'd; [eye.
And all the shrouds, wherewith my life should sail,
Are turned to one thread, one little hair:
My heart hath one poor string to stay it by,
Which holds but till thy news be uttered,
And then all this thou seest is but a clod,
And <sup>2</sup> model of confounded royalty.

Bast. The Dauphin is preparing hitherward,
Where, heaven he knows, how we shall answer him;
For, in a night, the best part of my power,
As I upon advantage did remove,
Were in the washes, all unwarily,
Devoured by the unexpected flood. [King JOHN dies.

Sal. You breathe these dead news in as dead an ear.—

My liege! my lord!—but now a king, now thus.

P. Hen. Even so must I run on, and even so stop.
What surety of the world, what hope, what stay,
When this was now a king, and now is clay?

Bast. Art thou gone so? I do but stay behind,

fect," i. e., well-informed.—<sup>c</sup> Without.—<sup>d</sup> "At leisure," i. e., after some delay.

To do the office for thee of revenge,
 And then my soul shall wait on thee to heaven,
 As it on earth hath been thy servant still.—
 Now, now, you stars, that move in your right spheres,
 Where be your powers? Show now your mended
 And instantly return with me again, [faiths,
 To push destruction, and perpetual shame,
 Out of the weak door of our fainting land.
 Straight let us seek, or straight we shall be sought:
 The Dauphin rages at our very heels.

Sal. It seems you know not, then, so much as we.
 The cardinal Pandulph is within at rest,
 Who half an hour since came from the Dauphin,
 And brings from him such offers of our peace
 As we with honor and respect may take,
 With purpose presently to leave this war.

Bast. He will the rather do it, when he sees Ourselves well sinew'd to our 'own defence.

Sal. Nay, it is in a manner done already;
 For many carriages he hath despatch'd
 To the sea-side, and put his cause and quarrel
 To the disposing of the cardinal:
 With whom yourself, myself, and other lords,
 If you think meet, this afternoon will post
 To consummate this business happily.

Bast. Let it be so.—And you, my noble prince,
 With other princes that may best be spar'd,
 Shall wait upon your father's funeral.

P. Hen. At Worcester must his body be interr'd;
 For so he will'd it.

Bast. Thither shall it then.
 And happily may your sweet self put on
 The lineal state and glory of the land:
 To whom, with all submission, on my knee,
 I do bequeath my faithful services,
 And true subjection everlastingly.

Sal. And the like tender of our love we make,
 To rest without a spot for evermore. [thanks,

P. Hen. I have a kind soul, that would give you
 And knows not how to do it, but with tears.

Bast. O! let us pay the time but needful woe,
 Since it hath been before hand with our griefs.—
 This England never did, nor never shall,
 Lie at the proud foot of a conqueror,
 But when it first did help to wound itself.
 Now these, her princes, are come home again,
 Come the three corners of the world in arms, [rue,
 And we shall shock them. Nought shall make us
 If England to itself do rest but true.

[Exeunt.

HENRY PERCY, his Son.

LORD ROSS. LORD WILLOUGHBY. LORD FITZWATER.
BISHOP OF CARLISLE. Abbot of Westminster.
LORD MARSHAL; and another Lord.
SIR PIERCE OF EXTON. SIR STEPHEN SCROOP.
Captain of a Band of Welchmen.

QUEEN TO KING RICHARD.
DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER.
DUCHESS OF YORK.
Lady attending the Queen.

Lords, Heralds, Officers, Soldiers, <sup>4</sup>Gardeners, Keeper, Messenger, Groom, and other Attendants.
SCENE, dispersedly in England and Wales.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King RICHARD, attended; JOHN OF GAUNT, and other Nobles, with him.

K. Rich. Old John of Gaunt, time-honor'd Lancaster, Hast thou, according to thy oath and <sup>a</sup>band,

Brought hither Henry Hereford, thy bold son,
Here to make good the boisterous late appeal,
Which then our leisure would not let us hear,
Against the duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?

Gaunt. I have, my liege. [him,

K. Rich. Tell me, moreover, hast thou sounded
If he appeal the duke on ancient malice,
Or worthily, as a good subject should,

<sup>a</sup> Bond.

On some known ground of treachery in him?

Gaunt. As near as I could sift him on that art—
On some apparent danger seen in him, [gument,
Aim'd at your highness; no inveterate malice.

K. Rich. Then call them to our presence: face to face,

And frowning brow to brow, ourselves will hear
Th' accuser, and th' accused, freely speak.—

[Exeunt some Attendants.
High-stomach'd are they both, and full of ire,
In rage deaf as the sea, hasty as fire.

Re enter Attendants with BOLINGBROKE and NORFOLK.

Boling. <sup>b</sup> Full many years of happy days befall
My gracious sovereign, my most loving liege!

Nor. Each day still better other's happiness;
Until the heavens, envying earth's good hap,
Add an immortal title to your crown!

[us,
K. Rich. We thank you both: yet one but flatters

As well appeareth by the cause you <sup>a</sup>come;
Namely, to <sup>b</sup>appeal each other of high treason.
Cousin of Hereford, what dost thou object
Against the duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?

Boling. First, heaven be the record to my speech!

In the devotion of a subject's love,
Tendering the precious safety of my prince,
And free from <sup>c</sup>wrath or misbegotten hate,
Come I appellat to this princely presence.—
Now, Thomas Mowbray, do I turn to thee,
And mark my greeting well; for what I speak,
My body shall make good upon this earth,
Or my divine soul answer it in heaven.
Thou art a traitor, and a miscreant;
Too good to be <sup>d</sup>so, and too bad to live,
Since the more fair and crystal is the sky,
The uglier seem the clouds that in it fly.
Once more, the more to aggravate the note,
With a foul traitor's name stuff I thy throat;
And wish, (so please my sovereign) ere I move,
What my tongue speaks, my <sup>e</sup>right-drawn sword may prove.

Nor. Let not my cold words here accuse my zeal.

'Tis not the trial of a woman's war,
The bitter clamor of two eager tongues,
Can arbitrate this cause betwixt us twain:
The blood is hot that must be cool'd for this;
Yet can I not of such tame patience boast,
As to be hush'd, and nought at all to say.
First, the fair reverence of your highness curbs me
From giving reins and spurs to my free speech,
Which else would post, until it had return'd
These terms of treason doubled down his throat.
Setting aside his high blood's royalty,
And let him be no kinsman to my liege,
I do defy him, and I spit at him;
Call him a slanderous coward, and a villain:
Which to maintain I would allow him odds,
And meet him, were I tied to run a-foot
Even to the frozen ridges of the Alps,
Or any other ground <sup>f</sup>inhabitable
Where ever Englishman durst set his foot.
Moen time, let this defend my loyalty:—
By all my hopes, most falsely doth he lie. [gaze,

Boling. Pale trembling coward, there I throw my Disclaiming here the kindred of the king;
And lay aside my high blood's royalty,
Which fear, not reverence, makes thee to except:
If guilty dread have left thee so much strength,
As to take up mine honor's pawn, then stoop.
By that and all the rites of knighthood else,
Will I make good against thee, arm to arm,
What I have spoke, or thou canst worse devise.

Nor. I take it up; and, by that sword I swear,
Which gently laid my knighthood on my shoulder,
I'll answer thee in any fair degree,
Or chivalrous design of knightly trial:
And, when I mount, alive may I not light,
If I be traitor, or unjustly fight! [charge?

K. Rich. What doth our cousin lay to Mowbray's
It must be great, that can <sup>h</sup>inherit us

So much as of a thought of ill in him. [true:—

Boling. Look, what I speak, my life shall prove it
That Mowbray hath receiv'd eight thousand nobles,
In name of lendings for your highness' soldiers,
The which he hath detain'd for <sup>i</sup>lewd employments,
Like a false traitor, and injurious villain.
Besides, I say, and will in battle prove,

Or here, or elsewhere, to the furthest verge
That ever was survey'd by English eye,
That all the treasons, for these eighteen years
Complotted and contriv'd in this land,
Fetch from false Mowbray their first head and spring.
Farther, I say, and farther will maintain
Upon his bad life to make all this good,
That he did plot the duke of Gloucester's death;
<sup>b</sup>Suggest his soon-believing adversaries,
And, consequently, like a traitor coward,
Shed'd out his innocent soul through streams of blood:
Which blood, like sacrificing Abel's, cries,
Even from the tongueless caverns of the earth,
To me for justice, and rough chastisement;
And, by the glorious worth of my descent,
This arm shall do it, or this life be spent.

K. Rich. How high a pitch his resolution soars!—
Thomas of Norfolk, what say'st thou to this?

Nor. O! let my sovereign turn away his face,
And bid his ears a little while be deaf,
Till I have told this <sup>j</sup>slander of his blood,
How God, and good men, hate so foul a liar.

K. Rich. Mowbray, impartial are our eyes, and ears:

Were he my brother, nay, my kingdom's heir,
As he is but my father's brother's son,
Now by my sceptre's awe I make a vow,
Such neighbor nearness to our sacred blood
Should nothing privilege him, nor partialize
The unstooping firmness of my upright soul.
He is our subject, Mowbray, so art thou:
Free speech and fearless, I to thee allow.

Nor. Then, Bolingbroke, as low as to thy heart,
Through the false passage of thy throat, thou liest.
Three parts of that receipt I had for Calais,
Disburs'd I duly to his highness' soldiers:
The other part reserv'd I by consent;
For that my sovereign liege was in my debt,
Upon remainder of a <sup>k</sup>clear account,
Since last I went to France to fetch his queen.
Now, swallow down that lie.—For Gloucester's death,
I slew him not; but to mine own disgrace,
Neglected my sworn duty in that case.—
For you, my noble lord of Lancaster,
The honorable father to my foe,
Once did I lay an ambush for your life,
A trespass that doth vex my grieved soul;
But, ere I last receiv'd the sacrament,
I did confess it, and exactly begg'd
Your grace's pardon, and, I hope, I had it.
This is my fault: as for the rest <sup>l</sup>appeal'd,
It issues from the rancor of a villain,
A recreant and most degenerate traitor;
Which in myself I boldly will defend,
And interchangeably hurl down my gage
Upon this <sup>m</sup>overweening traitor's foot,
To prove myself a loyal gentleman
Even in the best blood chamber'd in his bosom.
In haste whereof, most heartily I pray
Your highness to assign our trial day. [me.

K. Rich. Wrath-kindled gentleman, be rul'd by Let's purge this choler without letting blood:
This we prescribe, though no physician;
Deep malice makes too deep incision.
Forget, forgive; conclude, and be agreed;
Our doctors say this is no month to bleed.—
Good uncle, let this end where it begun;
We'll calm the duke of Norfolk, you your son.

Gaunt. To be a make-peace shall become my age.—
Throw down, my son, the duke of Norfolk's gage.

<sup>h</sup> Prompt.—<sup>i</sup> "This slander of his blood," i. e., this reproach to his ancestry.—<sup>j</sup> Charged.—<sup>k</sup> Arrogant.

K. Rich. And, Norfolk, throw down his.

Gaunt. When, Harry? when?

Obedience bids, I should not bid again. [no <sup>a</sup>boot.

K. Rich. Norfolk, throw down; we bid; there is

Nor. Myself I throw, dread sovereign, at thy foot.

My life thou shalt command, but not my shame:

The one my duty owes; but my fair name,

Despite of death that lives upon my grave,

To dark dishonor's use thou shalt not have.

I am disgrac'd, impeach'd, and baffled here;

Pierc'd to the soul with slander's venom'd spear;

The which no balm can cure, but his heart-blood

Which breath'd this poison.

K. Rich. Rage must be withstood.

Give me his gage:—lions make <sup>b</sup>leopards tame.

Nor. Yea, but not change his spots: take but my shame,

And I resign my gage. My dear, dear lord,

The purest treasure mortal times afford

Is spotless reputation; that away,

Men are but gilded loam, or painted clay.

A jewel in a ten times barr'd-up chest

Is a bold spirit in a loyal breast.

Mine honor is my life; both grow in one:

Take honor from me, and my life is done.

Then, dear my liege, mine honor let me try;

In that I live, and for that will I die. [begin.

K. Rich. Cousin, throw down your gage: do you

Boling. O! God defend my soul from such deep sin.

Shall I seem crest-fall'n in my father's sight?

Or with pale beggar-fear impeach my height

Before this outlar'd dastard? Ere my tongue

Shall wound mine honor with such feeble wrong,

Or sound so base a parle, my teeth shall tear

The slavish motive of recanting fear,

And spit it bleeding in his high disgrace,

Where shame doth harbor, even in Mowbray's face.

[Exit GAUNT.

K. Rich. We were not born to sue, but to command:

Which since we cannot do to make you friends.

Be ready, as your lives shall answer it,

At Coventry, upon Saint Lambert's day.

There shall your swords and lances arbitrate

The swelling difference of your settled hate:

Since we cannot <sup>a</sup>atone you, we shall see

Justice <sup>d</sup>design the victor's chivalry.—

Lord Marshal, command our officers at arms

Be ready to direct these home-alarms. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in the Duke of LANCASTER'S Palace.

Enter GAUNT, and Dutchess of GLOSTER.

Gaunt. Alas! the <sup>e</sup>part I had in Gloster's blood

Doth more solicit me, than your exclams,

To stir against the butchers of his life:

But since correction lieth in those hands,

Which made the fault that we cannot correct,

Put we our quarrel to the will of heaven;

Who when <sup>1</sup>they see the hours ripe on earth,

Will ruin hot vengeance on offenders' heads.

Duch. Finds brotherhood in thee no sharper spur?

Hath love in thy old blood no living fire?

Edward's seven sons, whereof thyself art one,

Were as seven phials of his sacred blood,

Or seven fair branches springing from one root:

Some of those seven are dried by nature's course,

Some of those branches by the destinies cut;

But Thomas, my dear lord, my life, my Gloster,

<sup>a</sup> "No boot," i. e., no alternative for thee.—<sup>b</sup> An allusion to the crest of Norfolk, which was a golden leopard.—<sup>c</sup> Reconcile.—<sup>d</sup> "Design," i. e., show; mark out.—<sup>e</sup> "The part I had in," i. e., the relationship I held to.

One phial full of Edward's sacred blood,

One flourishing branch of his most royal root,

Is crack'd, and all the precious liquor spilt;

Is crack'd down, and his summer leaves all faded,

By envy's hand, and murder's bloody axe.

Al! Gaunt, his blood was thine: that bed, that womb,

That metal, that self-mould, that fashion'd thee,

Made him a man; and though thou liv'st, and breath'st,

Yet art thou slain in him. Thou dost 'consent

In some large measure to thy father's death,

In that thou seest thy wretched brother die,

Who was the model of thy father's life.

Call it not patience, Gaunt; it is despair:

In suffering thus thy brother to be slaughter'd,

Thou show'st the naked pathway to thy life,

Teaching stern murder how to butcher thee.

That which in mean men we entitle patience,

Is pale cold cowardice in noble breasts.

What shall I say? to safeguard thine own life,

The best way is to venge my Gloster's death.

Gaunt. God's is the quarrel; for God's substitute,

His deputy anointed in his sight,

Hath caus'd his death; the which, if wrongfully,

Let heaven revenge, for I may never lift

An angry arm against his minister.

Duch. Where then, alas! may I complain myself?

Gaunt. To God, the widow's champion and defence.

Duch. Why then, I will.—Farewell, <sup>2</sup>farewell, old

Thou go'st to Coventry, there to behold [Gaunt.

Our cousin Hereford and fell Mowbray fight.

O! sit my husband's wrongs on Hereford's spear,

That it may enter butcher Mowbray's breast;

Or if misfortune miss the first career,

Be Mowbray's sins so heavy in his bosom,

That they may break his foaming courser's back,

And throw the rider headlong in the lists,

A catiff <sup>3</sup>recreant to my cousin Hereford.

Farewell, old Gaunt: thy sometime brother's wife

With her companion grief must end her life.

Gaunt. Sister, farewell: I must to Coventry.

As much good stay with thee, as go with me!

Duch. Yet one word more.—Grief boundeth where it falls,

Not with the empty hollowness, but weight:

I take my leave before I have begun,

For sorrow ends not when it seemeth done.

Commend me to my brother, Edmund York.

Lo! this is all:—nay, yet depart not so;

Though this be all, do not so quickly go;

I shall remember more. Bid him—O! what?—

With all good speed at <sup>4</sup>Plashy visit me.

Alack! and what shall good old York there see,

But empty lodgings and unfurnish'd walls,

Unpeopled <sup>5</sup>offices, untrodden stones?

And what hear there for welcome, but my groans?

Therefore commend me; let him not come there,

To seek out sorrow that dwells every where.

Desolate, <sup>6</sup>desperate, will I hence, and die:

The last leave of thee takes my weeping eye.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Gosford Green, near Coventry.

Lists set out, and a Throne. Heralds, &c., attending.

Enter the Lord Marshal, and AUMERLE.

Mar. My lord Aumerle, is Harry Hereford arm'd?

Aum. Yea, at all points, and longs to enter in.

Mar. The duke of Norfolk, spitefully and bold, Stays but the summons of the appellant's trumpet.

<sup>1</sup> Assent.—<sup>2</sup> "A catiff recreant," i. e., a villain crying for mercy.—<sup>3</sup> "At Plashy," i. e., at the house of the Dutchess.—<sup>4</sup> "Unpeopled offices," i. e., unfurnished store-rooms.

Aum. Why then, the champions are prepar'd, and
For nothing but his majesty's approach. [stay]

Flourish. Enter KING RICHARD, who takes his seat on his Throne; GAUNT, BUSHY, BAGOT, GREEN, and others, who take their places. A Trumpet is sounded, and answered by another Trumpet within. Then enter NORFOLK in armor, preceded by a Herald.

K. Rich. Marshal, demand of yonder champion
The cause of his arrival here in arms:
Ask him his name; and orderly proceed
To swear him in the justice of his cause. [art,

Mar. In God's name, and the king's, say who thou
And why thou com'st thus knightly clad in arms:
Against what man thou com'st, and what thy quarrel.
Speak truly, on thy knighthood, and thine oath,
As so defend thee heaven, and thy valor! [folk;

Nor. My name is Thomas Mowbray, duke of Nor-
Who hither come engaged by my oath,
(Which, God<sup>a</sup> defend, a knight should violate!)
Both to defend my loyalty and truth,
To God, my king, and my succeeding issue,
Against the duke of Hereford that<sup>b</sup> appeals me;
And, by the grace of God and this mine arm,
To prove him, in defending of myself,
A traitor to my God, my king, and me:
And, as I truly fight, defend me heaven!

Trumpets sound. Enter BOLINGBROKE, in armor, preceded by a Herald.

K. Rich. Marshal, ask yonder knight in arms,
Both who he is, and why he cometh hither
Thus plated in habiliments of war;
And formally, according to our law,
Depose him in the justice of his cause. [hither,

Mar. What is thy name, and wherefore com'st thou
Before King Richard in his royal lists?
Against whom com'st thou? and what is thy quarrel?
Speak like a true knight; so defend thee heaven!

Boling. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Am I; who ready here do stand in arms,
To prove by God's grace, and my body's valor,
In lists, on Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk,
That he's a traitor, foul and dangerous,
To God of heaven, king Richard, and to me;
And, as I truly fight, defend me heaven!

Mar. On pain of death no person be so bold,
Or daring hardy, as to touch the lists;
Except the marshal, and such officers
Appointed to direct these fair designs. [hand,

Boling. Lord marshal, let me kiss my sovereign's
And bow my knee before his majesty:
For Mowbray and myself are like two men
That vow a long and weary pilgrimage;
Then let us take a ceremonious leave,
And loving farewell of our several friends. [ness,

Mar. The appellant in all duty greets your high-
And craves to kiss your hand, and take his leave.

K. Rich. We will descend, and fold him in our Cousin of Hereford, as thy cause is right, [arms.
So be thy fortune in this royal fight.
Farewell, my blood; which if to-day thou shed,
Lament we may, but not revenge thee dead.

Boling. O! let no noble eye profane a tear
For me, if I be gor'd with Mowbray's spear.
As confident as is the falcon's flight
Against a bird, do I with Mowbray fight.—
My loving lord, I take my leave of you;—
Of you, my noble cousin, lord Aumerle;—
Not sick, although I have to do with death,

But lusty, young, and cheerly drawing breath.
Lo! as at English feasts, so I regret
The daintiest last, to make the end most sweet:
O! thou, [To GAUNT.] the earthly author of my Whose youthful spirit, in me regenerate, [blood,—
Doth with a two-fold vigor lift me up
To reach at victory above my head,
Add proof unto mine armor with thy prayers;
And with thy blessings steel my lance's point,
That it may enter Mowbray's waxen coat,
And<sup>d</sup> furnish new the name of John of Gaunt,
Even in the lusty havior of his son. [ous!

Gaunt. God in thy good cause make thee prosper—
Be swift like lightning in the execution;
And let thy blows, doubly redoubled,
Fall like amazing thunder on the<sup>e</sup> casque
Of thy adverse pernicious enemy:
Rouse up thy youthful blood, be valiant and live.

Boling. Mine innocence, and Saint George to thrive!

Nor. However God, or fortune, cast my lot,
There lives or dies, true to king Richard's throne,
A loyal, just, and upright gentleman.
Never did captive with a freer heart
Cast off his chains of bondage, and embrace
His golden uncontroll'd enfranchisement,
More than my dancing soul doth celebrate
This feast of battle with mine adversary.—
Most mighty liege, and my companion peers,
Take from my mouth the wish of happy years:
As gentle and as jocund, as to jest,
Go I to fight. Truth hath a quiet breast.

K. Rich. Farewell, my lord: securely I espy Virtue with valor couched in thine eye.—
Order the trial, marshal, and begin.

Mar. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Receive thy lance; and God defend the right!

Boling. Strong as a tower in hope, I cry, amen.

Mar. Go bear this lance [To an Officer.] to Thomas, duke of Norfolk.

1 Her. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Stands here for God, his sovereign, and himself,
On pain to be found false and recreant,
To prove the duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray,
A traitor to his God, his king, and him;
And dares him to set forward to the fight.

2 Her. Here standeth Thomas Mowbray, duke
of Norfolk,

On pain to be found false and recreant,
Both to defend himself, and to approve
Henry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
To God, his sovereign, and to him, disloyal;
Courageously, and with a free desire,
Attending but the signal to begin. [ants.

Mar. Sound, trumpets; and set forward, combat—[A Charge sounded.
Stay, the king hath thrown his<sup>f</sup> warder down.

K. Rich. Let them lay by their helmets and their spears,

And both return back to their chairs again.—
Withdraw with us; and let the trumpets sound,
While we return these dukes what we decree.—

[A long flourish.
Draw near, [To the Combatants.] and list, what with our council we have done.

For that our kingdom's earth should not be soil'd
With that dear blood which it hath<sup>h</sup> fostered;
And for our eyes do hate the dire aspect
Of civil wounds plough'd up with neighbors' swords;

<sup>a</sup> Yielding.—<sup>d</sup> Brighten.—<sup>e</sup> Helmet.—<sup>f</sup> "To jest," i. e., to play a part in a masque.—<sup>g</sup> Truncheon; staff of command.—
<sup>h</sup> Nursed.

* Forbid.—<sup>b</sup> Impeaches.

And for we think the eagle-winged pride
Of sky-aspiring and ambitious thoughts,
With rival-lating envy, set on you
To wake our peace, which in our country's cradle
Draws the sweet infant breath of gentle sleep;
Which so rous'd up with boisterous untun'd drums,
With harsh resounding trumpet's dreadful bray,
And grating shock of wrathful iron arms,
Might from our quiet confines fright fair peace,
And make us wade even in our kindred's blood:
Therefore, we banish you our territories:—
You, cousin Hereford, upon pain of life,
Till twice five summers have enrich'd our fields,
Shall not regret our fair dominions,
But tread the stranger paths of banishment. [be,

Boling. Your will be done. This must my comfort
That sun that shines upon you here shall shine on me;
And those his golden beams, to you here lent,
Shall point on me, and gild my banishment.

K. Rich. Norfolk, for thee remains a heavier doom,
Which I with some unwillingness pronounce:
The fly-slow hours shall not determinate
The dateless limit of thy dear exile.
The hopeless word of—never to return
Breathe I against thee, upon pain of life.

Nor. A heavy sentence, my most sovereign liege,
And all unlook'd for from your highness' mouth:
A dearer merit, not so deep a maim
As to be cast forth in the common air,
Have I deserved at your highness' hands.
The language I have learn'd these forty years,
My native English, now I must forego;
And now my tongue's use is to me no more,
Than an unstringed viol, or a harp;
Or like a cunning instrument cas'd up,
Or, being open, put into his hands
That knows no touch to tune the harmony.

Within my mouth you have enjoin'd my tongue,
Doubly portcullis'd, with my teeth and lips;
And dull, unfeeling, barren ignorance
Is made my jailor to attend on me.
I am too old to fawn upon a nurse,
Too far in years to be a pupil now;
What is thy sentence, then, but speechless death,
Which robs my tongue from breathing native breath?

K. Rich. It boots thee not to be compassionate:
After our sentence plaining comes too late.

Nor. Then, thus I turn me from my country's light,
To dwell in solemn shades of endless night.

[Retiring.]

K. Rich. Return again, and take an oath with Lay on our royal sword your banish'd hands; [thee.
Swear by the duty that ye owe to God,
(Our part therein we banish with yourselves)
To keep the oath that we administer:—
You never shall (so help you truth and God!)
Embrace each other's love in banishment;
Nor never look upon each other's face;
Nor never write, regret, nor reconcile
This lowering tempest of your home-bred hate;
Nor never by advised purpose meet,
To plot, contrive, or compass any ill,
'Gainst us, our state, our subjects, or our land.

Boling. I swear.

Nor. And I, to keep all this.

<sup>1</sup>[They kiss the king's sword.]

Boling. Norfolk, so<sup>2</sup> fare, as to mine enemy.—
By this time, had the king permitted us,
One of our souls had wander'd in the air,
Banish'd this frail sepulchre of our flesh,

As now our flesh is banish'd from this land:
Confess thy treasons, ere thou fly the realm;
Since thou hast far to go, bear not along
The clogging burden of a guilty soul.

Nor. No, Bolingbroke: if ever I were traitor,
My name be blotted from the book of life,
And I from heaven banish'd, as from hence.
But what thou art, God, thou, and I do know;
And all too soon, I fear, the king shall rue.—
Farewell, my liege.—Now no way can I stray:
Save back to England, all the world's my way. [Exit

K. Rich. Uncle, even in the glasses of thine eyes
I see thy griev'd heart: thy sad aspect
Hath from the number of his banish'd years
Pluck'd four away.—[To BOLINGBROKE] Six frozen winters spent,

Return with welcome home from banishment.

Boling. How long a time lies in one little word!
Four lagging winters and four wanton springs,
End in a word: such is the breath of kings.

Gaunt. I thank my liege, that in regard of me
He shortens four years of my son's exile;
But little vantage shall I reap thereby,
For, ere the six years, that he hath to spend,
Can change their moons, and bring their times about,
My oil-dried lamp, and time-bewasted light,
Shall be extinct with age and endless night:
My inch of taper will be burnt and done,
And blindfold death not let me see my son. [live.

K. Rich. Why, uncle, thou hast many years to Gaunt. But not a minute, king, that thou canst
Shorten my days thou canst with sullen sorrow, [give:
And pluck nights from me, but not lend a morrow.
Thou canst help time to furrow me with age,
But stop no wrinkle in his pilgrimage:
Thy word is current with him for my death,
But, dead, thy kingdom cannot buy my breath.

K. Rich. Thy son is banish'd upon good advice, Whereto thy tongue a party-verdict gave:
Why at our justice seem'st thou, then, to lower?

Gaunt. Things sweet to taste prove in digestion
You urg'd me as a judge; but I had rather, [sour.
You would have bid me argue like a father.

O! had it been a stranger, not my child,
To smooth his fault I should have been more mild:

A partial slander sought I to avoid,
And in the sentence my own life destroy'd.
Alas! I look'd when some of you should say,
I was too strict to make mine own away;
But you gave leave to my unwilling tongue,
Against my will to do myself this wrong. [so:

K. Rich. Cousin, farewell;—and, uncle, bid him
Six years we banish him, and he shall go.

[Flourish. Exeunt King RICHARD, and Train.

Aum. Cousin, farewell: what presence must not
From where do you remain, let paper show. [know,

Mar. My lord, no leave take I; for I will ride,
As far as land will let me, by your side. [words,

Gaunt. O! to what purpose dost thou hoard thy
That thou return'st no greeting to thy friends?

Boling. I have too few to take my leave of you,
When the tongue's office should be prodigal
To breathe th' abundant dolor of the heart.

Gaunt. Thy grief is but thy absence for a time.

Boling. Joy absent, grief is present for that time.

Gaunt. What is six winters? they are quickly gone.

Boling. To men in joy; but grief makes one hour ten. [lure.

Gaunt. Call it a travel, that thou tak'st for pleas-

Boling. My heart will sigh when I miscall it so,

in it.—<sup>8</sup> "A partial slander," i. e., the reproach of partiality.
—<sup>9</sup> Grief.

Which finds it an enforced pilgrimage.

Gaunt. The sullen passage of thy weary steps
Esteem a foil, wherein thou art to set
The precious jewel of thy home-return.

Boling. Nay, rather, every tedious stride I make
Will but remember me, what a deal of world
I wander from the jewels that I love.
Must I not serve a long apprenticeship
To foreign passages, and in the end,
Having my freedom, boast of nothing else
But that I was a journeyman to grief?

Gaunt. All places that the <sup>a</sup>eye of heaven visits,
Are to a wise man ports and happy havens.
Teach thy necessity to reason thus;
There is no virtue like necessity:
Think not the king did banish thee,
But thou the king: woe doth the heavier sit,
Where it perceives it is but faintly borne.
Go, say I sent thee forth to purchase honor,
And not the king exil'd thee; or suppose,
Devouring pestilence hangs in our air,
And thou art flying to a fresher clime:
Look, what thy soul holds dear, imagine it
To lie that way thou go'st, not whence thou com'st:
Suppose the singing birds musicians, [strew'd,
The grass whereon thou tread'st the <sup>b</sup>presence
The flowers fair ladies, and thy steps no more
Than a delightful measure, or a dance;
For <sup>c</sup>gnarling sorrow hath less power to bite
The man that mocks at it, and sets it light.

Boling. O! who can hold a fire in his hand,
By thinking on the frosty Caucasus?
Or cloy the hungry age of appetite,
By bare imagination of a feast?
Or wallow naked in December snow,
By thinking on fantastic summer's heat?
O! no: the apprehension of the good,
Gives but the greater feeling to the worse:
Fell sorrow's tooth doth never rankle more,
Than when it bites, but lanceth not the sore. [way:]

Gaunt. Come, come, my son, I'll bring thee on thy Had I thy youth and cause, I would not stay.

Boling. Then, England's ground, farewell: sweet soil, adieu;

My mother, and my nurse, that bears me yet!
Where-e'er I wander, boast of this I can,
Though banish'd, yet a trueborn Englishman.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Room in the King's Castle.

Enter King RICHARD, BAGOT, and GREEN, at one door; AUMERLE at another.

K. Rich. We did observe.—Cousin Aumerle,
How far brought you high Hereford on his way?

Aum. I brought high Hereford, if you call him so,
But to the next highway, and there I left him.

K. Rich. And, say, what store of parting tears were shed?

Aum. Faith, none for me; except the north-east
Which then blew bitterly against our faces, [wind,
Awak'd the sleeping rheum, and so by chance
Did grace our hollow parting with a tear. [with him?

K. Rich. What said our cousin, when you parted?

Aum. Farewell: and, for my heart disdain'd <sup>1</sup>my tongue

Should so profane the word, that taught me craft
To counterfeit oppression of such grief,
That words seem'd buried in my sorrow's grave.

<sup>a</sup> "The eye of heaven," i. e., the sun.—<sup>b</sup> Presence-chamber at court.—<sup>c</sup> Growling.

Marry, would the word "farewell" have lengthen'd
And added years to his short banishment, [hours
He should have had a volume of farewells;
But, since it would not, he had none of me.

K. Rich. He is our cousin, cousin; but 'tis doubt,
When time shall call him home from banishment,
Whether our kinsman come to see his friends,
Ourselves, and Bushy, Bagot here, and Green,
Observ'd his courtship to the common people:
How he did seem to dive into their hearts,
With humble and familiar courtesy;
What reverence he did throw away on slaves;
 wooing poor craftsmen with the craft of smiles,
And patient <sup>d</sup>underbearing of his fortune,
As 'twere to banish their <sup>e</sup>affections with him.
Off goes his bonnet to an oyster wench;
A brace of draymen bid God speed him well,
And had the tribute of his supple knee,
With—"Thanks, my countrymen, my loving
As were our England in reversion his, [friends?"]—
And he our subjects' next degree in hope.

Green. Well, he is gone; and with him go these thoughts.

Now for the rebels, which stand out in Ireland,
<sup>f</sup>Expedient manage must be made, my liege,
Ere farther leisure yield them farther means,
For their advantage, and your highness' loss.

K. Rich. We will ourselves in person to this war:
And, <sup>g</sup>for our coffers with too great a court,
And liberal largess, are grown somewhat light,
We are enforce'd to farm our royal realm;
The revenue whereof shall furnish us
For our affairs in hand. If that come short,
Our substitutes at home shall have blank charters;
Whereto, when they shall know what men are rich,
They shall subscribe them for large sums of gold,
And send them after to supply our wants,
For we will make for Ireland presently.

Enter BUSHY.

Bushy, what news? [lord,

Bushy. Old John of Gaunt is grievous sick, my Suddenly taken, and hath sent post-haste,
To entreat your majesty to visit him.

K. Rich. Where lies he <sup>2</sup>now?

Bushy. At Ely-house, <sup>3</sup>my liege.

K. Rich. Now put it, God, in his physician's mind,
To help him to his grave immediately!

The lining of his coffers shall make coats

To deck our soldiers for these Irish wars.—

Come, gentlemen, let's all go visit him:

Pray God, we may make haste, and come too late!

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—London. An Apartment in Ely-house.

GAUNT on a Couch; the Duke of YORK, and Others, standing by him.

Gaunt. Will the king come, that I may breathe
In wholesome counsel to his unstaid youth. [my last
York. Vex not yourself, nor strive not with your
For all in vain comes counsel to his ear. [breath;

Gaunt. O! but they say, the tongues of dying men
Enforce attention like deep harmony: [vain;

Where words are scarce, they are seldom spent in
For they breathe truth that breathe their words in
He that no more <sup>4</sup>may say is listen'd more, [pain.

<sup>d</sup> Undergoing.—<sup>e</sup> Affections.—<sup>f</sup> Expeditious.—<sup>g</sup> Because.

Than they whom youth and ease have taught to "glose;

More are men's ends mark'd, than their lives before.

The setting sun, and music at the close,
As the last taste of sweets, is sweetest last,
Writ in remembrance more than things long past.
Though Richard my life's counsel would not hear,
My death's sad tale may yet undeaf his ear.

York. No; it is stopp'd with other flattering
sounds,

As praises of his state: then, there are found
Lascivious metres, to whose venom sound
The open ear of youth doth always listen:
Report of fashions in proud Italy;
Whose manners still our tardy apish nation
Limps after, in base imitation.

Where doth the world thrust forth a vanity,
So it be new there's no respect how vile,
That is not quickly buzz'd into his ears?
Then, all too late comes counsel to be heard,
Where will doth mutiny with wit's regard.
Direct not him, whose way himself will choose:
'Tis breath thou lack'st, and that breath wilt thou lose.

Gaunt. Methinks, I am a prophet new inspir'd,
And thus, expiring, do foretell of him.
His rash fierce blaze of riot cannot last,
For violent fires soon burn out themselves;
Small showers last long, but sudden storms are short;
He tires betimes, that spurs too fast betimes;
With eager feeding food doth choke the feeder:
Light vanity, insatiate cormorant,
Consuming means, soon preys upon itself.
This royal throne of kings, this scepter'd isle,
This earth of majesty, this seat of Mars,
This other Eden, demi-paradise;
This fortress, built by nature for herself,
Against infection, and the hand of war;
This happy breed of men, this little world,
This precious stone set in the silver sea,
Which serves it in the office of a wall,
Or as a moat defensive to a house,
Against the envy of less happier lands;
This blessed plot, this earth, this realm, this England,
This nurse, this teeming womb of royal kings,
Fear'd by their breed, and famous by their birth,
Renowned for their deeds as far from home,
For Christian service and true chivalry,
As is the sepulchre in stubborn Jewry
Of the world's ransom, blessed Mary's Son:
This land of such dear souls, this dear, dear land,
Dear for her reputation through the world,
Is now leas'd out, I die pronouncing it,
Like to a tenement, or <sup>b</sup>pelting farm.
England, bound in with the triumphant sea,
Whose rocky shore beats back the envious siege
Of watery Neptune, is now bound in with shame,
With inky blots, and rotten parchment bonds:
That England, that was wont to conquer others,
Hath made a shameful conquest of itself.
Ah! would the scandal vanish with my life,
How happy then were my ensuing death.

Enter King RICHARD, and QUEEN; AUMERLE, BUSHY, GREEN, BAGOT, ROSS, and WILLOUGHBY.

York. The king is come: deal mildly with his youth;
For young hot colts, being <sup>1</sup>urg'd, do rage the more.

Queen. How fares our noble uncle, Lancaster?

K. Rich. What, comfort, man! How is't with aged Gaunt?

Gaunt. O, how that name befits my composition!
Old Gaunt, indeed; and <sup>c</sup>gaunt in being old:

Within me grief hath kept a tedious fast;
And who abstains from meat, that is not gaunt!
For sleeping England long time have I watch'd;
Watching breeds leanness, leanness is all gaunt:
The pleasure that some fathers feed upon
Is my strict fast, I mean my children's looks;
And therein fasting hast thou made me gaunt.
Gaunt am I for the grave, gaunt as a grave,
Whose hollow womb inherits nought but bones.

K. Rich. Can sick men play so nicely with their names?

Gaunt. No; misery makes sport to mock itself:
Since thou dost seek to kill my name in me,
I mock my name, great king, to flatter thee. [live?

K. Rich. Should dying men flatter with those that

Gaunt. No, no; men living flatter those that die.

K. Rich. Thou, now a-dying, say'st—thou flatter'st me.

Gaunt. O! no; thou diest, though I the sicker be.

K. Rich. I am in health, I breathe, and see thee ill.

Gaunt. Now, He that made me knows I see thee ill;

Ill in myself to see, and in thee seeing ill.
Thy death-bed is no lesser than the land,
Wherein thou liest in reputation sick;
And thou, too careless patient as thou art,
Commit'st thy 'nointed body to the cure
Of those physicians that first wounded thee.
A thousand flatterers sit within thy crown,
Whose compass is no bigger than thy head,
And yet, ineged in so small a verge,
The waste is no whit lesser than thy land.
O! had thy grandsire, with a prophet's eye,
Seen how his son's son should destroy his sons,
From forth thy reach he would have laid thy shame,
Deposing thee before thou wert possess'd,
Which art <sup>d</sup>possess'd now to depose thyself.
Why, cousin, wert thou regent of the world,
It were a shame to let this land by lease;
But for thy world enjoying but this land,
Is it not more than shame to shame it so?
Landlord of England art thou now, not king:
Thy <sup>e</sup>state of law is bondsman to the law,
And thou—

K. Rich. A lunatic lean-witted fool,
Presuming on an ague's privilege,
Dar'st with thy frozen admonition
Make pale our cheek, chasing the royal blood
With fury from his native residence.
Now, by my seat's right royal majesty,
Wert thou not brother to great Edward's son,
This tongue that runs so roundly in thy head,
Should run thy head from thy unrevenged shoulders.

Gaunt. O! spare me not, my brother Edward's son,
For that I was his father Edward's son:
That blood already, like the pelican,
Hast thou tapp'd out, and drunkenly carous'd.
My brother Gloster, plain well-meanning soul,
Whom fair befal in heaven 'mongst happy souls,
May be a precedent and witness good,
That thou respect'st not spilling Edward's blood.
Join with the present sickness that I have,
And thy unkindness be like crooked age,
To crop at once a too-long withered flower.
Live in thy shame, but die not shame with thee:
These words hereafter thy tormentors be.—
Convey me to my bed, then to my grave:
Love they to 'live, that love and honor have.

[Exit, borne out by his Attendants.

K. Rich. And let them die, that age and sullen have,
For both hast thou, and both become the grave.

* "To glose," i. e., to flatter; to lie.—<sup>b</sup> Paltry; pitiful.—

they to live," i. e., let them love to live.

York. I do beseech your majesty, impute his words
To wayward sickness and age in him:

He loves you, on my life, and holds you dear
As Harry, duke of Hereford, were he here. [so his:
K. Rich. Right, you say true; as Hereford's love,
As theirs, so mine; and all be as it is.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.

North. My liege, old Gaunt commends him to your
K. Rich. What says he? [majesty.

North. Nay, nothing; all is said.

His tongue is now a stringless instrument:
Words, life, and all, old Lancaster hath spent.

York. Be York the next that must be bankrupt so!
Though death be poor, it ends a mortal woe.

K. Rich. The ripest fruit first falls, and so doth he:
His time is spent; your pilgrimage must<sup>a</sup> be.
So much for that.—Now for our Irish wars.
We must supplant those rough rug-headed<sup>b</sup> kerns,
Which live like venom, where no venom else,
But only they, hath privilege to<sup>c</sup> live:
And for these great affairs do ask some charge,
Towards our assistance we do seize to us
The plate, coin, revenues, and movables,
Whereof our uncle Gaunt did stand possess'd.

York. How long shall I be patient? Ah! how long
Shall tender duty make me suffer wrong?
Not Gloucester's death, nor Hereford's banishment,
Nor Gaunt's rebukes, nor England's private wrongs,
Nor the prevention of poor Bolingbroke
About his marriage, nor my own disgrace,
Have ever made me sour my patient cheek,
Or bend one wrinkle on my sovereign's face.
I am the last of noble Edward's sons,
Of whom thy father, prince of Wales, was first:
In war was never lion rag'd more fierce,
In peace was never gentle lamb more mild,
Than was that young and princely gentleman.
His face thou hast, for even so look'd he,
Accomplish'd with the number of thy<sup>d</sup> hours;
But when he frown'd, it was against the French,
And not against his friends: his noble hand
Did win what he did spend, and spent not that
Which his triumphant father's hand had won:
His hands were guilty of no kindred blood,
But bloody with the enemies of his kin.
O, Richard! York is too far gone with grief,
Or else he never would compare between.

K. Rich. Why, uncle, what's the matter?

York. O, my liege!

Pardon me, if you please; if not, I, pleas'd
Not to be pardon'd, am content withal.
Seek you to seize, and gripe into your hands,
The royalties and rights of banish'd Hereford?
Is not Gaunt dead, and doth not Hereford live?
Was not Gaunt just, and is not Harry true?
Did not the one deserve to have an heir?
Is not his heir a well-deserving son?
Take Hereford's rights away, and take from time
His charters and his customary rights;
Let not to-morrow, then, ensue to-day;
Be not thyself; for how art thou a king,
But by fair sequence and succession?
Now, afore God (God forbid, I say true!)
If you do wrongfully seize Hereford's rights,
Call in the letters patents that he hath
By his attorneys-general to sue
His<sup>e</sup> livery, and deny his offer'd homage,
You pluck a thousand dangers on your head,
You lose a thousand well-disposed hearts,

And prick my tender patience to those thoughts,
Which honor and allegiance cannot think. [hands

K. Rich. Think what you will: we seize into our
His plate, his goods, his money, and his lands.

York. I'll not be by the while. My liege, farewell:
What will ensue hereof, there's none can tell;
But by bad courses may be understood,
That their events can never fall out good. [Exit.

K. Rich. Go, Bushy, to the earl of Wiltshire
Bid him repair to us to Ely-house, [straight:

To see this business. To-morrow next
We will for Ireland; and 'tis time, I trow:

And we create, in absence of ourself,
Our uncle York lord governor of England,
For he is just, and always lov'd us well.—
Come on, our queen: to-morrow must we part;
Be merry, for our time of stay is short. [Flourish.

[Exit KING, QUEEN, BUSHY, AUMERLE,
GREEN, and BAGOT.

North. Well, lords, the duke of Lancaster is dead.

Ross. And living too, for now his son is duke.

Will. Barely in title, not in revenues.

North. Richly in both, if justice had her right.

Ross. My heart is great; but it must break with silence,

Ere't be disburden'd with a liberal tongue.

North. Nay, speak thy mind; and let him ne'er speak more,

That speaks thy words again to do thee harm!

Will. Tends that thou'dst speak, to the duke of
If it be so, out with it boldly, man; [Hereford?
Quick is mine ear to hear of good towards him.

Ross. No good at all that I can do for him,
Unless you call it good to pity him,
Bereft and gelded of his patrimony. [are borne

North. Now, afore God, 'tis shame such wrongs
In him, a royal prince, and many more
Of noble blood in this declining land.
The king is not himself, but basely led
By flatterers; and what they will inform,
Merely in hate, 'gainst any of us all,
That will the king severely prosecute,
'Gainst us, our<sup>1</sup> wives, our children, and our heirs.

Ross. The commons hath he<sup>h</sup> pill'd with grievous taxes,

And quite lost their hearts: the nobles hath he fin'd<sup>d</sup>
For ancient quarrels, and quite lost their hearts.

Will. And daily new exactions are devis'd;
As<sup>i</sup> blanks, benevolences, and I wot not what:
But what, o' God's name, doth become of this?

North. Wars have not wasted it, for war'd he hath
But basely yielded upon compromise [not,
That which his noble ancestors achiev'd with blows:
More hath he spent in peace, than they in wars.

Ross. The earl of Wiltshire hath the realm in farm.

Will. The king's grown bankrupt, like a broken man. [him.

North. Reproach, and dissolution, hangeth over
Ross. He hath not money for these Irish wars,
His burdensome taxations notwithstanding,
But by the robbing of the banish'd duke.

North. His noble kinsman: most degenerate king!
But, lords, we hear this fearful tempest sing,
Yet seek no shelter to avoid the storm:
We see the wind sit sore upon our sails,
And yet we strike not, but<sup>k</sup> securely perish.

Ross. We see the very wreck that we must suffer;
And unavoids is the danger now,

For suffering so the causes of our wreck. [death,

North. Not so: even through the hollow eyes of

<sup>f</sup> Free.—<sup>g</sup> Deprived.—<sup>h</sup> Pillaged.—<sup>i</sup> "Blanks," i. e., the seals of gentlemen and commons affixed to blanks.—<sup>k</sup> "Securely," i. e., confident in our security.

I spy life peering; but I dare not say
How near the tidings of our comfort is. [ours.]

Will. Nay, let us share thy thoughts, as thou dost

Ross. Be confident to speak, Northumberland:

We three are but thyself; and, speaking so,
Thy words are but <sup>1</sup>our thoughts: therefore, be bold.

North. Then thus.—I have from Port le Blanc, a
In Brittany, receiv'd intelligence, [bay

That Harry duke of Hereford, Reginald lord Cobham,
That late broke from the duke of Exeter,

His brother, archbishop late of Canterbury,
Sir Thomas Erpingham, sir John Ramston, [Quaint,

Sir John Norbery, sir Robert Waterton, and Francis
All these well furnish'd by the duke of Bretagne,

With eight <sup>2</sup>tall ships, three thousand men of war,
Are making hither with all due <sup>3</sup>expedience,

And shortly mean to touch our northern shore:

Perhaps, they had ere this, but that they stay

The first departing of the king for Ireland.

If, then, we shall shake off our slavish yoke,

<sup>4</sup>Imp out our drooping country's broken wing,

Redeem from broking pawn the blemish'd crown,

Wipe off the dust that hides our scepter's <sup>5</sup>gilt,

And make high majesty look like itself,

Away with me in post to Ravenspur;g

But if you faint, as fearing to do so,

Stay and be secret, and myself will go. [fear.

Ross. To horse, to horse! urge doubts to them that

Will. Hold out my horse, and I will first be there. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. An Apartment in the Palace.

Enter QUEEN, BUSHY, and BAGOT.

Bushy. Madam, your majesty is too much sad:
You promis'd, when you parted with the king,
To lay aside life-harming heaviness,
And entertain a cheerful disposition.

Queen. To please the king, I did; to please myself,
I cannot do it; yet I know no cause

Why I should welcome such a guest as grief,

Save bidding farewell to so sweet a guest

As my sweet Richard. Yet, again, methinks,

Some unborn sorrow, ripe in fortune's womb,

Is coming towards me; and my inward soul

With nothing trembles: at some thing it grieves,

More than with parting from my lord, the king.

Bush. Each substance of a grief hath twenty shadows,

Which show like grief itself, but are not so:

For sorrow's eye, glazed with blinding tears,

Divides one thing entire to many objects;

Like <sup>6</sup>perspectives, which, rightly gaz'd upon,

Show nothing but confusion: ey'd awry,

Distinguish form: so your sweet majesty,

Looking awry upon your lord's departure,

Finds shapes of grief more than himself to wail;

Which, look'd on as it is, is nought but shadows

Of what it is not. Then, thrice gracious queen,

More than your lord's departure weep not: more's

Or if it be, 'tis with false sorrow's eye, [not seen;

Which for things true weeps things imaginary.

Queen. It may be so; but yet my inward soul

Persuades me, it is otherwise: how'er it be,

I cannot but be sad; so heavy sad,

As, though <sup>2</sup>nothing on no thought I think,

Makes me with heavy nothing faint and shrink.

Bushy. 'Tis nothing but conceit, my gracious lady.

Queen. 'Tis nothing less: conceit is still deriv'd

From some forefather grief; mine is not so,

For nothing hath begot my something <sup>3</sup>woe;

Or something hath the nothing that I <sup>4</sup>guess:

'Tis in reversion that I do possess,

But what it is, that is not yet known, what

I cannot name: 'tis nameless woe, I wot.

Enter GREEN.

Green. God save your majesty:—and well met,
gentlemen.—

I hope, the king is not yet shipp'd for Ireland.

Queen. Why hop'st thou so? 'tis better hope he is,

For his desigus crave haste, his haste good hope;

Then, wherefore dost thou hope, he is not shipp'd?

Green. That he, our hope, might have 'retir'd his

And driven into despair an enemy's hope, [power,

Who strongly hath set footing in this land.

The banish'd Bolingbroke repeals himself,

And with uplifted arms is safe arriv'd

At Ravenspur.

Queen. Now, God in heaven forbid!

Green. Ah! madam, 'tis too true: and <sup>5</sup>what is worse, [Percy,

The lord Northumberland, his son young Henry

The lords of Ross, Beaumont, and Willoughby,

With all their powerful friends, are fled to him.

Bushy. Why have you not proclaim'd Northumberland,

And all the rest of the revolted faction, traitors?

Green. We have: whereupon the earl of Worcester

Hath broken his staff, resign'd his stewardship,

And all the household servants fled with him

To Bolingbroke.

Queen. So, Green, thou art the midwife to my woe,

And Bolingbroke my sorrow's dismal heir:

Now hath my soul brought forth her prodigy,

And I, a gasping new-deliver'd mother,

Have woe to woe, sorrow to sorrow join'd.

Bushy. Despair not, madam.

Queen. Who shall hinder me?

I will despair, and be at enmity

With cozening hope: he is a flatterer,

A parasite, a keeper-back of death,

Who gently would dissolve the bands of life,

Which false hope lingers in extremity.

Enter the Duke of YORK, <sup>6</sup>part-armed.

Green. Here comes the duke of York.

Queen. With signs of war about his aged neck.

O! full of careful business are his looks.—

Uncle, for God's sake, speak comfortable words.

York. Should I do so, I should belie my thoughts:

Comfort's in heaven; and we are on the earth,

Where nothing lives but crosses, care, and grief.

Your husband, he is gone to save far off,

Whilst others come to make him lose at home:

Here am I left to underprop his land,

Who, weak with age, cannot support myself.

Now comes the sick hour that his surfeit made;

Now shall he try his friends that flatter'd him.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord, your son was gone before I came.

York. He was?—Why, so!—go all which way

it will.—

The nobles they are fled, the commons cold,

And will, I fear, revolt on Hereford's side.—

Sirrah, get thee to Plashy, to my sister Gloster;

Bid her send me presently a thousand pound.

Hold; take my ring.

<sup>f</sup> "Retired," i. e., kept back; withheld.

Serv. My lord, I had forgot to tell your lordship :
To-day, as I came by, I called there ;
But I shall grieve you to report the rest.

York. What is't, knave ?

Serv. An hour before I came the duchess died.

York. God for his mercy ! what a tide of woes
Comes rushing on this woeful land at once !

I know not what to do :—I would to God,
(So my 'untruth had not provok'd him to it)
The king had cut off my head with my brother's.—
What ! are there no posts dispatch'd for Ireland ?—
How shall we do for money for these wars ?—

Come, sister,—cousin, I would say : pray, pardon me.—

Go, fellow, [To the Servant.] get thee home ; provide some carts,

And bring away the armor that is there.—

[Exit Servant.]

Gentlemen, will you go muster men ?

If I know how, or which way, to order these affairs,
Thus disorderly thrust into my hands,

Never believe me. Both are my kinsmen :

Th' one is my sovereign, whom both my oath

And duty bids defend ; th' other again,

Is my 'near kinsman, whom the king hath wrong'd,

Whom conscience and my kindred bids to right.

Well, somewhat we must do.—Come, cousin,

I'll dispose of you.—Gentlemen, go muster up your

And meet me presently at Berkley. [men,

I should to Plashy too,

But time will not permit.—All is uneven,

And every thing is left at six and seven.

[Excunt YORK and QUEEN.]

Bushy. The wind sits fair for news to go for Ire-

But none returns. For us to levy power, [land,

Proportionable to the enemy,

Is all impossible.

Green. Besides, our nearness to the king in love

Is near the hate of those love not the king.

Bagot. And that's the wavering commons ; for their love

Lies in their purses, and whoso empties them,

By so much fills their hearts with deadly hate.

Bushy. Wherein the king stands generally condemn'd.

Bagot. If judgment lie in them, then so do we,

Because we ever have been near the king. [castle :

Green. Well, I'll for refuge straight to Bristol

The earl of Wiltshire is already there.

Bushy. Thither will I with you ; for little office

Will the hateful commons perform for us,

Except like curs to tear us all to pieces.

Will you go along with us ?

Bagot. No ; I will to Ireland to his majesty.

Farewell : if heart's presages be not vain,

We three here part, that ne'er shall meet again.

Bushy. That's as York thrives to beat back Bolingbroke.

Green. Alas, poor duke ! the task he undertakes

Is numbering sands, and drinking oceans dry :

Where one on his side fights, thousands will fly.

Farewell at once ; for once, for all, and ever.

Bushy. Well, we may meet again.

Bagot. I fear me, never. [Excunt.]

SCENE III.—The Wilds in Gloucestershire.

Enter BOLINGBROKE and NORTHUMBERLAND, with Forces.

Boling. How far is it, my lord, to Berkley now ?

North. Believe me, noble lord,

I am a stranger here in Gloucestershire.

These high wild hills, and rough uneven ways,

Draw out our miles, and make them wearisome ;

And yet your fair discourse hath been as sugar,

Making the hard way sweet and delectable.

But, I bedink me, what a weary way

From Ravenspur to Cotswold will be found

In Ross and Willoughby, wanting your company,

Which, I protest, hath very much beguil'd

The tediousness and process of my travel :

But theirs is sweeten'd with the hope to have

The present benefit which I possess ;

And hope to 'joy is little less in joy,

Than hope enjoy'd : by this the weary lords

Shall make their way seem short, as mine hath 'been

By sight of what I have, your 'company.

Boling. Of much less value is my company,
Than your good words. But who comes here ?

Enter HARRY PERCY.

North. It is my son, young Harry Percy,

Sent from my brother Worcester, whencesoever.—

Harry, how fares your uncle ?

Percy. I had thought, my lord, to have learn'd his health of you.

North. Why, is he not with the queen ? [court,

Percy. No, my good lord : he hath forsook the Broken his staff of office, and dispers'd

The household of the king.

North. What was his reason ?

He was not so resolv'd, when last we spake

Together.

[or,

Percy. Because your lordship was proclaimed trait-

But he, my lord, is gone to Ravenspur,

To offer service to the duke of Hereford ;

And sent me over by Berkley, to discover

What power the duke of York had levied there ;

Then, with directions to repair to Ravenspur.

North. Have you forgot the duke of Hereford,

boy ?

Percy. No, my good lord ; for that is not forgot,

Which ne'er I did remember : to my knowledge,

I never in my life did look on him. [duke.

North. Then learn to know him now : this is the

Percy. My gracious lord, I tender you my service,

Such as it is, being tender, raw, and young,

Which elder days shall ripen, and confirm

To more approved service and desert.

Boling. I thank thee, gentle Percy ; and be sure,

I count myself in nothing else so happy,

As in a soul remembering my good friends ;

And as my fortune ripens with thy love,

It shall be still thy true love's recompense :

My heart this covenant makes, my hand thus seals it.

North. How far is it to Berkley ? And what stir

Keeps good old York there, with his men of war ?

Percy. There stands the castle, by yond' tuft of trees,

Mann'd with three hundred men, as I have heard ;

And in it are the lords of York, Berkley, and Sey-

None else of name, and noble estimate. [mour ;

Enter ROSS and WILLOUGHBY.

North. Here come the lords of Ross and Willoughby,

Bloody with spurring, fiery-red with haste.

Boling. Welcome, my lords. I wot, your love

A banish'd traitor : all my treasury [pursues

Is but yet unfelt thanks, which, more enrich'd,

Shall be your love and labor's recompense. [lord.

Ross. Your presence makes us rich, most noble

Will. And far surmounts our labor to attain it.

* Disloyalty ; treachery.

b "To joy," i. e., to rejoice.

Boling. Evermore thanks, th' exchequer of the poor;

Which, till my infant fortune comes to years,
Stands for my bounty. But who comes here?

Enter BERKLEY.

North. It is my lord of Berkley, as I guess.

Berk. My lord of Hereford, my message is to you.

Boling. My lord, my answer is—to<sup>a</sup> Lancaster,
And I am come to seek that name in England;

And I must find that title in your tongue,

Before I make reply to aught you say. [ing,

Berk. Mistake me not, my lord: 'tis not my mean-
To raise one title of your honor out.

To you, my lord, I come, what lord you will,
From the most gracious regent of this land,
The duke of York, to know what pricks you on
To take advantage of the absent<sup>b</sup> time,
And fright our native peace with self-borne arms.

Enter YORK attended.

Boling. I shall not need transport my words by you:

Here comes his grace in person.—My noble uncle.

[Kneels.

York. Show me thy humble heart, and not thy Whose duty is deceivable and false. [kneec,

Boling. My gracious uncle— [me no uncle:

York. Tut, tut! Grace me no grace, nor uncle
I am no traitor's uncle; and that word "grace,"

In an ungracious mouth, is but profane.

Why have those banish'd and forbidden legs

Dar'd once to touch a dust of England's ground?

But then, more why,—why have they dar'd to march

So many miles upon her peaceful bosom,

Frighting her pale-fac'd villages with war,

And ostentation of<sup>c</sup> despoiling arms?

Com'st thou because th' anointed king is hence?

Why, foolish boy, the king is left behind,

And in my loyal bosom lies his power.

Were I but now the lord of such hot youth,

As when brave Gaunt, thy father, and myself,

Rescued the Black Prince, that young Mars of men,

From forth the ranks of many thousand French,

O! then, how quickly should this arm of mine,

Now prisoner to the palsy, chastise thee,

And minister correction to thy fault!

Boling. My gracious uncle, let me know my fault:
On what condition stands it, and wherein?

York. Even in condition of the worst degree;

In gross rebellion, and detested treason:

Thou art a banish'd man, and here art come

Before the expiration of thy time,

In braving arms against thy sovereign. [ford;

Boling. As I was banish'd, I was banish'd Here-

But as I come, I come for Lancaster.

And, noble uncle, I beseech your grace,

Look on my wrongs with an<sup>e</sup> indifferent eye:

You are my father, for, methinks, in you

I see old Gaunt alive: O! then, my father,

Will you permit that I shall stand condemn'd

A wandering vagabond, my rights and royalties

Pluck'd from my arms perforce, and given away

To upstart unthrifths? Wherefore was I born?

If that my cousin king be king of England,

It must be granted I am duke of Lancaster.

You have a son, Aumerle, my noble kinsman;

Had you first died, and he been thus trod down,

He should have found his uncle Gaunt a father,

To rouse his<sup>2</sup> wrongers, chase them to the bay.

I am denied to sue my<sup>d</sup> livery here,
And yet my letters patent give me leave:

My father's goods are all distraint'd, and sold;

And these, and all, are all amiss employ'd.

What would you have me do? I am a subject.

And challenge law: attorneys are denied me,

And therefore personally I lay my claim

To my inheritance of free descent. [abused.

North. The noble duke hath been too much

Ross. It stands your grace<sup>e</sup> upon to do him right.

Will. Base men by his endowments are made great.

York. My lords of England, let me tell you this:

I have had feeling of my cousin's wrongs,

And labor'd all I could to do him right;

But in this kind to come; in braving arms,

Be his own carver, and cut out his way,

To find out right with wrong,—it may not be:

And you, that do abet him in this kind,

Cherish rebellion, and are rebels all.

North. The noble duke hath sworn, his coming is

But for his own; and for the right of that,

We all have strongly sworn to give him aid,

And let him ne'er see joy that breaks that oath.

York. Well, well, I see the issue of these arms.

I cannot mend it, I must needs confess,

Because my power is weak, and all ill left;

But if I could, by him that gave me life,

I would attach you all, and make you stoop

Unto the sovereign mercy of the king:

But, since I cannot, be it known unto you,

I do remain as neuter. So, farewell;

Unless you please to enter in the castle,

And there, my lords, repose you for this night.

Boling. An offer, uncle, that we will accept:

But we must win your grace, to go with us

To Bristol castle; which, they say, is held

By Busby, Bagot, and their complices,

The caterpillars of the commonwealth,

Which I have sworn to weed and pluck away.

York. It may be, I will go with you;—but yet

I'll pause,

For I am loath to break our country's laws.

Nor friends, nor foes, to me welcome you are:

Things past redress are now with me past care.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Camp in Wales.

Enter SALISBURY, and a Welsh Captain.

Cap. My lord of Salisbury, we have stay'd ten

And hardly kept our countrymen together, [days.

And yet we hear no tidings from the king;

Therefore, we will disperse ourselves. Farewell.

Sal. Stay yet another day, thou trusty Welsh-

The king reposest all his confidence in thee. [man:

Cap. 'Tis thought, the king is dead: we will not

The bay-trees in our country are all wither'd, [stay.

And meteors fright the fixed stars of heaven;

The pale-fac'd moon looks bloody on the earth,

And lean-look'd prophets whisper fearful change:

Rich men look sad, and ruffians dance and leap,

The one in fear to lose what they enjoy,

The other to enjoy by rage and war:

These signs forerun the death or fall of kings.

Farewell: our countrymen are gone and fled,

As well assur'd Richard, their king, is dead. [Exit.

Sal. Ah, Richard! with the eyes of heavy mind,
I see thy glory, like a shooting star,

<sup>a</sup> That is, 'Your message, you say, is to my lord of Hereford: my answer is, it is to the Duke of Lancaster.—<sup>b</sup> "The absent time," i. e., the time of the king's absence.—<sup>c</sup> "Indifferent," i. e., impartial.

<sup>d</sup> "To sue my livery," i. e., to sue for the delivery to himself of his lands.—<sup>e</sup> "It stands your grace upon," i. e., it is incumbent upon your grace.

Fall to the base earth from the firmament.
Thy sun sets weeping in the lowly west,
Witnessing storms to come, woe, and unrest:
Thy friends are fled to wait upon thy foes,
And crossly to thy good all fortune goes. [Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—BOLINGBROKE's Camp at Bristol.

Enter BOLINGBROKE, YORK, NORTHUMBERLAND, PERCY, WILLOUGHBY, ROSS: BUSHY and GREEN, prisoners.

Boling. Bring forth these men.—

<sup>1</sup>[BUSHY and GREEN stand forward.]

Bushy, and Green, I will not vex your souls,
Since presently your souls must part your bodies,
With too much urging your pernicious lives,
For 'twere no charity; yet, to wash your blood
From off my hands, here in the view of men
I will unfold some causes of your deaths.
You have misled a prince, a royal king,
A happy gentleman in blood and lineaments,
By you unhappied and disgrac'd <sup>a</sup>clean:
You have, in manner, with your sinful hours,
Made a divorce betwixt his queen and him,
Broke the possession of a royal bed,
And stain'd the beauty of a fair queen's cheeks
With tears, drawn from her eyes by your foul wrongs.
Myself, a prince by fortune of my birth,
Near to the king in blood, and near in love,
Till you did make him misinterpret me,
Have stoop'd my neck under your injuries,
And sigh'd my English breath in foreign clouds,
Eating the bitter bread of banishment,
Whilst you have fed upon my signories,
<sup>b</sup>Disparc'd my parks, and fell'd my forest woods,
From mine own windows torn my household coat,
Raz'd out my <sup>c</sup>impress, leaving me no sign,
Save men's opinions, and my living blood,
To show the world I am a gentleman.
This and much more, much more than twice all this,
Condemns you to the death.—See them deliver'd
To execution, and the hand of death. [over]

Bushy. More welcome is the stroke of death to Than Bolingbroke to England.—Lords, farewell. [me,
Green. My comfort is, that heaven will take our
And plague injustice with the pains of hell. [souls,

Boling. My lord Northumberland, see them dispatch'd.

[Exeunt NORTHUMBERLAND and Others, with BUSHY and GREEN.]

Uncle, you say the queen is at your house;
For God's sake, fairly let her be entreated:
Tell her I send to her my kind <sup>d</sup>commendments;
Take special care my greetings be deliver'd.

York. A gentleman of mine I have dispatch'd
With letters of your love to her at large. [away,

Boling. Thanks, gentle uncle.—Come, <sup>a</sup>my lords,
To fight with Glendower and his complices:
Awhile to work, and after holiday. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Coast of Wales. A Castle in view.

Flourish: Drums and Trumpets. Enter King RICHARD, Bishop of CARLISLE, AUMERLE, and Soldiers.

K. Rich. Barkloughly castle call they this at hand?

Aum. Yea, my <sup>3</sup>good lord. How brooks your grace the air,

After late tossing on the breaking seas? [Joy,

K. Rich. Needs must I like it well: I weep for
To stand upon my kingdom once again.—

Dear earth, I do salute thee with my hand,
Though rebels wound thee with their horses' hoofs:
As a long parted mother with her child
Plays fondly with her tears and smiles in meeting,
So, weeping, smiling, greet I thee, my earth,
And do thee favor with my royal <sup>4</sup>hand.

Feed not thy sovereign's foe, my gentle earth,
Nor with thy sweets comfort his ravenous sense;
But let thy spiders, that suck up thy venom,
And heavy-gaited toads, lie in their way,

Doing annoyance to the treacherous feet,
Which with usurping steps do trample thee.
Yield stinging nettles to mine enemies;
And when they from thy bosom pluck a flower,

Guard it, I pray thee, with a lurking adder,
Whose double tongue may with a mortal touch
Throw death upon thy sovereign's enemies.—
Mock not my senseless conjuration, lords:

This earth shall have a feeling, and these stones
Prove armed soldiers, ere her native king
Shall falter under foul rebellion's arms. [you king,

Bishop. Fear not, my lord: that power that made
Hath power to keep you king, in spite of all.

The means that heaven yields, must be embrac'd,
And not neglected; else, if heaven would,
And we will not, heaven's offer we refuse,
The proffer'd means of succor and redress.

Aum. He means, my lord, that we are too remiss;
Whilst Bolingbroke, through our security,
Grows strong and great in substance, and in power.

K. Rich. Discomfortable cousin! know'st thou
That when the searching eye of heaven is hid [not,
Behind the globe, and lights the lower world,
Then thieves and robbers range abroad unseen,
In murders and in outrage, bloody here;

But when from under this terrestrial ball
He fires the proud tops of the eastern pines,
And darts his light through every guilty hole,
Then murders, treasons, and detested sins,
The cloak of night being pluck'd from off their backs,
Stand bare and naked, trembling at themselves?

So when this thief, this traitor Bolingbroke,
Who all this while hath revell'd in the night,
Whilst we were wandering with the antipodes,
Shall see us rising in our throne, the east,
His treasons will sit blushing in his face,
Not able to endure the sight of day,
But, self-affrighted, tremble at his sin.

Not all the water in the rough rude sea
Can wash the balm from an anointed king:
The breath of worldly men cannot depose
The deputy elected by the Lord.

For every man that Bolingbroke hath press'd,
To lift shrewd steel against our golden crown,
God for his Richard hath in heavenly pay
A glorious angel: then, if angels fight,
Weak men must fall, for heaven still guards the right.

Enter SALISBURY.

Welcome, my lord. How far off lies your <sup>e</sup>power?
Sal. Nor near, nor farther off, my gracious lord,
Than this weak arm. Discomfort guides my tongue,
And bids me speak of nothing but despair.

One day too late, I fear, my noble lord,
Hath clouded all thy happy days on earth,
O! call back yesterday, bid time return,
And thou shalt have twelve thousand fighting men:

To-day, to-day, unhappy day too late,
O'erthrows thy joys, friends, fortune, and thy state;
For all the Welshmen, hearing thou wert dead,
Are gone to Bolingbroke, dispers'd, <sup>1</sup> or fled,

Aum. Comfort, my liege! why looks your grace
so pale? [men]

K. Rich. But now, the blood of twenty thousand
Did triumph in my face, and they are fled;

And till so much blood thither come again,
Have I not reason to look pale and dead?
All souls that be safe, fly from my side;
For time hath set a blot upon my pride.

Aum. Comfort, my liege! remember who you are.

K. Rich. I had forgot myself. Am I not king?
Awake, thou coward majesty! thou sleepest.
Is not the king's name twenty thousand names?
Arm, arm, my name! a puny subject strikes
At thy great glory.—Look not to the ground,
Ye favorites of a king: are we not high?
High be our thoughts. I know, my uncle York Hath power enough to serve our turn. But who comes here!

Enter SCROOP.

Scroop. More health and happiness betide my
Than can my care-tun'd tongue deliver him. [liege,

K. Rich. Mine ear is open, and my heart pre-
The worst is worldly loss thou canst unfold. [par'd:
Say, is my kingdom lost? why, 'twas my care;
And what loss is it to be rid of care?
Strives Bolingbroke to be as great as we?
Greater he shall not be: if he serve God,
We'll serve him too, and be his fellow so.
Revolt our subjects? that we cannot mend;
They break their faith to God, as well as us.
Cry woe, destruction, ruin, loss, decay.
The worst is death, and death will have his day.

Scroop. Glad am I, that your highness is so arm'd
To bear the tidings of calamity.
Like an unseasonable stormy day,
Which makes the silver rivers drown their shores,
As if the world were all dissolv'd to tears;
So high above his limits swells the rage
Of Bolingbroke, covering your fearful land
With hard bright steel, and hearts harder than steel.
White-beards have arm'd their thin and hairless scalps

Against thy majesty; and boys, with women's voices,
Strive to speak big, and <sup>2</sup>clasp their feeble joints
In stiff unwieldy <sup>3</sup>armor 'gainst thy crown:
Thy very beadsmen learn to bend their bows
Of <sup>4</sup>double-fatal yew against thy state;
Yea, distaff-women manage rusty <sup>5</sup>bills
Against thy seat: both young and old rebel,
And all goes worse than I have power to tell. [ill.

K. Rich. Too well, too well, thou tell'st a tale so Where is the earl of Wiltshire? where is Bagot?
What is become of Bushy? where is Green?
That they have let the dangerous enemy
Measure our confines with such peaceful steps?
If we prevail, their heads shall pay for it.
I warrant they have made peace with Bolingbroke.

Scroop. Peace have they made with him, indeed, my lord. [demption!]

K. Rich. O villains, vipers, damn'd without re-
Dogs, easily won to fawn on any man! [heart!]
Snakes, in my heart-blood warm'd, that sting my Three Judases, each one thrice worse than Judas!
Would they make peace? terrible hell make war
Upon their spotted souls for this offence!

Scroop. Sweet love, I see, changing his property,
Turns to the sourest and most deadly hate.

Again incurse their souls; their peace is made
With heads and not with hands: those whom you curse

Have felt the worst of death's destroying wound,
And lie full low, <sup>6</sup>grav'd in the hollow ground.

Aum. Is Bushy, Green, and the earl of Wiltshire, dead?

Scroop. Yea, all of them at Bristol lost their heads.

Aum. Where is the duke, my father, with his power? [speak:]

K. Rich. No matter where. Of comfort no man
Let's talk of graves, of worms, and epitaphs;
Make dust our paper, and with rainy eyes
Write sorrow on the bosom of the earth.

Let's choose executors, and talk of wills:
And yet not so,—for what can we bequeath,
Save our deposed bodies to the ground?
Our lands, our lives, and all are Bolingbroke's,
And nothing can we call our own but death,
And that small <sup>7</sup>model of the barren earth,
Which serves as paste and cover to our bones.

For God's sake, let us sit upon the ground,
And tell sad stories of the death of kings:
How some have been depos'd, some slain in war,
Some haunted by the ghosts they have depos'd,
Some poison'd by their wives, some sleeping kill'd,
All murder'd;—for within the hollow crown,
That rounds the mortal temples of a king,
Keeps death his court, and there the antick sits,
Scoffing his state, and grinning at his pomp;

Allowing him a breath, a little scene,
To monarchize, be fear'd, and kill with looks;
Infusing him with self and vain conceit,
As if this flesh, which walls about our life,
Were brass impregnable; and, humor'd thus,
Comes at the last, and with a little pin
Bores through his castle wall, and—farewell king!

Cover your heads, and mock not flesh and blood
With solemn reverence: throw away respect,
<sup>8</sup>Tradition, form, and ceremonious duty,
For you have but mistook me all this while:
I live with bread like you, feel want,

Taste grief, need friends: subjected thus,
How can you say to me—I am a king? [woes,

Bishop. My lord, wise men ne'er sit and wail their
But presently prevent the ways to wail.

To fear the foe, since fear oppresseth strength,
Gives, in your weakness, strength unto your foe,
And so your follies fight against yourself.

Fear, and be slain; no worse can come to fight:
And fight and die is death destroying death;
Where fearing dying pays death servile breath.

Aum. My father hath a <sup>9</sup>power, enquire of him,
And learn to make a body of a limb.

K. Rich. Thou chid'st me well.—Proud Boling-broke, I come

To change blows with thee for our day of doom.
This ague-fit of fear is over-blown:

An easy task it is, to win our own.—
Say, Scroop, where lies our uncle with his power?
Speak sweetly, man, although thy looks be sour.

Scroop. Men judge by the complexion of the sky
The state and inclination of the day;

So may you by my dull and heavy eye,
My tongue hath but a heavier tale to say.
I play the torturer, by small and <sup>10</sup>small,
To lengthen out the worst that must be spoken.

<sup>3</sup> Buried.—<sup>4</sup> Pattern; portion.—<sup>5</sup> "Tradition," i. e., traditional practices; customary homage.—<sup>6</sup> Force.—<sup>7</sup> By little and little.

Your uncle York is join'd with Bolingbroke;
And all your northern castles yielded up,
And all your southern gentlemen in arms
Upon his party.

K. Rich. Thou hast said enough.—

Beshrew thee, cousin, [To Aumerle.] which didst lead me forth

Of that sweet way I was in to despair!
What say you now? What comfort have we now?
By heaven, I'll hate him everlastingly,
That bids me be of comfort any more.
Go to Flint castle: there I'll pine away;
A king, woe's slave, shall kingly woe obey.
That power I have, discharge; and let them go
To a car the land that hath some hope to grow,
For I have none.—Let no man speak again
To alter this, for counsel is but vain.

Aum. My liege, one word.

K. Rich. He does me double wrong,
That wounds me with the flatteries of his tongue.
Discharge my followers: let them hence away,
From Richard's night to Bolingbroke's fair day.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Wales. A Plain before Flint
Castle.

Enter, with Drum and Colors, BOLINGBROKE and Forces; YORK, NORTHUMBERLAND, and Others.

Boling. So that by this intelligence we learn,
The Welshmen are dispers'd; and Salisbury
Is gone to meet the king, who lately landed
With some few private friends upon this coast.

North. The news is very fair and good, my lord:
Richard, not far from hence, hath bid his head.

York. It would beseem the lord Northumberland,
To say, king Richard:—Alack, the heavy day,
When such a sacred king should hide his head!

North. Your grace mistakes me; only to be brief,
Left I his title out.

York. The time hath been,
Would you have been so brief with him, he would Have been so brief with you, to shorten you,
For taking so the head, your whole head's length.

Boling. Mistake not, uncle, farther than you should. [should,

York. Take not, good cousin, farther than you
Lest you mistake: the heavens are o'er our heads.

Boling. I know it, uncle; and oppose not myself
Against their will.—But who comes here?

Enter PERCY.

Welcome, Harry. What, will not this castle yield?

Percy. The castle royally is mann'd, my lord,
Against thy entrance.

Boling. Royally?

Why, it contains no king.

Percy. Yes, my good lord,
It doth contain a king: king Richard lies
Within the limits of yond<sup>a</sup> lime and stone;
And with him are the lord Aumerle, lord Salisbury,
Sir Stephen Scroop; besides a clergyman
Of holy reverence, who, I cannot learn.

North. O! belike it is the bishop of Carlisle.

Boling. Noble lord, [To NORTH.]
Go to the rude ribs of that ancient castle;
Through brazen trumpet send the breath of parle
Into his ruin'd ears, and thus deliver.

Henry Bolingbroke
On both his knees doth kiss king Richard's hand,
And sends allegiance, and true faith of heart,
To his most royal person; hither come

Even at his feet to lay my arms and power,
Provided that, my banishment repeal'd,
And lands restor'd again, be freely granted.
If not, I'll use th<sup>e</sup> advantage of my power,
And lay the summer's dust with showers of blood,
Rain'd from the wounds of slaughter'd Englishmen:
The which, how far off from the mind of Bolingbroke
It is, such crimson tempest should bedrench
The fresh green lap of fair king Richard's land,
My stooping duty tenderly shall show.
Go; signify as much, while here we march
Upon the grassy carpet of this plain.
Let's march without the noise of threatening drum,
That from the castle's tatter'd battlements
Our fair appointments may be well perus'd.
Methinks, king Richard and myself should meet
With no less terror than the elements
Of fire and water, when their thundering shock
At meeting tears the cloudy cheeks of heaven.
Be he the fire, I'll be the yielding water:
The rage be his, while on the earth I rain
My waters; on the earth, and not on him.—
March on, and mark king Richard how he looks.

A parley sounded, and answered by a Trumpet within. Flourish. Enter on the walls King RICHARD, the Bishop of Carlisle, AUMERLE, SCROOP, and SALISBURY.

Boling. See, see, king Richard doth himself appear,
As doth the blushing discontented sun
From out the fiery portal of the east,
When he perceives the envious clouds are bent
To dim his glory, and to stain the track
Of his bright passage to the occident.

York. Yet looks he like a king: behold, his eye,
As bright as is the eagle's, lightens forth
Controlling majesty. Alack, alack, for woe,
That any<sup>1</sup> storm should stain so fair a show!

K. Rich. We are amaz'd; and thus long have we stood [To NORTHUMBERLAND.

To watch the<sup>2</sup> faithful bending of thy knee,
Because we thought ourself thy lawful king:
And if we be, how dare thy joints forget
To pay their awful duty to our presence?

If we be not, show us the hand of God
That hath dismiss'd us from our stewardship;
For well we know, no hand of blood and bone
Can gripe the sacred handle of our sceptre,
Unless he do profane, steal, or usurp.

And though you think that all, as you have done,
Have torn their souls by turning them from us,
And we are barren and bereft of friends,

Yet know, my master, God omnipotent,
Is mustering in his clouds on our behalf
Armies of pestilence; and they shall strike
Your children yet unborn, and unbegot,

That lift your vassal hands against my head,
And threat the glory of my precious crown.
Tell Bolingbroke, for yond<sup>3</sup>, methinks, he stands,
That every stride he makes upon my land
Is dangerous treason. He is come to ope

The purple<sup>4</sup> testament of bleeding war;
But ere the crown he looks for live in peace,
Ten thousand bloody crowns of mothers' sons
Shall ill become the<sup>5</sup> flower of England's face,
Change the complexion of her maid-pale peace
To scarlet indignation, and bedew

Her pasture's grass with faithful English blood.

North. The king of heaven forbid, our lord the Should so with civil and uncivil arms [king

<sup>a</sup> "To ear," i. e., to till; to plough.

<sup>1</sup> "To ope the purple testament of bleeding war," i. e., to ascertain what fortune war will assign him.—<sup>2</sup> "The flower of England's face," i. e., England's flowery face.

Be rush'd upon. Thy thrice-noble cousin,
 Harry Bolingbroke, doth humbly kiss thy hand;
 And by the honorable tomb he swears,
 That stands upon thy royal grandsire's bones,
 And by the royalties of both your bloods,
 Currents that spring from one most gracious head,
 And by the buried hand of warlike Gaunt,
 And by the worth and honor of himself,
 Comprising all that may be sworn or said,
 His coming hither hath no farther scope,
 Than for his lineal royalties, and to beg
 Enfranchisement immediate on his knees:
 Which on thy royal party granted once,
 His glittering arms he will commend to rust,
 His barbed steeds to stables, and his heart
 To faithful service of your majesty.
 This swears he, as he is a prince, is just,
 And, as a gentleman, I credit him. [returns.]

K. Rich. Northumberland, say,—thus the king
 His noble cousin is right welcome hither;
 And all the number of his fair demands
 Shall be accomplish'd without contradiction.
 With all the gracious utterance thou hast,
 Speak to his gentle hearing kind commendations.—

[NORTHUMBERLAND retires to BOLINGBROKE.]
 We do debase ourself, cousin, [To AUWERLE.] do
 To look so poorly, and to speak so fair? [we not,
 Shall we call back Northumberland, and send Defiance to the traitor, and so die? [words,
Aum. No, good my lord: let's fight with gentle Till time lend friends, and friends their helpful swords. [of mine,

K. Rich. O God! O God! that e'er this tongue
 That laid the sentence of dread banishment
 On yond' proud man, should take it off again
 With words of b'sooth. O! that I were as great
 As is my grief, or lesser than my name,
 Or that I could forget what I have been,
 Or not remember what I must be now.
 Swell't thou, proud heart? I'll give thee scope to beat, <sup>2</sup> [Unbuttoning.

Since foes have scope to beat both thee and me.
Aum. Northumberland comes back from Boling-broke. [submit!]

K. Rich. What must the king do now? Must he
 The king shall do it. Must he be depos'd?
 The king shall be contented. Must he lose
 The name of king? o' God's name, let it go:
 I'll give my jewels for a set of beads,
 My gorgeous palace for a hermitage,
 My gay apparel for an alms-man's gown,
 My figur'd goblets for a dish of wood,
 My sceptre for a palmer's walking staff,
 My subjects for a pair of carved saints,
 And my large kingdom for a little grave,
 A little little grave, an obscure grave:
 Or I'll be buried in the king's highway,
 Some way of common trade, where subjects' feet
 May hourly trample on their sovereign's head;
 For on my heart they tread, now whilst I live,
 And, buried once, yet not upon my head?—
 Auwerle, thou weep'st; my tender-hearted cousin!—
 We'll make foul weather with despised tears;
 Our sighs and they shall lodge the summer corn,
 And make a dearth in this revolting land:
 Or shall we play the wantons with our woes,
 And make some pretty match with shedding tears?
 As thus;—to drop them still upon one place,
 Till they have fretted us a pair of graves
 Within the earth; and, therein laid, there lies
 Two kinsmen digg'd their graves with weeping eyes.

* Commit.—b "Of sooth," i. e., of sweetnes, kindness.—
 c "Of common trade," i. e., of frequent resort.

Would not this ill do well?—Well, well, I see
 I talk but idly, and you mock at me.—
 Most mighty prince, my lord Northumberland,
 What says king Bolingbroke? will his majesty
 Give Richard leave to live till Richard die?

You make a<sup>d</sup> leg, and Bolingbroke says ay.

North. My lord, in the base court he doth attend
 To speak with you: may't please you to come down?

K. Rich. Down, down, I come; like glistening
 Wanting the manage of unruly jades. [Phaeton,

[NORTH. retires again to BOLING.

In the base court? Base court, where kings grow base,
 To come at traitors' calls, and do them grace.

In the base court? Come down? down, court! down, king!

For night-owls shriek, where mounting larks should sing. [Exeunt, from above.

Boling. What says his majesty?

North. Sorrow and grief of heart
<sup>3</sup> Make him speak fondly, like a frantic man:
 Yet he is come.

Enter King RICHARD, and his Attendants, below.

Boling. Stand all apart,
 And show fair duty to his majesty.—

My gracious lord,— [Kneeling.

K. Rich. Fair cousin, you debase your princely knee,
 To make the base earth proud with kissing it:
 Me rather had, my heart might feel your love,
 Than my unpleas'd eye see your courtesy.

Up, cousin, up: your heart is up, I know,
 Thus high at least, although your knee be low.

Boling. My gracious lord, I come but for mine own.

K. Rich. Your own is yours, and I am yours, and all.

Boling. So far be mine, my most redoubted lord,
 As my true service shall deserve your love. [have,

K. Rich. Well you deserve:—they will deserve to That know the strong'st and surest way to get.—
 Uncle, give me your hand: nay, dry your eyes;

Tears show their love, but want their remedies.—

Cousin, I am too young to be your father,
 Though you are old enough to be my heir.

What you will have I'll give, and willing too,
 For do we must what force will have us do.—

Set on towards London.—Cousin, is it so?

Boling. Yea, my good lord.

K. Rich. Then, I must not say no.
 [Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Langley. The Duke of York's Garden.

Enter the QUEEN, and two Ladies.

Queen. What sport shall we devise here in this
 To drive away the heavy thought of care? [garden,

1 Lady. Madam, we'll play at bowls. [rubs,

Queen. 'Twill make me think the world is full of
 And that my fortune runs against the bias.

1 Lady. Madam, we'll dance.

Queen. My legs can keep no measure in delight,
 When my poor heart no measure keeps in grief:

Therefore, no dancing, girl; some other sport.

1 Lady. Madam, we'll tell tales.

Queen. Of sorrow, or of joy?

1 Lady. Of either, madam.

Queen. Of neither, girl;

For if of joy, being altogether wanting,

It doth remember me the more of sorrow;

Or if of grief, being altogether had,

It adds more sorrow to my want of joy;

For what I have I need not to repeat,

And what I want it boots not to complain.

<sup>d</sup> "A leg," i. e., a bow.—<sup>e</sup> The base court was the lower court of the castle.—<sup>f</sup> Foolishly.—<sup>g</sup> Profits.

1 Lady. Madam, I'll sing.

Queen. 'Tis well that thou hast cause;
But thou should'st please me better, would'st thou weep.

1 Lady. I could weep, madam, would it do you good.

Queen. And I could sing, would weeping do me
And never borrow any tear of thee. [good,

But stay, here come the gardeners:

Let's step into the shadow of these trees.—

My wretchedness unto a row of pins,

They'll talk of state; for every one doth so

Against a change. Woe is <sup>a</sup>forerun with woe.

[QUEEN and Ladies retire.

Enter a Gardener and two Servants.

Gard. Go, bind thou up yon<sup>d</sup> dangling apriecoeks,

Which, like unruly children, make their sire

Stoop with oppression of their prodigal weight:

Give some supportance to the bending twigs.—

Go thou, and like an executioner,

Cut off the heads of too-fast-growing <sup>b</sup>sprays,

That look too lofty in our commonwealth:

All must be even in our government.—

You thus employ'd, I will go root away

The noisome weeds, that without profit suck

The soil's fertility from wholesome flowers.

1 Serv. Why should we, in the compass of a <sup>c</sup>pale,

Keep law, and form, and due proportion,

Showing, as in a model, our firm estate,

When our sea-walled garden, the whole land,

Is full of weeds; her fairest flowers chok'd up,

Her fruit-trees all unprun'd, her hedges ruin'd,

Her <sup>d</sup>knots disorder'd, and her wholesome herbs

Swarming with caterpillars?

Gard. Hold thy peace.

He that hath suffer'd this disorder'd spring,

Hath now himself met with the fall of leaf:

The weeds that his broad-spreading leaves did shelter,

That seem'd in eating him to hold him up,

Are pluck'd up, root and all, by Bolingbroke;

I mean, the earl of Wiltshire, Bushy, Green.

1 Serv. What! are they dead?

Gard. They are; and Bolingbroke

Hath seiz'd the wasteful king.—What pity is it,

That he had not so trimm'd and dress'd his land,

As we this garden. <sup>2</sup>At the time of year

<sup>3</sup>We wound the bark, the skin of our fruit-trees,

Lest, being over-proud in sap and blood,

With too much riches it confound itself:

Had he done so to great and growing men,

They might have liv'd to bear, and he to taste

Their fruits of duty. Superfluous branches

We lop away, that bearing boughs may live:

Had he done so, himself had borne the crown,

Which waste <sup>4</sup>and idle hours have quite thrown down.

1 Serv. What! think you, then, the king shall be depos'd?

Gard. Depress'd he is already; and depos'd,

'Tis <sup>5</sup>doubt, he will be: letters came last night

To a dear friend of the good duke of York's,

That tell black tidings.

Queen. O! I am press'd to <sup>f</sup>death, through want of speaking. [Coming forward.

Thou, old Adam's likeness, set to dress this garden,

How dares thy harsh, rude tongue sound this unpleasing news?

What Eve, what serpent hath suggested thee

To make a second fall of cursed man?

to woe.—<sup>b</sup> Sprouts; twigs.—<sup>c</sup> "A pale," i. e., an enclosure.

<sup>e</sup> "'Tis doubt," i. e., doubtless; there is little doubt.—<sup>f</sup> An allusion to the ancient punishment of pressing to death, inflicted upon prisoners refusing to plead.

Why dost thou say king Richard is depos'd?

Dar'st thou, thou little better thing than earth,
Divine his downfall? Say, where, when, and how,
Cam'st thou by these ill tidings? speak, thou wretch.

Gard. Pardon me, madam: little joy have I,

To breathe these news, yet what I say is true.

King Richard, he is in the mighty hold

Of Bolingbroke: their fortunes both are weigh'd:

In your lord's scale is nothing but himself,

And some few vanities that make him light;

But in the balance of great Bolingbroke,

Besides himself, are all the English peers,

And with that odds he weighs king Richard down.

Post you to London, and you'll find it so;

I speak no more than every one doth know.

Queen. Nimble mischance, that art so light of foot,

Doth not thy embassy belong to me,

And am I last that knows it? O! thou think'st

To serve me last, that I may longest keep

Thy sorrow in my breast.—Come, ladies, go

To meet at London London's king in woe.—

What! was I born to this, that my sad look

Should grace the triumph of great Bolingbroke?—

Gardener, for telling me these news of woe,

Pray God, the plants thou graft'st may never grow.

[Exeunt QUEEN and Ladies.

Gard. Poor queen! so that thy state might be no

I would my skill were subject to thy curse. [worse,

Here did she <sup>g</sup>fall a tear; here, in this place,

I'll set a bank of rue, sour herb of grace:

Rue, even for ruth, here shortly shall be seen,

In the remembrance of a weeping queen. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—London. Westminster Hall.

*The Lords spiritual on the right side of the Throne;
the Lords temporal on the left; the Commons below.*

Enter BOLINGBROKE, AUMERLE, SURREY, NORTH-UMBERLAND, PERCY, FITZWATER, another Lord, the Bishop of Carlisle, the Abbot of Westminster, and Attendants.<sup>h</sup>

Boling. Call forth Bagot.—

<sup>i</sup>Enter BAGOT, guarded.

Now, Bagot, freely speak thy mind,

What thou dost know of noble Gloucester's death;

Who wrought it with the king, and who perform'd

The bloody office of his <sup>j</sup>timeless end.

Bagot. Then, set before my face the lord Aumerle.

Boling. Cousin, stand forth, and look upon that man.

Bagot. My lord Aumerle, I know your daring tongue

Scorns to unsay what once it hath deliver'd.

In that dead time when Gloucester's death was plotted,

I heard you say,—<sup>k</sup>"Is not my arm of length,

That reacheth from the restful English court,

As far as Calais, to mine uncle's head?"

Against much other talk, that very time,

I heard you say, that you had rather refuse

The offer of an hundred thousand crowns,

Than Bolingbroke's return to England;

Adding withal, how blest this land would be

In this your cousin's death.

Aum. Princes, and noble lords,

What answer shall I make to this base man?

Shall I so much dishonor my fair <sup>l</sup>stars,

On equal terms to give him chastisement?

Either I must, or have mine honor soil'd

With the attainder of his slanderous lips.—

<sup>g</sup> Drop.—<sup>h</sup> Untimely.—<sup>i</sup> "My fair stars," i. e., the superior stars that presided at my birth. Only the inferior stars, according to Pliny, were supposed to be predominant at the birth of persons in the lower ranks of life.

There is my gage, the manual seal of death,
That marks thee out for hell: I say, thou liest,
And will maintain what thou hast said is false
In thy heart-blood, though being all too base
To stain the temper of my knightly sword.

Boling. Bagot, forbear: thou shalt not take it up.

Aum. Excepting one, I would he were the best
In all this presence, that hath mov'd me so.

Fitz. If that thy valor stand on <sup>a</sup>sympathy,
There is my gage, Aumerle, in gage to thine.
By that fair sun which shows me where thou stand'st,
I heard thee say, and vauntingly thou spak'st it,
That thou wert cause of noble Gloster's death.
If thou deny'st it twenty times, thou liest;
And I will turn thy falsehood to thy heart,
Where it was forged, with my rapier's point.

Aum. Thou dar'st not, coward, live to see that day.

Fitz. Now, by my soul, I would it were this hour.

Aum. Fitzwater, thou art damn'd to hell for this.

Percy. Aumerle, thou liest; his honor is as true
In this appeal, as thou art all unjust;
And, that thou art so, there I throw my gage,
To prove it on thee to th' extremest point
Of mortal breathing. Seize it if thou dar'st.

Aum. And if I do not, may my hands rot off,
And never brandish more revengeful steel
Over the glittering helmet of my foe!

Lord. I task the earth to the like, forsworn Aumerle;
And spur thee on with full as many lies
As may be holla'd in thy treacherous ear
From sun to <sup>b</sup>sun. There is my honor's pawn:
Engage it to the trial, if thou dar'st. [at all.

Aum. Who <sup>c</sup>sets me else? by heaven, I'll throw
I have a thousand spirits in one breast,
To answer twenty thousand such as you.

Surrey. My lord Fitzwater, I do remember well
The very time Aumerle and you did talk.

Fitz. 'Tis very true: you were in presence then;
And you can witness with me this is true. [true.

Surrey. As false, by heaven, as heaven itself is Fitz. Surrey, thou liest.

Surrey. Dishonorable boy!

That lie shall lie so heavy on my sword,
That it shall render vengeance and revenge,
Till thou, the lie-giver, and that lie, do lie
In earth as quiet as thy father's skull.
In proof whereof, there is my honor's pawn:
Engage it to the trial, if thou dar'st.

Fitz. How fondly dost thou spur a forward horse.

If I dare eat, or drink, or breathe, or live,
I dare meet Surrey in a <sup>d</sup>wilderness,
And spit upon him, whilst I say he lies,
And lies, and lies. There is my bond of faith,
To tie thee to my strong correction.

As I intend to thrive in this new <sup>e</sup>world,
Aumerle is guilty of my true appeal:
Besides, I heard the banish'd Norfolk say,
That thou, Aumerle, didst send two of thy men
To execute the noble duke at Calais.

Aum. Some honest Christian trust me with a gage.
That Norfolk lies, here do I throw down this,
If he may be repeal'd to try his honor.

Boling. These differences shall all rest under gage,
Till Norfolk be repeal'd: repeal'd he shall be,
And, though mine enemy, restor'd again
To all his lands and signories. When he's return'd, Against Aumerle we will enforce his trial.

Bishop. That honorable day shall ne'er be seen.

Many a time hath banish'd Norfolk fought
For Jesu Christ in glorious Christian field,
Streaming the ensign of the Christian cross
Against black pagans, Turks, and Saracens;
And toil'd with works of war, retir'd himself
To Italy, and there, at Venice, gave
His body to that pleasant country's earth,
And his pure soul unto his captain Christ,
Under whose colors he had fought so long.

Boling. Why, bishop, is Norfolk dead?

Bishop. As surely as I live, my lord. [the bosom
Boling. Sweet peace conduct his sweet soul to
Of good old Abraham!—Lords appellants,
Your differences shall all rest under gage,
Till we assign <sup>1</sup> to you your days of trial.

Enter YORK, attended.

York. Great duke of Lancaster, I come to thee,
From plume-pluck'd Richard, who with willing soul
Adopts thee here, and his high sceptre yields
To the possession of thy royal hand.

Ascend his throne, descending now from him,
And long live Henry, of that name the fourth!

Boling. In God's name I'll ascend the regal throne.

Bishop. Marry, God forbid!—

Worst in this royal presence may I speak,
Yet best besecming me to speak the truth.
Would God, that any in this noble presence
Were enough noble to be upright judge
Of noble Richard: then, true nobleness would Learn him forbearance from so foul a wrong.
What subject can give sentence on his king?

And who sits here that is not Richard's subject?
Thieves are not judg'd but they are by to hear,
Although apparent guilt be seen in them;
And shall the figure of God's majesty,
His captain, steward, deputy elect,
Anointed, crown'd, planted many years,
Be judg'd by subject and inferior breath,
And <sup>2</sup> he not present! O! <sup>3</sup>forbid it, God,
That, in a Christian climate, souls refin'd
Should show so heinous, black, obscene a deed!

I speak to subjects, and a subject speaks,
Stirr'd up by God thus boldly for his king.
My lord of Hereford here, whom you call king,
Is a foul traitor to proud Hereford's king;

And if you crown him, let me prophesy
The blood of English shall manure the ground,
And future ages groan for this foul act:

Peace shall go sleep with Turks and infidels,
And in this seat of peace tumultuous wars
Shall kin with kin, and kind with kind confound;
Disorder, horror, fear, and mutiny,
Shall here inhabit, and this land be call'd
The field of Golgotha, and dead men's skulls.
O! if you raise this house against this house,
It will the woofullest division prove,
That ever fell upon this cursed earth.

Prevent, resist it, let it not be so,
Least child, child's children, cry against you—woe!

North. Well have you argued, sir; and, for your
Of capital treason we arrest you here.— [pains,
My lord of Westminster, be it your charge
To keep him safely till his day of trial.

May it please you, lords, to grant the commons' suit.
Boling. Fetch hither Richard, that in common view
He may surrender: so we shall proceed
Without suspicion.

York. I will be his <sup>b</sup>conductor. [Exit.

Boling. Lords, you that here are under our arrest,
Procure your sureties for your days of answer.—
Little are we beholding to your love, [To the Bishop.
<sup>3</sup>And look for little at your helping hands.

<sup>b</sup> "From sun to sun," i. e., from sunrise to sunset.—<sup>c</sup> "Who acts me else," i. e., Who else offers me the pledge of battle?
—<sup>d</sup> "In a wilderness," i. e., where no help can be had against him.—<sup>e</sup> "In this new world," i. e., where I have just commenced my career.

Re-enter YORK, with King RICHARD, and Officers bearing the Crown, &c.

K. Rich. Alack! why am I sent for to a king,
Before I have shook off the regal thoughts
Wherewith I reign'd? I hardly yet have learn'd
To insinuate, flatter, bow, and bend my limbs:
Give sorrow leave awhile to tutor me
To this submission. Yet I well remember
The "favors of these men: were they not mine?
Did they not sometimes cry, All hail! to me?
So Judas did to Christ; but he, in twelve, [none.
Found truth in all, but one: I, in twelve thousand,
God save the king!—Will no man say, amen?
Am I both priest and clerk? well then, amen.
God save the king! although I be not he;
And yet, amen, if heaven do think him me.—
To do what service am I sent for hither?

York. To do that office of thine own good will,
Which tired majesty did make thee offer;
The resignation of thy state and crown
To Harry Bolingbroke.

K. Rich. Give me the crown.—Here, cousin, seize the crown; [1 Crown brought.
Here, cousin, on this side my hand, and on that side,
Now is this golden crown like a deep well, [yours.
That owes two buckets, filling one another;
The emptier ever dancing in the air,
The other down, unseen, and full of water:
That bucket down, and full of tears, am I,
Drinking my grief, whilst you mount up on high.

Boling. I thought you had been willing to resign.
K. Rich. My crown, I am; but still my griefs are You may my glories and my state depose, [mine.
But not my griefs: still am I king of those.

Boling. Part of your cares you give me with your crown. [down.

K. Rich. Your cares set up do not pluck my cares
My care is loss of care, by old care done;
Your care is gain of care, by new care won:
The cares I give, I have, though given away;
They "tend the crown, yet still with me they stay.

Boling. Are you contented to resign the crown?

K. Rich. Ay, no; no, ay;—for I must nothing be;
Therefore no no, for I resign to thee.
Now mark me how I will undo myself.—
I give this heavy weight from off my head,
And this unwieldy sceptre from my hand,
The pride of kingly sway from out my heart:
With mine own tears I wash away my "balm,
With mine own hands I give away my crown,
With mine own tongue deny my sacred state,
With mine own breath release all duties, rites:
All pomp and majesty I do forswear;
My manors, rents, revenues, I forego;
My acts, decrees, and statutes, I deny:
God pardon all oaths that are broke to me!
God keep all vows unbroke that swear to thee!
Make me, that nothing have, with nothing griev'd,
And thou with all pleas'd, that hast all achiev'd!
Long may'st thou live in Richard's seat to sit,
And soon lie Richard in an earthy pit!
God save king Henry, unking'd Richard says,
And send him many years of sunshine days!—
What more remains?

North. No more, but that you read [Offering a paper.
These accusations, and these grievous crimes,
Committed by your person, and your followers,
Against the state and profit of this land;
That, by confessing them, the souls of men

May deem that you are worthily depos'd.

K. Rich. Must I do so? and must I ravel out
My weav'd up folly? Gentle Northumberland,
If thy offences were upon record,
Would it not shame thee, in so fair a troop,
To read a lecture of them? If thou "would'st,
There should'st thou find one heinous article,
Containing the deposing of a king,
And cracking the strong warrant of an oath,
Mark'd with a blot, damn'd in the book of heaven.—
Nay, all of you, that stand and look upon me,
Whilst that my wretchedness doth bait myself,
Though some of you, with Pilate, wash your hands,
Showing an outward pity; yet you Pilates
Have here deliver'd me to my sour cross,
And water cannot wash away your sin. [cles.

North. My lord, dispatch: read o'er these arti-

K. Rich. Mine eyes are full of tears, I cannot see;
And yet salt water blinds them not so much,
But they can see a sort of traitors here.
Nay, if I turn mine eyes upon myself,
I find myself a traitor with the rest;
For I have given here my soul's consent,
To undo the pompous body of a king;
Made glory base, and sovereignty a slave,
Proud majesty a subject; state a peasant.

North. My lord,— [man,

K. Rich. No lord of thine, thou "haught, insulting
Nor no man's lord: I have no name, no title,
No, not that name was given me at the font,
But 'tis usurp'd.—Alack, the heavy day!
That I have worn so many winters out,
And know not now what name to call myself.
O! that I were a mockery king of snow,
Standing before the sun of Bolingbroke,
To melt myself away in water drops!—
Good king,—great king,—and yet not greatly good,
And if my name be sterling yet in England,
Let it command a mirror hither straight,
That it may show me what a face I have,
Since it is bankrupt of "his majesty.

Boling. Go some of you, and fetch a looking-glass.
[Exit an Attendant.

North. Read o'er this paper, while the glass doth come. [to hell.

K. Rich. Fiend! thou torment'st me ere I come

Boling. Urge it no more, my lord Northumberland.

North. The commons will not then be satisfied.

K. Rich. They shall be satisfied: I'll read enough,
When I do see the very book indeed,
Where all my sins are writ, and that's—myself.

Re-enter Attendant with a Glass.

Give me the glass, and therein will I read.—
No deeper wrinkles yet? Hath sorrow struck
So many blows upon this face of mine,
And made no deeper wounds?—O, flattering glass!
Like to my followers in prosperity,
Thou dost beguile me. Was this the face the face,
That every day under his household roof
Did keep ten thousand men? Was this the face,
That like the sun did make beholders wink?
Was this the face, that fac'd so many follies,
And was at last out-fac'd by Bolingbroke?
A brittle glory shineth in this face:
As brittle as the glory is the face;

[Dashes the Glass against the ground.
For there it is, crack'd in a hundred shivers.—
Mark, silent king, the moral of this sport:

"If thou would'st," i. e., if thou would'st read a list of thy own deeds.—<sup>f</sup> "Sort," i. e., set; company.—<sup>g</sup> Haughty.—<sup>h</sup> His is used for its.

How soon my sorrow hath destroy'd my face.

Boling. The shadow of your sorrow hath destroy'd
The shadow of your face.

K. Rich. Say that again.
The shadow of my sorrow? Ha! let's see:—
'Tis very true, my grief lies all within;
And these external manners of lament
Are merely shadows to the unseen grief,
That swells with silence in the tortur'd soul;
There lies the substance: and I thank thee, king,
For thy great bounty, that not only giv'st
Me cause to wail, but teachest me the way
How to lament the cause. I'll beg one boon,
And then begone and trouble you no more.
Shall I obtain it?

Boling. Name it, fair cousin.

K. Rich. Fair cousin! I am greater than a king;
For, when I was a king, my flatterers
Were then but subjects; being now a subject,
I have a king here to my flatterer.
Being so great, I have no need to beg.

Boling. Yet ask.

K. Rich. And shall I have it?

Boling. You shall.

K. Rich. Why then give me leave to go.

Boling. Whither? [sighs.]

K. Rich. Whither you will, so I were from your Boling. Go, some of you; convey him to the Tower. [all.]

K. Rich. O, good! Convey?—<sup>a</sup> Conveyors are you
That rise thus nimbly by a true king's fall.

[Exeunt K. RICHARD, and Guard.]

Boling. On Wednesday next we solemnly set
Our coronation: lords, prepare yourselves. [down [Exeunt all but the Abbot, Bishop of Carlisle, and AUMERLE.

Abbot. A woeful pageant have we here beheld.

Bishop. The woe's to come: the children yet unborn
Shall feel this day as sharp to them as thorn. [born

Aum. You holy clergymen, is there no plot
To rid the realm of this pernicious blot? [herein,

Abbot. My lord, before I freely speak my mind
You shall not only take the sacrament
To bury mine intents, but also to effect
Whatever I shall happen to devise.
I see your brows are full of discontent,
Your hearts of sorrow, and your eyes of tears:
Come home with me to supper; I will lay
A plot, shall show us all a merry day. [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—London. A Street leading to the Tower.

Enter QUEEN, and Attendants.

Queen. This way the king will come: this is the
To Julius Caesar's <sup>b</sup>ill-erected tower, [way
To whose flint bosom my condemned lord
Is doom'd a prisoner by proud Bolingbroke.
Here let us rest, if this rebellious earth
Have any resting for her true king's queen.

Enter King RICHARD, and Guard.

But soft, but see, or rather do not see,
My fair rose wither: yet look up, behold,
That you in pity may dissolve to dew,
And wash him fresh again with true-love tears.—
Ah! thou, the <sup>c</sup>model where old Troy did stand;

Thou <sup>d</sup>map of honor; thou king Richard's tomb,
And not king Richard; thou mostauteous <sup>e</sup>inn,
Why should hard-favor'd grief be lodg'd in thee,
When triumph is become an alehouse guest? [so,

K. Rich. Join not with grief, fair woman, do not
To make my end too sudden: learn, good soul,
To think our former state a happy dream;
From which awak'd, the truth of what we are Shows us but this. I am sworn <sup>f</sup>brother, sweet,
To grim necessity; and he and I
Will keep a league till death. Hie thee to France,
And cloister thee in some religious house:
Our holy lives must win a new world's crown,
Which our profane hours here have stricken down.

Queen. What! is my Richard both in shape and mind

Transform'd and weaken'd? Hath <sup>g</sup>this Bolingbroke
Depos'd thine intellect? hath he been in thy heart?
The lion, dying, thrusteth forth his paw,
And wounds the earth, if nothing else, with rage
To be o'erpower'd; and wilt thou, pupil-like
Take thy correction mildly? kiss the rod,
And fawn on rage with base humility,
Which art a lion, and a king of beasts? [beasts,
K. Rich. A king of beasts, indeed; if aught but I had been still a happy king of men.

Good sometime queen, prepare thee hence for France:
Think I am dead; and that even here thou tak'st,
As from my death-bed, my last living leave.

In winter's tedious nights sit by the fire
With good old folks, and let them tell thee tales
Of woeful ages long ago <sup>h</sup>betid;
And, ere thou bid good night, to <sup>i</sup>quit their grief,
Tell thou the lamentable tale of me,
And send the hearers weeping to their beds.
For why, the senseless brands will sympathize
The heavy accent of thy moving tongue,
And in compassion weep the fire out;
And some will mourn in ashes, some coal-black,
For the deposing of a rightful king.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND, attended.

North. My lord, the mind of Bolingbroke is chang'd:
You must to Pomfret, not unto the Tower.—
And, madam, there is order ta'en for you:

With all swift speed you must away to France.
K. Rich. Northumberland, thou ladder, wherewithal

The mounting Bolingbroke ascends my throne,
The time shall not be many hours of age
More than it is, ere foul sin gathering head
Shall break into corruption. Thou shalt think,
Though he divide the realm, and give thee half,
It is too little, helping him to all:
And he shall think, that thou, which know'st the way
To plant unrightful kings, wilt know again,
Being ne'er so little urg'd, another way
To pluck him headlong from the usurped throne.
The love of wicked friends converts to fear;
That fear to hate; and hate turns one, or both,
To worthy danger and deserved death.

North. My guilt be on my head, and there an end.
Take leave, and part, for you must part forthwith.

K. Rich. Doubly divorce'd!—Bad men, ye violate
A twofold marriage; 'twixt my crown and me,
And then, betwixt me and my married wife.—
Let me unkniss the oath 'twixt thee and me;

<sup>2</sup>[They embrace.]

And yet not so, for with a kiss 'twas made.—
Part us, Northumberland: I toward the north,
Where shivering cold and sickness pine the climate;

—<sup>f</sup> "Sworn brother," i. e., partner.—<sup>g</sup> Passed.—<sup>h</sup> "To quit their grief," i. e., to requite their mournful stories.

My wife to France: from whence, set forth in pomp,
She came adorned hither like sweet May,
Sent back like <sup>a</sup> Hallowmas, or <sup>1</sup> shortest day.

Queen. And must we be divided? must we part?

K. Rich. Ay, hand from hand, my love, and heart from heart.

Queen. Banish us both, and send the king with me.
North. That were some love, but little policy.

Queen. Then whither he goes, thither let me go.

K. Rich. So two, together weeping, make one woe.

Keep thou for me in France, I for thee here;

Better far off, than near, <sup>2</sup> being ne'er the <sup>b</sup> near.

Go; count thy way with sighs, I mine with groans.

Queen. So longest way shall have the longest moans. [being short,

K. Rich. Twice for one step I'll groan, the way And piece the way out with a heavy heart.

Come, come, in wooing sorrow let's be brief,
Since, wedding it, there is such length in grief.

One kiss shall stop our mouths, and dumbly part:

Thus give I mine, and thus take I thy heart.

[They kiss.

Queen. Give me mine own again; 'twere no good To take on me to keep, and kill thy heart. [part,

[They kiss again.

So, now I have mine own again, begone,
That I may strive to kill it with a groan. [lay:

K. Rich. We make woe wanton with this fond decoy more, adieu; the rest let sorrow say. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in the Duke of York's Palace.

Enter York, and the Duchess.

Duch. My lord, you told me, you would tell the When weeping made you break the story off, [rest,
Of our two cousins coming into London.

York. Where did I leave?

Duch. At that sad stop, my lord,
Where rude misgovern'd hands, from windows' tops,
Threw dust and rubbish on king Richard's head.

York. Then, as I said, the duke, great Bolingbroke,
Mounted upon a hot and fiery steed,
Which his aspiring rider seem'd to know,
With slow but stately pace kept on his course,
While all tongues cried—"God save thee, Bolingbroke!"

You would have thought the very windows spake,
So many greedy looks of young and old
Through casements darted their desiring eyes
Upon his visage; and that all the walls
With painted imagery had said at once,—

"Jesu preserve thee! welcome, Bolingbroke!"
Whilst he, from one side to the other turning,
Bare-headed, lower than his proud steed's neck,
Bespake them thus,—"I thank you, countrymen:"
And thus still doing, thus he pass'd along. [whilst?

Duch. Alas, poor Richard! where rode he the

York. As in a theatre, the eyes of men,
After a well-grac'd actor leaves the stage,
Are idly bent on him that enters next,
Thinking his prattle to be tedious;
Even so, or with much more contempt, men's eyes
Did scowl on gentle Richard: no man cried, God save him;

No joyful tongue gave him his welcome home;
But dust was thrown upon his sacred head,
Which with such gentle sorrow he shook off,
His face still combating with tears and smiles,
The badges of his grief and patience,
That had not God, for some strong purpose, steel'd

The hearts of men, they must perforce have melted,
And barbarism itself have pitied him.

But heaven hath a hand in these events,

To whose high will we bound our calm contents.

To Bolingbroke are we sworn subjects now,

Whose state and honor I for aye allow.

Duch. Here comes my son Aumerle.

York. Aumerle that was;

But that is lost for being Richard's friend,

And, madam, you must call him <sup>c</sup> Rutland now.

I am in parliament pledge for his truth,

And lasting fealty to the new-made king.

Enter AUMERLE.

Duch. Welcome, my son. Who are the violets now,
That strew the green lap of the new-come spring?

Aum. Madam, I know not, nor I greatly care not:
God knows, I had as lief be none, as one. [time,

York. Well, bear you well in this new spring of Lest you be cropp'd before you come to prime.

What news from Oxford? hold those justs and triumphs?

Aum. For aught I know, my lord, they do.

York. You will be there, I know.

Aum. If God prevent it not, I purpose so.

York. What <sup>d</sup> seal is that, that hangs without thy bosom?

Yea, look'st thou pale? let me <sup>e</sup> then see the writing.

Aum. My lord, 'tis nothing.

York. No matter, then, who sees it:

I will be satisfied, let me see the writing.

Aum. I do beseech your grace to pardon me.

It is a matter of small consequence,

Which for some reasons I would not have seen.

York. Which for some reasons, sir, I mean to see.

I fear, I fear,—

Duch. What should you fear?

'Tis nothing but some bond <sup>f</sup> he's enter'd into

For gay apparel 'gainst the triumph day. [bond

York. Bound to himself? what doth he with a

That he is bound to? Wife, thou art a fool.—

Boy, let me see the writing. [show it.

Aum. I do beseech you, pardon me: I may not

York. I will be satisfied: let me see it, I say.

[Snatches it and reads.

Treason! foul treason!—villain! traitor! slave!

Duch. What is the matter, my lord? [horse.

York. Ho! who is within there? Saddle my God for his mercy! what treachery is here!

Duch. Why, what is it, my lord?

York. Give me my boots, I say: saddle my horse.—

Now by mine honor, by my life, my troth,

I will appeach the villain.

Duch.

What's the matter?

York. Peace, foolish woman. [Aumerle?

Duch. I will not peace.—What is the matter,

Aum. Good mother, be content: it is no more

Than my poor life must answer.

Duch.

Thy life answer?

York. Bring me my boots! I will unto the king.

Enter Servant with boots.

Duch. Strike him, Aumerle.—Poor boy, thou art amaz'd.—

Hence, villain! never more come in my sight.—

[Exit Servant.

York. Give me my boots, I say.

Duch. Why, York, what wilt thou do?

Wilt thou not hide the trespass of thine own?

Have we more sons, or are we like to have?

Is not my teeming date drunk up with time,

<sup>a</sup> Hallowmas, the first of November.—<sup>b</sup> "Ne'er the near," i. e., never the nearer.

And wilt thou pluck my fair son from mine age,
And rob me of a happy mother's name?
Is he not like thee? is he not thine own?

York. Thou fond, mad woman,
Wilt thou conceal this dark conspiracy?
A dozen of them here have ta'en the sacrament,
And interchangeably set down their hands,
To kill the king at Oxford.

Duch. He shall be none;
We'll keep him here: then, what is that to him?

York. Away, fond woman! were he twenty times
My son, I would approach him.

Duch. Hadst thou groan'd for him,
As I have done, thou would'st be more pitiful.
But now I know thy mind: thou dost suspect,
That I have been disloyal to thy bed,
And that he is a bastard, not thy son.
Sweet York, sweet husband, be not of that mind:
He is as like thee as a man may be,
Not like to me, nor any of my kin,
And yet I love him.

York. Make way, unruly woman. [Exit.]

Duch. After, Aumerle! Mount thee upon his Spur, post, and get before him to the king, [horse:
And beg thy pardon ere he do accuse thee.
I'll not be long behind: though I be old,
I doubt not but to ride as fast as York:
And never will I rise up from the ground, Till Bolingbroke have pardon'd thee. Away! begone. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Windsor. A Room in the Castle.

Enter BOLINGBROKE as King; PERCY, and other Lords.

Boling. Can no man tell me of my unthrifty son?
'Tis full three months, since I did see him last:
If any plague hang over us, 'tis he.
I would to God, my lords, he might be found.
Inquire at London, 'mongst the taverns there,
For there, they say, he daily doth frequent,
With unrestrained loose companions;
Even such, they say, as stand in narrow lanes,
And beat our watch, and rob our passengers;
While he, young wanton, and effeminate boy,
Takes on the point of honor to support
So dissolute a crew. [Prince,

Percy. My lord, some two days since I saw thee
And told him of these triumphs held at Oxford.

Boling. And what said the gallant?

Percy. His answer was,—he would unto the stewes;
And from the common'st creature pluck a glove,
And wear it as a favor; and with that
He would unhorse the lustiest challenger.

Boling. As dissolute, as desperate: yet through both
I see some sparks of better hope, which elder days
May happily bring forth. But who comes here?

Enter AUMERLE, in great haste.

Aum. Where is the king?

Boling. What means our cousin, that he stares and So wildly? [Majesty,

Aum. God save your grace. I do beseech your
To have some conference with your grace alone.

Boling. Withdraw yourselves, and leave us here alone.— [Exeunt PERCY and Lords.]

What is the matter with our cousin now?

Aum. For ever may my knees grow to the earth, [Kneels.

My tongue cleave to my roof within my mouth,
Unless a pardon, ere I rise, or speak.

Boling. Intended, or committed, was this fault?
If on the first, how heinous e'er it be,
To win thy after love I pardon thee.

Aum. Then give me leave that I may turn the key,

That no man enter till my tale be done.

Boling. Have thy desire. [AUMERLE locks the door.]

York. [Within.] My liege, beware! look to thyself:
Thou hast a traitor in thy presence there.

Boling. Villain, I'll make thee safe. [Drawing.]

Aum. Stay thy revengeful hand: thou hast no cause to fear. [king:

York. [Within.] Open the door, secure, fool hardy
Shall I for love speak treason to thy face?

Open the door, or I will break it open.

[BOLINGBROKE opens the door, and locks it again.]

Enter YORK.

Boling. What is the matter, uncle? speak;

Recover breath: tell us how near is danger,

That we may arm us to encounter it.

York. Peruse this writing here, and thou shalt know
The treason that my haste forbids me show.

Aum. Remember, as thou read'st, thy promise past.

I do repent me; read not my name there:

My heart is not confederate with my hand.

York. It was, villain, ere thy hand did set it down.—

I tore it from the traitor's bosom, king:

Fear, and not love, begets his penitence.

Forget to pity him, lest thy pity prove

A serpent that will sting thee to the heart.

Boling. O, heinous, strong, and bold conspiracy!—

O, loyal father of a treacherous son!

Thou a sheer, immaculate, and silver fountain,

From whence this stream through muddy passages

Hath held his current, and defil'd himself!

Thy overflow of good converts to bad;

And thy abundant goodness shall excuse

This deadly blot in thy <sup>b</sup>digressing son.

York. So shall my virtue be his vice's bawd,

And he shall spend mine honor with his shame,

As thriftless sons their scraping fathers' gold.

Mine honor lives when his dishonor dies,

Or my sham'd life in his dishonor lies:

Thou kill'st me in his life; giving him breath,

The traitor lives, the true man's put to death.

Duch. [Within.] What ho! my liege! for God's sake let me in. [eager cry!]

Boling. What shrill-voic'd suppliant makes this

Duch. A woman, and thine aunt, great king; 'tis I.

Speak with me, pity me, open the door:

A beggar begs, that never begg'd before.

Boling. Our scene is altered, from a serious thing,

And now chang'd to "The Beggar and the King."—

My dangerous cousin, let your mother in:

I know, she's come to pray for your soul sin.

York. If thou do pardon, whosoever pray,

More sins for this forgiveness prosper may.

This fester'd joint cut off, the rest rest sound;

This, let alone, will all the rest confound.

Enter DUCHESSES.

Duch. O king! believe not this hard-hearted man:

Love, loving not itself, none other can. [here:]

York. Thou frantic woman, what dost thou <sup>c</sup>make

Shall thy old dogs once more a traitor rear?

Duch. Sweet York, be patient. Hear me, gentle liege. [Kneels.

Boling. Rise up, good aunt.

Duch. Not yet, I thee beseech:

For ever will I walk upon my knees,

And never see day that the happy sees,

Till thou give joy; until thou bid me joy,

By pardoning Rutland, my transgressing boy

Aum. Unto my mother's prayers, I bend my knee.

<sup>a</sup> "Sheer," i. e., clear; transparent.—<sup>b</sup> "Digressing," i. e., deviating from the right.—<sup>c</sup> "The Beggar and the King" was the name of an old ballad.—<sup>d</sup> "What dost thou make," i. e., what dost thou do.

York. Against them both, my true joints bended be.

[Kneels.]

Ill may'st thou thrive, if thou grant any grace!

Duch. Pleads he in earnest? look upon his face;

His eyes do drop no tears, his prayers are in jest;

His words come from his mouth, ours from our breast:

He prays but faintly, and would be denied;

We pray with heart, and soul, and all besides;

His weary joints would gladly rise, I know;

Our knees shall kneel till to the ground they grow:

His prayers are full of false hypocrisy;

Ours of true zeal and deep integrity.

Our prayers do out-pray his; then, let them have

That mercy which true prayers ought to have.

Boling. Good aunt, stand up.

Duch. Nay, do not say—stand up;

But, pardon first, and afterwards, stand up.

And if I were thy nurse, thy tongue to teach,

Pardon should be the first word of thy speech.

I never long'd to hear a word till now;

Say—pardon, king; let pity teach thee how:

The word is short, but not so short as sweet;

No word like pardon, for kings' mouths so meet.

York. Speak it in French, king: say, a pardonnez-moi.

Duch. Dost thou teach pardon pardon to destroy?

Ah, my sour husband, my hard-hearted lord,

That set'st the word itself against the word!

Speak, pardon, as 'tis current in our land;

The <sup>3</sup> chopping French we do not understand.

Thine eye begins to speak, set thy tongue there,

Or in thy piteous heart plant thou thine ear,

That hearing how our plaints and prayers do pierce,

Pity may move thee pardon to rehearse.

Boling. Good aunt, stand up.

Duch. I do not sue to stand:

Pardon is all the suit I have in hand.

Boling. I pardon him, as God shall pardon me.

Duch. O, happy vantage of a kneeling knee!

Yet am I sick for fear: speak it again;

Twice saying pardon doth not pardon twain,

But makes one pardon strong.

Boling. I pardon him with all my heart.

Duch. A god on earth thou art. <sup>1</sup>[Rises.]

Boling. But for our trusty <sup>c</sup> brother-in-law, and the

With all the rest of that consorted crew, <sup>d</sup>[abbot,

Destruction straight shall dog them at the heels.—

Good uncle, help to order several powers

To Oxford, or <sup>2</sup>where else these traitors <sup>3</sup>be:

They shall not live within this world, I swear,

But I will have them, <sup>4</sup>so I once know where.

Uncle, farewell,—and cousin <sup>5</sup>mine, adieu:

Your mother well hath pray'd, and prove you true.

Duch. Come, my old son; I pray God make thee new. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

Enter Sir PIERCE of EXTON, and a Servant.

Exton. Didst thou not mark the king, what words he spake?

"Have I no friend will rid me of this living fear?" Was it not so?

Serv. Those were his very words.

Exton. "Have I no friend?" quoth he: he spake And urg'd it twice together, did he not? [It twice,

Serv. He did.

Exton. And, speaking it, he <sup>a</sup>wishtly look'd on me; As who should say,—I would thou wert the man

That would divorce this terror from my heart;

Meaning the king at Pomfret. Come, let's go:

I am the king's friend, and will rid his foe. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Pomfret. The Dungeon of the Castle.

Enter King RICHARD.

K. Rich. I have been studying how I may compare This prison, where I live, unto the world:

And, for because the world is populous,

And here is not a creature but myself,

I cannot do it: yet I'll hammer't out.

My brain I'll prove the female to my soul;

My soul, the father: and these two beget

A generation of still-breeding thoughts,

And these same thoughts people this little world;

In humors like the people of this world,

For no thought is contented. The better sort,

As thoughts of things divine, are intermix'd

With scruples, and do set the <sup>2</sup>word itself

Against the word:

As thus,—"<sup>a</sup>Come, little ones;" and then again,—

"It is as hard to come, as for a camel

To tread the postern of a <sup>6</sup>small needle's eye."

Thoughts tending to ambition, they do plot

Unlikely wonders: how these vain weak nails

May tear a passage through the flinty ribs

Of this hard world, my ragged prison walls;

And, <sup>b</sup>for they cannot, die in their own pride.

Thoughts tending to content flatter themselves,

That they are not the first of fortune's slaves,

Nor shall not be the last; like silly beggars,

Who, sitting in the stocks, <sup>c</sup>refuge their shame

That many have, and others must sit there:

And in this thought they find a kind of ease,

Bearing their own misfortune on the back

Of such as have before endur'd the like.

Thus play I, in one person, many people,

And none contented: sometimes am I king;

Then, treason makes me wish myself a beggar,

And so I am: then, crushing penury

Persuades me I was better when a king:

Then, am I king'd again; and, by and by,

Think that I am unking'd by Bolingbroke,

And straight am nothing.—But whate'er I am,

Nor I, nor any man, that but man is,

With nothing shall be pleas'd, till he be eas'd

With being nothing.—Music do I hear? [Music.]

Ha, ha! keep time.—How sour sweet music is,

When time is broke, and no proportion kept!

So is it in the music of men's lives:

And here have I the daintiness of ear,

To check time broke in a disorder'd string,

But for the concord of my state and time,

Had not an ear to hear my true time broke.

I wasted time, and now doth time waste me;

For now hath time made me his numbering clock:

My thoughts are minutes, and with sighs they <sup>4</sup>jar,

Their watches on unto mine eyes the outward watch,

Whereto my finger, like a dial's point,

Is pointing still, in cleansing them from tears.

Now, <sup>7</sup>for the sound, that tells what hour it is,

Are clamorous groans, that strike upon my heart,

Which is the bell: so sighs, and tears, and groans,

Show minutes, times, and hours; but my time

Runs posting on in Bolingbroke's proud joy,

While I stand fooling here, his 'Jack o' the clock.

This music mads me: let it sound no more,

For though it hath holpe madmen to their wits,
In me, it seems, it will make wise men mad.
Yet, blessing on his heart that gives it me!
For 'tis a sign of love, and love to Richard
Is a strange <sup>a</sup>brooch in this all-hating world.

Enter Groom.

Groom. Hail, royal prince!

K. Rich. Thanks, noble peer;
The cheapest of us is ten groats too dear.
What art thou? and how comest thou hither,
Where no man never comes, but that sad dog
That brings me food to make misfortune live?

Groom. I was a poor groom of thy stable, king,
When thou wert king; who, travelling towards York,
With much ado, at length have gotten leave
To look upon my <sup>b</sup>sometime royal master's face.
O! how it yern'd my heart, when I beheld
In London streets that coronation day,
When Bolingbroke rode on roan Barbary!
That horse that thou so often hast bestrid,
That horse that I so carefully have dress'd! [friend,
K. Rich. Rode he on Barbary? Tell me, gentle
How went he under him?

Groom. So <sup>1</sup>proud, as if he had disdain'd the ground.

K. Rich. So proud that Bolingbroke was on his back?

That jade hath eat bread from my royal hand;
This hand hath made him proud with clapping him.
Would he not stumble? Would he not fall down,
(Since pride must have a fall) and break the neck
Of that proud man that did usurp his back?
Forgiveness, horse! why do I rail on thee,
Since thou, created to be aw'd by man,
Wast born to bear? I was not made a horse;
And yet I bear a burden like an ass,
Spur-gall'd and tir'd by <sup>c</sup>jauncing Bolingbroke.

Enter Keeper, with a Dish.

Keeper. Fellow, give place: here is no longer stay.
[To the Groom.

K. Rich. If thou love me, 'tis time thou wert away.
Groom. What my tongue dares not, that my heart shall say. [Exit.

Keeper. My lord, will't please you to fall to?

K. Rich. Taste of it first, as thou art wont to do.

Keeper. My lord, I dare not: Sir Pierce of Exton, who lately came from the king, commands the contrary. [thee!

K. Rich. The devil take Henry of Lancaster, and Patience is stale, and I am weary of it.

[Strikes the Keeper.

Keeper. Help, help, help!

Enter Sir PIERCE of EXTON, and Servants, armed.

K. Rich. How now! what means death in this rude assault?

Villain, thine own hand yields thy death's instrument.
[Snatching a weapon, and killing one.
Go thou and fill another room in hell.

[He kills another: EXTON strikes him down.
That hand shall burn in never-quenching fire,
That staggers thus my person.—Exton, thy fierce hand [land.
Hath with the king's blood stain'd the king's own
Mount, mount, my soul! thy scat is up on high,
Whilst my gross flesh sinks downward, here to die.

[Dies.

Exton. As full of valor, as of royal blood:
Both have I spilt: O, would the deed were good!
For now the devil, that told me I did well,

Says that this deed is chronicled in hell.
This dead king to the living king I'll bear.—
Take hence the rest, and give them burial here.
[Exeunt <sup>2</sup>with the bodies.

SCENE VI.—Windsor. An Apartment in the Castle.

Flourish. Enter BOLINGBROKE, and YORK with Lords and Attendants.

Boling. Kind uncle York, the latest news we hear
Is, that the rebels have consum'd with fire
Our town of Cicester in Gloucestershire;
But whether they be ta'en, or slain, we hear not.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.

Welcome, my lord. What is the news <sup>3</sup>with you?
North. First, to thy sacred state wish I all happi-
The next news is,—I have to London sent [ness:
The heads of Salisbury, Spencer, Blunt, and Kent:
The manner of their taking may appear
At large discoursed in this paper here.

[Presenting a Paper.

Boling. We thank thee, gentle Percy, for thy pains,
And to thy worth will add right worthy gains.

Enter FITZWATER.

Fitz. My lord, I have from Oxford sent to London
The heads of Brocas, and Sir Bennet Seely,
Two of the dangerous consorted traitors,
That sought at Oxford thy dire overthrow.

Boling. Thy pains, Fitzwater, shall not be forgot;
Right noble is thy merit, well I wot.

Enter PERCY, with the Bishop of Carlisle.

Percy. The grand conspirator, abbot of Westmin-
With clog of conscience, and sour melancholy, [ster,
Hath yielded up his body to the grave;
But here is Carlisle living, to abide
The kingly doom, and sentence of his pride.

Boling. <sup>4</sup>Bishop of Carlisle, this shall be your doom:—

Choose out some secret place, some reverend room,
More than thou hast, and with it <sup>5</sup>joy thy life;
So, as thou liv'st in peace, die free from strife:
For though mine enemy thou hast ever been,
High sparks of honor in thee have I seen.

Enter EXTON, with Attendants bearing a Coffin.

Exton. Great king, within this coffin I present
Thy buried fear: herein all breathless lies
The mightiest of thy greatest enemies,
Richard of Bordeaux, by me hither brought.

Boling. Exton, I thank thee not; for thou hast
A deed of slander with thy fatal hand [wrought
Upon my head, and all this famous land. [deed.

Exton. From your own mouth, my lord, did I this

Boling. They love not poison that do poison need,
Nor do I thee: though I did wish him dead,
I hate the murderer, love him murdered.
The guilt of conscience take thou for thy labor,
But neither my good word, nor princely favor:
With Cain go wander through the shade of night,
And never show thy head by day nor light.—
Lords, I protest, my soul is full of woe,
That blood should sprinkle me to make me grow:
Come, mourn with me for that I do lament,
And put on sullen black. <sup>6</sup>Incontinent
I'll make a voyage to the Holy land,
To wash this blood off from my guilty hand.
March sadly after: grace my <sup>6</sup>mourning here,
In weeping after this untimely bier. [Exeunt.

<sup>4</sup> Enjoy.—<sup>5</sup> Immediately.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. An Apartment in the Palace.

Enter King HENRY, WESTMORELAND, Sir WALTER BLUNT, and Others.

K. Hen. So shaken as we are, so wan with care,
Find we a time for frighted peace to pant,
And breathe short-winded accents of new broils
To be commenc'd in a strand afar remote.
No more the thirsty entrance of this soil
Shall daub her lips with her own children's blood;
No more shall trenching war channel her fields,
Nor bruise her flowrets with the armed hoofs
Of hostile paces: those oppos'd eyes,
Which, like the meteors of a troubled heaven,
All of one nature, of one substance bred,
Did lately meet in the intestine shock

And furious close of civil butchery,
Shall now, in mutual, well-beseeming ranks,
March all one way, and be no more oppos'd
Against acquaintance, kindred, and allies:
The edge of war, like an ill-sheathed knife,
No more shall cut his master. Therefore, friends,
As far as to the sepulchre of Christ,
Whose soldier now, under whose blessed cross,
We are impress'd, and engag'd to fight,
Forthwith a power of English shall we levy,
Whose arms were moulded in their mother's womb
To chase these pagans, in those holy fields,
Over whose acres walk'd those blessed feet,
Which fourteen hundred years ago were nail'd
For our advantage on the bitter cross.
But this our purpose is a twelve-month old,
And bootless 'tis to tell you we will go:
<sup>d</sup>Therefore we meet not now.—Then, let me hear

<sup>c</sup> "Levy," i. e., lead.—<sup>d</sup> "Therefore we meet not now," i. e., it is not on that account that we now meet.

Of you, my gentle cousin Westmoreland,
What yesternight our council did decree,
In forwarding this dear <sup>a</sup>expedience.

West. My liege, this haste was hot in question,
And many <sup>b</sup>limits of the charge set down
But yesternight; when, all athwart, there came
A post from Wales loaden with heavy news;
Whose worst was, that the noble Mortimer
Leading the men of Herefordshire to fight Against the irregular and wild Glendower,
Was by the rude hands of that Welchman taken,
A thousand of his people butchered;
Upon whose dead corpse there was such misuse,
Such beastly, shameless transformation,
By those Welchwomen done, as may not be Without much shame re-told or spoken of. [broil

K. Hen. It seems, then, that the tidings of this Brake off our business for the Holy Land. [lord;

West. This, match'd with other, did, my gracious
For more uneven and unwelcome news
Came from the north, and thus it did import.
On Holy-rood <sup>c</sup>day, the gallant Hotspur there,
Young Harry Percy, and brave Archibald,
That ever-valiant and approved Scot,
At Holmedon met;
Where they did spend a sad and bloody hour,
As by discharge of their artillery,
And shape of likelihood, the news was told;
For he that brought them, in the very heat
And pride of their contention did take horse,
Uncertain of the issue any way.

K. Hen. Here is a dear, a true-industrious friend,
Sir Walter Blunt, new lighted from his horse,
Stain'd with the variation of each soil
Betwix that Holmedon and this seat of ours;
And he hath brought us smooth and welcome news.
The earl of Douglas is discomfited;
Ten thousand bold Scots, two-and-twenty knights,
<sup>d</sup>Balk'd in their own blood, did sir Walter see
On Holmedon's plains: of prisoners, Hotspur took Mordake earl of Fife, and eldest son
To beaten Douglas, and the earl of Athol,
Of Murray, Angus, and <sup>e</sup>the bold Menteith;
And is not this an honorable spoil?
A gallant prize? ha! cousin, is it not? [of.

West. <sup>2</sup>Faith, 'tis a conquest for a prince to boast

K. Hen. Yea, there thou mak'st me sad, and mak'st me sin,

In envy that my lord Northumberland
Should be the father to so blest a son:
A son, who is the theme of honor's tongue;
Amongst a grove the very straightest plant;
Who is sweet fortune's minion, and her pride:
Whilst I, by looking on the praise of him,
See riot and dishonor stain the brow
Of my young Harry. O! that it could be prov'd,
That some night-tripping fairy had exchang'd
In cradle-clothes our children where they lay,
And call'd mine Percy, his Plantagenet:
Then would I have his Harry, and he mine. [coz',
But let him from my thoughts.—What think you,
Of this young Percy's pride? the prisoners,
Which he in this adventure hath surpris'd,
To his own use he keeps; and sends me word,
I shall have none but Mordake earl of Fife.

West. This is his uncle's teaching, this is Wor-malevolent to you in all aspects; [cester,
Which makes him <sup>e</sup>prune himself, and bristle up
The crest of youth against your dignity.

<sup>c</sup> September 14th.—<sup>d</sup> "Balk'd," i. e., heaped; laid in heaps.
—<sup>e</sup> "Prune himself," i. e., trim himself, as birds prune or clean their feathers.

K. Hen. But I have sent for him to answer this;
And for this cause awhile we must neglect
Our holy purpose to Jerusalem.

Cousin, on Wednesday next our council we
Will hold at Windsor: so inform the lords;
But come yourself with speed to us again,
For more is to be said, and to be done,
Than out of <sup>e</sup>anger can be uttered.

West. I will, my liege.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Apartment in the Palace.

Enter HENRY, Prince of Wales, and FALSTAFF.

Fal. Now, Hal; what time of day is it, lad?

P. Hen. Thou art so fat-witted, with drinking of old sack, and unbuttoning thee after supper, and sleeping upon benches after noon, that thou hast forgotten to demand that truly, which thou would'st truly know. What a devil hast thou to do with the time of the day? unless hours were cups of sack, and minutes capons, and clocks the tongues of bawds, and dials the signs of leaping houses, and the blessed sun himself a fair hot wench in flamecolor'd taffeta, I see no reason why thou should'st be so superfluous to demand the time of the day.

Fal. Indeed you come near me, now, Hal; for we, that take purses, go by the moon and the seven stars, and not by Phœbus,—he, that wandering knight so fair." And, I prythee, sweet wag, when thou art king,—as, God save thy grace,—majesty, I should say, for grace thou wilt have none,—

P. Hen. What, none?

Fal. No, by my troth; not so much as will serve to be prologue to an egg and butter.

P. Hen. Well, how then? come, roundly, roundly.

Fal. Marry, then, sweet wag, when thou art king, let not us, that are squires of the night's body, be called thieves of the day's <sup>b</sup>beauty: let us be Di-ana's foresters, gentlemen of the shade, minions of the moon; and let men say, we be men of good government, being governed as the sea is, by our noble and chaste mistress the moon, under whose countenance we steal.

P. Hen. Thou say'st well, and it holds well, too; for the fortune of us, that are the moon's men, doth ebb and flow like the sea, being governed as the sea is, by the moon. As for proof now: a purse of gold most resolutely snatched on Monday night, and most dissolutely spent on Tuesday morning; got with swearing—lay <sup>b</sup>by; and spent with crying—bring <sup>i</sup>in; now, in as low an ebb as the foot of the ladder, and, by and by, in as high a flow as the ridge of the gallows.

Fal. By the Lord, thou say'st true, lad. And is not my hostess of the tavern a most sweet wench?

P. Hen. As the honey of Hybla, my old lad of the castle. And is not a buff <sup>k</sup>jerkin a most sweet robe of durance?

Fal. How now, how now, mad wag! what, in thy quips, and thy quiddities? what a plague have I to do with a buff jerkin?

P. Hen. Why, what a pox have I to do with my hostess of the tavern?

Fal. Well, thou hast called her to a reckoning many a time and oft.

<sup>i</sup> "Than out of anger can be uttered," i. e., more than anger will suffer me now to say.—<sup>j</sup> That is, "Let not us, who adorn the night, be called a disgrace to the day."—<sup>k</sup> "Lay by," i. e., be still.—"Bring in," i. e., bring in more wine.—
<sup>k</sup> The "buff jerkin," or coat of ox-skin, was worn by sheriffs' officers: it was called "a robe of durance," in respect to its durability.

P. Hen. Did I ever call for thee to pay thy part?

Fal. No: I'll give thee thy due; thou hast paid all there.

P. Hen. Yea, and elsewhere, so far as my coin would stretch; and, where it would not, I have used my credit.

Fal. Yea, and so used it, <sup>1</sup>that it is here apparent that thou art heir apparent.—But, I pry'thee, sweet wag, shall there be gallows standing in England when thou art king, and resolution thus fobbed, as it is, with the rusty curb of old father antick, the law? Do not thou, when thou art a king, hang a thief.

P. Hen. No: thou shalt.

Fal. Shall I? O rare! By the Lord, I'll be a brave judge.

P. Hen. Thou judgest false already: I mean, thou shalt have the hanging of the thieves, and so become a rare hangman.

Fal. Well, Hal, well; and in some sort it jumps with my humor, as well as waiting in the court, I can tell you.

P. Hen. For obtaining of suits?

Fal. Yea, for obtaining of suits, whereof the hangman hath no lean wardrobe. 'Shlood, I am as melancholy as a gib <sup>2</sup>cat, or a lugged bear.

P. Hen. Or an old lion; or a lover's lute.

Fal. Yea, or the drone of a Lincolnshire <sup>3</sup>bagpipe.

P. Hen. What sayest thou to a 'hare, or the melancholy of Moor-ditch?

Fal. Thou has the most unsavory similes; and art, indeed, the most <sup>4</sup>comparative, rascalless, sweet young prince.—But, Hal, I pry'thee, trouble me no more with vanity. I would to God, thou and I knew where a commodity of good names were to be bought. An old lord of the council rated me the other day in the street about you, sir; but I marked him not: and yet he talked very wisely; but I regarded him not, and yet he talked wisely, and in the street too.

P. Hen. Thou didst well; for wisdom cries out in the streets, and no man regards it.

Fal. O! thou hast damnable <sup>5</sup>iteration, and art, indeed, able to corrupt a saint. Thou hast done much harm upon me, Hal:—God forgive thee for it. Before I knew thee, Hal, I knew nothing; and now am I, if a man should speak truly, little better than one of the wicked. I must give over this life, and I will give it over; by the Lord, an I do not, I am a villain: I'll be damned for never a king's son in Christendom.

P. Hen. Where shall we take a purse to-morrow, Jack?

Fal. Zounds! where thou wilt, lad, I'll make one; an I do not, call me villain, and <sup>6</sup>baffle me.

P. Hen. I see a good amendment of life in thee; from praying, to purse-taking.

Enter POINS, at a distance.

Fal. Why, Hal, 'tis my vocation, Hal: 'tis no sin for a man to labor in his vocation. Poins!—Now shall we know if Gadshill have set a <sup>7</sup>match.—O! if men were to be saved by merit, what hole in hell were hot enough for him? This is the most omnipotent villain, that ever cried, Stand! to a <sup>8</sup>true man.

P. Hen. Good morrow, Ned.

Poins. Good morrow, sweet Hal.—What says monsieur Remorse? What says Sir John Sack-and-Sugar? Jack, how agrees the devil and thee about thy soul, that thou soldst him on Good-Friday last, for a cup of Madeira, and a cold capon's leg?

P. Hen. Sir John stands to his word: the devil shall have his bargain, for he was never yet a breaker of proverbs; he will give the devil his due.

Poins. Then, art thou damned for keeping thy word with the devil.

P. Hen. Else he had been damned for cozening the devil.

Poins. But, my lads, my lads, to-morrow morning, by four o'clock, early at Gadshill. There are pilgrims going to Canterbury with rich offerings, and traders riding to London with fat purses: I have advisors for you all, you have horses for yourselves. Gadshill lies to-night in Rochester; I have bespoke supper to-morrow night in Eastcheap: we may do it as secure as sleep. If you will go, I will stuff your purses full of crowns; if you will not, tarry at home, and be hanged.

Fal. Hear ye, Yedward: if I tarry at home, and go not, I'll hang you for going.

Poins. You will, chops?

Fal. Hal, wilt thou make one?

P. Hen. Who, I rob? I a thief? not I, by my faith.

Fal. There's neither honesty, manhood, nor good fellowship in thee, nor thou can'st not of the blood royal, if thou dar'st not stand for ten <sup>9</sup>shillings.

P. Hen. Well then, once in my days I'll be a madcap.

Fal. Why, that's well said.

P. Hen. Well, come what will, I'll tarry at home.

Fal. By the Lord, I'll be a traitor then, when thou art king.

P. Hen. I care not.

Poins. Sir John, I pry'thee, leave the prince and me alone: I will lay him down such reasons for this adventure, that he shall go.

Fal. Well, God give thee the spirit of persuasion, and him the ears of profiting, that what thou speakest may move, and what he hears may be believed, that the true prince may (for recreation sake) prove a false thief; for the poor abuses of the time want countenance. Farewell: you shall find me in Eastcheap.

P. Hen. Farewell thou latter spring! Farewell, <sup>10</sup>All-hallown summer! [Exit FALSTAFF.]

Poins. Now, my good sweet honey lord, ride with us to-morrow: I have a jest to execute, that I cannot manage alone. Falstaff, Bardolph, Peto, and Gadshill, shall rob those men that we have already way-laid: yourself and I will not be there; and when they have the booty, if you and I do not rob them, cut this head off from my shoulders.

P. Hen. How shall we part with them in setting forth?

Poins. Why, we will set forth before or after them, and appoint them a place of meeting, wherein it is at our pleasure to fail; and then will they adventure upon the exploit themselves, which they shall have no sooner achieved, but we'll set upon them.

P. Hen. Yea, but 'tis like, that they will know us, by our horses, by our habits, and by every other appointment, to be ourselves.

Poins. Tut! our horses they shall not see; I'll tie them in the wood : our visors we will change, after we leave them ; and, sirrah, I have cases of buckram for the <sup>a</sup>nonce, to inmask our noted outward garments.

P. Hen. Yea, but I doubt they will be too hard for us.

Poins. Well, for two of them, I know them to be as true-bred cowards as ever turned back ; and for the third, if he'll fight longer than he sees reason, I'll forswear arms. The virtue of this jest will be, the incomprehensible lies that this same fat rogue will tell us, when we meet at supper : how thirty at least he fought with ; what wards, what blows, what extremities he endured ; and in the <sup>b</sup>reproof of this lies the jest.

P. Hen. Well, I'll go with thee : provide us all things necessary, and meet me to-morrow night in Eastcheap, there I'll sup. Farewell.

Poins. Farewell, my lord. [Exit POINS.]

P. Hen. I know you all, and will awhile uphold the unyok'd humor of your idleness :

Yet herein will I imitate the sun,
Who doth permit the base contagious clouds
To smother up his beauty from the world,
That when he please again to be himself,
Being wanted, he may be more wonder'd at,
By breaking through the foul and ugly mists
Of vapors, that did seem to strangle him.
If all the year were playing holidays,
To sport would be as tedious as to work ;
But when they seldom come, they wish'd-for come,
And nothing pleaseth but rare accidents.
So, when this loose behavior I throw off,
And pay the debt I never promised,
By how much better than my word I am,
By so much shall I falsify men's <sup>c</sup>hopes ;
And, like bright metal on a <sup>d</sup>sullen ground,
My reformation, glittering o'er my fault,
Shall show more goodly, and attract more eyes,
Than that which hath no foil to set it off.
I'll so offend, to make offence a skill,
Redeeming time, when men think least I will. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—The Same. Another Apartment in the Palace.

Enter KING HENRY, NORTHUMBERLAND, WORCESTER, HOTSPUR, Sir WALTER BLUNT, and Others.

K. Hen. My blood hath been too cold and temperate, to stir at these indignities, [perate,] And you have found me ; for, accordingly, You tread upon my patience : but, be sure, I will from henceforth rather be myself, Mighty, and to be feared, than my <sup>e</sup>condition, Which hath been smooth as oil, soft as young down, And therefore lost that title of respect, Which the proud soul ne'er pays but to the proud.

Wor. Our house, my sovereign liege, little deserves The scourge of greatness to be used on it ; And that same greatness, too, which our own hands Have help to make so portly.

North. My <sup>f</sup>good lord,—

[do see

K. Hen. <sup>g</sup>Lord Worcester, get thee gone ; for I Danger and disobedience in thine eye.

O, sir ! your presence is too bold and peremptory, And majesty might never yet endure The moody <sup>h</sup>frontier of a servant brow.

You have good leave to leave us : when we need Your use and counsel, we shall send for you.—

[Exit WORCESTER.]

You were about to speak.

[To NORTH.]

North.

Yea, my good lord.

Those prisoners in your highness' name demanded, Which Harry Percy, here, at Holmedon took, Were, as he says, not with such strength denied As is deliver'd to your majesty :

Either envy, therefore, or misprision Is guilty of this fault, and not my son.

Hol. My liege, I did deny no prisoners ; But, I remember, when the fight was done, When I was dry with rage, and extreme toil, Breathless and faint, leaning upon my sword, Came there a certain lord, neat, trimly dress'd, Fresh as a bridegroom ; and his chin, new reap'd, Show'd like a stubble-land at <sup>i</sup>harvest-home : He was perfum'd like a milliner, And 'twixt his finger and his thumb he held A <sup>j</sup>pounce-box, which ever and anon He gave his nose, and took't away again ; Who, therewith angry, when it next came there, Took it in <sup>k</sup>snuff :—and still he snail'd, and talk'd ; And, as the soldiers bore dead bodies by, He call'd them untaught knaves, unmannerly, To bring a slovenly unhandsome corpse Betwixt the wind and his nobility. With many holiday and lady terms He question'd me ; among the rest, demanded My prisoners, in your majesty's behalf. I then, all smarting, with my wounds being cold, To be so pester'd with a <sup>l</sup>popinjay, Out of my <sup>m</sup>grief and my impatience, Answer'd neglectingly, I know not what, He should, or he should not ; for he made me mad, To see him shine so brisk, and smell so sweet, And talk so like a waiting-gentlewoman, Of guns, and drums, and wounds, God save the mark ! And telling me, the sovereign'st thing on earth Was parmaceti for an inward bruise ; And that it was great pity, so it was, This villainous salt-petre should be digg'd Out of the bowels of the harmless earth, Which many a good <sup>n</sup>tall fellow had destroy'd So cowardly ; and, but for these vile guns, He would himself have been a soldier. This bald, unjointed chat of his, my lord, I answer'd indirectly, as I said ; And, I beseech you, let not his report Come current for an accusation, Betwixt my love and your high majesty.

Blunt. The circumstance considered, good my lord, Whate'er Lord Harry Percy then had said, To such a person, and in such a place, At such a time, with all the rest re-told, May reasonably die, and never rise To do him wrong, or any way impeach What then he said, so he unsay it now.

K. Hen. Why, yet he doth deny his prisoners, But with proviso, and exception, That we, at our own charge, shall ransom straight His brother-in-law, the foolish Mortimer ; Who, on my soul, hath wilfully betray'd The lives of those that he did lead to fight Against that great magician, damn'd Glendower, Whose daughter, as we hear, that earl of March Hath lately married. Shall our coffers, then,

<sup>f</sup> "Frontier," used metaphorically, is hostility, opposition, indicated in the countenance, as the hostility of a country is seen in the military preparation on its frontier.

<sup>g</sup> In the poet's time a courtier's beard would not be closely shaved, but shorn or trimmed, and would therefore show like a stubble land new reaped.—<sup>h</sup> A box for musk and other perfumes.—<sup>i</sup> "Took it in snuff," i. e., sniffed it up ; or, by a quibble, took a huff at it.—<sup>j</sup> Parrot.—<sup>k</sup> Pain.—<sup>l</sup> Brave.

Be emptied to redeem a traitor home?
 Shall we buy treason, and indent with <sup>1</sup>foes,
 When they have lost and forfeited themselves?
 No, on the barren mountains let him starve;
 For I shall never hold that man my friend,
 Whose tongue shall ask me for one penny cost,
 To ransom home revolted Mortimer.

Hot. Revolted Mortimer!

He never did fall off, my sovereign liege,
 But by the chance of war: to prove that true,
 Needs no more but one tongue for all those wounds,
 Those mouthed wounds, which valiantly he took,
 When on the gentle Severn's sedgy bank,
 In single opposition, hand to hand,
 He did <sup>2</sup>confound the best part of an hour
 In changing <sup>3</sup>hardiment with great Glendower.
 Three times they breath'd, and three times did they Upon agreement, of swift Severn's flood; [drink,
 Who then, affrighted by their bloody looks,
 Ran fearfully among the trembling reeds,
 And hid his <sup>4</sup>crisp head in the hollow bank
 Blood-stained with these valiant combatants.
 Never did base and rotten policy
 Color her working with such deadly wounds;
 Nor never could the noble Mortimer
 Receive so many, and all willingly:
 Then, let him not be slander'd with revolt. [him:

K. Hen. Thou dost belie him, Percy, thou dost belie
 He never did encounter with Glendower.
 I tell thee,

He durst as well have met the devil alone,
 As Owen Glendower for an enemy.
 Art thou not asham'd? But, sirrah, henceforth
 Let me not hear you speak of Mortimer.
 Send me your prisoners with the speediest means,
 Or you shall hear in such a kind from me
 As will displease you.—My lord Northumberland,
 We license your departure with your son.—
 Send us your prisoners, or you'll hear of it.

[Exeunt King HENRY, BLUNT, and Train.]

Hot. And if the devil come and roar for them,
 I will not send them.—I will after straight,
 And tell him so; for I will ease my heart,
 Albeit I make a hazard of my head. <sup>2</sup>[Offers to go.]

North. What! drunk with choler? stay, and pause
 Here comes your uncle. [awhile:

Re-enter WORCESTER.

Hot. Speak of Mortimer!
 'Zounds! I will speak of him; and let my soul
 Want mercy, if I do not join with him:
 Yea, on his part, I'll empty all these veins,
 And shed my dear blood drop by drop if the dust,
 But I will lift the down-trod Mortimer
 As high if the air as this unthankful king,
 As this ingrate and canker'd Bolingbroke.

North. Brother, [To WORCESTER.] the king hath made you nephew mad.

Wor. Who struck this heat up after I was gone?

Hot. He will, forsooth, have all my prisoners;
 And when I urg'd the ransom once again
 Of my wife's brother, then his cheek look'd pale,
 And on my face he turn'd an eye of death,
 Trembling even at the name of Mortimer.

Wor. I cannot blame him. Was he not proclaim'd,
 By Richard, that dead is, the next of blood?

North. He was: I heard the proclamation:
 And then it was when the unhappy king
 (Whose wrongs in us God pardon!) did set forth
 Upon his Irish expedition;

From whence he intercepted did return
 To be depos'd and shortly murdered. [mouth
Wor. And for whose death, we in the world's wide Live scandaliz'd, and foully spoken of.

Hot. But, soft! I pray you, did king Richard, then, Proclaim my brother Edmund Mortimer
 Heir to the crown?

North. He did: myself did hear it.

Hot. Nay, then, I cannot blame his cousin king,
 That wish'd him on the barren mountains starve.
 But shall it be, that you, that set the crown
 Upon the head of this forgetful man,
 And for his sake wear the detested blot
 Of murd'rous subornation, shall it be,
 That you a world of curses undergo,
 Being the agents, or base second means,
 The cords, the ladder, or the hangman rather?—
 O! pardon me, that I descend so low,
 To show the line, and the predicament,
 Wherein you range under this subtle king.
 Shall it for shame be spoken in these days,
 Or fill up chronicles in time to come,
 That men of your nobility and power,
 Did gage them both in an unjust behalf,
 (As both of you, God pardon it! have done)
 To put down Richard, that sweet lovely rose,
 And plant this thorn, this <sup>3</sup>canker, Bolingbroke?
 And shall it, in more shame, be further spoken,
 That you are fool'd, discarded, and shook off
 By him, for whom these shames ye underwent?
 No! yet time serves, wherein you may redeem
 Your <sup>3</sup>tarnish'd honors, and restore yourselves
 Into the good thoughts of the world again.
 Revenge the jeering, and <sup>4</sup>disdain'd contempt,
 Of this proud king; who studies day and night
 To answer all the debt he owes to you,
 Even with the bloody payment of your deaths.
 Therefore, I say,—

Wor. Peace, cousin! say no more.

And now I will unclasp a secret book,
 And to your quick-conceiving discontents
 I'll read you matter deep and dangerous;
 As full of peril and adventurous spirit,
 As to o'er-walk a current, roaring loud,
 On the unsteadfast footing of a spear.

Hot. If he fall in, good night!—or sink or swim,
 Send danger from the east unto the west,
 So honor cross it, from the north to south,
 And let them grapple!—O! the blood more stirs,
 To rouse a lion, than to start a hare.

North. Imagination of some great exploit
 Drives him beyond the bounds of patience.

Hot. By heaven, methinks, it were an easy leap,
 To pluck bright honor from the pale-fac'd moon;
 Or dive into the bottom of the deep,
 Where fathom-line could never touch the ground,
 And pluck up drowned honor by the locks,
 So he that doth redeem her thence might wear
 Without corral all her dignities:
 But out upon this <sup>5</sup>half-fac'd fellowship!

Wor. He apprehends a world of <sup>6</sup>figures here,
 But not the form of what he should attend.—
 Good cousin, give me audience for a while.

Hot. I cry you mercy.

Wor. Those same noble Scots,
 That are your prisoners,—

Hot. I'll keep them all.

By God, he shall not have a Scot of them:
 No, if a Scot would save his soul, he shall not.
 I'll keep them, by this hand.

From whence he intercepted did return.—<sup>5</sup> "Disdainful."—<sup>6</sup> "Half-fac'd," i. e., contemptible.—<sup>7</sup> "Figures," i. e., shapes created by his imagination.

Wor. You start away,
And lend no ear unto my purposes.
Those prisoners you shall keep.
Hot. Nay, I will; that's flat.
He said he would not ransom Mortimer;
Forbad my tongue to speak of Mortimer;
But I will find him when he lies asleep,
And in his ear I'll holla—Mortimer!
Nay, I'll have a starting shall be taught to speak
Nothing but Mortimer, and give it him,
To keep his anger still in motion.

Wor. Hear you, cousin, a word.
Hot. All studies here I solemnly <sup>a</sup>defy,
Save how to gall and pinch this Bolingbroke:
And that same <sup>b</sup>sword-and-buckler prince of Wales,
But that I think his father loves him not,
And would be glad he met with some mischance,
I would have him poison'd with a pot of ale.

Wor. Farewell, kinsman. I will talk to you,
When you are better temper'd to attend.
North. Why, what a wasp-stung and impatient fool
Art thou to break into this woman's mood,
Tying thine ear to no tongue but thine own!

Hot. Why, look you, I am whipp'd and scourg'd with rods,

Nettled, and stung with pismires, when I hear
Of this vile politician, Bolingbroke.
In Richard's time,—what do ye call the place?—
A plague upon't—it is in Gloucestershire;—
'Twas where the mad-cap duke his uncle kept,
His uncle York,—where I first bow'd my knee
Unto this king of smiles, this Bolingbroke, [purg.
'Sblood! when you and he came back from Ravens-

North. At Berkeley castle.

Hot. You say true.—
Why, what a <sup>c</sup>candied deal of courtesy
This fawning greyhound then did proffer me!
Look,—“when his infant fortune came to age,”
And,—“gentle Harry Percy,”—and, “kind cousin-in,”—

O, the devil take such cozeners!—God forgive me!—
Good uncle, tell your tale: I have done.

Wor. Nay, if you have not, to 't again,
We'll stay your leisure.

Hot. I have done, i'faith.
Wor. Then once more to your Scottish prisoners.
Deliver them up without their ransom straight,
And make the Douglas' son your only mean
For powers in Scotland; which, for divers reasons
Which I shall send you written, be assur'd,
Will easily be granted you.—My lord,

[To NORTHUMBERLAND.]

Your son in Scotland being thus employ'd,
Shall secretly into the bosom creep
Of that same noble prelate, well belov'd,
The archbishop.

Hot. Of York, is it not?

Wor. True; who bears hard
His brother's death at Bristol, the lord Scroop.
I speak not this in <sup>d</sup>estimation,
As what I think might be, but what I know
Is ruminated, plotted, and set down;
And only stays but to behold the face
Of that occasion that shall bring it on.

Hot. I smell it:

Upon my life, it will do wondrous well.

North. Before the game's afoot, thou still let'st <sup>e</sup>slip.

Hot. Why, it cannot choose but be a noble plot.—

<sup>a</sup> Renounce; reject.—<sup>b</sup> “Sword-and-buckler” became a term of contempt, from the fact that serving men were at one time in the habit of carrying swords, with a buckler at their back.—<sup>c</sup> “A candied deal,” i. e., a deal of candied courtesy.—<sup>d</sup> Conjecture.—<sup>e</sup> “To ‘let slip,’ in hunting, is to loose a greyhound.

And then the power of Scotland, and of York,
To join with Mortimer, ha?

Wor. And so they shall.

Hot. In faith, it is exceedingly well aim'd.

Wor. And 'tis no little reason bids us speed,

To save our heads by raising of a head;

For, bear ourselves as even as we can,

The king will always think him in our debt,

And think we think ourselves unsatisfied,

Till he hath found a time to pay us home:

And see already how he doth begin

To make us strangers to his looks of love.

Hot. He does, he does: we'll be reveng'd on him.

Wor. Cousin, farewell.—No further go in this,

Than I by letters shall direct your course.

When time is ripe, (which will be suddenly)

I'll steal to Glendower, and lord Mortimer;

Where you, and Douglas, and our powers at once,

As I will fashion it, shall happily meet,

To bear our fortunes in our own strong arms,

Which now we hold at much uncertainty. [Trust,

North. Farewell, good brother: we shall thrive, I

Hot. Uncle, adieu.—O! let the hours be short,

Till fields, and blows, and groans applaud our sport.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Rochester. An Inn Yard.

Enter a Carrier, with a Lantern in his hand.

1 Car. Heigh ho! An't be not four by the day, I'll be hang'd: Charles' <sup>z</sup>wain is over the new chimney, and yet our horse not packed. What, ostler!

Ost. [Within.] Anon, anon.

1 Car. I prythee, Tom, beat <sup>h</sup>Cut's saddle, put a few flocks in the point; the poor jade is wrung in the withers out of all <sup>i</sup>cess.

Enter another Carrier.

2 Car. Peas and beans are as <sup>s</sup>dank here as a dog, and that is the next way to give poor jades the bots:
this house is turned upside down since Robin ostler died.

1 Car. Poor fellow! <sup>h</sup>he never joyed since the price of oats rose: it was the death of him.

2 Car. I think, this be the most villainous house in all London road for fleas: I am stung like a tench

1 Car. Like a tench? by the mass, there is ne'er a king in Christendom could be better bit than I have been since the first cock.

2 Car. Why, they will allow us ne'er a jordan, and then we leak in <sup>2</sup>the chimney; and your chamber-lie breeds fleas like a <sup>h</sup>loach.

1 Car. What, ostler! come away and be hang'd;
come away.

2 Car. I have a gammon of bacon, and two <sup>m</sup>razes of ginger, to be delivered as far as Charing-cross.

1 Car. 'Odsbody! the turkeys in my panner are quite starved.—What, ostler!—A plague on thee!
hast thou never an eye in thy head? canst not hear?
An 'twere not as good a deed as drink, to break the pate of thee, I am a very villain.—Come, and be hang'd:—hast no faith in thee?

Enter GADSHILL.

Gads. Good morrow, carriers. What's o'clock?

1 Car. I think it be two o'clock.

Gads. I pr'ythee, lend me thy lantern, to see my gelding in the stable.

1 Car. Nay, soft, I pray ye: I know a trick worth two of that, i' faith.

Gads. I pr'ythee, lend me thine.

2 Car. Ay, when? canst tell?—Lend me thy lantern quoth a!—marry, I'll see thee hanged first.

Gads. Sirrah carrier, what time do you mean to come to London?

2 Car. Time enough to go to bed with a candle, I warrant thee.—Come, neighbor Mugs, we'll call up the gentlemen: they will along with company, for they have great charge. [Exeunt Carriers.]

Gads. What, ho! chamberlain!

Cham. [Within.] At hand, quoth a pick-purse.

Gads. That's even as fair as—at hand, quoth the chamberlain; for thou variest no more from picking of purses, than giving direction doth from laboring; thou lay'st the plot how.

Enter Chamberlain.

Cham. Good morrow, master Gadshill. It holds current, that I told you yesternight: there's a<sup>b</sup> franklin in the wild of Kent, hath brought three hundred marks with him in gold: I heard him tell it to one of his company, last night at supper; a kind of auditor; one that hath abundance of charge too, God knows what. They are up already, and call for eggs and butter: they will away presently.

Gads. Sirrah, if they meet not with saint Nicholas' clerks, I'll give thee this neck.

Cham. No, I'll none of it: I pr'ythee, keep that for the hangman; for, I know, thou worship'st saint Nicholas as truly as a man of falsehood may.

Gads. What talkest thou to me of the hangman? if I hang, I'll make a fat pair of gallows; for, if I hang, old sir John hangs with me, and then knowest he's no starving. Tut! there are other Trojans that thou dreamest not of, the which, for sport sake, are content to do the profession some grace, that would, if matters should be looked into, for their own credit sake, make all whole. I am joined with no foot<sup>d</sup> land-rakers, no long-staff, sixpenny<sup>e</sup> strikers: none of these mad, mustachio purple-hued malt-worms; but with nobility and sanguinity; burgomasters, and great<sup>2</sup> ones—yes, such as can hold in; such as will strike sooner than speak, and speak sooner than drink, and drink sooner than pray: and yet I lie; for they pray continually to their saint, the commonwealth; or, rather, not pray to her, but prey on her, for they ride up and down on her, and make her their f<sup>1</sup>boots.

Cham. What! the commonwealth their boots? will she hold out water in foul way?

Gads. She will, she will; justice hath liquored her. We steal as in a castle, cock-sure; we have the receipt of fern-seed, we walk invisible.

Cham. Nay, by my faith, I think you are more beholding to the night, than to<sup>h</sup> fern-seed, for your walking invisible.

Gads. Give me thy hand: thou shalt have a share in our<sup>i</sup> purchase, as I am a true man.

Cham. Nay, rather let me have it, as you are a false thief.

Gads. Go to; homo is a common name to all men. Bid the ostler bring my gelding out of the stable. Farewell, you muddy knave. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Road by Gadshill.

Enter Prince HENRY, and POINS; BARDOLPH and Peto, at some distance.

Poins. Come, shelter, shelter: I have removed Falstaff's horse, and he frets like a gummed<sup>k</sup> velvet.
P. Hen. Stand close.

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Poins! Poins, and be hanged! Poins!

P. Hen. Peace, ye fat-kidneyed rascal! What a bawling dost thou keep?

Fal. Where's Poins, Hal?

P. Hen. He is walked up to the top of the hill: I'll go seek him. [Pretends to seek POINS.]

Fal. I am accursed to rob in that thief's company: the rascal hath removed my horse, and tied him I know not where. If I travel but four foot by the squire further afoot I shall break my wind. Well, I doubt not but to die a fair death for all this, if I scape hanging for killing that rogue. I have forsworn his company hourly any time this two-and-twenty years, and yet I am bewitched with the rogue's company. If the rascal have not given me<sup>m</sup> medicines to make me love him, I'll be hanged; it could not be else: I have drunk medicines.—Poins!—Hal!—a plague upon you both!—Bardolph!—Peto!—I'll starve, ere I'll rob a foot further. An 'twere not as good a deed as drink, to turn true man, and leave these rogues, I am the veriest varlet that ever chewed with a tooth. Eight yards of uneven ground is three score and ten miles afoot with me, and the stony-hearted villains know it well enough. A plague upon't, when thieves cannot be true to one another! [They whistle.] Whew!—A plague upon you all! Give me my horse, you rogues; give me my horse, and be hanged.

P. Hen. Peace, ye fat-guts! lie down; lay thine ear close to the ground, and list if thou canst hear the tread of travellers.

Fal. Have you any levers to lift me up again, being down? 'Sblood! I'll not bear mine own flesh so far afoot again, for all the coin in thy father's exchequer. What a plague mean ye to 'colt me thus?

P. Hen. Thou liest: thou art not colted, thou art uncolted.

Fal. I pr'ythee, good prince Hal, help me to my horse; good king's son.

P. Hen. Out, you rogue! shall I be your ostler?

Fal. Go, hang thyself in thine own heir-apparent garters! If I be ta'en, I'll peach for this. An I have not ballads made on you all, and sung to filthy tunes, let a cup of sack be my poison: when a jest is so forward, and afoot too,—I hate it.

Enter GADSHILL.

Gads. Stand.

Fal. So I do, against my will.

Poins. O! 'tis our setter: I know his voice.

Enter BARDOLPH.

Bard. What news?

Gads. Case ye, case ye; on with your visors: there's money of the king's coming down the hill; 'tis going to the king's exchequer.

Fal. You lie, you rogue: 'tis going to the king's tavern.

Gads. There's enough to make us all.

Fal. To be hanged.

P. Hen. Sirs, you four shall front them in the narrow lane; Ned Poins and I will walk lower: if they 'scape from your encounter, then they light on us.

Peto. But how many be there of them?

Gads. Some eight, or ten.

Fal. Zounds! will they not rob us?

P. Hen. What, a coward, sir John Paunch?

Fal. Indeed, I am not John of Gaunt, your grandfather; but yet no coward, Hal.

P. Hen. Well, we leave that to the proof.

Poins. Sirrah Jack, thy horse stands behind the hedge: when thou needest him, there thou shalt find him. Farewell, and stand fast.

Fal. Now cannot I strike him, if I should be hanged.

P. Hen. Ned, [Aside to Poins.] where are our disguises?

Poins. Here, hard by: stand close.

[Exeunt P. HENRY and POINS.]

Fal. Now, my masters, happy man be his <sup>a</sup>dole, say I: every man to his business.

Enter Travellers.

I Trav. Come, neighbor: the boy shall lead our horses down the hill; we'll walk afoot awhile, and ease our legs.

Thieves. Stand?

Trav. Jesu bless us!

Fal. Strike; down with them; cut the villains' throats. Ah, whorson caterpillars! bacon-fed knaves! they hate us youth: down with them; fleece them.

I Trav. O! we are undone, both we and ours, for ever.

Fal. Hang ye, <sup>b</sup>gorbellied knaves. Are ye undone? No, ye fat <sup>c</sup>chuffs; I would, your store were here. On, bacons, on! What! ye knaves, young men must live. You are grand-jurors are ye? We'll jure ye, i' faith.

[Exeunt FAL. &c. driving the Travellers out.]

Re-enter Prince HENRY and POINS.

P. Hen. The thieves have bound the <sup>d</sup>true men. Now could thou and I rob the thieves, and go merrily to London, it would be <sup>e</sup>argument for a week, laughter for a month, and a good jest for ever.

Poins. Stand close; I hear them coming.

Re-enter Thieves.

Fal. Come, my masters; let us share, and then to horse before day. And the prince and Poins be not two arrant cowards, there's no equity stirring: there's no more valor in that Poins, than in a wild duck.

P. Hen. Your money. [Rushing out upon them.]

Poins. Villains.

[As they are sharing, the Prince and POINS set upon them. They all run away, and FALSTAFF, after a blow or two, runs away too, leaving the booty behind them.] [Horse:]

P. Hen. Got with much ease. Now merrily to The thieves are scatter'd, and possessed with fear So strongly, that they dare not meet each other; Each takes his fellow for an officer.

Away, good Ned. Falstaff sweats to death, And lards the lean earth as he walks along: Wer't not for laughing, I should pity him.

Poins. How the rogue roar'd! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Warkworth. A Room in the Castle.

Enter HOTSPUR, reading a Letter.

—"But for mine own part, my lord, I could be well contented to be there, in respect of the love I bear your house."—He could be contented,—why is he not then? In respect of the love he bears our house:—he shows in this, he loves his own barn better than he loves our house. Let me see some more. "The purpose you undertake, is dangerous;"—Why, that's certain: 'tis dangerous to take a cold, to sleep, to drink; but I tell you, my lord fool, out of this nettles danger, we'll pluck this flower, safety. "The purpose you undertake, is dangerous; the friends you have named, uncertain; the time itself unsorted, and your whole plot too light for the counterpoise of so great an opposition."—Say you so, say you so? I say unto you again, you are a shallow, cowardly hind, and you lie. What a lackbrain is this! By the Lord, our plot is a good plot as ever was laid; our friends true and constant: a good plot, good friends, and full of expectation: an excellent plot, very good friends. What a frosty-spirited rogue is this? Why, my lord of York commends the plot, and the general course of the action. 'Zounds! and I were now by this rascal, I could brain him with his lady's fan. Is there not my father, my uncle, and myself? lord Edmund Mortimer, my lord of York, and Owen Glendower? Is there not, besides, the Douglas? Have I not all their letters, to meet me in arms by the ninth of the next month, and are they not, some of them, set forward already? What a pagan rascal is this! an infidel! Ha! you shall see now, in very sincerity of fear and cold heart, will be to the king, and lay open all our proceedings. O! I could divide myself, and go to buffets, for moving such a dish of skimmed milk with so honorable an action. Hang him! let him tell the king; we are prepared. I will set forward to-night.

Enter Lady PERCY.

How now, Kate? I must leave you within these two hours.

Lady. O, my good lord! why are you thus alone? For what offence have I this fortnight been A banish'd woman from my Harry's bed? Tell me, sweet lord, what is't that takes from thee Thy stomach, pleasure, and thy golden sleep? Why dost thou bend thine eyes upon the earth, And start so often when thou sleepest alone? Why hast thou lost the fresh blood in thy cheeks, And given my treasures, and my rights of thee, To thick-ey'd musing, and curs'd melancholy? In thy faint slumbers I by thee have watch'd, And heard thee murmur tales of iron wars; Speak terms of manage to thy bounding steed; Cry, "Courage!—to the field!" And thou hast Of palisadoes, <sup>b</sup>frontiers, parapets; Of basilisks, of cannon, culverin; Of prisoners' ransom, and of soldiers slain, And all th' <sup>2</sup>occurents of a heady fight. Thy spirit within thee hath been so at war, And thy hath so bestir'd thee in thy sleep, That beads of sweat have stood upon thy brow, Like bubbles on a late disturbed stream: And in thy face strange motions have appear'd, Such as we see when men restrain their breath On some great sudden <sup>3</sup>hest. O! what portents are Some heavy business hath my lord in hand, [these?] And I must know it, else he loves me not.

Hol. What, ho! is Giliams with the packet gone?

Enter Servant.

Serv. He is, my lord, an hour ago. [sheriff?]

Hol. Hath Butler brought those horses from the <sup>a</sup> "His dole," i. e., his lot; his portion. — <sup>b</sup> Big-paunched. — <sup>c</sup> Churls. — <sup>d</sup> Honest. — <sup>e</sup> "Argument," i. e., subject matter for conversation. — The letter was from George Dunbar, Earl of March, in Scotland.

Serv. One horse, my lord, he brought even now.

Hot. What horse? a roan, a crop-ear, is it not?

Serv. It is, my lord.

Hot. That roan shall be my throne.

Well, I will back him straight: O, ‘Esperance!’

Bid Butler lead him forth into the park.

[Exit Servant.]

Lady. But hear you, my lord.

Hot. What say'st thou, my lady?

Lady. What is it carries you away?

Hot. Why my horse,

My love, my horse.

Lady. Out, you mad-headed ape!

A weasel hath not such a deal of spleen,

As you are toss'd with. In faith,

I'll know your business, Harry, that I will.

I fear, my brother Mortimer doth stir

About his title; and hath sent for you,

To b<sup>l</sup>ine his enterprize: but if you go—

Hot. So far afoot, I shall be weary, love.

Lady. Come, come, you ‘paraquito,’ answer me

Directly unto this question that I ask.

In faith, I'll break thy little finger, Harry,

An if thou wilt not tell me all things true.

Hot. Away!

Away, you triller!—Love?—I love thee not,

I care not for thee, Kate. This is no world,

To play with ‘mammets,’ and to tilt with lips:

We must have bloody noses, and crack'd crowns,

And pass them current too.—Gods me, my horse!—

What say'st thou, Kate? what would'st thou have with me?

Lady. Do you not love me? do you not, indeed?

Well, do not then; for since you love me not,

I will not love myself. Do you not love me?

Nay, tell me, if you speak in jest, or no? [ride?]

Hot. Come, <sup>1</sup>to the park, Kate; wilt thou see me

And when I am o' horseback, I will swear

I love thee infinitely. But hark you, Kate;

I must not have you henceforth question me

Whither I go, nor reason whereabout.

Whither I must, I must; and, to conclude,

This evening must I leave you, gentle Kate.

I know you wise; but yet no farther wise

Than Harry Percy's wife: constant you are;

But yet a woman; and for secrecy,

No lady closer; for I well believe

Thou wilt not utter what thou dost not know;

And so far will I trust thee, gentle Kate.

Lady. How! so far?

Hot. Not an inch farther. But hark you, Kate?

Whither I go, thither shall you go too;

To-day will I set forth, to-morrow you.

Will this content you, Kate?

Lady. It must, of force. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Eastcheap. A Room in the Boar's Head Tavern.

Enter Prince HENRY and POINS.

P. Hen. Ned, pr'ythee, come out of that fat room, and lend me thy hand to laugh a little.

Poins. Where hast been, Hal?

P. Hen. With three or four loggerheads, amongst three or four-score hogsheds. I have sounded the very base string of humility. Sirrah, I am sworn brother to a leash of drawers, and can call them all by their Christian names, as—Tom, Dick, and Francis. They take it already upon their salvation, that though I be but prince of Wales, yet I am the king of courtesy, and tell me flatly I am no proud

Jack, like Falstaff; but a ‘Corinthian,’ a lad of mettle, a good boy, (by the Lord, so they call me,) and when I am king of England, I shall command all the good lads in Eastcheap. They call drinking deep, dying scarlet; and when you breathe in your watering, they cry hem! and bid you play it off.—To conclude, I am so good a proficient in one quarter of an hour, that I can drink with any tinker in his own language during my life. I tell thee, Ned, thou hast lost much honor, that thou wert not with me in this action. But, sweet Ned,—to sweeten which name of Ned, I give thee this pennyworth of sugar, clapped even now into my hand by an ‘undersinker’; one that never spake other English in his life, than—“Eight shillings and sixpence,” and—“You are welcome!” with this shrill addition,—“Anon, anon, sir! Score a pint of bastard in the Half-moon,” or so. But, Ned, to drive away the time till Falstaff come, I pr'ythee, do thou stand in some by-room, while I question my puny drawer to what end he gave me the sugar; and do thou never leave calling—Francis! that his tale to me may be nothing but—anon. Step aside, and I'll show thee a precedent.

Poins. Francis!

P. Hen. Thou art perfect.

Poins. Francis!

[Exit POINS.]

Enter FRANCIS.

Fran. Anon, anon, sir.—Look down into the Pomegranate, Ralph.

P. Hen. Come hither, Francis.

Fran. My lord.

P. Hen. How long hast thou to serve, Francis?

Fran. Forsooth, five years, and as much as to—

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon, sir.

P. Hen. Five years! by'r lady, a long lease for the chinking of pewter. But, Francis, darest thou be so valiant, as to play the coward with thy indenture, and to show it a fair pair of heels, and run from it?

Fran. O lord, sir! I'll be sworn upon all the books in England, I could find it in my heart.

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon, sir.

P. Hen. How old art thou, Francis?

Fran. Let me see,—about Michaelmas next I shall be—

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon, sir.—Pray you, stay a little, my lord.

P. Hen. Nay, but hark you, Francis. For the sugar thou gavest me,—'twas a pennyworth, was't not?

Fran. O lord, sir! I would it had been two.

P. Hen. I will give thee for it a thousand pound: ask me when thou wilt, and thou shalt have it.

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon.

P. Hen. Anon, Francis? No, Francis; but to-morrow, Francis; or, Francis, on Thursday; or, indeed, Francis, when thou wilt. But, Francis,—

Fran. My lord?

Fran. O lord, sir, who do you mean?

P. Hen. Why then, your brown <sup>a</sup>bastard is your only drink: for, look you, Francis, your white canvas doublet will sully. In Barbary, sir, it cannot come to so much.

Fran. What, sir?

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

P. Hen. Away, you rogue! Dost not thou hear them call?

[Here they both call him; the drawer stands amazed, not knowing which way to go.

Enter Vintner.

Vint. What! stand'st thou still, and hear'st such a calling? Look to the guests within. [Exit FRAN.] My lord, old sir John, with half a dozen more, are at the door: shall I let them in?

P. Hen. Let them alone awhile, and then open the door. [Exit Vintner.] Poins!

Re-enter POINS.

Poins. Anon, anon, sir.

P. Hen. Sirrah, Falstaff and the rest of the thieves are at the door. Shall we be merry?

Poins. As merry as crickets, my lad. But hark ye; what cunning match have you made with this jest of the drawer? come, what's the issue?

P. Hen. I am now of all humors, that have show'd themselves humors, since the old days of Goodman Adam to the pupil age of this present twelve o'clock at midnight. [Re-enter FRANCIS, with Wine.] What's o'clock, Francis?

Fran. Anon, anon, sir.

[Exit.

P. Hen. That ever this fellow should have fewer words than a parrot, and yet the son of a woman! His industry is—up-stairs, and down-stairs; his eloquence, the parcel of a reckoning. I am not yet of Percy's mind, the Hotspur of the North; he that kills me some six or seven dozen of Scots at a breakfast, washes his hands, and says to his wife,—“Fie upon this quiet life! I want work.” “O my sweet Harry,” say she, “how many hast thou killed to-day?” “Give my roan horse a drench,” says he, and answers, “Some fourteen,” an hour after; “a trifle, a trifle.”—I prythee, call in Falstaff: I'll play Percy, and that damned brawn shall play dame Mortimer his wife. “Rivo!” says the drunkard. Call in ribs, call in tallow.

Enter FALSTAFF, GADSHILL, BARDOLPH, and PETO.

Poins. Welcome, Jack. Where hast thou been?

Fal. A plague of all cowards, I say, and a vengeance too! marry, and amen!—Give me a cup of sack, boy.—Ere I lead this life long, I'll sew <sup>b</sup>neither-stocks, and mend them, and foot them too. A plague of all cowards!—Give me a cup of sack, rogue.—Is there no virtue extant? [He drinks.

P. Hen. Didst thou never see Titan kiss a dish of butter? pitiful-hearted Titan, that melted at the sweet tale of the sun! if thou didst, then behold that compound.

Fal. You rogue, here's <sup>d</sup>lime in this sack too: there is nothing but rogues to be found in villainous man: yet a coward is worse than a cup of sack with lime in it; a villainous coward.—Go thy ways, old Jack: die when thou wilt, if manhood, good manhood, be not forgot upon the face of the earth, then am I a shotten herring. There live not three good men unchanged in England, and one of them is fat, and grows old: God help the while! a bad world, I say. I would I were a weaver; I could sing psalms or any thing. A plague of all cowards, I say still.

P. Hen. How now, wool-sack! what mutter you?

Fal. A king's son! If I do not beat thee out of thy kingdom with a dagger of lath, and drive all thy subjects afore thee like a flock of wild geese, I'll never wear hair on my face more. You prince of Wales!

P. Hen. Why, you whoreson round man, what's the matter!

Fal. Are you not a coward? answer me to that? and Poins there?

Poins. 'Zounds! ye fat paunch, an ye call me coward, I'll stab thee.

Fal. I call thee coward! I'll see thee damned ere I call thee coward; but I would give a thousand pound, I could run as fast as thou canst. You are straight enough in the shoulders; you care not who sees your back. Call you that backing of your friends? A plague upon such backing! give me them that will face me.—Give me a cup of sack: I am a rogue, if I drunk to-day.

P. Hen. O villain! thy lips are scarce wiped since thou drunk'st last.

Fal. All's one for that. [He drinks.] A plague of all cowards, still say I.

P. Hen. What's the matter?

Fal. What's the matter! there be four of us here have ta'en a thousand pound this day morning.

P. Hen. Where is it, Jack! where is it?

Fal. Where is it? taken from us it is: a hundred upon poor four of us.

P. Hen. What a hundred, man?

Fal. I am a rogue, if I were not at half-sword with a dozen of them two hours together. I have 'scaped by miracle. I am eight times thrust through the doublet; four through the hose; my buckler cut through and through; my sword backed liked a hand-saw: ecce signum. <sup>1</sup>[Drawing it.] I never dealt better since I was a man: all would not do. A plague of all cowards!—Let them speak: if they speak more or less than truth, they are villains, and the sons of darkness.

P. Hen. Speak, sirs: how was it?

Bard. We four set upon some dozen,—

Fal. Sixteen, at least, my lord.

Bard. And bound them.

Peto. No, no, they were not bound.

Fal. You rogue, they were bound, every man of them; or I am a Jew else, an Ebrew Jew.

Bard. As we were sharing, some six or seven fresh men set upon us,—

Fal. And unbound the rest, and then come in the other.

P. Hen. What! fought ye with them all?

Fal. All! I know not what ye call all; but if I fought not with fifty of them, I am a bunch of radish; if there were not two or three and fifty upon poor old Jack, then am I no two-legged creature.

P. Hen. Pray God, you have not murdered some of them.

Fal. Nay, that's past praying for: I have peppered two of them: two, I am sure, I have paid; two rogues in buckram suits. I tell thee what, Hal,—if I tell thee a lie, spit in my face, call me horse. Thou knowest my old ward:—here I lay, and thus I bore my point. Four rogues in buckram let drive at me,—

P. Hen. What four? thou saidst but two even now.

Fal. Four, Hal; I told thee four.

Poins. Ay, ay, he said four.

Fal. These four came all a-front, and mainly thrust at me. I made me no more ado, but took all their seven points in my target, thus.

P. Hen. Seven? why, there were but four even now.

Fal. In buckram.

Poins. Ay, four, in buckram suits.

Fal. Seven, by these hilts, or I am a villain else.

P. Hen. Pr'ythee, let him alone: we shall have more anon. <sup>1</sup>[To POINS.]

Fal. Dost thou hear me, Hal?

P. Hen. Ay, and mark thee too, Jack.

Fal. Do so, for it is worth the listening to. These nine in buckram, that I told thee of,—

P. Hen. So, two more already.

Fal. Their <sup>a</sup>points being broken,—

Poins. Down fell their hose.

Fal. Began to give me ground; but I followed me close, came in, foot and hand, and with a thought, seven of the eleven I paid.

P. Hen. O monstrous! eleven buckram men grown out of two.

Fal. But, as the devil would have it, three misbegotten knaves, in Kendal <sup>b</sup>green, came at my back, and let drive at me;—for it was so dark, Hal, that thou could'st not see thy hand.

P. Hen. These lies are like the father that begets them; gross as a mountain; open, palpable. Why, thou clay-brained guts, thou knotty-pated fool, thou whorson, obscene, greasy tallow-keech,—

Fal. What! art thou mad? art thou mad? is not the truth, the truth?

P. Hen. Why, how could'st thou know these men in Kendal green, when it was so dark thou could'st not see thy hand? come, tell us your reason: what suggest thou to this?

Poins. Come, your reason, Jack, your reason.

Fal. What, upon compulsion? No; were I at the <sup>a</sup>strappado, or all the racks in the world, I would not tell you on compulsion. Give you a reason on compulsion! if reasons were as plenty as blackberries, I would give no man a reason upon compulsion, I.

P. Hen. I'll be no longer guilty of this sin: this sanguine coward, this bed-presser, this horse-back-breaker, this huge hill of flesh;—

Fal. Away, you starveling, you elf-skin, you dried neat's-tongue, bull's pizzle, you stock-fish,—O, for breath to utter what is like thee!—you tailor's yard, you sheath, you bow-case, you vile standing-tuck;—

P. Hen. Well, breathe awhile, and then to it again; and when thou hast tired thyself in base comparisons, hear me speak but this.

Poins. Mark, Jack.

P. Hen. We two saw you four set on four: you bound them, and were masters of their wealth.—Mark now, how plain a tale shall put you down.—Then did we two set on you four, and, with a word, out-fac'd you from your prize, and have it; yea, and can show it you here in the house.—And, Falstaff, you carried your guts away as nimbly, with as quick dexterity, and roared for mercy, and still ran and roared, as ever I heard bull-calf. What a slave art thou, to hack thy sword as thou hast done, and then say, it was in fight! What trick, what device, what starting-hole, canst thou now find out, to hide thee from this open and apparent shame?

Poins. Come, let's hear, Jack: what trick hast thou now?

Fal. By the Lord, I knew ye, as well as he that made ye. Why, hear ye, my masters: was it for me to kill the heir apparent? Should I turn upon the true prince? Why, thou knowest, I am as valiant as Hercules; but beware instinct: the lion will not touch the true prince. Instinct is a great matter; I was a coward on instinct. I shall think the better of myself and thee, during my life; I, for a valiant lion, and thou for a true prince. But, by the Lord, lads, I am glad you have the money.—Hostess, clap to the doors: watch to-night, pray to-morrow.—Gallants, lads, boys, hearts of gold, all the titles of good fellowship come to you! What! shall we be merry? shall we have a play extempore?

P. Hen. Content;—and the argument shall be, thy running away.

Fal. Ah! no more of that, Hal, an thou lovest me.

Enter Hostess.

Host. O Jesu! My lord the prince,—

P. Hen. How now, my lady the hostess! what say'st thou to me?

Host. Marry, my lord, there is a nobleman of the court at door would speak with you: he says, he comes from your father.

P. Hen. Give him as much as will make him a royal man, and send him back again to my mother.

Fal. What manner of man is he?

Host. An old man.

Fal. What doth gravity out of his bed at midnight?—Shall I give him his answer?

P. Hen. Pr'ythee, do, Jack.

Fal. Faith, and I'll send him packing. [Exit.]

P. Hen. Now, sirs; by'r lady, you fought fair;—so did you, Peto;—so did you, Bardolph: you are lions too, you ran away upon instinct, you will not touch the true prince, no;—fie!

Bard. Faith, I ran when I saw others run.

P. Hen. Faith, tell me now in earnest: how came Falstaff's sword so hacked?

Peto. Why, he hacked it with his dagger, and said, he would swear truth out of England, but he would make you believe it was done in fight; and persuaded us to do the like.

Bard. Yea, and to tickle our noses with spear grass, to make them bleed; and then to beslobber our garments with it, and to swear it was the blood of true men. I did that I did not this seven year before; I blushed to hear his monstrous devices.

P. Hen. O villain! thou stolest a cup of sack eighteen years ago, and wert taken with the manner, and ever since thou hast blushed extempore. Thou hadst a fire and sword on thy side, and yet thou ran'st away: what instinct hadst thou for it?

Bard. My lord, do you see these meteors? do you behold these exhalations?

P. Hen. I do.

Bard. What think you they portend?

P. Hen. Hot livers and cold purses.

Bard. Choler, my lord, if rightly taken.

P. Hen. No, if rightly taken, halter.

Re-enter FALSTAFF.

Here comes lean Jack; here comes bare-bone. How now, my sweet creature of 'bombast! How long is't ago, Jack, since thou sawest thine own knee?

Fal. My own knee? when I was about thy years, Hal, I was not an eagle's talon in the waist; I could have crept into any alderman's thumb-ring: a plague of sighing and grief! it blows a man up like a bladder. There's villainous news abroad: here was sir John Bracy from your father: you must to the court in the morning. That same mad fellow of the north, Percy; and he of Wales, that gave <sup>a</sup> Annamion the bastinado, and made Lucifer cuckold, and swore the devil his true liegeman upon the cross of a Welsh <sup>b</sup> hook,—what, a plague, call you him?—

Poins. O! Glendower.

Fal. Owen, Owen; the same; and his son-in-law, Mortimer; and old Northumberland; and that sprightly Scot of Scots, Douglas, that runs o' horseback up a hill perpendicular.

P. Hen. He that rides at high speed, and with his pistol kills a sparrow flying.

Fal. You have hit it.

P. Hen. So did he never the sparrow.

Fal. Well, that rascal hath good mettle in him; he will not run.

P. Hen. Why, what a rascal art thou, then, to praise him so for running?

Fal. O' horseback, ye cuckoo! but, afoot, he will not budge a foot.

P. Hen. Yes, Jack, upon instinct.

Fal. I grant ye, upon instinct. Well, he is there too, and one Mordake, and a thousand <sup>c</sup>blue-caps more. Worcester is stolen away to-night; thy father's beard is turned white with the news; you may buy land now as cheap as stinking mackarel.

P. Hen. Why then, it is like, if there come a hot June, and this civil buffeting hold, we shall buy maidenheads as they buy hob-nails, by the hundred.

Fal. By the mass, lad, thou sayest true; it is like, we shall have good trading that way.—But, tell me, Hal, art thou not horribly afraid? thou being heir apparent, could the world pick thee out three such enemies again, as that fiend Douglass, that spirit Percy, and that devil Glendower? Art thou not horribly afraid? doth not thy blood thrill at it?

P. Hen. Not a whit, i' faith: I lack some of thy instinct.

Fal. Well, thou wilt be horribly chid to-morrow, when thou comest to thy father: if thou love me, practise an answer.

P. Hen. Do thou stand for my father, and examine me upon the particulars of my life.

Fal. Shall I? content.—This chair shall be my <sup>d</sup>state, this dagger my sceptre, and this cushion my crown.

P. Hen. Thy state is taken for a joint-stool, thy golden sceptre for a leaden dagger, and thy precious rich crown for a pitiful bald crown!

Fal. Well, an the fire of grace be not quite out of thee, now shalt thou be moved.—Give me a cup of sack, to make mine eyes look red, that it may be thought I have wept; for I must speak in passion, and I will do it in king <sup>e</sup>Cambyeses' vein.

P. Hen. Well, here is my leg.

Fal. And here is my speech.—Stand aside, nobility.

Host. O, Jesu! This is excellent sport, i' faith.

Fal. Weep not, sweet queen, for trickling tears are vain.

Host. O, the father! how he holds his countenance.

Fal. For God's sake, lords, convey my <sup>f</sup>tristful queen,

For tears do stop the flood-gates of her eyes.

Host. O, Jesu! he doth it as like one of these harlotry players as ever I see.

Fal. Peace, good pint-pot! peace, good <sup>h</sup>tickle-brain!—Harry, I do not only marvel where thou spendest thy time, but also how thou art accompanied: for though the camomile, the more it is trodden on, the faster it grows, <sup>i</sup>so youth, the more it is wasted, the sooner it wears. That thou art my son, I have partly thy mother's word, partly my own opinion; but chiefly, a villainous trick of thine eye, and a foolish hanging of thy nether lip, that doth warrant me. If, then, thou be son to me, here lies the point—why, being son to me, art thou so pointed at? Shall the blessed sun of heaven prove a <sup>j</sup>micher, and eat blackberries? a question not to be asked. Shall the sun of England prove a thief, and take purses? a question to be asked. There is a thing, Harry, which thou hast often heard of, and it is known to many in our land by the name of pitch: this pitch, as ancient writers do report, doth defile: so doth the company thou keepest: for, Harry, now I do not speak to thee in drink, but in tears; not in pleasure, but in passion; not in words only, but in woes also.—And yet there is a virtuous man, whom I have often noted in thy company, but I know not his name.

P. Hen. What manner of man, an it like your majesty?

Fal. A goodly portly man, i' faith, and a corpulent; of a cheerful look, a pleasing eye, and a most noble carriage; and, as I think, his age some fifty, or, by'r lady, inclining to threescore, and now I remember me, his name is Falstaff: if that man should be lowly given, he deceiveth me; for, Harry, I see virtue in his looks. If then the tree may be known by the fruit, as the fruit by the tree, then peremptorily I speak it, there is virtue in that Falstaff: him keep with, the rest banish. And tell me, now, thou naughty varlet, tell me, where hast thou been this month?

P. Hen. Dost thou speak like a king? Do thou stand for me, and I'll play my father.

Fal. Depose me? if thou dost it half so gravely, so majestically, both in word and matter, hang me up by the heels for a <sup>k</sup>rabbit-sucker, or a poulterer's hare.

P. Hen. Well, here I am set.

Fal. And here I stand.—Judge, my masters.

P. Hen. Now, Harry! whence come you?

Fal. My noble lord, from Eastcheap.

P. Hen. The complaints I hear of thee are grievous.

Fal. 'Shlood, my lord, they are false.—Nay, I'll tickle thee for a young prince, i' faith.

Fal. I would your grace would take me with you: whom means your grace?

P. Hen. That villainous abominable misleader of youth, Falstaff, that old white-bearded Satan.

Fal. My lord, the man I know.

P. Hen. I know thou dost.

Fal. But to say, I know more harm in him than in myself, were to say more than I know. That he is old, the more the pity, his white hairs do witness it: but that he is, saving your reverence, a whore-master, that I utterly deny. If sack and sugar be a fault, God help the wicked! If to be old and merry be a sin, then many an old host that I know, is damned: if to be fat be to be hated, then Pharaoh's lean kine are to be loved. No, my good lord: banish Peto, banish Bardolph, banish Poinz; but for sweet Jack Falstaff, kind Jack Falstaff, true Jack Falstaff, valiant Jack Falstaff, and, therefore more valiant, being, as he is, old Jack Falstaff, banish not him thy Harry's company, banish not him thy Harry's company: banish plump Jack, and banish all the world.

P. Hen. I do, I will. [A knocking heard.
[Exeunt Hostess, FRANCIS, and BARDOLPH.

Re-enter BARDOLPH, running.

Bard. O! my lord, my lord! the sheriff, with a most monstrous watch, is at the door.

Fal. Out, you rogue! play out the play: I have much to say in the behalf of that Falstaff.

Re-enter Hostess.

Host. O Jesu! my lord, my lord!—

P. Hen. Heigh, heigh! the devil rides upon a fiddlestick. What's the matter?

Host. The sheriff and all the watch are at the door: they are come to search the house. Shall I let them in?

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? never call a true piece of gold a counterfeit: thou art essentially mad, without seeming so.

P. Hen. And thou a natural coward, without instinct.

Fal. I deny your major. If you will deny the sheriff, so; if not, let him enter: if I become not a cart as well as another man, a plague on my bringing up. I hope I shall as soon be strangled with a halter as another.

P. Hen. Go, hide thee behind the arras:—the rest walk up above. Now, my masters, for a true face, and a good conscience.

Fal. Both which I have had; but their date is out, and therefore I'll hide me.

[Exeunt all but the Prince and Peto.

P. Hen. Call in the sheriff.

Enter Sheriff and Carrier.

Now, master sheriff, what's your will with me?

Sher. First, pardon me, my lord. A hue and cry hath follow'd certain men into this house.

P. Hen. What men?

Sher. One of them is well known, my gracious lord; A gross fat man.

Car. As fat as butter.

P. Hen. The man, I do assure you, is not here, For I myself at this time have employ'd him.

And, sheriff, I will engage my word to thee,

That I will, by to-morrow dinner-time,

Send him to answer thee, or any man,

For any thing he shall be charg'd withal:

And so, let me entreat you, leave the house.

Sher. I will, my lord. There are two gentlemen

Have in this robbery lost three hundred marks.

P. Hen. It may be so: if he have robb'd these He shall be answerable; and so, farewell. [men,

Sher. Good night, my noble lord.

P. Hen. I think it is good morrow, is it not?

Sher. Indeed, my lord, I think it be two o'clock.

[Exeunt Sheriff and Carrier.

P. Hen. This oily rascal is known as well as Paul's. Go, call him forth.

Peto. Falstaff!—fast asleep behind the arras, and snorting like a horse.

P. Hen. Hark, how hard he fetches breath. Search his pockets. [Peto searches.] What hast thou found?

Peto. Nothing but papers, my lord.

P. Hen. Let's see what they be: read them.

Peto. [Reads.] Item, A capon, . . . 2s. 2d.

Item, Sauce, . . . 4d.

Item, Sack, two gallons, . . . 5s. 8d.

Item, Anchovies, and sack after supper . . . 2s. 6d.

Item, Bread, . . . ob.

P. Hen. O monstrous! but one half-pennyworth of bread to this intolerable deal of sack!—What there is else, keep close: we'll read it at more advantage. There let him sleep till day. I'll to the court in the morning: we must all to the wars, and thy place shall be honorable. I'll procure this fat rogue a charge of foot; and, I know, his death will be a march of twelve-score. The money shall be paid back again with advantage. Be with me to-morrow in the morning; and so good morrow, Peto.

Peto. Good morrow, good my lord. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Bangor. A Room in the Archdeacon's House.

Enter HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, MORTIMER, and GLENDOWER.

Mort. These promises are fair, the parties sure, And our induction full of prosperous hope.

Hot. Lord Mortimer, and cousin Glendower, will you sit down?—And, uncle Worcester,—A plague upon it! I have forgot the map.

Glend. No, here it is.

Sit, cousin Percy; sit, good cousin Hotspur;

For by that name as oft as Lancaster

Doth speak of you,

His cheek looks pale, and with a rising sigh He wisheth you in heaven.

Hot. And you in hell, as oft as he hears Owen Glendower spoke of.

Glend. I cannot blame him: at my nativity, The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes, Of burning cressets; and at my birth, The frame and huge foundation of the earth Shak'd like a coward.

Hot. Why, so it would have done at the same season, if your mother's cat had but kitten'd, though yourself had never been born.

Glend. I say, the earth did shake when I was born.

Hot. And I say the earth was not of my mind, If you suppose as fearing you it shook. [tremble.

Glend. The heavens were all on fire; the earth did

Hot. O! then the earth shook to see the heavens And not in fear of your nativity. [on fire,
Diseased nature oftentimes breaks forth

* "Would take me with you," i.e., would go no faster than I can follow.—<sup>b</sup> Tapestry.

<sup>c</sup> St. Paul's Cathedral.—<sup>d</sup> Beginning; commencement.—<sup>e</sup> Cressets were lights set upon beacons, and also upon poles, which were carried in processions.

In strange eruptions: oft the teeming earth
Is with a kind of cholick pinch'd and vex'd
By the imprisoning of unruly wind
Within her womb; which, for enlargement striving,
Shakes the old beldame earth, and *topples down
Steeple, and moss-grown towers. At your birth,
Our grandam earth, having this distemperature,
In passion shook.

Glend. Cousin, of many men
I do not bear these crossings. Give me leave
To tell you once again,—that at my birth,
The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes;
The goats ran from the mountains, and the herds
Were strangely clamorous <sup>1</sup> in the frighted fields.
These signs have mark'd me extraordinary,
And all the courses of my life do show,
I am not in the roll of common men.
Where is he living,—clipp'd in with the sea
That chides the banks of England, Scotland, Wales,—
Which calls me pupil, or hath read to me?
And bring him out, that is but woman's son,
Can trace me in the tedious ways of art,
And hold me pace in deep experiments.

Hot. I think, there is no man speaks better Welsh.
I'll to dinner. [mad.]

Mort. Peace, cousin Percy! you will make him
Glend. I can call spirits from the vasty deep.

Hot. Why, so can I, or so can any man;
But will they come, when you do call for them?

Glend. Why, I can teach you, cousin, to command the devil.

Hot. And I can teach thee, coz, to shame the devil,
By telling truth: tell truth, and shame the devil.—
If thou have power to raise him, bring him hither,
And I'll be sworn, I have power to shame him hence.
O! while you live, tell truth, and shame the devil.

Mort. Come, come;
No more of this unprofitable chat. [head]

Glend. Three times hath Henry Bolingbroke made Against my power: thrice from the banks of Wye,
And sandy-bottom'd Severn, have I sent him
<sup>2</sup> Bootless home, and weather-beaten back.

Hot. Home without boots and in foul weather too!
How <sup>3</sup> 'scap'd he agues, in the devil's name?

Glend. Come, here's the map: shall we divide
According to our three-fold order ta'en? [our right,

Mort. The archdeacon hath divided it
Into three limits, very equally.

England, from Trent and Severn, <sup>4</sup> hitherto,
By south and east is to my part assign'd:

All westward, Wales, beyond the Severn shore,
And all the fertile land within that bound,

To Owen Glendower:—and, dear coz, to you
The remnant northward, lying off from Trent.

And our indentures <sup>5</sup> tripartite are drawn
Which being sealed interchangeably,

(A business that this night may execute)
To-morrow, cousin Percy, you, and I,

And my good lord of Worcester, will set forth,
To meet your father, and the Scottish <sup>6</sup> power,

As is appointed us, at Shrewsbury.
My father Glendower is not ready yet,

Nor shall we need his help these fourteen days.—
Within that space you may have drawn together

[To Glendower.
Your tenants, friends, and neighboring gentlemen.

Glend. A shorter time shall send me to you, lords;
And in my conduct shall your ladies come:

From whom you now must steal, and take no leave;
For there will be a world of water shed,

*Tumblers.—<sup>b</sup> Unsuccessful.—<sup>c</sup> "Hitherto," i. e., to this spot (pointing to the map).—<sup>d</sup> "Tripartite," i. e., in three copies.
—<sup>e</sup> Force.

Upon the parting of your wives and you. [here,

Hot. Methinks, my <sup>1</sup> moiety, north from Burton
In quantity equals not one of yours.

See, how this river comes me <sup>2</sup> cranking in,
And cuts me from the best of all my land

A huge half-moon, a monstrous <sup>3</sup> cantle out.
I'll have the current in this place damm'd up,

And here the <sup>4</sup> smug and silver Trent shall run,
In a new channel, fair and evenly:

It shall not wind with such a deep indent,
To rob me of so rich a bottom here. [doth.]

Glend. Not wind? it shall; it must: you see, it
Mort. Yea, but mark, how he bears his course, and runs me up

With like advantage on the other side;
<sup>5</sup> Gelding the opposed continent, as much

As on the other side it takes from you. [here,
Wor. Yea, but a little charge will trench him

And on this north side win this cape of land;
And then he runs <sup>6</sup> all straight and evenly.

Hot. I'll have it so: a little charge will do it.
Glend. I will not have it alter'd.

Hot. Will not you?
Glend. No, ner you shall not.

Hot. Who shall say me nay?
Glend. Why, that will I.

Hot. Let me not understand you then:
Speak it in Welsh.

Glend. I can speak English, lord, as well as you,
For I was train'd up in the English court;

Where, being but young, I framed to the harp
Many an English ditty, lovely well,

And gave the tongue a helpful <sup>7</sup> ornament;
A virtue that was never seen in you.

Hot. Marry, and I'm glad of it with all my heart.
I had rather be a kitten, and cry mew,

Than one of these same metre ballad-mongers:
I had rather hear a brazen <sup>8</sup> canstick turn'd,

Or a dry wheel grate on the axle-tree;
And that would set my teeth nothing on edge,

Nothing so much as mincing poetry.
<sup>9</sup> 'Tis like the fore'd gait of a shuffling nag.

Glend. Come, you shall have Trent turn'd.
Hot. I do not care. [friend;

I'll give thrice so much land to any well-deserving
But, in the way of bargain, mark ye me,

I'll cavil on the ninth part of a hair.
Are the indentures drawn? shall we be gone?

Glend. The moon shines fair, you may away by night:

I'll haste the <sup>10</sup> writer, and withal, <sup>11</sup> I'll break
With your <sup>12</sup> young wives of your departure hence.

I am afraid my daughter will run mad,
So much she doteth on her Mortimer. [Exit.

Mort. Fie, cousin Percy! how you cross my father.
Hot. I cannot choose: sometime he angers me

With telling me of the <sup>13</sup> moldwarp and the ant,
Of the dreamer Merlin and his prophecies;

And of a dragon, and a finless fish,
A clip-wing'd griffin, and a moulten raven,

A coughing lion, and a ramping cat,
And such a deal of skimble-skamble stuff

As puts me from my faith. I tell you what,—
He held me, last night, at <sup>14</sup> the least nine hours,

In reckoning up the several devils' names,
That were his luckies: I cried, "humph," and

"well," "go to,"
But mark'd him not a word. O! he's as tedious

—<sup>5</sup> Cutting.—<sup>6</sup> "A helpful ornament," i. e., the ornament of verse.—<sup>7</sup> Candlestick turned, (i. e., in a lathe).—<sup>8</sup> The writer of the articles.—<sup>9</sup> The moldwarp (German, mautwurf) is the mole.

As a tired horse, a railing wife;
Worse than a smoky house: I had rather live
With cheese and garlick in a windmill, far,
Than feed on <sup>a</sup>cates, and have him talk to me,
In any summer-house in Christendom.

Mort. In faith, he is a worthy gentleman;
Exceedingly well read, and profited
In strange <sup>b</sup>concealments; valiant as a lion,
And wondrous affable, and as bountiful
As mines of India. Shall I tell you, cousin?
He holds your temper in a high respect,
And curbs himself even of his natural scope,
When you do cross his humor; 'faith, he does.
I warrant you, that man is not alive,
Might so have tempted him as you have done,
Without the taste of danger and reproof:
But do not use it off, let me entreat you.

Wor. In faith, <sup>1</sup>my willful lord, you are to blame.
And since your coming hither have done enough
To put him quite beside his patience.
You must needs learn, lord, to amend this fault:
Though sometimes it show greatness, courage, blood,
And that's the dearest grace it renders you,
Yet oftentimes it doth present harsh rage,
Defect of manners, want of government,
Pride, haughtiness, <sup>c</sup>opinion, and disdain:
The least of which, haunting a nobleman,
Loseth men's hearts, and leaves behind a stain
Upon the beauty of all parts besides,
Beguiling them of commendation. [speed.

Hot. Well, I am school'd: good manners be your Here come our wives, and let us take our leave.

Re-enter GLENDOWER, with the Ladies.

Mort. This is the deadly spite that angers me;
My wife can speak no English, I no Welsh.

Glend. My daughter weeps: she will not part with She'll be a soldier too; she'll to the wars. [you;

Mort. Good father, tell her, that she, and my aunt
Shall follow in your <sup>d</sup>conduct speedily. [Percy,

[GLENDOWER speaks to her in Welsh, and she answers him in the same.

Glend. She's desperate here;
A peevish self-will'd harlotry, <sup>2</sup>and one
That no persuasion can do good upon.

[She speaks to MORTIMER in Welsh.

Mort. I understand thy looks: that pretty Welsh
Which thou pour'st down from these <sup>3</sup>welling <sup>e</sup>heav-
I am too perfect in; and, but for shame, [ens,
In such a parley would I answer thee.

[She speaks again.

I understand thy kisses, and thou mine,
And that's a feeling disputation:
But I will never be a truant, love,
Till I have learn'd thy language; for thy tongue
Makes Welsh as sweet as ditties highly penn'd,
Sung by a fair queen in a summer's bower,
With ravishing <sup>f</sup>division, to her <sup>g</sup>lute. [mad.

Glend. Nay, <sup>4</sup>if thou melt, then will she <sup>e'en</sup> run

[She speaks again.

Mort. O! I am ignorance itself in this.

Glend. She bids you on the wanton <sup>h</sup>rushes lay you down,

And rest your gentle head upon her lap,
And she will sing the song that pleaseth you,
And on your eye-lids crown the god of sleep,
Charming your blood with pleasing heaviness;
Making such difference 'twixt wake and sleep,

As is the difference betwixt day and night,
The hour before the heavenly-harness'd team
Begins his golden progress in the east.

Mort. With all my heart I'll sit, and hear her sing:
By that time will our <sup>i</sup>book, I think, be drawn.

Glend. Do so;

And those musicians that shall play to you
Hang in the air a thousand leagues from hence;
And straight they shall be here. Sit, and attend.

Hot. Come, Kate, thou art perfect in lying down:
come, quick, quick; that I may lay my head in thy lap.

Lady P. Go, ye giddy goose. [The Music plays.

Hot. Now I perceive, the devil understands Welsh;
And 'tis no marvel, he is so humorous.
By'r lady, he's a good musician.

Lady P. Then, should you be nothing but musical,
For you are altogether governed by humors.
Lie still, ye thief, and hear the lady sing
In Welsh.

Hot. I had rather hear, lady, my <sup>k</sup>brach, howl in Irish.

Lady P. Would'st thou have thy head broken?

Hot. No.

Lady P. Then be still.

Hot. Neither; 'tis a woman's <sup>l</sup>fault.

Lady P. Now, God help thee!

Hot. To the Welsh lady's bed.

Lady P. What's that?

Hot. Peace? she sings.

[A Welsh Song by Lady M.

Hot. Come, Kate, I'll have your song too.

Lady P. Not mine, in good sooth.

Hot. Not yours, in good sooth! 'Heart!

You swear like <sup>5</sup>to a confit-maker's wife.

Not <sup>6</sup>yours, in good sooth; and, as true as I live;

<sup>7</sup>As God shall mend me; and, as sure as day;

And giv'st such sarenet surety for thy oaths,

As if thou never walk'd'st farther than <sup>m</sup>Finsbury.

Swear me, Kate, like a lady as thou art,

A good-mouth-filling oath; and leave in sooth,

And such <sup>8</sup>protests of pepper-ginger-bread,

To <sup>n</sup>velvet-guards, and Sunday-citizens.

Come, sing.

Lady P. I will not sing.

Hot. 'Tis the next way to turn <sup>o</sup>tailor, or be red-breast teacher. An the indentures be drawn, I'll away within these two hours; and so come in when ye will. [Exit.

Glend. Come <sup>9</sup>on, lord Mortimer; you are as slow,
As hot lord Percy is on fire to go.

By this our book is drawn: <sup>10</sup>we'll seal, and part
To horse immediately.

Mort. With all my heart. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King HENRY, Prince of Wales, and Lords.

K. Hen. Lords, give us leave. The Prince of Wales and I, [hand,

Must have some private conference: but be near at
For we shall presently have need of you.—

[Exeunt Lords.

I know not whether God will have it so,
For some displeasing <sup>p</sup>service I have done,

<sup>a</sup> Dainties.—<sup>b</sup> "Profited in strange concealments," i. e., skilled in wonderful secrets.—<sup>c</sup> Self-opinion; conceit.—
<sup>d</sup> Guard; escort.—<sup>e</sup> "Welling heavens," i. e., tearful eyes.
—"Division," i. e., variation.—<sup>f</sup> A compliment to Queen Elizabeth is probably here intended.—<sup>g</sup> Floors were formerly strewn with rushes, in place of carpeting.

<sup>2</sup> Hound.—That is, silence is a "woman's fault;" spoken ironically.—<sup>3</sup> "Finsbury," in Moorfields, was the common resort of citizens.—<sup>4</sup> "Velvet-guards," i. e., trimmings of velvet, here put for the cockneys who wore them.—<sup>5</sup> "Tailors" were noted for their rocal powers: Hotsup's meaning is, "To sing is the readiest way to descend to the level of tailors and teachers of birds."—<sup>6</sup> Action.

That, in his secret doom, out of my blood
He'll breed revengeance and a scourge for me;
But thou dost, in thy passages of life,
Make me believe, that thou art only mark'd
For the hot vengeance and the rod of heaven,
To punish my misreadings. Tell me else,
Could such inordinate, and low desires, [tempts,
Such poor, such bare, such lewd, such mean "at-
Such barren pleasures, rude society,
As thou art mark'd withal, and grafted to,
Accompany the greatness of thy blood,
And hold their level with thy princely heart?

P. Hen. So please your majesty, I would, I could Quit all offences with as clear excuse,
As well as, I am doubtless, I can purge
Myself of many I am charg'd withal:
Yet such extenuation let me beg,
As, in reproof of many tales devis'd,
Which oft the ear of greatness needs must hear
By smiling <sup>b</sup>pick-thanks and base newsmongers,
I may, for some things true, wherein my youth
Hath faulty wander'd, and irregular,
Find pardon on my true submission. [Harry,

K. Hen. God pardon thee!—yet let me wonder,
At thy affections, which do hold a wing
Quite from the flight of all thy ancestors.
Thy place in council thou hast rudely lost,
Which by thy younger brother is supplied;
And art almost an alien to the hearts
Of all the court, and princes of my blood:
The hope and expectation of thy time
Is ruin'd; and the soul of every man
Prophetically doth fore-think thy fall.
Had I so lavish of my presence been,
So common-hackney'd in the eyes of men,
So stale and cheap to vulgar company,
Opinion, that did help me to the crown,
Had still kept loyal to <sup>c</sup>possession,
And left me in reputeless banishment,
A fellow of no mark, nor likelihood.
By being seldom seen, I could not stir,
But like a comet I was wonder'd at;
That men would tell their children, "This is he?"
Others would say,— "Where? which is Boling-broke?"

And then I stole all courtesy from heaven,
And dress'd myself in such humility,
That I did pluck allegiance from men's hearts,
Loud shouts and salutations from their mouths,
Even in the presence of the crowned king.
Thus did I keep my person fresh, and new;
My presence, like a robe pontifical,
Ne'er seen but wonder'd at: and so my state,
Seldom, but sumptuous, showed like a feast,
And won by rareness such solemnity.
The skipping king, he ambled up and down
With shallow jesters, and rash <sup>d</sup>havin wits,
Soon kindled, and soon burn'd; <sup>e</sup>discarded state;
Mingled his royalty with carping fools;
Had his great name profaned with their scorn;
And gave his countenance, against his name,
To laugh at gibing boys, and stand the push
Of every beardless vain <sup>f</sup>comparative:
Grew a companion to the common streets,
<sup>f</sup>Enfeoff'd himself to popularity:
That, being daily swallow'd by men's eyes,
They surfeited with honey; and began
To loathe the taste of sweetness, whereof a little More than a little is by much too much.

So, when he had occasion to be seen,
He was but as the cuckoo in June,
Heard, not regarded; seen, but with such eyes,
As, sick and blunted with community,
Afford no extraordinary gaze,
Such as is bent on sun-like majesty,
When it shines seldom in admiring eyes;
But rather drow'd, and hung their eye-lids down,
Slept in his face, and render'd such aspect
As cloudy men use to their adversaries,
Being with his presence glutted, gorg'd, and full.
And in that very line, Harry, stand'st thou;
For thou hast lost thy princely privilege,
With vile participation: not an eye
But is a-weary of thy common sight,
Save mine, which hath desir'd to see thee more;
Which now doth that I would not have it do,
Make blind itself with foolish tenderness.

P. Hen. I shall hereafter, my thrice-gracious lord,
Be more myself.

K. Hen. For all the world,
As thou art to this hour, was Richard then,
When I from France set foot at Ravenspurge;
And even as I was then is Percy now.
Now by my scepter, and my soul to boot,
He hath more worthy interest <sup>g</sup>to the state,
Than thou the shadow of succession:
For of no right, nor color like to right,
He doth fill fields with <sup>h</sup>harness in the realm,
Turns head against the lion's armed jaws,
And, being no more in debt to years than thou,
Leads ancient lords and reverend bishops on
To bloody battles, and to bruising arms.
What never-dying honor hath he got Against renowned Douglas; whose high deeds,
Whose hot incursions, and great name in arms,
Holds from all soldiers chief majority,
And military title capital,
Through all the kingdoms that acknowledge Christ.
Thrice hath this Hotspur, Mars in swathing clothes,
This infant warrior, in his enterprizes
Discomfited great Douglas; ta'en him once,
Enlarged him, and made a friend of him,
To fill the mouth of deep defiance up,
And shake the peace and safety of our throne.
And what say you to this? Percy, Northumberland,
The archbishop's grace of York, Douglas, Mortimer,
<sup>i</sup>Capitulate against us, and are up.
But wherefore do I tell these news to thee?
Why, Harry, do I tell thee of my foes,
Which art my near'st and <sup>k</sup>dearest enemy?
Thou that art like enough, through vassal fear,
Base inclination, and the start of spleen,
To fight against me under Percy's pay,
To dog his heels, and court'sy at his frowns,
To show how much thou art degenerate.

P. Hen. Do not think so; you shall not find it so:
And God forgive them, that so much have sway'd
Your majesty's good thoughts away from me!
I will redeem all this on Percy's head,
And in the closing of some glorious day,
Be bold to tell you that I am your son;
When I will wear a garment all of blood,
And stain my <sup>l</sup>favor in a bloody mask,
Which, wash'd away, shall scour my shame with it.
And that shall be the day, whene'er it lights,
That this same child of honor and renown,
This gallant Hotspur, this all-praised knight,
And your unthought-of Harry chance to meet.
For every honor sitting on his helm,

My shames redoubled! for the time will come,
That I shall make this northern youth exchange
His glorious deeds for my indignities.

Percy is but my factor, good my lord,
To engross up glorious deeds on my behalf;
And I will call him to so strict account,
That he shall render every glory up,
Yea, even the slightest worship of his time,
Or I will tear the reckoning from his heart.
This, in the name of God, I promise here:
The which, if he be pleas'd I shall perform,
I do beseech your majesty, may save
The long-grown wounds of my intemperance:
If not, the end of life cancels all <sup>a</sup>bonds;
And I will die a hundred thousand deaths,
Ere break the smallest <sup>b</sup>parcel of this vow.

K. Hen. A hundred thousand rebels die in this!
Thou shalt have charge, and sovereign trust herein.

Enter BLUNT.

How now, good Blunt? thy looks are full of speed.

Blunt. So 's the business that I come to speak of.
Lord Mortimer of Scotland hath sent word,
That Douglas, and the English rebels met,
The eleventh of this month, at Shrewsbury.
A mighty and a fearful head they are,
If promises be kept on every hand,
As ever offer'd foul play in a state.

K. Hen. The earl of Westmoreland set forth to-day,
With him my son, lord John of Lancaster;
For this <sup>c</sup>advertisement is five days old.—
On Wednesday next, Harry, you shall set forward;
On Thursday we ourselves will march:
Our meeting is Bridgnorth; and, Harry, you
Shall march through Glostershire; by which account,
Our business valued, some twelve days hence
Our general forces at Bridgnorth shall meet.
Our hands are full of business: let's away;
Advantage feeds <sup>d</sup>him fat, while men delay. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Eastcheap. A Room in the Boar's Head Tavern.

Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Bardolph, am I not fallen away vilely since this last action? do I not bate? do I not dwindle?
Why, my skin hangs about me like an old lady's loose gown: I am wither'd like an old <sup>e</sup>apple-John.
Well, I'll repent, and that suddenly, while I am in some <sup>f</sup>liking; I shall be out of heart shortly, and then I shall have no strength to repent. An I have not forgotten what the inside of a church is made of, I am a pepper-corn, a brewer's horse. The inside of a church! Company, villainous company, hath been the spoil of me.

Bard. Sir John, you are so fretful, you cannot live long.

Fal. Why, there is it.—Come, sing me a bawdy song; make me merry. I was as virtuously given as a gentleman need to be; virtuous enough: swore little; dined not above seven times a week; went to a bawdy-house not above once in a quarter—of an hour; paid money that I borrowed three or four times; lived well, and in good compass; and now I live out of all order, out of all compass.

Bard. Why, you are so fat, sir John, that you must needs be out of all compass; out of all reasonable compass, sir John.

Fal. Do thou amend thy face, and I'll amend my life. Thou art our <sup>g</sup>admiral, thou bearest the lantern <sup>h</sup>not in the poop,—but 'tis in the nose of thee: thou art the knight of the burning lamp.

Bard. Why, sir John, my face does you no harm.

Fal. No; I'll be sworn, I make as good use of it as many a man doth of a death's head, or a memento mori: I never see thy face, but I think upon hellfire, and Dives that lived in purple; for there he is in his robes, burning, burning. If thou wert any way given to virtue, I would swear by thy face: my oath should be, By this fire, that's God's angel: but thou art altogether given over, and wert, indeed, but for the light in thy face, the son of utter darkness.
When thou ran'st up Gadshill in the night to catch my horse, if I did not think thou hadst been an ignis fatuus, or a ball of wildfire, there's no purchase in money. O! thou art a perpetual triumph, an everlasting bonfire-light. Thou hast saved me a thousand marks in links and torches, walking with thee in the night betwixt tavern and tavern: but the sack that thou hast drunk me, would have bought me lights as good <sup>i</sup>cheap, at the dearest chandler's in Europe. I have maintained that salamander of yours with fire any time this two and thirty years:
God reward me for it!

Bard. 'Sblood! I would my face were in your belly.

Fal. God-a-mercy! so should I be sure to be heart-burned.

Enter Hostess.

How now, dame Partlet the <sup>j</sup>hen? have you inquired yet who picked my pocket?

Host. Why, sir John, what do you think, sir John?
Do you think I keep thieves in my house? I have searched, I have inquired, so has my husband, man by man, boy by boy, servant by servant: the tith of a hair was never lost in my house before.

Fal. You lie, hostess: Bardolph was shaved, and lost many a hair; and I'll be sworn, my pocket was picked. Go to, you are a woman; go.

Host. Who I? No. I defy thee: God's light!
I was never called so in mine own house before.

Fal. Go to; I know you well enough.

Host. No, sir John; you do not know me, sir John: I know you, sir John: you owe me money, sir John, and now you pick a quarrel to beguile me of it. I bought you a dozen of shirts to your back.

Fal. <sup>k</sup>Dowlas, filthy dowlas: I have given them away to bakers' wives, and they have made bolters of them.

Host. Now, as I am a true woman, holland of eight shillings an ell. You owe money here besides, sir John, for your diet, and by-drinkings, and money lent you, four and twenty pound.

Fal. He had his part of it: let him pay.

Host. He? alas! he is poor: he hath nothing.

Fal. How! poor? look upon his face; what call you rich? let them coin his nose, let them coin his cheeks. I'll not pay a denier. What, will you make a <sup>l</sup>younger of me? shall I not take mine ease in mine inn, but I shall have my pocket picked? I have lost a seal-ring of my grandfather's, worth forty mark.

Host. O Jesu! I have heard the prince tell him,
I know not how oft, that that ring was copper.

Fal. How! the prince is a <sup>m</sup>Jack, a sneak-cup;
'Sblood! an he were here, I would cudgel him like a dog, if he would say so.

<sup>a</sup> Bonds.—<sup>b</sup> Part.—<sup>c</sup> Intelligence.—<sup>d</sup> "Feeds him fat," i. e., feeds himself fat.—The "apple John" is a species of apple that will keep two years.—<sup>e</sup> "Liking," i. e., condition; plight of body.

<sup>g</sup> Admiral's ship.—<sup>h</sup> "As good cheap," i. e., at as good a bargain.—<sup>i</sup> "Dame Partlet" is the name of the hen in the storybook of Reynard the Fox.—<sup>j</sup> Coarse linen.—<sup>k</sup> Dupe.—<sup>l</sup> "A Jack," i. e., a mean fellow.

Enter Prince HENRY and POINS, marching. FALSTAFF meets the Prince, playing on his truncheon, like a fife.

Fal. How now, lad! is the wind in that door, i' faith? must we all march?

Bard. Yea, two and two, Newgate-fashion?

Host. My lord, I pray you, hear me.

P. Hen. What sayest thou, mistress Quickly? How does thy husband? I love him well: he is an honest man.

Host. Good my lord, hear me.

Fal. Pr'ythee let her alone, and list to me.

P. Hen. What sayest thou, Jack?

Fal. The other night I fell asleep, here, behind the arras, and had my pocket picked: this house is turned bawdy-house; they pick pockets.

P. Hen. What didst thou lose, Jack?

Fal. Wilt thou believe me, Hal? three or four bonds of forty pound a-piece, and a seal ring of my grandfather's.

P. Hen. A trifle; some eight-penny matter.

Host. So I told him, my lord; and I said I heard your grace say so: and, my lord, he speaks most vilely of you, like a foul-mouthed man as he is, and said, he would cudgel you.

P. Hen. What! he did not?

Host. There's neither faith, truth, nor womanhood in me else.

Fal. There's no more faith in thee than in a stewed prune; nor no more truth in thee, than in a drawn fox; and for womanhood, maid Marian may be the deputy's wife of the ward to thee. Go, you thing, go.

Host. Say, what thing? what thing?

Fal. What thing? why, a thing to thank God on.

Host. I am nothing to thank God on, I would thou should'st know it: I am an honest man's wife; and, setting thy knighthood aside, thou art a knave to call me so.

Fal. Setting thy womanhood aside, thou art a beast to say otherwise.

Host. Say, what beast, thou knave thou?

Fal. What beast? why an otter.

P. Hen. An otter, sir John? why an otter?

Fal. Why? she's neither fish nor flesh; a man knows not where to have her.

Host. Thou art an unjust man in saying so: thou or any man knows where to have me, thou knave thou!

P. Hen. Thou sayest true, hostess; and he slanders thee most grossly.

Host. So he doth you, my lord; and said this other day, you ought him a thousand pound.

P. Hen. Sirrah! do I owe you a thousand pound?

Fal. A thousand pound, Hal! a million: thy love is worth a million; thou owest me thy love.

Host. Nay, my lord, he called you Jack, and said he would cudgel you.

Fal. Did I, Bardolph?

Bard. Indeed, sir John, you said so.

Fal. Yea; if he said my ring was copper.

P. Hen. I say, 'tis copper: darrest thou be as good as thy word now?

Fal. Why, Hal, thou knowest, as thou art but man, I dare; but as thou art prince, I fear thee, as I fear the roaring of the lion's whelp.

P. Hen. And why not, as the lion.

Fal. The king himself is to be feared as the lion. Dost thou think I'll fear thee as I fear thy father? nay, an I do, I pray God, my girdle break!

P. Hen. O! if it should, how would thy guts fall about thy knees! But, sirrah, there's no room for faith, truth, nor honesty, in this bosom of thine; it is filled up with guts and midriff. Charge an honest woman with picking thy pocket! Why, thou whore-son, impudent, <sup>d</sup>embossed rascal, if there were any thing in thy pocket but tavern reckonings, memorandums of bawdy-houses, and one poor penny-worth of sugar-candy to make thee long winded; if thy pocket were enriched with any other injuries but these, I am a villain: and yet you will stand to it; you will not pocket up wrong. Art thou not ashamed?

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? thou knowest in the state of innocency, Adam fell; and what should poor Jack Falstaff do, in the days of villainy? Thou seest I have more flesh than another man, and therefore more frailty. You confess, then, you picked my pocket?

P. Hen. It appears so by the story.

Fal. Hostess, I forgive thee. Go, make ready breakfast; love thy husband, look to thy servants, cherish thy guests: thou shalt find me tractable to any honest reason: thou seest, I am pacified.—Still?—Nay, pr'ythee begone. [Exit Hostess.] Now, Hal, to the news at court: for the robbery, lad,—how is that answered?

P. Hen. O! my sweet beef, I must still be good angled to thee.—The money is paid back again.

Fal. O! I do not like that paying back; 'tis a double labor.

P. Hen. I am good friends with my father, and may do any thing.

Fal. Rob me the exchequer the first thing thou dost, and do it with unwashed hands too.

Bard. Do, my lord.

P. Hen. I have procured thee, Jack, a charge of foot.

Fal. I would, it had been of horse. Where shall I find one that can steal well? O! for a fine thief, of the age of two-and-twenty, or thereabouts! I am heinously unprovided. Well, God be thanked for these rebels; they offend none but the virtuous: I laud them, I praise them.

P. Hen. Bardolph!

Bard. My lord.

[caster,

P. Hen. Go bear this letter to lord John of Lancaster. To my brother John; this to my lord of Westmoreland.—

Go, Poins, to horse, to horse! for thou, and I, have thirty miles to ride yet ere dinner time.—Jack, meet me to-morrow in the Temple-hall At two o'clock in the afternoon:

There shalt thou know thy charge; and there receive Money, and order for their furniture.

The land is burning, Percy stands on high, And either they, or we, must lower lie.

[Exeunt Prince, POINS, and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Rare words! brave world!—Hostess, my breakfast; come.—

O! I could wish this tavern were my drum. [Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, and DOUGLAS.

Hot. Well said, my noble Scot: if speaking truth, In this fine age were not thought flattery, <sup>d</sup> Swollen; puffy.

Such attribution should the <sup>a</sup> Douglas have,
As not a soldier of this season's stamp
Should go so general current through the world.
By God, I cannot flatter: I <sup>b</sup> defy
The tongues of soothers; but a braver place
In my heart's love hath no man than yourself.
Nay, task me to my word; approve me, lord.
Doug. Thou art the king of honor:
No man so potent breathes upon the ground,
But I will <sup>c</sup> beard him.

Hot. Do so, and 'tis well.—

Enter a Messenger, with Letters.

What letters hast thou there?—I can but thank you.

Mess. These letters come from your father.

Hot. Letters from him! why comes he not himself?

Mess. He cannot come, my lord: he's grievous sick.

Hot. 'Zounds! how has he the leisure to be sick,
In such a justling time? Who leads his <sup>d</sup> power?

Under whose government come they along?

Mess. His letters bear his mind, not I, my lord.

Wor. I pry'thee, tell me, doth he keep his bed?

Mess. He did, my lord, four days ere I set forth;
And at the time of my departure thence,
He was much fear'd by his physicians.

Wor. I would the state of time had first been whole,
Ere he by sickness had been visited:

His health was never better worth than now. [infected]

Hot. Sick now! droop now! this sickness doth
The very life-blood of our enterprise:

'Tis catching hither, even to our camp.

He writes me here,—that inward sickness—

And that his friends by deputation could not

So soon be drawn; nor did he think it meet,

To lay so dangerous and dear a trust

On any soul <sup>e</sup> remov'd, but on his own.

Yet doth he give us bold advertisement,

That with our small conjunction we should on,

To see how fortune is dispos'd to us;

For, as he writes, there is no <sup>f</sup> quailing now,

Because the king is certainly <sup>g</sup> possess'd

Of all our purposes. What say you to it?

Wor. Your father's sickness is a main to us.

Hot. A perilous gash, a very limb lopp'd off:—

And yet, in faith, 'tis not; his present want

Seems more than we shall find it.—Were it good,

To set the exact wealth of all our states

All at one cast? to set so rich a <sup>h</sup> main

On the nice hazard of one doubtful hour?

It were not good; for therein should we read

The very bottom and the soul of hope,

The very <sup>i</sup> list, the very utmost bound

Of all our fortunes.

Doug. 'Faith, and so we should,

<sup>k</sup> Where now remains a sweet reversion:

We <sup>l</sup> now may boldly spend upon the hope

Of what is to come in:

A comfort of <sup>m</sup> retirement lives in this.

Hot. A rendezvous, a home to fly unto,

If that the devil and mischance look big

Upon the maidenhead of our affairs.

Wor. But yet, I would your father had been here.

The quality and <sup>n</sup> hair of our attempt

Brooks no division: it will be thought

By some, that know not why he is away,

That wisdom, loyalty, and mere dislike

Of our proceedings, kept the earl from hence.

And think, how such an apprehension
May turn the tide of fearful faction,
And breed a kind of question in our cause:
For, well you know, we of the <sup>o</sup> offering side
Must keep aloof from strict arbitrement,
And stop all sight-holes, every loop from whence
The eye of reason may pry in upon us.
This absence of your father's <sup>p</sup> draws a curtain,
That shows the ignorant a kind of fear
Before not dreamt of.

Hot. You strain too far.

I, rather, of his absence make this use:—

It lends a lustre, and more great opinion,

A larger dare to our great enterprise,

Than if the earl were here: for men must think,

If we, without his help, can make a head

To push against the kingdom, with his help,

We <sup>q</sup> should o'erturn it topsy-turvy down.—

Yet all goes well; yet all our joints are whole.

Doug. As heart can think: there is not such a word
Spoke of in Scotland as this term of fear.

Enter Sir RICHARD VERNON.

Hot. My cousin Vernon! welcome, by my soul.

Ver. Pray God my news be worth a welcome, lord.

The earl of Westmoreland, seven thousand strong,

Is marching hitherwards; with him, prince John.

Hot. No harm: what more?

Ver. And further, I have learn'd,

The king himself in person is set forth,

Or hitherwards <sup>r</sup> intendeth speedily,

With strong and mighty preparation.

Hot. He shall be welcome too. Where is his son,

The nimble-footed mad-cap prince of Wales,

And his comrades, that <sup>s</sup> daff'd the world aside,

And bid it pass?

Ver. All furnish'd, all in arms,

All plum'd like <sup>t</sup> estridges, that wing the wind,

'Bated, like eagles having lately bath'd;

Glittering in golden coats, like images;

As full of spirit as the month of May,

And gorgeous as the sun at midsummer;

Wanton as youthful goats, wild as young bulls.

I saw young Harry, with his beaver on,

His <sup>u</sup> cuisses on his thighs, gallantly arm'd,

Rise from the ground like feather'd Mercury,

And vaulted with such ease into his seat,

As if an angel dropp'd down from the clouds,

To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus,

And <sup>v</sup> witch the world with noble horsemanship.

Hot. No more, no more: worse than the sun in

March,

This praise doth nourish agues. Let them come;

They come like sacrifices in their trim,

And to the fire-ey'd maid of smoky war,

All hot, and bleeding, will we offer them:

The mailed Mars shall on his altar sit,

Up to the ears in blood. I am on fire,

To hear this rich <sup>w</sup> reprisal so nigh,

And yet not ours.—Come, let me taste my horse,

Who is to bear me, like a thunderbolt,

Against the bosom of the prince of Wales:

Harry to Harry shall, hot horse to horse,

Meet, and we'll part, till one drop down a corse.—

O, that Glendower were come!

Ver. There is more news:

I learn'd in Worcester, as I rode along,

He cannot draw his power this fourteen days.

Doug. That's the worst tidings that I hear of yet.

<sup>m</sup> "The offering side," i. e., the side that offers battle; the assailing side.—<sup>n</sup> "Draws," i. e., draws back.—<sup>o</sup> Threw.—<sup>p</sup> Ostriches.—<sup>q</sup> Ready.—<sup>r</sup> "Cuisses," i. e., armor for the thighs.—<sup>s</sup> Bewitch.—<sup>t</sup> Prize.

Wor. Ay, by my faith, that bears a frosty sound.
Hot. What may the king's whole battle reach unto?
Ver. To thirty thousand.

Hot. Forty let it be:

My father and Glendower being both away,
 The powers of us may serve so great a day.
 Come, let us take a <sup>a</sup>muster speedily:
 Doomsday is near; die all, die merrily.

Doug. Talk not of dying: I am out of fear
 Of death, or death's hand, for this one half year.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A public Road, near Coventry.

Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Bardolph, get thee before to Coventry: fill me a bottle of sack. Our soldiers shall march through; we'll to Sutton-Colfield to-night.

Bard. Will you give me money, captain?

Fal. Lay out, lay out.

Bard. This bottle makes an <sup>b</sup>angel.

Fal. An if it do, take it for thy labor; and if it make twenty, take them all, I'll answer the coinage. Bid my lieutenant Peto meet me at the town's end.

Bard. I will, captain: farewell. [Exit.]

Fal. If I be not ashamed of my soldiers, I am a soused <sup>c</sup>gurnet. I have misused the king's press damnably. I have got, in exchange of a hundred and fifty soldiers, three hundred and odd pounds. I pressed me none but good householders, yeomen's sons: <sup>d</sup>inquired me out contracted bachelors, such as had been asked twice on the bans; such a commodity of warm slaves, as had as lief hear the devil as a drum; such as fear the report of a <sup>e</sup>caliver, worse than a struck fowl, or a hurt wild-duck. I pressed me none but such toasts and <sup>e</sup>butter, with hearts in their bellies no bigger than pins' heads, and they have brought out their services; and now my whole charge consists of ancients, corporals, lieutenants, gentlemen of companies, slaves as ragged as Lazarus in the painted cloth, where the glutton's dogs licked his sores; and such as, indeed, were never soldiers, but discarded unjust serving men, younger sons to younger brothers, revolted tapsters, and ostlers trade-fallen; the cankers of a calm world, and a long peace; ten times more dishonorable ragged than <sup>f</sup>old pieced <sup>f</sup>ancient; and such have I, to fill up the rooms of them that have bought out their services, that you would think that I had a hundred and fifty tattered prodigals, lately come from swine-keeping, from eating draff and husks. A mad fellow met me on the way, and told me I had unloaded all the gibbets, and pressed the dead bodies. No eye hath seen such scarecrows. I'll not march through Coventry with them, that's flat:—nay, and the villains march wide betwixt the legs, as if they had <sup>g</sup>gyves on; for, indeed, I had the most of them out of prison. There's but a shirt and a half in all my company: and the half shirt is two napkins, tacked together, and thrown over the shoulders like a herald's coat without sleeves; and the shirt, to say the truth, stolen from my host at St. Albans, or the red nosed inn-keeper of Daventry. But that's all one; they'll find linen enough on every hedge.

Enter Prince HENRY and WESTMORELAND.

P. Hen. How now, blown Jack! how now, quilt!

Fal. What, Hal! how now, mad wag! what a devil dost thou in Warwickshire?—My good lord of Westmoreland, I cry you mercy: I thought your honor had already been at Shrewsbury.

West. 'Faith, sir John, 'tis more than time that I were there and you too; but my powers are there already. The king, I can tell you, looks for us all: we must away all night.

Fal. Tut, never fear me: I am as vigilant as a cat to steal cream.

P. Hen. I think, to steal cream indeed; for thy theft hath already made thee butter. But tell me, Jack; whose fellows are these that come after?

Fal. Mine, Hal, mine.

P. Hen. I did never see such pitiful rascals.

Fal. Tut, tut! good enough to <sup>h</sup>toss; food for powder, food for powder; they'll fill a pit, as well as better: tush, man, mortal men, mortal men.

West. Ay, but, sir John, methinks they are exceeding poor and bare; too beggarly.

Fal. 'Faith, for their poverty, I know not where they had that: and for their bareness, I am sure, they never learned that of me.

P. Hen. No, I'll be sworn; unless you call three fingers on the ribs, bare. But, sirrah, make haste: Percy is already in the field.

Fal. What, is the king encamped?

West. He is, sir John: I fear we shall stay too long.

Fal. Well, [feast,]
 To the latter end of a fray, and the beginning of a
 Fits a dull fighter, and a keen guest. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, DOUGLAS, and VERNON.

Hot. We'll fight with him to-night.

Wor. It may not be.

Doug. You give him, then, advantage.

Ver. Not a whit.

Hot. Why say you so? looks he not for supply?

Ver. So do we.

Hot. His is certain, ours is doubtful.

Wor. Good cousin, be advis'd: stir not to-night.

Ver. Do not, my lord.

Doug. You do not counsel well.
 You speak it out of fear, and <sup>a</sup>a cold heart.

Ver. Do me no slander, Douglas: by my life,

And I dare well maintain it with my life,

If well-respected honor bid me on,

I hold as little counsel with weak fear,

As you, my lord, or any Scot that lives:

Let it be seen to-morrow in the battle,

Which of us fears.

Doug. Yea, or to-night.

Ver. Content.

Hot. To-night, say I.

Ver. Come, come, it may not be.

I wonder much,

Being men of such great <sup>i</sup>leading as you are,

That you foresee not what impediments

Drag back our expedition: certain horse

Of my cousin Vernon's are not yet come up;

Your uncle Worcester's horse came but to-day;

And now their pride and mettle is asleep,

Their courage with hard labor tame and dull,

That not a horse is half the half himself.

Hot. So are the horses of the enemy,

In general, journey-bated, and brought low;

The better part of ours are full of rest.

Wor. The number of the king exceedeth ours:
 For God's sake, cousin, stay till all come in.

<sup>h</sup> "To toss," i.e., to toss upon a pike.—<sup>i</sup> Leading," i.e., experience in the conduct of armies.

Enter Sir WALTER BLUNT.

Blunt. I come with gracious offers from the king,
If you vouchsafe me hearing and respect.

Hot. Welcome, sir Walter Blunt; and would to God

You were of our determination!

Some of us love you well; and even those some Envy your great deservings, and good name,
Because you are not of our <sup>a</sup> quality,
But stand against us like an enemy.

Blunt. And God defend but still I should stand so,
So long as out of limit and true rule,
You stand against anointed majesty.

But, to my charge.—The king hath sent to know
The nature of your <sup>b</sup> griefs; and whereupon
You conjure from the breast of civil peace
Such bold hostility, teaching his duteous land
Audacious cruelty! If that the king
Have any way your good deserts forgot,
Which he confesseth to be manifold,
He bids you name your griefs, and with all speed,
You shall have your desires with interest,
And pardon absolute for yourself, and these,
Herein mislead by your suggestion.

Hot. The king is kind; and, well we know, the king

Knows at what time to promise, when to pay.
My father, <sup>1</sup> with my uncle, and myself,
Did give him that same royalty he wears;
And when he was not six-and-twenty strong,
Sick in the world's regard, wretched and low,
A poor unmind'd outlaw sneaking home,
My father gave him welcome to the shore:
And, when he heard him swear, and vow to God,
He came but to be duke of Lancaster,
To sue his <sup>c</sup> livery, and beg his peace,
With tears of innocency, and terms of zeal,
My father, in kind heart and pity mov'd,
Swore him assistance, and perform'd it too.
Now, when the lords and barons of the realm
Perceiv'd Northumberland did lean to him,
The more and <sup>d</sup> less came in with cap and knee;
Met him in boroughs, cities, villages,
Attended him on bridges, stood in lanes,
Laid gifts before him, proffer'd him their oaths,
Gave him their heirs, as pages follow'd him,
Even at the heels, in golden multitudes.
He presently, as greatness knows itself,
Steps me a little higher than his vow
Made to my father, while his blood was poor,
Upon the naked shore at Ravenspur; and
And now, forsooth, takes on him to reform
Some certain edicts, and some strait decrees,
That lie too heavy on the commonwealth;
Cries out upon abuses, seems to weep
Over his country's wrongs; and, by this face,
This seeming brow of justice, did he win
The hearts of all that he did angle for:
Proceeded farther; cut me off the heads
Of all the favorites, that the absent king
In deputation left behind him here,
When he was personal in the Irish war.

Blunt. Tut! I came not to hear this.

Hot. Then, to the point.

In short time after he depos'd the king;
Soon after that, depriv'd him of his life;
And, in the neck of that, <sup>e</sup> task'd the whole state;
To make that worse, suffer'd his kinsman March
(Who is, if every owner were well plac'd,

Indeed his king) to be engag'd in Wales,
There without ransom to lie forfeited;
Disgrac'd me in my happy victories;
Sought to entrap me by intelligence;
Rated my uncle from the council-board;
In rage dismiss'd my father from the court;
Broke oath on oath, committed wrong on wrong,
And, in conclusion, drove us to seek out
This <sup>f</sup> head of safety; and, withal, to pry
Into his title, the which we find
Too indirect for long-continuance.

Blunt. Shall I return this answer to the king?

Hot. Not so, sir Walter: we'll withdraw awhile.
Go to the king; and let there be impawn'd
Some surety for a safe return again,
And in the morning early shall mine uncle
Bring him our purposes; and so farewell. [love.]

Blunt. I would you would accept of grace and Hot. And, may be, so we shall.

Blunt. 'Pray God you do! [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—York. A Room in the Archbishop's House.

Enter the Archbishop of York, and Sir MICHAEL.

Arch. Hic, good sir Michael; bear this sealed <sup>h</sup> brief,

With winged haste to the lord marshal:
This to my cousin Scroop; and all the rest
To whom they are directed. If you knew
How much they do import, you would make haste.

Sir M. My good lord,
I guess their tenor.

Arch. Like enough, you do.
To-morrow, good sir Michael, is a day,
Wherein the fortune of ten thousand men
Must bide the touch; for, sir, at Shrewsbury,
As I am truly given to understand,
The king, with mighty and quick-raised power,
Meets with lord Harry: and, I fear, sir Michael,
What with the sickness of Northumberland,
Whose power was in the first proportion,
And what with Owen Glendower's absence thence,
Who with them was a rated <sup>i</sup> sinew too,
And comes not in, o'er-ruled by prophecies,
I fear, the power of Percy is too weak
To wage an instant trial with the king.

Sir M. Why, my good lord, you need not fear;
There is Douglas, and lord Mortimer.

Arch. No, Mortimer is not there. [Percy,

Sir M. But there is Mordake, Vernon, lord Harry
And there's my lord of Worcester; and a head
Of gallant warriors, noble gentlemen.

Arch. And so there is; but yet the king hath drawn
The special head of all the land together:
The prince of Wales, lord John of Lancaster,
The noble Westmoreland, and warlike Blunt,
And many more corivals, and dear men
Of estimation and command in arms. [pos'd.]

Sir M. Doubt not, my lord, they shall be well op-

Arch. I hope no less, yet needful 'tis to fear;
And, to prevent the worst, sir Michael, speed;
For, if lord Percy thrive not, ere the king
Dismiss his power he means to visit us,
For he hath heard of our confederacy,
And 'tis but wisdom to make strong against him:
Therefore, make haste. I must go write again
To other friends; and so farewell, sir Michael.

[Exeunt.]

<sup>a</sup> Fellowship; fraternity.—<sup>b</sup> Grievances.—<sup>c</sup> "His livery," i. e., the delivery of his lands.—<sup>d</sup> "The more and less," i. e., the greater and the less.—<sup>e</sup> Taxed.

ACT V.

SCENE I — The King's Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter King HENRY, Prince HENRY, Prince JOHN of Lancaster, Sir WALTER BLUNT, and Sir JOHN FALSTAFF.

K. Hen. How bloodily the sun begins to peer Above yond' <sup>a</sup>busky hill: the day looks pale
At his distemperature.

P. Hen. The southern wind
Doth play the trumpet to his purposes;
And by his hollow whistling in the leaves
Foretels a tempest, and a blustering day.

K. Hen. Then, with the losers let it sympathise,
For nothing can seem foul to those that win.—
[Trumpet sounds.]

Enter WORCESTER and VERNON.

How now, my lord of Worcester! 'tis not well,
That you and I should meet upon such terms
As now we meet. You have deceiv'd our trust,
And made us <sup>b</sup>doff our easy robes of peace,
To crush our old limbs in ungentle steel:
This is not well, my lord; this is not well.
What say you to it? will you again unknit
This churlish knot of all-aborred war,
And move in that obedient orb again,
Where you did give a fair and natural light,
And be no more an exhal'd meteor,
A prodigy of fear, and a portent
Of broached mischief to the unborn times?

Wor. Hear me, my liege.

For mine own part, I could be well content
To entertain the lag-end of my life
With quiet hours; for, I do protest,
I have not sought the day of this dislike.

K. Hen. You have not sought it! <sup>1</sup>I say, how comes it then?

Fal. Rebellion lay in his way, and he found it.

P. Hen. Peace, <sup>c</sup>chewet, peace!

Wor. It pleas'd your majesty, to turn your looks
Of favor, from myself, and all our house;
And yet I must remember you, my lord,
We were the first and dearest of your friends.
For you my staff of office did I break
In Richard's time; and posted day and night
To meet you on the way, and kiss your hand,
When yet you were in place, and in account,
Nothing so strong and fortunate as I.
It was myself, my brother, and his son,
That brought you home, and boldly did outdare
The dangers of the time. You swore to us,
And you did swear that oath at Doncaster,
That you did nothing purpose 'gainst the state,
Nor claim no further than your new-fall'n right,
The seat of Gaunt, dukedom of Lancaster.
To this we swore our aid; but, in short space,
It rain'd down fortune showering on your head,
And such a flood of greatness fell on you,
What with our help, what with the absent king,
What with the injuries of a wanton time,
The seeming sufferances that you had borne,
And the contrarious winds that held the king
So long in his unlucky Irish wars,
That all in England did repute him dead:
And, from this swarm of fair advantages,
You took occasion to be quickly woo'd
To gripe the general sway into your hand;
Forgot your oath to us at Doncaster,
And, being fed by us, you us'd us so

As that ungentle gull, the cuckoo's bird,
Useth the sparrow, did oppress our nest,
Grew by our feeding to so great a bulk,
That even our love durst not come near your sight,
For fear of swallowing; but with nimble wing
We were enforc'd, for safety sake, to fly
Out of your sight, and raise this present head:
Whereby we stand <sup>d</sup>opposed by such means
As you yourself have forg'd against yourself,
By unkind usage, dangerous countenance,
And violation of all faith and troth
Sworn to us in your younger enterprize.

K. Hen. These things, indeed, you have <sup>2</sup>articulate, Proclaim'd at market-crosses, read in churches,
To face the garment of rebellion
With some fine color, that may please the eye
Of fickle changelings, and poor discontents,
Which gape, and rub the elbow, at the news
Of hurlyburly innovation:
And never yet did insurrection want
Such water-colors to impaint his cause;
Nor moody beggars, starving for a time
Of pellmell havoc and confusion.

P. Hen. In both our armies, there is many a soul
Shall pay full dearly for this encounter,
If once they join in trial. Tell your nephew,
The prince of Wales doth join with all the world
In praise of Henry Percy: by his hopes,
This present enterprize set off his <sup>e</sup>head,
I do not think, a braver gentleman,
More active-valiant, or more valiant-young,
More daring, or more bold, is now alive
To grace this latter age with noble deeds.
For my part, I may speak it to my shame,
I have a truant been to chivalry,
And so, I hear, he doth account me too;
Yet this before my father's majesty:
I am content, that he shall take the odds
Of his great name and estimation,
And will, to save the blood on either side,
Try fortune with him in a single fight. [thee.]

K. Hen. And, prince of Wales, so dare we venture Albeit considerations infinite
Do make against it.—No, good Worcester, no,
We love our people well; even those we love,
That are misled upon your cousin's part;
And, will they take the offer of our grace,
Both he, and they, and you, yea, every man
Shall be my friend again, and I'll be his.
So tell your cousin, and bring me word
What he will do; but if he will not yield,
Rebuke and dread correction wait on us,
And they shall do their office. So, be gone.
We will not now be troubled with reply:
We offer fair, take it advisedly.

[Exeunt WORCESTER and VERNON.]

P. Hen. It will not be accepted, on my life.

The Douglas and the Hotspur both together
Are confident against the world in arms. [charge,

K. Hen. Hence, therefore, every leader to his
For, on their answer, will we set on them;
And God befriend us as our <sup>3</sup>case is just!

[Exeunt KING, BLUNT, and Prince JOHN.]

Fal. Hal, if thou see me down in the battle, and bestride me, so; 'tis a point of friendship.

P. Hen. Nothing but a colossus can do thee that friendship. Say thy prayers, and farewell.

Fal. I would it were bed-time, Hal, and all well.

P. Hen. Why, thou owest God a death. [Exit.]

Fal. 'Tis not due yet: I would be loath to pay him before his day. What need I be so forward with him that calls not on me? Well, 'tis no matter; honor pricks me on. Yea, but how if honor prick me off when I come on? how then? Can honor set to a leg? No. Or an arm? No. Or take away the grief of a wound? No. Honor hath no skill in surgery, then? No. What is honor? A word. What is in that word, honor? What is 'bat honor? Air. A trim reckoning!—Who hath it? He that died o' Wednesday. Doth he feel it? No. Doth he hear it? No. Is it insensible, then? Yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living? No. Why? Detraction will not suffer it:—therefore, I'll none of it: honor is a mere 'scutcheon, and so ends my catechism. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Rebel Camp.

Enter WORCESTER and VERNON.

Wor. O, no! my nephew must not know, sir Richard. The liberal kind offer of the king. [ard,

Ver. 'Twere best, he did.

Wor. Then are we all undone.

It is not possible, it cannot be,
The king should keep his word in loving us;
He will suspect us still, and find a time
To punish this offence in other faults:
Suspicion all our lives shall be stuck full of eyes;
For treason is but trusted like the fox,
Who, ne'er so tame, so cherish'd, and lock'd up,
Will have a wild trick of his ancestors.
Look how we can, or sad or merrily,
Interpretation will misquote our looks;
And we shall feed like oxen at a stall,
The better cherish'd, still the nearer death.
My nephew's trespass may be well forgot,
It hath the excuse of youth, and heat of blood;
And an adopted name of privilege,
A hare-brain'd Hotspur, govern'd by a spleen.
All his offences live upon my head,
And on his father's: we did train him on;
And, his corruption being ta'en from us,
We, as the spring of all, shall pay for all.
Therefore, good cousin, let not Harry know
In any case the offer of the king.

Ver. Deliver what you will, I'll say, 'tis so.
Here comes your cousin.

Enter HOTSPUR and DOUGLAS; Officers and Soldiers, behind.

Hot. My uncle is return'd:—Deliver up
My lord of <sup>b</sup>Westmoreland.—Uncle, what news?

Wor. The king will bid you battle presently.

Doug. Defy him by the lord of Westmoreland.

Hot. Lord Douglas, go you and tell him so.

Doug. Marry, and shall, and very willingly. [Exit.

Wor. There is no seeming mercy in the king.

Hot. Did you beg any? God forbid!

Wor. I told him gently of our grievances,
Of his oath-breaking; which he mended thus;
By now forswearing that he is forsworn:
He calls us rebels, traitors; and will scourge
With haughty arms this hateful name in us.

Re-enter DOUGLAS.

Doug. Arm, gentlemen! to arms! for I have A brave defiance in king Henry's teeth, [thrown
And Westmoreland, that was 'engag'd, did hear it,
Which cannot choose but quickly bring him on.

Wor. The prince of Wales stepp'd forth before the king,

And, nephew, challenged you to single fight.

Hot. O! would the quarrel lay upon our heads;
And that no man might draw short breath to-day,
But I, and Harry Monmouth! Tell me, tell me,
How show'd his <sup>d</sup>tasking? seem'd it in contempt?

Ver. No, by my soul: I never in my life
Did hear a challenge urg'd more modestly,
Unless a brother should a brother dare
To gentle exercise and proof of arms.

He gave you all the duties of a man,
Trim'd up your praises with a princely tongue,
Spoke your deservings like a chronicle,
Making you ever better than his praise,
By still dispraising praise, valued with you;
And, which became him like a prince indeed,
He made a blushing <sup>e</sup>cital of himself;

And chid his truant youth with such a grace,
As if he <sup>f</sup>master'd <sup>g</sup>then a double spirit,
Of teaching, and of learning, instantly.

There did he pause: but let me tell the world,
If he outlive the envy of this day,
England did never <sup>h</sup>owe so sweet a hope,
So much misconstrued in his wantonness.

Hot. Cousin, I think thou art enamored
Upon his follies: never did I hear
Of any prince so wild o' <sup>h</sup>liberty.

But be he as he will, yet once ere night
I will embrace him with a soldier's arm,
That he shall shrink under my courtesy.—
Arm, arm, with speed!—And, fellows, soldiers,
Better consider what you have to do, [friends,
Than I, that have not well the gift of tongue,
Can lift your blood up with persuasion.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, here are letters for you.

Hot. I cannot read them now.—

O gentlemen! the time of life is short;
To spend that shortness basely, were too long,
If life did ride upon a dial's point,
Still ending at the arrival of an hour.
An if we live, we live to tread on kings;
If die, brave death, when princes die with us.
Now, for our consciences, the arms are fair,
When the intent of bearing them is just.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. My lord, prepare; the king comes on apace.

Hot. I thank him, that he cuts me from my tale,
For I profess not talking. Only this—

Let each man do his best: and here draw I

A sword, whose temper I intend to stain

With the best blood that I can meet withal

In the adventure of this perilous day.

Now,—<sup>i</sup>Esperance!—Percy!—and set on!—

Sound all the lofty instruments of war,

And by that music let us all embrace;

<sup>2</sup>Fore heaven and earth, some of us never shall

A second time do such a courtesy.

[The Trumpets sound. They embrace, and exeunt.

SCENE III.—Plain near Shrewsbury.

Excursions, and Parties fighting. Alarm to the Battle. Then enter DOUGLAS and BLUNT, meeting.

Blunt. What is thy name, that in battle thus Thou crossdest me? what honor dost thou seek Upon my head?

<sup>d</sup> Tasking, i. e., reproof.—<sup>e</sup> Cital, i. e., mention.—<sup>f</sup> Master'd, i. e., was master of.—<sup>g</sup> Own.—<sup>h</sup> So wild o' liberty, i. e., so wild and licentious.—<sup>i</sup> Esperance! was the motto of the Percy family.

Doug. Know, then, my name is Douglas ;
And I do haunt thee in the battle thus,
Because some tell me that thou art a king.

Blunt. They tell thee true.

Doug. The lord of Stafford dear to-day has bought Thy likeness ; for, instead of thee, king Harry,
This sword hath ended him : so shall it thee,
Unless thou yield thee as my prisoner.

Blunt. I was not born a yielder, thou proud Scot ;
And thou shalt find a king that will revenge
Lord Stafford's death.

[They fight, and BLUNT is slain.]

Enter HOTSPUR.

Hot. O Douglas ! hadst thou fought at Holmedon
I never had triumph'd upon a Scot. [thus,

Doug. All's done, all's won : here breathless lies

Hot. Where ? [the king.

Doug. Here.

Hot. This, Douglas ? no ; I know this face full
A gallant knight he was, his name was Blunt, [well :
"Sensibly furnish'd like the king himself.

Doug. A fool go with thy soul, 'where'er it goes !
A borrow'd title hast thou bought too dear :
Why didst thou tell me that thou wert a king ?

Hot. The king hath many <sup>2</sup>masking in his coats.

Doug. Now, by my sword, I will kill all his coats ;
I'll murder all his wardrobe, piece by piece,
Until I meet the king.

Hot. Up, and away !

Our soldiers stand full fairly for the day. [Exeunt.

Alarums. Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Though I could 'scape shot-free at London,
I fear the shot here ; here's no scoring, but upon the pate.—Soft ! who art thou ? Sir Walter Blunt :
—there's honor for you ; here's no <sup>b</sup>vanity.—I am as hot as molten lead, and as heavy too : God keep lead out of me ! I need no more weight than mine own bowels.—I have led my ragganuffins where they are peppered : there's not three of my hundred and fifty left alive, and they are for the town's end, to beg during life. But who comes here ?

Enter Prince HENRY.

P. Hen. What ! stand'st thou idle here ? lend me
Many a nobleman lies stark and stiff [thy sword :
Under the hoofs of vaunting enemies,
Whose deaths are yet unreveng'd. I pr'ythee, lend me thy sword.

Fal. O Hal ! I pr'ythee, give me leave to breathe a while.—A Turk Gregory never did such deeds in arms, as I have done this day. I have paid Percy,
I have made him sure.

P. Hen. He is, indeed ; and living to kill thee.
I pr'ythee lend me thy sword.

Fal. Nay, before God, Hal, if Percy be alive, thou get'st not my sword ; but take my pistol, if thou wilt.

P. Hen. Give it me. What, is it in the case ?

Fal. Ay, Hal ; 'tis hot, 'tis hot : there's that will sack a city. [The Prince draws out a bottle of sack.

P. Hen. What ! is't a time to jest and dally now ?

[Throws it at him, and exit.]

Fal. Well, if Percy be alive, I'll pierce him. If he do come in my way, so : if he do not, if I come in his, willingly, let him make a <sup>d</sup>carbonado of me.
I like not such grinning honor as sir Walter hath :
give me life ; which if I can save, so ; if not, honor comes unlooked for, and there's an end. [Exit.

<sup>a</sup> Seemingly.—<sup>b</sup> "No vanity," is used ironically, to denote the excess of the quality.—<sup>c</sup> "A Turk Gregory" is Pope Gregory the Seventh, surnamed Hildebrand.—<sup>d</sup> A carbonado is a piece of meat scored for the gridiron.

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Field.

*Alarums. Excursions. Enter the KING, Prince
HENRY, Prince JOHN, and WESTMORELAND.*

K. Hen. I pr'ythee,
Harry, withdraw thyself ; thou bleed'st too much.—
Lord John of Lancaster, go you with him.

P. John. Not I, my lord, unless I did bleed too.

P. Hen. I do beseech your majesty, make up,
Lest your retirement do amaze your friends.

K. Hen. I will do so.—My lord of Westmoreland,
Lead him to his tent.

West. Come, my lord, I'll lead you to your tent.

P. Hen. Lead me, my lord ? I do not need your help :

And heaven forbid, a shallow scratch should drive
The prince of Wales from such a field as this,
Where stain'd nobility lies trodden on,
And rebels' arms triumph in massacres !

P. John. We breathe too long.—Come, cousin
Westmoreland,

Our duty this way lies : for God's sake, come.

[Exeunt Prince JOHN and WESTMORELAND.]

P. Hen. By God thou hast deceived me, Lancaster,
I did not think thee lord of such a spirit :

Before, I lov'd thee as a brother, John,
But now, I do respect thee as my soul.

K. Hen. I saw him hold lord Percy at the point,
With lustier maintenance than I did look for
Of such an ungrown warrior.

P. Hen. O ! this boy Lends mettle to us all. [Exit.

Alarums. Enter DOUGLAS.

Doug. Another king ! they grow like Hydra's
I am the Douglas, fatal to all those [heads.

That wear those colors on them :—what art thou,
That counterfeits't the person of a king ?

K. Hen. The king himself ; who, Douglas, grieves
So many of his shadows thou hast met, [at heart,
And not the very king. I have two boys
Seek Percy, and thyself, about the field :
But, seeing thou fall'st on me so luckily,
I will assay thee ; and defend thyself.

Doug. I fear thou art another counterfeit,
And yet, in faith, thou bear'st thee like a king :
But mine I am sure thou art, whoe'er thou be,
And thus I win thee.

[*They fight : the KING being in danger, enter
P. HENRY.*]

P. Hen. Hold up thy head, vile Scot, or thou art Never to hold it up again ! the spirits [like
Of valiant Shirley, Stafford, Blunt, are in my arms :
It is the prince of Wales that threatens thee,
Who never promiseth, but he means to pay.—

[They fight : DOUGLAS flies.]

Cheerly, my lord : how fures your grace ?—
Sir Nicholas Gawsey hath for succor sent,
And so hath Clifton ; I'll to Clifton straight.

K. Hen. Stay, and breathe a while.
Thou hast redeem'd thy lost opinion ;
And show'd thou mak'st some tender of my life,
In this fair rescue thou hast brought to me.

P. Hen. O God ! they did me too much injury,
That ever said I hearken'd for your death.

If it were so, I might have let alone
The insulting hand of Douglas over you ;
Which would have been as speedy in your end,
As all the poisonous potions in the world,
And sav'd the treacherous labor of your son.

K. Hen. Make up to Clifton : I'll to sir Nicholas Gawsey. [Exit King HENRY

Enter HOTSPUR.

Hot. If I mistake not, thou art Harry Monmouth.

P. Hen. Thou speak'st as if I would deny my name.

Hot. My name is Harry Percy.

P. Hen. Why, then I see

A very valiant rebel of that name.

I am the prince of Wales; and think not, Percy,
To share with me in glory any more:

Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere;

Nor can one England brook a double reign,

Of Harry Percy, and the prince of Wales.

Hot. Nor shall it, Harry, for the hour is come

To end the one of us; and would to God,

Thy name in arms were now as great as mine!

P. Hen. I'll make it greater, ere I part from thee;

And all the budding honors on thy crest

I'll crop, to make a garland for my head.

Hot. I can no longer brook thy vanities.

[They fight.]

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Well said, Hal! to it, Hal!—Nay, you shall find no boy's play here, I can tell you.

Enter DOUGLAS: he fights with FALSTAFF, who falls down as if he were dead, and exit DOUGLAS. HOTSPUR is wounded, and falls.

Hot. O, Harry! thou hast robb'd me of my youth.

I better brook the loss of brittle life,

Than those proud titles thou hast won of me;

They wound my thoughts worse than thy sword my flesh:—

But thought's the slave of life, and life time's fool;

And time, that takes survey of all the world,

Must have a stop. O! I could prophesy,

But that the earthy and cold hand of death

Lies on my tongue.—No, Percy, thou art dust,

And food for—

[Dies.]

P. Hen. For worms, brave Percy. Fare thee well, great heart!—

Ill-weav'd ambition, how much art thou shrunk!

When that this body did contain a spirit,

A kingdom for it was too small a bound;

But now, two paces of the vilest earth

Is room enough:—this earth that bears thee dead,

Bears not alive so stout a gentleman.

If thou wert sensible of courtesy,

I should not make so dear a show of zeal:—

But let my <sup>a</sup> favors hide thy mangled face,

And, even in thy behalf, I'll thank myself

For doing these fair rites of tenderness.

Adieu, and take thy praise with thee to heaven:

Thy bignomy sleep with thee in the grave,

But not remember'd in thy epitaph.—

[Seeing FALSTAFF on the ground.]

What! old acquaintance! could not all this flesh

Keep in a little life? Poor Jack, farewell!

I could have better spar'd a better man.

O! I should have a heavy miss of thee,

If I were much in love with vanity.

Death hath not struck so fat a deer to-day,

Though many dearer, in this bloody fray.—

<sup>c</sup> Embowell'd will I see thee by and by;

Till then, in blood by noble Percy lie.

[Exit.]

Fal. [Rising.] Embowell'd! if thou embowell me to-day, I'll give you leave to <sup>d</sup> powder me, and eat me too, to-morrow. 'Blood! 'twas time to counterfeit, or that hot termagant Scot had paid me scot and lot too. Counterfeit? I lie; I am no counterfeit:

to die, is to be a counterfeit; for he is but the counterfeit of a man, who hath not the life of a man;

but to counterfeit dying, when a man thereby liveth, is to be no counterfeit, but the true and perfect image of life indeed. The better part of valor is discretion, in the which better part, I have saved my life. 'Zounds! I am afraid of this gunpowder Percy, though he be dead. How, if he should counterfeit too, and rise? By my faith, I am afraid he would prove the better counterfeit. Therefore I'll make him sure; yea, and I'll swear I killed him. Why may not he rise, as well as I? Nothing confutes me but eyes, and nobody sees me: therefore, sirrah, with a new wound in your thigh come you along with me. [He takes HOTSPUR on his back.]

Re-enter Prince HENRY and Prince JOHN.

P. Hen. Come, brother John; full bravely hast Thou maiden sword. [thou flesh'd]

P. John. But, soft! whom have we here? Did you not tell me this fat man was dead?

P. Hen. I did; I saw him dead, breathless, and On the ground.— [bleeding]

Art thou alive? or is it phantasy

That plays upon our eyesight? I pry'thee, speak;

We will not trust our eyes, without our ears.

Thou art not what thou seem'st.

Fal. No, that's certain: I am not a double man; but if I be not Jack Falstaff, then am I a <sup>e</sup> Jack. There is Percy: [Throwing down the body.] if your father will do me any honor, so; if not, let him kill the next Percy himself. I look to be either earl or duke, I can assure you.

P. Hen. Why, Percy I killed myself, and saw thee dead.

Fal. Didst thou?—Lord, lord, how this world is given to lying!—I grant you I was down and out of breath, and so was he; but we rose both at an instant, and fought a long hour by Shrewsbury clock. If I may be believed, so; if not, let them that should reward valor bear the sin upon their own heads. I'll take it upon my death, I gave him this wound in the thigh: if the man were alive, and would deny it, 'zounds! I would make him eat a piece of my sword.

P. John. This is the strangest tale that e'er I heard. [John.—]

P. Hen. This is the strangest fellow, brother Come, bring your luggage nobly on your back: For my part, if a lie may do thee grace, I'll gild it with the happiest terms I have.

[A Retreat is sounded.]

The trumpet sounds retreat; the day is ours.

Come, brother, let us to the highest of the field,

To see what friends are living, who are dead.

[Excunt Prince HENRY and Prince JOHN.]

Fal. I'll follow, as they say, for reward. He that rewards me, God reward him! If I do grow great, I'll grow less; for I'll purge, and leave sack, and live cleanly, as a nobleman should do.

[Exit, dragging out PERCY's Body.]

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

The Trumpets sound. Enter King HENRY, Prince HENRY, Prince JOHN, WESTMORELAND, and Others, with WORCESTER, and VERNON, prisoners.

K. Hen. Thus ever did rebellion find rebuke.—

I'll-spirited Worcester, did we not send grace,

Pardou, and terms of love to all of you?

And would'st thou turn our offers contrary?

Misuse the tenor of thy kinsman's trust?

Three knights upon our party slain to-day,

<sup>a</sup> "My favors," i. e., my scarf. <sup>b</sup> Ignominy. <sup>c</sup> Embalmed.

<sup>d</sup> "To powder," i. e., to salt.

A noble earl, and many a creature else,
Had been alive this hour,
If, like a Christian, thou hadst truly borne
Betwixt our armies true intelligence.

Hor. What I have done, my safety urg'd me to,
And I embrace this fortune patiently,
Which not to be avoided falls on me. [too:

K. Hen. Bear Worcester to the death, and Vernon
Other offenders we will pause upon.—

[Exeunt WORCESTER and VERNON, guarded.
How goes the field?

P. Hen. The noble Scot, lord Douglas, when he saw
The fortune of the day quite turn'd from him,
The noble Percy slain, and all his men
Upon the foot of fear, fled with the rest;
And falling from a hill he was so bruised,
That the pursuers took him. At my tent
The Douglas is, and I beseech your grace,
I may dispose of him.

K. Hen. With all my heart.

P. Hen. Then, brother John of Lancaster, to you
This honorable bounty shall belong.
Go to the Douglas, and deliver him
Up to his pleasure, ransomless, and free:

His valor, shown upon our crests to-day,
Hath taught us how to cherish such high deeds,
Even in the bosom of our adversaries.

P. John. I thank your grace for this high courtesy,
Which I shall put in act without delay. [power.—

K. Hen. Then this remains,—that we divide our
You, son John, and my cousin Westmoreland,
Towards York shall bend you, with your dearest speed,
To meet Northumberland, and the prelate Scroop,
Who, as we hear, are busily in arms:

Myself, and you, son Harry, will towards Wales,
To fight with Glendower and the earl of March.

Rebellion in this land shall lose his sway,
Meeting the check of such another day:

And since this business so fair is done,
Let us not leave till all our own be won. [Exeunt.

SCENE, England.

INDUCTION.

Warkworth. Before Northumberland's Castle.

Enter RUMOR, painted full of Tongues.

Rum. Open your ears; for which of you will stop
The vent of hearing, when loud rumor speaks?
I, from the orient to the drooping west,
Making the wind my post-horse, still unfold
The acts commenced on this ball of earth:
Upon my tongues continual slanders ride,
The which in every language I pronounce,
Stuffing the ears of men with false reports.
I speak of peace, while covert enmity,
Under the smile of safety, wounds the world:
And who but Rumor, who but only I,
Make fearful musters, and prepar'd defence;
Whilst the big year, swoln with some other grief,

Is thought with child by the stern tyrant war,
And no such matter? Rumor is a pipe
Blown by surmises, jealousies, conjectures;
And of so easy and so plain a stop,
That the blunt monster with uncounted heads,
The still-discordant wavering multitude,
Can play upon it. But what need I thus
My well-known body to anatomize
Among my household? Why is Rumor here?
I run before king Harry's victory;
Who in a bloody field by Shrewsbury
Hath beaten down young Hotspur, and his troops,
Quenching the flame of bold rebellion
Even with the rebels' blood. But what mean I
To speak so true at first? my office is
To noise abroad, that Harry Monmouth fell

* The stops are the holes in a flute or pipe.

Under the wrath of noble Hotspur's sword;
And that the king before the Douglas' rage
Stoop'd his anointed head as low as death.
This have I rumor'd through the peasant towns
Between that royal field of Shrewsbury
And this worm-eaten hold of ragged stone,
Where Hotspur's father, old Northumberland,
Lies crafty-sick: the posts come tiring on,
And not a man of them brings other news
Than they have learn'd of me; from Rumor's tongues
They bring smooth comforts false, worse than true wongs. [Exit.]

ACT I.

SCENE I.—The same.<sup>1</sup>

Enter Lord BARDOLPH.

Bard. Who keeps the gate here? ho!—Where is the earl?

<sup>2</sup> Enter Warder, above.

<sup>3</sup> Ward. What shall I say you are?

Bard. Tell thou the earl,
That the lord Bardolph doth attend him here.

Ward. His lordship is walk'd forth into the orchard:
Please it your honor, knock but at the gate,
And he himself will answer. <sup>4</sup> [Exit Warder.]

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.

Bard. Here comes the earl.

North. What news, lord Bardolph? every minute
Should be the father of some stratagem. [now
The times are wild: contention, like a horse
Full of high feeding, madly hath broke loose,
And bears down all before him.]

Bard. Noble earl,
I journey certain news from Shrewsbury.

North. Good, an God will!

Bard. As good as heart can wish.
The king is almost wounded to the death.
And in the fortune of my lord, your son,
Prince Harry slain outright; and both the Blunts Kill'd by the hand of Douglas; young Prince John,
And Westmoreland and Stafford, fled the field;
And Harry Monmouth's brawn, the hulk sir John,
Is prisoner to your son. O! such a day,
So fought, so follow'd, and so fairly won,
Came not till now to dignify the times,
Since Caesar's fortunes.

North. How is this deriv'd?
Saw you the field? came you from Shrewsbury?

Bard. I spake with one, my lord, that came from A gentleman well-bred, and of good name, [thence;
That freely render'd me these news for true. [sent

North. Here comes my servant, Travers, whom I
On Tuesday last to listen after news.

Bard. My lord, I over-rode him on the way,
And he is furnish'd with no certainties,
More than he haply may retail from me.

Enter TRAVERS.

North. Now, Travers, what good tidings come with you?

Tra. My lord, sir John Umfreville turn'd me back
With joyful tidings; and, being better hors'd,
Out-rode me. After him came spurring hard
A gentleman, almost<sup>a</sup> forspent with speed,
That stopp'd by me to breathe his bloodied horse.
He ask'd the way to Chester; and of him

I did demand, what news from Shrewsbury:
He told me that rebellion had bad luck,
And that young Harry Percy's spur was cold.
With that he gave his able horse the head,
And, bending forward, struck his armed heels
Against the panting sides of his poor jade
Up to the rowel-head; and, starting so,
He seem'd in running to devour the way,
Staying no longer question.

North. Ha!—Again.

Said he, young Harry Percy's spur was cold?
Of Hotspur, coldspur? that rebellion
Had met ill-luck!

Bard. My lord, I'll tell you what:
If my young lord your son have not the day,
Upon mine honor, for a silken<sup>d</sup> point
I'll give my barony: never talk of it. [Travers,

North. Why should that gentleman, that rode by Give, then, such instances of loss?

Bard. Who, he?
He was some<sup>e</sup> hilding fellow, that had stolen
The horse he rode on, and, upon my life,
Spoke at a venture. Look, here comes more news.

Enter MORTON.

North. Yea, this man's brow, like to a title-leaf,
Foretels the nature of a tragic volume:
So looks the strand, whereon th' imperious flood
Hath left a witness'd<sup>f</sup> usurpation.

Say, Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury?
Mor. I ran from Shrewsbury, my noble lord;
Where hateful death put on his ugliest mask,
To fright our party.

North. How doth my son and brother?
Thou tremblest; and the whiteness in thy cheek
Is apter than thy tongue to tell thy errand.
Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless,
So dull, so dead in look, so woe-begone,
Drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night,
And would have told him, half his Troy was burn'd:
But Priam found the fire, ere he his tongue,
And I my Percy's death, ere thou report'st it.
This thou would'st say,—Your son did thus, and thus
Your brother, thus; so fought the noble Douglas;
Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds,
But in the end, to stop mine ear indeed,
Thou hast a sigh to blow away this praise,
Ending with—brother, son, and all are dead.

Mor. Douglas is living, and your brother, yet;
But for my lord, your son,—

North. Why, he is dead.—
See, what a ready tongue suspicion hath!
He that but fears the thing he would not know,
Hath by instinct knowledge from others' eyes,
That what he fear'd is chanced. Yet speak, Morton:
Tell thou thy earl his divination lies,
And I will take it as a sweet disgrace,
And make thee rich for doing me such wrong.

Mor. You are too great to be by me gainsaid:
Your spirit is too true; your fears too certain.

North. Yet, for all this, say not that Percy's dead.—
I see a strange confession in thine eye:
Thou shak'st thy head; and hold'st it fear, or sin,
To speak<sup>g</sup> the truth. If he be slain, say so:
The tongue offends not, that reports his death;
And he doth sin that doth belic the dead,
Not he which says the dead is not alive.
Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news
Hath but a losing office; and his tongue
Sounds ever after as a sullen bell,

Remember'd knolling a departing fiend.

Bard. I cannot think, my lord, your son is dead.

Mor. I am sorry I should force you to believe That which I would to heaven I had not seen; But these mine eyes saw him in bloody state, Rendering faint <sup>a</sup>quittance, wearied and outbreath'd, To Harry Monmouth; whose swift wrath beat down The never-daunted Percy to the earth, From whence with life he never more sprung up. In <sup>b</sup>few, his death, whose spirit lent a fire Even to the dullest peasant in his camp, Being <sup>c</sup>bruited once, took fire and heat away From the best temper'd courage in his troops: For from his metal was his party steel'd; Which once in him abated, all the rest Turn'd on themselves, like dull and heavy lead. And as the thing that's heavy in itself, Upon enforcement flies with greatest speed, So did our men, heavy in Hotspur's loss, Lend to this weight such lightness with their fear, That arrows fled not swifter toward their aim, Than did our soldiers, aiming at their safety, Fly from the field. Then was that noble Worcester Too soon ta'en prisoner; and that furious Scot, The bloody Douglas, whose well-labouring sword Had three times slain th' appearance of the king, 'Gan <sup>d</sup>vail his stomach, and did grace the shame Of those that turn'd their backs; and in his flight, Stumbling in fear, was took. The sum of all Is, that the king hath won, and hath sent out A speedy power, to encounter you, my lord, Under the conduct of young Lancaster, And Westmoreland. This is the news at full.

North. For this I shall have time enough to mourn. In poison there is physic; and these news, Having been well, that would have made me sick, Being sick, have in some measure made me well: And as the wretch, whose fever-weaken'd joints, Like strengthless hinges, <sup>e</sup>buckle under life, Impatient of his fit, breaks like a fire Out of his keeper's arms; even so my limbs, Weaken'd with <sup>f</sup>grief, being now enrag'd with <sup>g</sup>grief, Are thrice themselves. Hence, therefore, thou <sup>h</sup>nice A scaly gauntlet now, with joints of steel, [crutch! Must glove this hand: and hence, thou sickly <sup>i</sup>quof! Thou art a guard too wanton for the head, Which princes, flesh'd with conquest, aim to hit. Now bind my brows with iron; and approach The <sup>j</sup>rugged'st hour that time and spite dare bring, To frown upon th' enrag'd Northumberland. Let heaven kiss earth: now, let not nature's hand Keep the wild flood confin'd: let order die; And let this world no longer be a stage, To feed contention in a lingering act, But let one spirit of the first-born Cain Reign in all bosoms, that, each heart being set On bloody courses, the rude scene may end, And darkness be the burier of the dead! [lord.

Tra. This strained passion doth you wrong, my Bard. Sweet earl, divorce not wisdom from your honor.

Mor. The lives of all your loving complices Lean on your health; the which, if you give o'er To stormy passion, must perforce decay. You cast the event of war, my noble lord, [said,— And summ'd the account of chance, before you Let us make head. It was your presumise, That in the <sup>k</sup>dole of blows your son might drop:

You knew, he walk'd o'er perils, on an edge, More likely to fall in, than to get o'er: You were <sup>l</sup>advis'd, his flesh was capable Of wounds and scars, and that his forward spirit Would lift him where most trade of danger rang'd; Yet did you say,—Go forth; and none of this, Though strongly apprehended, could restrain The stiff-borne action: what hath then befallen, Or what hath this bold enterprise brought forth, More than that being which was like to be?

Bard. We all, that are engaged <sup>m</sup>to this loss, Knew that we ventur'd on such dangerous seas, That, if we wrought out life, 'twas ten to one; And yet we ventur'd, for the gain propos'd Chok'd the respect of likely peril fear'd, And, since we are o'er-set, venture again. Come, we will all put forth; body, and goods.

Mor. 'Tis more than time: and, my most noble I hear for certain, and dare speak the truth, [lord, The gentle archbishop of York is up, With well-appointed powers: he is a man, Who with a double surety binds his followers. My lord your son had only but the corps, But shadows and the shows of men, to fight; For that same word, rebellion, did divide The action of their bodies from their souls, And they did fight with <sup>n</sup>queasiness, constrain'd As men drink potions, that their weapons only Seem'd on our side; but, for their spirits and souls, This word, rebellion, it had froze them up, As fish are in a pond. But now, th' <sup>o</sup>archbishop Turns insurrection to religion: Suppos'd sincere and holy in his thoughts, He's follow'd both with body and with mind, And doth enlarge his rising with the blood Of fair king Richard, scrap'd from Pomfret stones; Derives from heaven his quarrel, and his cause; Tells them, he doth <sup>p</sup>bestride a bleeding land, Gasping for life under great Bolingbroke, And more, and <sup>q</sup>less, do flock to follow him.

North. I knew of this before; but, to speak truth, This present grief had wip'd it from my mind. Go in with me; and counsel every man The aptest way for safety, and revenge. Get posts and letters, and make friends with speed: Never so few, and never yet more need. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—London. A Street.

Enter Sir JOHN FALSTAFF, with his Page bearing his Sword and Buckler.

Fal. Sirrah, you giant, what says the doctor to my <sup>r</sup>water?

Page. He said, sir, the water itself was a good healthy water; but for the party that <sup>s</sup>owed it, he might have more diseases than he knew for.

Fal. Men of all sorts take a pride to <sup>t</sup>gird at me: the brain of this foolish-compounded clay, man, is not able to invent any thing that tends to laughter, more than I invent, or is invented on me: I am not only witty in myself, but the cause that wit is in other men. I do here walk before thee, like a sow that hath overwhelmed all her litter but one: if the prince put thee into my service for any other reason than to set me off, why then, I have no judgment. Thou whoreson <sup>u</sup>mandrake, thou art fitter to be worn in my cap, than to wait at my heels. I was never manned with an <sup>a</sup>agate till now: but I will in-set you neither in gold nor silver, but in vile apparel, and send you back again to your master, for a jewel; the <sup>b</sup>juvenal, the prince your master, whose chin is not yet fledged. I will sooner have a beard grow in the palm of my hand, than he shall get one on his cheek; and yet he will not stick to say, his face is a face-royal. God may finish it when he will, it is not a hair amiss yet: he may keep it still as a face-royal, for a barber shall never earn pence out of it; and yet he will be crowing, as if he had writ man ever since his father was a batchelor. He may keep his own grace, but he is almost out of mine, I can assure him.—What said master Dumbleton about the satin for my short cloak, and my slops?

Page. He said, sir, you should procure him better assurance than Bardolph; he would not take his bond and yours: he liked not the security.

Fal. Let him be damned like the glutton: may his tongue be 'hotter.—A whoreson Achitophel; a rascally yea-forsooth knave, to bear a gentleman in <sup>d</sup>hand, and then stand upon security!—The whoreson smooth-pates do now wear nothing but high shoes, and bunches of keys at their girdles; and if a man is <sup>e</sup>thorough with them in honest taking up, then must they stand upon security. I had as lief they would put ratsbane in my mouth, as offer to stop it with security. I looked he should have sent me two and twenty yards of satin, as I am a true knight, and he sends me security. Well, he may sleep in security; for he hath the horn of abundance, and the lightness of his wife shines through it; and yet cannot he see, though he have his own lantern to light him.—Where's Bardolph?

Page. He's gone into Smithfield to buy your worst-horse.

Fal. I bought him in 'Paul's, and he'll buy me a horse in Smithfield: an I could get me but a wife in the stews, I were manned, horsed, and <sup>g</sup>wived.

Enter the Lord Chief Justice, and an Attendant.

Page. Sir, here comes the nobleman that committed the prince for striking him about Bardolph.

Fal. Wait close; I will not see him.

Ch. Just. What's he that goes there?

Atten. Falstaff, an't please your lordship.

Ch. Just. He that was in question for the robbery?

Atten. He, my lord; but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury, and, as I hear, is now going with some charge to the lord John of Lancaster.

Ch. Just. What, to York? Call him back again.

Atten. Sir John Falstaff!

Fal. Boy, tell him I am deaf.

Page. You must speak louder, my master is deaf.

Ch. Just. I am sure he is, to the hearing of any thing good.—Go, pluck him by the elbow; I must speak with him.

Atten. Sir John,—

Fal. What! a young knave, and begging? Is there not wars? is there not employment? Doth not the king lack subjects? do not the rebels need soldiers? Though it be a shame to be on any side but one, it is worse shame to beg than to be on the worst side, were it worse than the name of rebellion can tell how to make it.

Atten. You mistake me, sir.

Fal. Why, sir, did I say you were an honest man? setting my knighthood and my soldiership aside, I had lied in my throat if I had said so.

Atten. I pray you, sir, then set your knighthood and your soldiership aside, and give me leave to tell you, you lie in your throat, if you say I am any other than an honest man.

Fal. I give thee leave to tell me so? I lay aside that which grows to me? If thou get'st any leave of me, hang me: if thou tak'st leave, thou wert better be hanged. You <sup>b</sup>hunt-counter, hence! avaunt!

Atten. Sir, my lord would speak with you.

Ch. Just. Sir John Falstaff, a word with you.

Fal. My good lord!—God give your lordship good time of day. I am glad to see your lordship abroad; I heard say, your lordship was sick: I hope, your lordship goes abroad by advice. Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the saltiness of time, and I most humbly beseech your lordship to have a reverend care of your health.

Ch. Just. Sir John, I sent for you before your expedition to Shrewsbury.

Fal. An't please your lordship, I hear his majesty is returned with some discomfort from Wales.

Ch. Just. I talk not of his majesty.—You would not come when I sent for you.

Fal. And I hear, moreover, his highness is fallen into this same whoreson apoplexy.

Ch. Just. Well, heaven mend him.—I pray you, let me speak with you.

Fal. This apoplexy is, as I take it, a kind of lethargy, an't please your lordship; a kind of sleeping in the blood, a whoreson tingling.

Ch. Just. What tell you me of it? be it as it is.

Fal. It hath its original from much grief; from study, and perturbation of the brain. I have read the cause of his effects in Galen: it is a kind of deafness.

Ch. Just. I think you are fallen into the disease, for you hear not what I say to you.

Fal. Very well, my lord, very well: rather, an't please you, it is the disease of not listening, the malady of not marking, that I am troubled withal.

Ch. Just. To punish you by the heels would amend the attention of your ears; and I care not, if I do become your physician.

Fal. I am as poor as Job, my lord, but not so patient: your lordship may minister the potion of imprisonment to me, in respect of poverty; but how I should be your patient to follow your prescriptions, the wise may make some dram of a scruple, or, indeed, a scruple itself.

Ch. Just. I sent for you, when there were matters against you for your life, to come speak with me.

Fal. As I was then advised by my learned counsel in the laws of this land-service, I did not come.

Ch. Just. Well, the truth is, sir John, you live in great infamy.

Fal. He that buckles him in my belt cannot live in less.

Ch. Just. Your means are very slender, and your waste is great.

Fal. I would it were otherwise: I would my means were greater, and my waist slenderer.

<sup>b</sup> "Hunt-counter," i. e., catch-pole; burn-bailiff.

Ch. Just. You have misled the youthful prince.

Fal. The young prince hath misled me : I am the fellow with the great belly, and he my dog.

Ch. Just. Well, I am loath to gall a new-healed wound. Your day's service at Shrewsbury hath a little gilded over your night's exploit on Gadshill : you may thank the unquiet time for your quiet o'erposting that action.

Fal. My lord—

Ch. Just. But since all is well, keep it so : wake not a sleeping wolf.

Fal. To wake a wolf, is as bad as to smell a fox.

Ch. Just. What ! you are as a candle, the better part burnt out.

Fal. A wassel <sup>a</sup>candle, my lord ; all tallow : if I did say of <sup>b</sup>wax, my growth would approve the truth.

Ch. Just. There is not a white hair on your face, but should have his effect of gravity.

Fal. His effect of gravity, gravity, gravity.

Ch. Just. You follow the young prince up and down, like his ill angel.

Fal. Not so, my lord ; your ill <sup>c</sup>angel is light, but, I hope, he that looks upon me will take me without weighing : and yet, in some respects, I grant, I cannot <sup>d</sup>go. I cannot tell ; virtue is of so little regard in these <sup>e</sup>easter-monger times, that true valor is turned bear-herd. <sup>f</sup>Pregnancy is made a tapster, and hath his quick wit wasted in giving reckonings : all the other gifts <sup>g</sup>appertinent to man, as the malice of this age shapes them, are not worth a gooseberry. You, that are old, consider not the capacities of us that are young : you measure the heat of our livers with the bitterness of your galls ; and we that are in the <sup>h</sup>vaward of our youth, I must confess, are wags too.

Ch. Just. Do you set down your name in the scroll of youth, that are written down old with all the characters of age ? Have you not a moist eye, a dry hand, a yellow cheek, a white beard, a decreasing leg, an increasing belly ? Is not your voice broken, your wind short, your chin double, your wit <sup>i</sup>single, and every part about you blasted with antiquity, and will you yet call yourself young. Fie, fie, fie, sir John.

Fal. My lord, I was born about three of the clock in the afternoon, with a white head, and something a round belly. For my voice,—I have lost it with hollaing, and singing of anthems. To approve my youth farther, I will not : the truth is, I am only old in judgment and understanding ; and he that will caper with me for a thousand marks, let him lend me the money, and have at him. For the box o' the ear that the prince gave you, he gave it like a rude prince, and you took it like a sensible lord. I have checked him for it, and the young lion repents ; marry, not in ashes, and sackcloth, but in new silk, and old sack.

Ch. Just. Well, God send the prince a better companion !

Fal. God send the companion a better prince ! I cannot rid my hands of him.

Ch. Just. Well, the king hath severed you and prince Harry. I hear, you are going with lord John of Lancaster against the archbishop, and the earl of Northumberland.

Fal. Yea ; I thank your pretty sweet wit for it. But look you pray, all you that kiss my lady peace at home, that our armies join not in a hot day ; for, by the Lord, I take but two shirts out with me, and I mean not to sweat extraordinarily : if it be a hot day, and I brandish any thing but my bottle, I would I might never spit white again. There is not a dangerous action can peep out his head, but I am thrust upon it : well, I cannot last <sup>1</sup>for ever. But it was always yet the trick of our English nation, if they have a good thing, to make it too common. If you will needs say I am an old man, you should give me rest. I would to God, my name were not so terrible to the enemy as it is : I were better to be eaten to death with rust, than to be scoured to nothing with perpetual motion.

Ch. Just. Well, be honest, be honest ; and God bless your expedition.

Fal. Will your lordship lend me a thousand pound to furnish me forth !

Ch. Just. Not a penny, not a penny : you are too impatient to bear <sup>2</sup>crosses. Fare you well : commend me to my cousin Westmoreland.

[Exeunt Chief Justice and Attendant.]

Fal. If I do, fillip me with a three-man <sup>1</sup>beetle. A man can no more separate age and covetousness, than he can part young limbs and lechery ; and the gout galls the one, and the pox pinches the other, and so both the <sup>2</sup>diseases <sup>3</sup>prevent my curses.—Boy !

Page. Sir ?

Fal. What money is in my purse ?

Page. Seven groats and two-pence.

Fal. I can get no remedy against this consumption of the purse : borrowing only lingers and lingers it out, but the disease is incurable.—Go, hear this letter to my lord of Lancaster ; this to the prince ; this to the earl of Westmoreland ; and this to old mistress Ursula, whom I have weekly sworn to marry since I perceived the first white hair of my chin. About it : you know where to find me. [Exit Page.] A pox of this gout ! or, a gout of this pox ! for the one, or the other, plays the rogue with my great toe. 'Tis no matter, if I do halt ; I have the wars for my color, and my pension shall seem the more reasonable. A good wit will make use of anything ; <sup>3</sup>it will turn diseases to commodity. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—York. A Room in the Archbishop's Palace.

Enter the Archbishop of York, the Lords Hastings, Mowbray, Earl Marshal, and Bardolph.

Arch. Thus have you heard our cause, and <sup>4</sup>know our means ;

And, my most noble friends, I pray you all,

Speak plainly your opinions of our hopes.—

And first, lord marshal, what say you to it ?

Mowb. I well allow the occasion of our arms ;

But gladly would be better satisfied,

How, in our means, we should advance ourselves

To look with forehead bold and big enough

Upon the power and puissance of the king.

Hast. Our present musters grow upon the file

To five and twenty thousand men of choice ;

And our supplies live largely in the hope

Of great Northumberland, whose bosom burns

With an incensed fire of injuries. [thus :—

Bard. The question then, lord Hastings, standeth

* A quibble upon crosses, trials, and a coin called a cross.

—<sup>1</sup> A "three-man beetle" was a large beetle with three bands.—<sup>2</sup> "Prevent," i. e., anticipate.—<sup>3</sup> Profit ; interest.

Whether our present five and twenty thousand
May hold up head without Northumberland.

Hast. With him, we may.

Bard. Ay, marry, there's the point :
But if without him we be thought too feeble,
My judgment is, we should not step too far,
Till we had his assistance by the hand ;
For in a theme so bloody-fac'd as this,
Conjecture, expectation, and surmise
Of aids incertain should not be admitted.

Arch. 'Tis very true, lord Bardolph ; for, indeed,
It was young Hotspur's case at Shrewsbury.

Bard. It was, my lord ; who lin'd himself with Eating the air on promise of supply, [hope,
Flattering himself with project of a power
Much <sup>a</sup> smaller than the smallest of his thoughts ;
And so, with great imagination,
Proper to madmen, led his powers to death,
And winking leap'd into destruction.

Hast. But, by your leave, it never yet did hurt,
To lay down likelihoods, and forms of hope.

Bard. Yes, in this present quality of war ;
Indeed the instant <sup>1</sup> act, and cause on foot,
Lives so in hope, as in an early spring
We see th' appearing buds ; which, to prove fruit,
Hope gives not so much warrant, as despair
That frosts will bite them. When we mean to build,
We first survey the plot, then draw the model,
And, when we see the figure of the house,
Then must we rate the cost of the erection ;
Which if we find outweighs ability,
What do we then, but draw anew the model
In fewer offices, or, at <sup>2</sup> last, desist

To build at all ? Much more, in this great work, (Which is, almost, to pluck a kingdom down,
And set another up) should we survey

<sup>3</sup> The plot, the situation, and the model ;

<sup>4</sup> Consult upon a sure foundation ;

Question surveyors, know our own estate,
How able such a work to undergo.

<sup>5</sup> A careful leader sums what force he brings
To weigh against his opposite ; or else,
We fortify <sup>6</sup> on paper, and in figures,
Using the names of men, instead of men :
Like one that draws the model of a house
Beyond his power to build it ; who, half through,
Gives o'er, and leaves his part-created cost
A naked subject to the weeping clouds,
And waste for churlish winter's tyranny.

Hast. Grant, that our hopes, yet likely of fair birth,
Should be still-born, and that we now possess
The utmost man of expectation,
I think we are a body strong enough,
Even as we are, to equal with the king.

Bard. What ! is the king but five-and-twenty thousand ? [Bardolph ;

Hast. To us, no more ; nay, not so much, lord
For his divisions, as the times do brawl,
Are in three heads : one power against the French,
And one against Glendower ; perforce, a third
Must take up us. So is the unfirm king
In three divided, and his coffers sound
With hollow poverty and emptiness. [together,

Arch. That he should draw his several strengths
And come against us in full puissance,
Need not be dreaded.

Hast. If he should do so,
He leaves his back unarm'd, the French and Welsh
Baying him at the heels : never fear that.

Bard. Who, is it like, should lead his forces hither ?

Hast. The duke of Lancaster, and Westmoreland :

Against the Welsh, himself and Harry Monmouth ;
But who is substituted 'gainst the French,
I have no certain notice.

Arch. Let us on,
And publish the occasion of our arms.
The commonwealth is sick of their own choice ;
Their over-greedy love hath surfeited :
An habitation giddy and unsure
Hath he, that buildeth on the vulgar heart.
O, thou fond <sup>b</sup> many ! with what loud applause
Didst thou beat heaven with blessing Bolingbroke,
Before he was what thou would'st have him be ;
And being now 'trimm'd in thine own desires,
Thou, beastly feeder, art so full of him,
That thou provok'st thyself to cast him up.
So, so, thou common dog, didst thou disgorge
Thy glutton bosom of the royal Richard,
And now thou would'st eat thy dead vomit up,
And howl'st to find it. What trust is in these times ?
They that, when Richard liv'd, would have him die,
Are now become enamor'd on his grave :
Thou, that threw'st dust upon his goodly head,
When through proud London he came sighing on
After th' admired heels of Bolingbroke,
Cry'st now, " O earth, yield us that king again,
And take thou this ! " O, thoughts of men accurst !
Past, and to come, seem best ; things present, worst.

Mowb. Shall we go draw our numbers, and set on ?
Hast. We are time's subjects, and time bids be gone. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—London. A Street.

Enter Hostess ; Fang, and his Boy, with her ; and Snare following.

Host. Master Fang, have you entered the action ?
Fang. It is entered.

Host. Where's your <sup>d</sup> yeoman ? Is't a lusty yeoman ? will he stand to't ?

Fang. Sirrah, where's Snare ?

Host. O lord ! ay : good master Snare.

Snare. Here, here.

Fang. Snare, we must arrest sir John Falstaff.

Host. Yea, good master Snare ; I have entered him and all.

Snare. It may chance cost some of us our lives,
for he will stab.

Host. Alas the day ! take heed of him : he stabbed me in mine own house, and that most beastly. In good faith, he cares not what mischief he doth, if his weapon be out : he will <sup>e</sup> foine like any devil ; he will spare neither man, woman, nor child.

Fang. If I can close with him, I care not for his thrust.

Host. No, nor I neither : I'll be at your elbow.

Fang. An I but fist him once ; an he come but within my <sup>f</sup> vice.—

Host. I am undone by his going ; I warrant you, he's an infinitive thing upon my score.—Good master Fang, hold him sure :—good master Snare, let him not 'scape. He comes continually to Pie-corner, (saying your manhoods) to buy a saddle ; and he's indicted to dinner to the lubbar's head in Lum-bert-street, to master Smooth's the silkman : I pray ye, since my <sup>g</sup> exion is entered, and my case so openly known to the world, let him be brought in to his answer. A hundred mark is a long <sup>h</sup> score for a poor lone woman to bear ; and I have borne,

and borne, and borne; and have been fubbed off, und fubbed off, and fubbed off, from this day to that day, that it is a shame to be thought on. There is no honesty in such dealing, unless a woman should be made an ass, and a beast, to bear every knave's wrong.—

Enter Sir JOHN FALSTAFF, PAGE, and BARDOLPH.
Yonder he comes; and that arrant malmsey-nose knave, Bardolph, with him. Do your offices, do, your offices, master Fang and master Snare: do me, do me, do me your offices.

Fal. How now! whose mare's dead? what's the matter?

Fang. Sir John, I arrest you at the suit of mistress Quickly.

Fal. Away, varlets!—Draw, Bardolph: cut me off the villain's head; throw the quean in the channel.

Host. Throw me in the channel? I'll throw thee in the channel. Wilt thou? wilt thou? thou bastardy rogue!—Murder, murder! O, thou <sup>a</sup>honey-suckle villain! wilt thou kill God's officers, and the king's? O, thou <sup>b</sup>honey-seed rogue! thou art a honey-seed; a <sup>c</sup>man-queller, and a woman-queller.

Fal. Keep them off, Bardolph.

Fang. A rescue! a rescue!

Host. Good people, bring a rescue or two.—Thou wilt not? thou wilt not? do, do, thou rogue! do, thou hemp-seed!

Fal. Away, you scullion! you rampallian! you fustilarian! I'll tickle your catastrophe.

Enter the Lord Chief Justice, attended.

Ch. Just. What is the matter? keep the peace here, ho!

Host. Good my lord, be good to me! I beseech you, stand to me!

Ch. Just. How now, sir John! what, are you brawling here? [ness?]

Doth this become your place, your time, and business? You should have been well on your way to York.—Stand from him, fellow: wherefore hang'st on him?

Host. O! my most worshipful lord, an't please your grace, I am a poor widow of Eastcheap, and he is arrested at my suit.

Ch. Just. For what sum?

Host. It is more than for some, my lord; it is for all, all I have. He hath eaten me out of house and home; he hath put all my substance into that fat belly of his; but I will have some of it out again, or I will ride thee o' nights, like the mare.

Fal. I think, I am as like to ride the mare, if I have any vantage of ground to get up.

Ch. Just. How comes this, sir John?—Fie! what man of good temper would endure this tempest of exclamation?—Are you not ashamed to enforce a poor widow to so rough a course to come by her own?

Fal. What is the gross sum that I owe thee?

Host. Marry, if thou wert an honest man, thyself, and the money too. Thou didst swear to me upon a <sup>d</sup>parcel-gilt goblet, sitting in my Dolphin-chamber, at the round table, by a sea-coal fire, upon Wednesday in Whitsun week, when the prince broke thy head for likening his father to a singing-man of Windsor; thou didst swear to me then, as I was washing thy wound, to marry me, and make me my lady thy wife. Canst thou deny it? Did not goodwife Keech, the butcher's wife, come in then, and call me gossip Quickly? coming in to borrow a mess of vinegar; telling us, she had a good dish of prawns, whereby thou didst desire to eat some, whereby

I told thee, they were ill for a green wound? And didst thou not, when she was gone down stairs, desire me to be no more so familiarity with such poor people; saying, that ere long they should call me madam? And didst thou not kiss me, and bid me fetch thee thirty shillings? I put thee now to thy book-oath: deny it, if thou canst.

Fal. My Lord, this is a poor mad soul; and she says, up and down the town, that her eldest son is like you. She hath been in good case, and the truth is, poverty hath distracted her. But for these foolish officers, I beseech you, I may have redress against them.

Ch. Just. Sir John, sir John, I am well acquainted with your manner of wrenching the true cause the false way. It is not a confident brow, nor the throng of words that come with such more than impudent sauciness from you, can thrust me from a level consideration; you have, as it appears to me, practised upon the easy-yielding spirit of this woman, and made her serve your uses both in purse and person.

Host. Yes, in troth, my lord.

Ch. Just. Pr'ythee, peace.—Pay her the debt you owe her, and unpay the villainy you have done with her: the one you may do with sterling money, and the other with current repentance.

Fal. My lord, I will not undergo this <sup>e</sup>sneap without reply. You call honorable boldness, impudent sauciness: if a man will make court'sy, and say nothing, he is virtuous. No, my lord, my humble duty remember'd, I will not be your sutor: I say to you, I do desire deliverance from these officers, being upon hasty employment in the king's affairs.

Ch. Just. You speak as having power to do wrong: but answer in the effect of your reputation, and satisfy the poor woman.

Fal. Come hither, hostess. [Taking her aside.

Enter GOWER.

Ch. Just. Now, master Gower! what news?

Gow. The king, my lord, and Henry prince of Wales

Are near at hand: the rest <sup>1</sup>this paper tells.

<sup>2</sup>[C. J. reads.

Fal. As I am a gentleman.

Host. Faith, you said so before.

Fal. As I am a gentleman. Come, no more words of it.

Host. By this heavenly ground I tread on, I must be fain to pawn both my plate, and the tapestry of my dining-chambers.

Fal. Glasses, glasses, is the only drinking: and for thy walls,—a pretty slight drollery, or the story of the prodigal, or the German hunting in <sup>s</sup>water-work, is worth a thousand of these bed hangings, and these fly bitten tapestries. Let it be ten pound, if thou canst. Come, an it were not for thy humors, there is not a better vench in England. Go, wash thy face, and <sup>h</sup>draw thy action. Come, thou must not be in this humor with me; dost not know me? Come, come, I know thou wast set on to this.

Host. Pray thee, sir John, let it be but twenty nobles; i' faith I am loath to pawn my plate, in good earnest, la.

Fal. Let it alone; I'll make other shrift: you'll be a fool still.

Host. Well, you shall have it, though I pawn my gown. I hope, you'll come to supper. You'll pay me all together?

Fal. Will I live?—Go, with her, with her; hook on, hook on.

Host. Will you have Doll Tear-sheet meet you at supper?

Fal. No more words: let's have her.

[Exeunt Hostess, BARDOLPH, Officers, and Page.]

Ch. Just. I have heard better news.

Fal. What's the news, my good lord?

Ch. Just. Where lay the king last night?

Gow. At Basingstoke, my lord.

Fal. I hope, my lord, all's well: what is the news, my lord?

Ch. Just. Come all his forces back?

Gow. No; fifteen hundred foot, five hundred horse, Are march'd up to my lord of Lancaster, Against Northumberland and the archbishop.

Fal. Comes the king back from Wales, my noble lord?

Ch. Just. You shall have letters of me presently: come, go along with me, good master Gower.

Fal. My lord!

Ch. Just. What's the matter?

Fal. Master Gower, shall I entreat you with me to dinner?

Gow. I must wait upon my good lord here: I thank you, good sir John.

Ch. Just. Sir John, you loiter here too long, being you are to take soldiers up in counties as you go.

Fal. Will you sup with me, master Gower?

Ch. Just. What foolish master taught you these manners, sir John?

Fal. Master Gower, if they become me not, he was a fool that taught them me.—This is the right fencing grace, my lord; tap for tap, and so part fair.

Ch. Just. Now, the lord lighten thee! thou art a great fool. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Street.

Enter Prince HENRY and POINS.

P. Hen. Trust me, I am exceeding weary.

Poins. Is it come to that? I had thought, weariness durst not have attached one of so high blood.

P. Hen. 'Faith, it does me, though it discolors the complexion of my greatness to acknowledge it. Doth it not show vilely in me to desire small beer?

Poins. Why, a prince should not be so loosely studied, as to remember so weak a composition.

P. Hen. Belike then, my appetite was not princely got; for, by my troth, I do now remember the poor creature, small beer. But, indeed, these humble considerations make me out of love with my greatness. What a disgrace is it to me, to remember thy name? or to know thy face to-morrow? or to take note how many pair of silk stockings thou hast; viz. these, and those that were thy peach-color'd ones? or to bear the inventory of thy shirts; as, one for superfluity, and one other for use?—but that the tennis-court-keeper knows better than I, for it is a low ebb of linen with thee, when thou keepest not racket there; as thou hast not done a great while, because the rest of thy low-countries have made a shift to eat up thy holland: and God knows, whether those that bawl out the ruins of thy <sup>a</sup>linen, shall inherit his kingdom; but the midwives say, the children are not in the fault, whereupon the world increases, and kindreds are mightily strengthened.

Poins. How ill it follows, after you have labored so hard, you should talk so idly! Tell me, how many good young princes would do so, their fathers being so sick as yours at this time is?

P. Hen. Shall I tell thee one thing, Poins?

Poins. Yes, faith, and let it be an excellent good thing.

P. Hen. It shall serve among wits of no higher breeding than thine.

Poins. Go to; I stand the push of your one thing that you will tell.

P. Hen. Marry, I tell thee,—it is not meet that I should be sad, now my father is sick: albeit I could tell to thee, (as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend) I could be sad, and sad indeed too.

Poins. Very hardly upon such a subject.

P. Hen. By this hand, thou think'st me as far in the devil's book, as thou and Falstaff, for obduracy and persistency: let the end try the man. But I tell thee, my heart bleeds inwardly, that my father is so sick; and keeping such vile company as thou art, hath in reason taken from me all ostentation of sorrow.

Poins. The reason?

P. Hen. What would'st thou think of me, if I should weep?

Poins. I would think thee a most princely hypocrite.

P. Hen. It would be every man's thought; and thou art a blessed fellow, to think as every man thinks: never a man's thought in the world keeps the road-way better than thine: every man would think me an hypocrite indeed. And what accites your most worshipful thought to think so?

Poins. Why, because you have been so lewd, and so much engrafted to Falstaff.

P. Hen. And to thee.

Poins. By this light, I am well spoken on; I can hear it with mine own ears: the worst that they can say of me is, that I am a second brother, and that I am a <sup>d</sup>proper fellow of my hands, and those two things, I confess, I cannot help. By the mass, here comes Bardolph.

P. Hen. And the boy that I gave Falstaff: he had him from me christian; and look, if the fat villain have not transformed him ape.

Enter BARDOLPH and Page.

Bard. God save your grace.

P. Hen. And yours, most noble Bardolph.

Bard. Come, you virtuous ass, [To the Page.] you bashful fool, must you be blushing? wherefore blush you now? What a maidenly man at arms are you become? Is it such a matter to get a pottlepot's maidenhead?

Page. He called me even now, my lord, through a red <sup>e</sup>lattice, and I could discern no part of his face from the window: at last, I spied his eyes; and, methought, he had made two holes in the ale-wife's new <sup>f</sup>red petticoat, and peeped through.

P. Hen. Hath not the boy profited?

Bard. Away, you whoreson upright rabbit, away!

Page. Away, you rascally Althea's dream, away!

P. Hen. Instruct us, boy: what dream, boy?

Page. Marry, my lord, Althea dreamed she was delivered of a fire-brand, and therefore I call him her dream.

P. Hen. A crown's worth of good interpretation.—There it is, boy. [Gives him money.]

Poins. O, that this good blossom could be kept from cankers!—Well, there is sixpence to preserve thee.

Bard. And you do not make him be hanged among you, the gallows shall have wrong.

—<sup>e</sup> "A red lattice," i. e., an alehouse window.

<sup>a</sup> Bastard children, wrapt up in his old shirts.

P. Hen. And how doth thy master, Bardolph?
Bard. Well, my lord. He heard of your grace's coming to town: there's a letter for you.

Poins. Delivered with good respect.—And how doth the "martlemas, your master?"

Bard. In bodily health, sir.

Poins. Marry, the immortal part needs a physician; but that moves not him: though that he sick, it dies not.

P. Hen. I do allow this 'wen to be as familiar with me as my dog; and he holds his place, for look you how he writes.

Poins. [Reads.] "John Falstaff, knight,"—every man must know that, as oft as he has occasion to name himself; even like those that are kin to the king, for they never prick their finger, but they say, "There is some of the king's blood spilt:" "How comes that?" says he, that takes upon him not to conceive: the answer is, as ready as a borrower's cap; "I am the king's poor cousin, sir."

P. Hen. Nay, they will be kin to us, or they will fetch it from Japheth. But to the letter:—

Poins. "Sir John Falstaff, knight, to the son of the king, nearest his father, Harry Prince of Wales, greeting."—Why, this is a certificate.

P. Hen. Peace!

Poins. "I will imitate the honorable Romans in brevity:"—he sure means brevity in breath, short-winded,—"I commend me to thee, I commend thee, and I leave thee. Be not too familiar with Poins; for he misuses thy favors so much, that he swears, thou art to marry his sister Nell. Repent at idle times as thou may'st, and so farewell."

"Thine, by yea and no, (which is as much as to say, as thou usest him,) Jack Falstaff, with my familiars; John, with my brothers and sisters; and Sir John with all Europe."

My lord, I will steep this letter in sack, and make him eat it.

P. Hen. That's 'but to make him eat twenty of his words. But do you use me thus, Ned? must I marry your sister?

Poins. God send the wench no worse fortune! but I never said so.

P. Hen. Well, thus we play the fools with the time, and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds, and mock us.—Is your master here in London?

Bard. Yes, my lord.

P. Hen. Where sups he? doth the old boar feed in the old 'c frank?

Bard. At the old place, my lord, in Eastcheap.

P. Hen. What company?

Page. Ephesians, my lord; of the old 'd church.

P. Hen. Sup any women with him?

Page. None, my lord, but old mistress Quickly, and mistress Doll Tear-sheet.

P. Hen. What 'pagan may that be?

Page. A proper gentlewoman, sir, and a kinswoman of my master's.

P. Hen. Even such kin as the parish heifers are to the town bull.—Shall we steal upon them, Ned, at supper?

Poins. I am your shadow, my lord; I'll follow you.

P. Hen. Sirrah, you boy,—and Bardolph;—no word to your master that I am yet come to town: there's for your silence.

Bard. I have no tongue, sir.

Page. And for mine, sir, I will govern it.

P. Hen. Fare ye well; go. [Exeunt BARDOLPH and Page.]—This Doll Tear-sheet should be some road.

Poins. I warrant you, as common as the way between St. Alban's and London.

P. Hen. How might we see Falstaff 'bestow himself to-night in his true colors, and not ourselves be seen?

Poins. Put on two leathern jerkins, and aprons, and wait upon him at his table as drawers.

P. Hen. From a god to a bull? a heavy descension! it was Jove's case. From a prince to a prentice? a low transformation! that shall be mine; for in every thing the purpose must weigh with the folly. Follow me, Ned. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Warkworth. Before the Castle.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND, Lady NORTHUMBERLAND, and Lady PERCY.

North. I pray thee, loving wife and gentle daughter, Give even way unto my rough affairs: [ter, Put not you on the visage of the times, And be like them to Percy troublesome.

Lady N. I have given over, I will speak no more. Do what you will; your wisdom be your guide.

North. Alas, sweet wife, my honor is at pawn, And, but my going, nothing can redeem it. [wars!]

Lady P. O, yet, for God's sake, go not to these The time was, father, that you broke your word, When you were more endear'd to it than now; When your own Percy, when my heart-dear Harry, Threw many a northward look, to see his father Bring up his powers; but he did long in vain. Who then persuaded you to stay at home?

There were two honors lost, yours, and your son's: For yours,—may heavenly glory brighten it! For his,—it stuck upon him, as the sun

In the grey vault of heaven: and, by his light, Did all the chivalry of England move To do brave acts, he was, indeed, the glass Wherein the noble youth did dress themselves.

He had no legs, that practised not his gait; And speaking thick, which nature made his blemish, Became the accents of the valiant;

For those that could speak low, and tardily, Would turn their own perfection to abuse, To seem like him: so that, in speech, in gait, In diet, in affections of delight,

In military rules, in humors of blood, He was the mark and glass, copy and book, [him! That fashion'd others. And him,—O wondrous O miracle of men!—him did you leave,

(Second to none, unseconded by you) To look upon the hideous god of war In disadvantage; to abide a field,

Where nothing but the sound of Hotspur's name Did seem defensible:—so you left him.

Never, O! never, do his ghost the wrong, To hold your honor more precise and nice With others, than with him: let them alone.

The marshal, and the archbishop, are strong: Had my sweet Harry had but half their numbers, To-day might I, hanging on Hotspur's neck, Have talk'd of Monmouth's grave.

North. Beshrew your heart, Fair daughter! you do draw my spirits from me, With new lamenting ancient oversights.

But I must go, and meet with danger there, Or it will seek me in another place, And find me worse provided.

Lady N.

O! fly to Scotland.

Till that the nobles, and the armed commons,
Have of their puissance made a little taste. [king,

Lady P. If they get ground and vantage of the Then join you with them, like a rib of steel,
To make strength stronger; but, for all our loves,
First let them try themselves. So did your son;

He was so suffer'd; so came I a widow,
And never shall have length of life enough,
To rain upon a remembrance with mine eyes,
That it may grow and sprout as high as heaven,
For recordation to my noble husband. [my mind,

North. Come, come, go in with me. 'Tis with
As with the tide swell'd up unto its height,
That makes a still-stand, running neither way:

Fain would I go to meet the archbishop,
But many thousand reasons hold me back.—

I will resolve for Scotland: there am I,
Till time and vantage crave my company. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Boar's
Head Tavern, in Eastcheap.

Enter Two Drawers.

1 Draw. What the devil hast thou brought there? apple-Johns? thou know'st Sir John cannot endure an apple-John.

2 Draw. Mass, thou sayest true. The prince once set a dish of apple-Johns before him, and told him, there were five more sir Johns; and, putting off his hat, said, "I will now take my leave of these six dry, round, old, withered knights." It angered him to the heart, but he hath forgot that.

1 Draw. Why then, cover, and set them down: and see if thou canst find out Sneak's "noise"; mistress Tear-sheet would fain hear some music. Dispatch!—the room where they supped is too hot; they'll come in straight.

2 Draw. Sirrah, here will be the prince, and master Poin anon; and they will put on two of our jerkins and aprons, and sir John must not know of it: Bardolph hath brought word.

1 Draw. By the mass, here will be old d'utis: it will be an excellent stratagem.

2 Draw. I'll see, if I can find out Sneak. [Exit.

Enter Hostess and DOLL TEAR-SHEET.

Host. Faith, sweet heart, methinks now, you are in an excellent good temperality: your pulside beats as extraordinarily as heart would desire, and your color, I warrant you, is as red as any rose; but, i'faith, you have drunk too much canaries, and that's a marvellous searching wine, and it perfumes the blood ere one can say, what's this? How do you now?

Dol. Better than I was. Hem.

Host. Why, that's well said; a good heart's worth gold. Lo! here comes sir John.

Enter FALSTAFF, singing.

Fal. "When Arthur first in court."—Empty the jordan.—"And was a worthy king." [Exit Drawer. How now, mistress Doll?

Host. Sick of a calm: yea, good sooth.

Fal. So is all her sex; an they be once in a calm, they are sick.

Dol. You muddy rascal, is that all the comfort you give me?

Fal. You make fat rascals, mistress Doll.

Dol. I make them? gluttony and diseases make them; I make them not.

Fal. "Your brooches, pearls, and owches!"—for to serve bravely, is to come halting off, you know: to come off the breach with his pike bent bravely, and to surgery bravely; to venture upon the charged chambers bravely:—

Dol. Yea, joy; our chains, and our jewels.

Fal. "Your brooches, pearls, and owches!"—for to serve bravely, is to come halting off, you know: to come off the breach with his pike bent bravely, and to surgery bravely; to venture upon the charged chambers bravely:—

Dol. Hang yourself, you muddy conger, hang yourself!

Host. By my troth, this is the old fashion: you two never meet, but you fall to some discord. You are both, in good troth, as rheumatic as two dry toasts; you cannot one bear with another's confumities. What the good year! one must bear, and that must be you: you are the weaker vessel; as they say, the emptier vessel.

Dol. Can a weak empty vessel bear such a huge full hogshead? there's a whole merchant's venture of Bordeaux stuff in him: you have not seen a hulk better stuffed in the hold.—Come, I'll be friends with thee, Jack: thou art going to the wars; and whether I shall ever see thee again, or no, there is nobody—cares.

Re-enter Drawer.

Draw. Sir, ancient Pistol's below, and would speak with you.

Dol. Hang him, swaggering rascal! let him not come hither: it is the foul mouth'dst rogue in England.

Host. If he swagger, let him not come here: no, by my faith; I must live amongst my neighbors; I'll no swaggerers. I am in good name and fame with the very best.—Shut the door;—there comes no swaggerers here: I have not lived all this while, to have swaggering now.—Shut the door, I pray you.

Fal. Dost thou hear, hostess?

Host. Pray you, pacify yourself, sir John: there comes no swaggerers here.

Fal. Dost thou hear? it is mine ancient.

Host. Tilly-valley, sir John, never tell me: your ancient swaggerer comes not in my doors. I was before master Tisick, the deputy, t'other day; and, as he said to me,—it was no longer ago than Wednesday last,—"Neighbor Quickly," says he;—master Dumb, our minister, was by then:—"Neighbor Quickly," says he, "receive those that are civil; for," said he, "you are in an ill name:"—now, he said so, I can tell whereupon; "for," says he, "you are an honest woman, and well thought on; therefore take heed what guests you receive;" "receive," says he, "no swaggering companions."—There comes none here;—you would bless you to hear what he said.—No, I'll no swaggerers.

Fal. He's no swaggerer, hostess; a tame cheat-er, i'faith; you may stroke him as gently as a puppy grey-hound: he will not swagger with a Barbary hen, if her feathers turn back in any show of resistance.—Call him up, drawer.

Host. Cheater, call you him? I will bar no honest man my house, nor no cheater; but I do not love swaggering: by my troth, I am the worse, when one says—swagger. Feel, masters, how I shake; look you, I warrant you.

* The plant rosemary, the symbol of "remembrance," is here alluded to.—The "Apple-John" is an apple that will keep two years.—Sneak was a street minstrel; a noise of musicians formerly signified a concert.—d' Old utis, i. e., merry doings.

* A "chamber," besides its common acceptation, also signifies a small piece of ordnance.—Splenetic.—Ensign.—Gamester.

Dol. So you do, hostess.

Host. Do I? yea, in very truth do I, an 'twere an aspen leaf. I cannot abide swaggerers.

Enter Pistol, BARDOLPH, and Page.

Pist. God save you, sir John.

Fal. Welcome, ancient Pistol. Here, Pistol, I charge you with a cup of sack: do you discharge upon mine hostess.

Pist. I will discharge upon her, sir John, with two bullets.

Fal. She is pistol-proof, sir; you shall hardly offend her.

Host. Come, I'll drink no proofs, nor no bullets. I'll drink no more than will do me good, for no man's pleasure, I.

Pist. Then to you, mistress Dorothy: I will charge you.

Dol. Charge me? I scorn you, scurvy companion. What! you poor, base, rascally, cheating, lack-linen mate! Away, you mouldy rogue, away! I am meat for your master.

Pist. I know you, mistress Dorothy.

Dol. Away, you cut-purse rascal! you filthy bung, away! By this wine, I'll thrust my knife in your mouldy chaps, an you play the saucy cuttle with me. Away, you bottle-ale rascal! you basket hilt staid juggler, you!—Since when, I pray you, sir?—God's light! with two <sup>a</sup>points on your shoulder? <sup>b</sup>much!

Pist. I will murder your ruff for this.

Fal. No more, Pistol: I would not have you go off here. Discharge yourself of our company, Pistol.

Host. No, good captain Pistol; not here, sweet captain.

Dol. Captain! thou abominable damned cheater, art thou not ashamed to be called captain? An captains were of my mind, they would truncheon you out, for taking their names upon you before you have earned them. You a captain, you slave! for what? for tearing a poor whore's ruff in a bawdy-house?—He a captain! Hang him, rogue! He lives upon mouldy stewed prunes, and dried cakes. A captain! these villains will make the word captain as odious as the word <sup>c</sup>occupy, which was an excellent good word before it was ill-sorted: therefore captains had need look to't.

Bard. Pray thee, go down, good ancient.

Fal. Hark thee hither, mistress Doll.

Pist. Not I: I tell thee what, corporal Bardolph; I could tear her.—I'll be revenged of her.

Page. Pray thee, go down.

Pist. I'll see her damned first;—to Pluto's damned lake, by this hand, to the infernal deep, with Erebus and tortures vile also. Hold hook and line, say I. Down! down, dogs! down! fates! Have we not Hiren here?

Host. Good captain Peesel, be quiet; it is very late i' faith. I beseech you now, aggravate your choler.

Pist. These be good humors, indeed! Shall pack-horses,

And hollow pamp'rd jades of Asia,
Which cannot go but thirty miles a day,
Compare with Cæsars, and with <sup>d</sup>Cannibals,
And Trojan Greeks! nay, rather damn them with King Cerberus, and let the welkin roar.
Shall we fall foul for toys?

Host. By my troth, captain, these are very bitter words.

Bard. Begone, good ancient: this will grow to a brawl anon.

Pist. Die men, like dogs; give crowns like pins. Have we not Hiren here?

Host. On my word, captain, there's none such here. What the goodyear! do you think I would deny her! for God's sake, be quiet.

Pist. Then feed, and be fat, my fair <sup>e</sup>Calipolis.

Come, give's some sack.

Se fortuna me tormenta, <sup>2</sup>i lo sperare me contenta.—

Fear we broadsides! no, let the fiend give fire:

Give me some sack; and, sweetheart, lie thou there.

[Laying down his sword.]

Come we to full points here, and are et ceteras <sup>1</sup>noth-

Fal. Pistol, I would be quiet. [ing?]

Pist. Sweet knight, I kiss thy <sup>2</sup>neif.—What! we have seen the seven stars.

Dol. For God's sake, thrust him down stairs: I cannot endure such a fustian rascal.

Pist. Thrust him down stairs! know we not Galloway <sup>3</sup>nags?

Fal. I Quoit him down, Bardolph, like a shove-groat shilling: nay, an he do nothing but speak nothing, he shall be nothing here.

Bard. Come, get you down stairs.

Pist. What! shall we have incision? shall we imbue?—[Snatching up his sword.]

Then, death, rock me asleep, abridge my doleful days! Why then, let grievous, ghastly, gaping wounds Untwine the sisters three! Come, Atropos, I <sup>k</sup>say!

Host. Here's goodly stuff toward!

Fal. Give me my rapier, boy.

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, I pray thee, do not draw.

Fal. Get you down stairs. [Drawing.]

Host. Here's a goodly tumult! I'll forswear keeping house, afore I'll be in these territs and frights. So; murder, I warrant now.—Alas, alas! put up your naked weapons; put up your naked weapons.

[Exeunt BARDOLPH and PISTOL.]

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, be quiet: the rascal is gone. Ah! you whoreson little valiant villain, you.

Host. Are you not hurt i' the groin? methought he made a shrewd thrust at your belly.

Re-enter BARDOLPH.

Fal. Have you turned him out of doors?

Bard. Yes, sir: the rascal's drunk. You have hurt him, sir, in the shoulder.

Fal. A rascal, to brave me!

Dol. Ah, you sweet little rogue, you! Alas, poor ape, how thou sweat'st! Come, let me wipe thy face;—come on, you whoreson chops.—Ah, rogue! i' faith, I love thee. Thou art as valorous as Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, and ten times better than the nine worthies. Ah, villain!

Fal. A rascally slave! I will toss the rogue in a blanket.

Dol. Do, if thou darrest for thy heart: if thou dost, I'll canvass thee between a pair of sheets.

Enter Music.

Page. The music is come, sir.

Fal. Let them play.—Play, sirs.—Sit on my knee, Doll.—A rascal bragging slave! the rogue fled from me like quicksilver.

Dol. I' faith, and thou follow'dst him like a church Thou whoreson little tidy Bartholomew boar-pig, when wilt thou leave fighting o' days, and <sup>1</sup>foining o' nights, and begin to patch up thine old body for heaven?

<sup>b</sup>"Much!" an expression of disdain.—This word had been perverted to an obscene meaning.—<sup>d</sup>Hannibals.

Enter behind, Prince HENRY and POINS, disguised like Drawers.

Fal. Peace, good Doll! do not speak like a death's head: do not bid me remember mine end.

Dol. Sirrah, what humor is the prince of?

Fal. A good shallow young fellow: he would have made a pantler, he would have chipped bread well.

Dol. They say, Poins has a good wit.

Fal. He a good wit? hang him, baboon! his wit is as thick as Tewksbury mustard: there is no more conceit in him, than is in a mallet.

Dol. Why does the prince love him so, then?

Fal. Because their legs are both of a bigness; and he plays at quoits well; and eats conger and fennel; and drinks off candles' ends for flap-drasons; and rides the wild <sup>a</sup>mare with the boys; and jumps upon joint-stools; and swears with a good grace; and wears his boot very smooth, like unto the sign of the leg; and breeds no bate with telling of discreet stories; and such other gambol faculties he has, that show a weak mind and an able body, for the which the prince admits him: for the prince himself is such another; the weight of a hair will turn the scales between their avoidupois.

P. Hen. Would not this nave of a <sup>b</sup>wheel have his ears cat off?

Poins. Let's beat him before his where.

P. Hen. Look, whether the withered elder hath not his poll clawed like a parrot.

Poins. Is it not strange, that desire should so many years outlive performance?

Fal. Kiss me, Doll.

P. Hen. Saturn and Venus this year in conjunction! what says the almanack to that?

Poins. And, look, whether the fiery <sup>c</sup>Trigon, his man, be not <sup>1</sup>clasping to his master's old tables, his note-book, his counsel-keeper.

Fal. Thou dost give me flattering busses. [Heart.

Dol. Nay, truly; I kiss thee with a most constant

Fal. I am old, I am old.

Dol. I love thee better than I love e'er a scurvy young boy of them all.

Fal. What stuff wilt have a <sup>d</sup>kirtle of? I shall receive money on Thursday; thou shalt have a cap to-morrow. A merry song! come: it grows late; we'll to bed. Thou'lt forget me, when I am gone.

Dol. By my troth, thou'lt set me a weeping, an thou say'st so: prove that ever I dress myself handsome till thy return.—Well, hearken the end.

Fal. Some sack, Francis!

P. Hen. Poins. Anon, anon, sir. [Advancing.

Fal. Ha! a bastard son of the king's.—And art not thou Poins, his brother?

P. Hen. Why, thou globe of sinful continents, what a life dost thou lead.

Fal. A better than thou: I am a gentleman; thou art a drawer.

P. Hen. Very true, sir, and I come to draw you out by the ears.

Host. O, the Lord preserve thy good grace! by my troth, welcome to London.—Now, the Lord bless that sweet face of thine! O Jesu! are you come from Wales?

Fal. Thou whoreson mad compound of majesty,—by this light flesh and corrupt blood, thou art welcome. [Placing his hand upon DOLL.

Dol. How, you fat fool? I scorn you.

Poins. My lord, he will drive you out of your revenge, and turn all to a merriment, if you take not the heat.

P. Hen. You whoreson candle-mine, you, how vilely did you speak of me even now, before this honest, virtuous, civil gentleman.

Host. God's blessing of your good heart! and so she is, by my troth.

Fal. Didst thou hear me?

P. Hen. Yes; and you knew me, as you did, when you ran away by Gad's-hill: you knew, I was at your back, and spoke it on purpose to try my patience.

Fal. No, no, no; not so; I did not think thou wast within hearing.

P. Hen. I shall drive you, then, to confess the wilful abuse; and then I know how to handle you.

Fal. No abuse, Hal, on mine honor; no abuse.

P. Hen. Not to dispraise me, and call me <sup>e</sup>pantler, and bread-chipper, and I know not what?

Fal. No abuse, Hal.

Poins. No abuse!

Fal. No abuse, Ned, i' the world; honest Ned, none. I disprais'd him before the wicked, that the wicked might not fall in love with him;—in which doing, I have done the part of a careful friend, and a true subject, and thy father is to give me thanks for it. No abuse, Hal; none, Ned, none;—no, 'faith, boys, none.

P. Hen. See now, whether pure fear, and entire cowardice, doth not make thee wrong this virtuous gentleman to close with us? Is she of the wicked? Is thine hostess here of the wicked? Or is thy boy of the wicked? Or honest Bardolph, whose zeal burns in his nose, of the wicked?

Poins. Answer, thou dead elm, answer.

Fal. The fiend hath pricked down Bardolph <sup>2</sup>irrecoverably; and his face is Lucifer's privy kitchen, where he doth nothing but roast malt-worms. For the boy,—there is a good angel about him, but the devil outbids him too.

P. Hen. For the women?

Fal. For one of them, she is in hell already, and burns poor <sup>3</sup>souls. For the other, I owe her money, and whether she be damned for that, I know not.

Host. No, I warrant you.

Fal. No, I think thou art not; I think, thou art quit for that. Marry, there is another indictment upon thee, for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the law; for the which, I think, thou wilt howl.

Host. All victuallers do so: what's a joint of mutton or two in a whole Lent?

P. Hen. You, gentleman,—

Dol. What says your grace?

Fal. His grace says that which his flesh rebels against. [Knocking heard.

Host. Who knocks so loud at door? look to the door there, Francis.

Enter PETO.

P. Hen. Peto, how now! what news?

Peto. The king your father is at Westminster, And there are twenty weak and wearied posts Come from the north; and as I came along I met, and overtook, a dozen captains, Bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the taverns, And asking every one for sir John Falstaff.

P. Hen. By heaven, Poins, I feel me much to blame, So idly to profane the precious time, When tempest of commotion, like the south Borne with black vapor, doth begin to melt, And drop upon our bare unarmed heads.

<sup>e</sup>The pantler, in great families, was the officer who had charge of the bread.

Give me my sword, and cloak.—Falstaff, good night.

[Exeunt Prince HENRY, POINS, PETO, and BARDOLPH.]

Fal. Now comes in the sweetest morsel of the night, and we must hence, and leave it unpicked. [Knocking heard.] More knocking at the door?

Re-enter BARDOLPH.

How now? what's the matter?

Bard. You must away to court, sir, presently:

A dozen captains stay at door for you.

Fal. Pay the musicians, sirrah. [To the Page.]—Farewell, hostess;—farewell, Doll. You see, my good wenches, how men of merit are sought after: the undeserver may sleep, when the man of action is called on. Farewell, good wenches. If I be not sent away post, I will see you again ere I go.

Dol. I cannot speak;—if my heart be not ready to burst.—Well, sweet Jack, have a care of thyself.

Fal. Farewell, farewell.

[Exeunt FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.]

Host. Well, fare thee well: I have known thee these twenty-nine years, come peascod-time; but an honest, and truer-hearted man,—Well, fare thee well.

Bard. [Within.] Mistress Tear-sheet!

Host. What's the matter?

Bard. [Within.] Bid mistress Tear-sheet come to my master.

Host. O! run, Doll, run; run, good Doll. Come.—

<sup>1</sup>She comes blubbered.—Yea—will you come, Doll?

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter King HENRY in his Nightgown, with a Page.

K. Hen. Go, call the earls of Surrey and of Warwick;

But, ere they come, bid them o'er-read these letters, And well consider of them. Make good speed.

[Exit Page.]

How many thousand of my poorest subjects
Art at this hour asleep! O sleep! O gentle sleep!
Nature's soft nurse, how have I frighted thee,
That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down,
And steep my senses in forgetfulness?
Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs,
Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee,
And hush'd with buzzing night-flies to thy slumber,
Than in the perfum'd chambers of the great,
Under high canopies of costly state,
And lull'd with sound of sweetest melody?
O, thou dull god! why liest thou with the vile,
In loathsome beds, and leav'st the kingly couch,
A watch-case, or a common 'larum bell?
Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast
Seal up the ship-boy's eyes, and rock his brains
In cradle of the rude imperious surge,
And in the visitation of the winds,
Who take the ruffian billows by the top,
Curling their monstrous heads, and hanging them
With deaf'ning clamors in the slippery shrouds,
That with the 'hurly death itself awakes?
Can'st thou, O partial sleep! give thy repose
To the wet sea-bow in an hour so rude;
And in the calmest and most stillest night,
With all appliances and means to boot,
Deny it to a king? Then, happy 'low, lie down!
Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

Enter WARWICK and SURREY.

War. Many good morrows to your majesty!

K. Hen. Is it good morrow, lords?

War. 'Tis one o'clock, and past.

[lords.]

K. Hen. Why then, good morrow to you all, my Have you read o'er the letters that I sent you?

War. We have, my liege.

[dom]

K. Hen. Then you perceive, the body of our king—How foul it is; what rank diseases grow, And with what danger, near the heart of it.

War. It is but as a body, yet, distemper'd, Which to his former strength may be restor'd, With good advice, and little medicine.

My lord Northumberland will soon be cool'd. [fate,

K. Hen. O God! that one might read the book of And see the revolution of the times

Make mountains level, and the continent,

Weary of solid firmness, melt itself

Into the sea: and, other times, to see

The beauly girdle of the ocean

Too wide for Neptune's hips; how chances mock,

And changes fill the cup of alteration

With divers liquors! O, if this were seen,

The happiest youth, viewing his progress through,

What perils past, what crosses to ensue,

Would shut the book, and sit him down and die.

'Tis not ten years gone,

Since Richard, and Northumberland, great friends,

Did feast together, and in two years after

Were they at wars: it is but eight years, since

This Percy was the man nearest my soul;

Who like a brother toil'd in my affairs,

And laid his love and life under my foot;

Yea, for my sake, even to the eyes of Richard,

Gave him defiance. But which of you was by,

(You, cousin Nevil, as I may remember)

[To WARWICK.]

When Richard, with his eye brimfull of tears,

Then check'd and rated by Northumberland,

Did speak these words, now prov'd a prophecy?

"Northumberland, thou ladder, by the which

My cousin Bolingbroke ascends my throne;"—

Though then, God knows, I had no such intent,

But that necessity so bow'd the state,

That I and greatness were compell'd to kiss.

"The time shall come," thus did he follow it,

"The time will come, that foul sin, gathering head,

Shall break into corruption;"—so went on,

Foretelling this same time's condition,

And the division of our amity.

War. There is a history in all men's lives,

Figuring the nature of the times disas'd;

The which observ'd, a man may prophesy,

With a near aim, of the main chance of things

As yet not come to life, which in their seeds,

And weak beginnings, lie intreasur'd.

Such things become the hatch and brood of time;

And, by the necessary form of this,

King Richard might create a perfect guess,

That great Northumberland, then false to him,

Would, of that seed, grow to a greater falseness,

Which should not find a ground to root upon,

Unless on you.

K. Hen. Are these things, then, necessities?

Then let us meet them like necessities;

And that same word even now cries out on us.

They say, the bishop and Northumberland

Are fifty thousand strong.

War.

It cannot be, my lord:

Rumor doth double, like the voice and echo,

The numbers of the fear'd.—Please it your grace,

To go to bed; upon my soul, my lord,

The powers that you already have sent forth,

* Noise; tumult.—<sup>1</sup>"Low," i. e., the lowly; those in humble life.

Shall bring this prize in very easily.
To comfort you the more, I have receiv'd
A certain instance that Glendower is dead.
Your majesty hath been this fortnight ill,
And these unseason'd hours, perforce, must add
Unto your sickness.

K. Hen. I will take your counsel:
And were these inward wars once out of hand,
We would, dear lords, unto the Holy Land. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Court before Justice SHALLOW's
House in Gloucestershire.

Enter SHALLOW and SILENCE, meeting; MOULDY, SHADOW, WART, FEEBLE, BULL-CALF, and Servants, behind.

Shal. Come on, come on, come on, sir; give me your hand, sir, give me your hand, sir: an early stirrer, by the <sup>a</sup>rood. And how doth my good coun-sin Silence?

Sil. Good morrow, good cousin Shallow.

Shal. And how doth my cousin, your bedfellow?
and your fairest daughter and mine, my god-daughter Ellen?

Sil. Alas! a black <sup>b</sup>ouzel, cousin Shallow.

Shal. By yea and nay, sir, I dare say, my cousin William has become a good scholar. He is at Oxford, still, is he not?

Sil. Indeed, sir; to my cost.

Shal. He must then to the inns of court shortly.
I was once of Clement's inn; where, I think, they will talk of mad Shallow yet.

Sil. You were called lusty Shallow then, cousin.

Shal. By the mass, I was called any thing; and I would have done any thing, indeed, and roundly too. There was I, and little John Doit of Staffordshire, and black George Barnes, and Francis Pick-bone, and Will Squeale a Cotswold man; you had not four such <sup>c</sup>swinge-bucklers in all the inns of court again: and, I may say to you, we knew where the <sup>d</sup>bona-robas were, and had the best of them all at commandment. Then was Jack Falstaff, now sir John, a boy, and page to Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk.

Sil. This sir John, cousin, that comes hither anon about soldiers?

Shal. The same sir John, the very same. I saw him break Skogan's head at the court gate, when he was a <sup>e</sup>crack not thus high: and the very same day did I fight with one Sampson Stockfish, a fruiterer, behind Gray's-inn. Jesu! Jesu! the mad days that I have spent! and to see how many of mine old acquaintance are dead!

Sil. We shall all follow, cousin.

Shal. Certain, 'tis certain; very sure, very sure:
death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all; all shall die. How a good yoke of bullocks at Stamford fair?

Sil. Truly, cousin, I was not there.

Shal. Death is certain.—Is old Double of your town living yet?

Sil. Dead, sir.

Shal. Jesu! Jesu! Dead!—he drew a good bow;
—and dead!—he shot a fine shoot:—John of Gaunt loved him well, and betted much money on his head. Dead!—he would have clapped in the clout at twelve <sup>f</sup>score; and carried you a forehand shaft a fourteen and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man's heart good to see.—How a score of ewes now?

Sil. Thereafter as they be; a score of good ewes may be worth ten pounds.

Shal. And is old Double dead!

Enter BARDOLPH, and one with him.

Sil. Here come two of sir John Falstaff's men, as I think.

Shal. Good morrow, honest gentlemen.

Bard. I beseech you, which is justice Shallow?

Shal. I am Robert Shallow, sir; a poor esquire of this county, and one of the king's justices of the peace. What is your good pleasure with me?

Bard. My captain, sir, commends him to you;
my captain, sir John Falstaff: a <sup>g</sup>tall gentleman, by heaven, and a most gallant leader.

Shal. He greets me well, sir: I knew him a good backsword man. How doth the good knight? may
I ask, how my lady his wife doth?

Bard. Sir, pardon; a soldier is better accommodated than with a wife.

Shal. It is well said, in faith, sir; and it is well said indeed too. Better accommodated!—it is good; yea, indeed, is it: good phrases are surely, and ever were, very commendable. Accommodated:—it comes of accommodo: very good; a good phrase.

Bard. Pardon me, sir; I have heard the word.
Phrase, call you it? By this good day, I know not the phrase: but I will maintain the word with my sword to be a soldier-like word, and a word of exceeding good command, by heaven. Accommodated; that is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated; or, when a man is,—being,—whereby,—he may be thought to be accommodated, which is an excellent thing.

Enter FALSTAFF.

Shal. It is very just.—Look, here comes good sir John.—Give me your good hand, give me your worship's good hand. By my troth, you 'like well, and bear your years very well: welcome, good sir John.

Fal. I am glad to see you well, good master Robert Shallow.—Master Sure-card, as I think.

Shal. No, sir John; it is my cousin Silence, in commission with me.

Fal. Good master Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace.

Sil. Your good worship is welcome.

Fal. Fie! this is hot weather.—Gentlemen, have you provided me here half a dozen sufficient men?

Shal. Marry, have we, sir. Will you sit?

Fal. Let me see them, I beseech you.

Shal. Where's the roll? where's the roll? where's the roll?—let me see, let me see: so, so, so, so.
Yea, marry, sir.—Ralph Mouldy!—let them appear as I call; let them do so, let them do so.—Let me see; where is Mouldy?

Moul. Here, an it please you.

Shal. What think you, sir John? a good limbed fellow: young, strong, and of good friends.

Fal. Is thy name Mouldy?

Moul. Yea, an it please you.

Fal. 'Tis the more time thou wert used.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! most excellent, i' faith! things that are mouldy lack use: very singular good!—In faith, well said, sir John; very well said.

Fal. Prick him.

[To SHALLOW.]

Moul. I was pricked well enough before, an you could have let me alone: my old dame will be undone now, for one to do her husbandry, and her drudgery. You need not to have pricked me;
there are other men fitter to go out than I.

score," i. e., hit the white mark at twelve score yards.

Fal. Go to; peace, Mouldy! you shall go. Mouldy, it is time you were spent.

Moul. Spent!

Shal. Peace, fellow, peace! stand aside: know you where you are?—For the other, sir John!—let me see.—Simon Shadow!

Fal. Yea marry, let me have him to sit under: he's like to be a cold soldier.

Shal. Where's Shadow?

Shal. Here, sir.

Fal. Shadow, whose son art thou?

Shal. My mother's son, sir.

Fal. Thy mother's son! like enough; and thy father's shadow: so the son of the female is the shadow of the male. It is often so, indeed; but not of the father's substance.

Shal. Do you like him, sir John?

Fal. Shadow will serve for summer, prick him; for we have a number of shadows to fill up the muster-book.

Shal. Thomas Wart!

Fal. Where's he?

Wart. Here, sir.

Fal. Is thy name Wart?

Wart. Yea, sir.

Fal. Thou art a very ragged wart.

Shal. Shall I prick him, sir John?

Fal. It were superfluous; for his apparel is built upon his back, and the whole frame stands upon pins: prick him no more.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha!—you can do it, sir; you can do it: I commend you well.—Francis Feeble!

Fec. Here, sir.

Fal. What trade art thou, Feeble?

Fec. A woman's tailor, sir.

Shal. Shall I prick him, sir?

Fal. You may; but if he had been a man's tailor, he would have pricked you.—Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemy's battle, as thou hast done in a woman's petticoat?

Fec. I will do my good will, sir: you can have no more.

Fal. Well said, good woman's tailor! well said, courageous Feeble! Thou wilt be as valiant as the wrathful dove, or most magnanimous mouse.—Prick the woman's tailor well, master Shallow; deep, master Shallow.

Fec. I would Wart might have gone, sir.

Fal. I would thou wert a man's tailor, that thou might'st mend him, and make him fit to go. I cannot put him to a private soldier, that is the leader of so many thousands: let that suffice, most forcible Feeble.

Fec. It shall suffice, sir.

Fal. I am bound to thee, reverend Feeble.—Who is next?

Shal. Peter Bull-calf of the green!

Fal. Yea, marry, let us see Bull-calf.

Bull. Here, sir.

Fal. 'Fore God, a likely fellow.—Come, prick me Bull-calf till he roar again.

Bull. O lord! good my lord captain,—

Fal. What, dost thou roar before thou art pricked?

Bull. O lord! sir, I am a diseased man.

Fal. What disease hast thou?

Bull. A whoreson cold, sir; a cough, sir; which I caught with ringing in the king's affairs upon his coronation day, sir.

Fal. Come, thou shalt go to the wars in a gown. We will have away thy cold; and I will take such order, that thy friends shall ring for thee.—Is here all?

Shal. Here is two more called than your number;

you must have but four here, sir:—and so, I pray you, go in with me to dinner.

Fal. Come, I will go drink with you, but I cannot tarry dinner. I am glad to see you, by my troth, master Shallow.

Shal. O, sir John! do you remember since we lay all night in the windmill in Saint George's fields?

Fal. No more of that, good master Shallow; no more of that.

Shal. Ha, it was a merry night. And is Jane Nightwork alive?

Fal. She lives, master Shallow.

Shal. She never could away with me.

Fal. Never, never: she would always say, she could not abide Master Shallow.

Shal. By the mass, I could anger her to the heart. She was then a bona-roba. Doth she hold her own well?

Fal. Old, old, master Shallow.

Shal. Nay, she must be old; she cannot choose but be old; certain she's old, and had Robin Nightwork by old Night-work, before I came to Clement's-inn.

Sil. That's fifty-five year ago.

Shal. Ha, cousin Silence, that thou hadst seen that that this knight and I have seen!—Ha, sir John, said I well?

Fal. We have heard the chimes at midnight, master Shallow.

Shal. That we have, that we have, that we have; in faith, sir John, we have. Our watch-word was, "Hem, boys!"—Come, let's to dinner; come, let's to dinner.—O, the days that we have seen!—Come, come. [Exit FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, and SILENCE.]

Bull. Good master corporate Bardolph, stand my friend, and here is four Harry ten <sup>s</sup>hillings in French crowns for you. In very truth, sir, I had as lief be hanged, sir, as go; and yet, for mine own part, sir, I do not care; but rather, because I am unwilling, and, for mine own part, have a desire to stay with my friends: else, sir, I did not care, for mine own part, so much.

Bard. Go to; stand aside.

Moul. And good master corporal captain, for my old dame's sake, stand my friend: she has nobody to do any thing about her, when I am gone; and she is old, and cannot help herself. You shall have forty, sir.

Bard. Go to; stand aside.

Fec. By my troth, I care not; a man can die but once;—we owe God a death. I'll ne'er bear a base mind:—an't be my destiny, so; an't be not, so. No man's too good to serve his prince; and let it go which way it will, he that dies this year is quit for the next.

Bard. Well said; thou art a good fellow.

Fec. 'Faith, I'll bear no base mind.

Re-enter FALSTAFF, and Justices.

Fal. Come, sir, which men shall I have?

Shal. Four, of which you please.

Bard. Sir, a word with you.—I have three pound to free Mouldy and Bull-calf.

Fal. Go to; well.

Shal. Come, sir John, which four will you have?

Fal. Do you choose for me.

Shal. Marry then,—Mouldy, Bull-calf, Feeble, and Shadow.

Fal. Mouldy, and Bull-calf.—For you, Mouldy, stay at home till you are past service:—and for your part, Bull-calf, grow till you come unto it: I will none of you.

Shal. Sir John, sir John, do not yourself wrong. They are your likeliest men, and I would have you served with the best.

Fal. Will you tell me, master Shallow, how to choose a man? Care I for the limb, the thieves, the stature, bulk, and big <sup>a</sup>assemblance of a man? Give me the spirit, master Shallow.—Here's Wart's;—you see what a ragged appearance it is: he shall charge you, and discharge you, with the motion of a pewterer's hammer; come off, and on, swifter than he that gibbets-on the brewer's bucket. And this same half-faced fellow, Shadow,—give me this man: he presents no mark to the enemy; the foeman may with as great aim level at the edge of a penknife. And, for a retreat,—how swiftly will this Feeble, the woman's tailor, run off? O, give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones.—Put me a <sup>b</sup>caliver into Wart's hand, Bardolph.

Bard. Hold, Wart; <sup>c</sup>traverse: thus, thus, thus.

Fal. Come, manage me your caliver. So:—very well:—go to:—very good:—exceeding good.—O, give me always a little, lean, old, chapped, bald <sup>d</sup>shot.—Well said, <sup>e</sup>faith, Wart: thou'rt a good scab; hold, there's a tester for thee.

Shal. He is not his craft's master, he doth not do it right. I remember at Mile-end green, (when I lay at Clement's inn) I was then sir Dagonet in Arthur's <sup>e</sup>show, there was a little <sup>f</sup>quiver fellow, and he would manage you his piece thus: and he would about, and about, and come you in, and come you in: "rah, tah, tah," would he say; "bounce," would he say; and away again would he go, and again would he come.—I shall never see such a fellow.

Fal. These fellows will do well, master Shallow.—God keep you, master Silence: I will not use many words with you.—Fare you well, gentlemen both: I thank you: I must a dozen mile to-night.—Bardolph, give the soldiers coats.

Shal. Sir John, the Lord bless you, and God prosper your affair, and send us peace. At your return, visit our house. Let our old acquaintance be renewed: peradventure, I will with you to the court.

Fal. Fore God, I would you would.

Shal. Go to; I have spoke at a word. Fare you well. [Exeunt SHALLOW and SILENCE.]

Fal. Fare you well, gentle gentlemen. On, Bardolph; lead the men away. [Exeunt BARDOLPH, RECRUITS, &c.] As I return, I will fetch off these justices: I do see the bottom of justice Shallow. Lord, lord, how subject we old men are to this vice of lying! This same starved justice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildness of his youth, and the feats he hath done about <sup>g</sup>Turnbull-street; and every third word a lie, dueer paid to the hearer than the Turk's tribute. I do remember him at Clement's-inn, like a man made after supper of a cheese-paring: when he was naked, he was, for all the world, like a forked radish, with a head fantastically carved upon it with a knife: he was so forlorn, that his dimensions to any thick sight were invisible: he was the very genius of famine; yet lecherous as a monkey, and the whores called him—mandrake. He came ever in the rear-ward of the fashion; and sung those tunes to the <sup>h</sup>over-scutched huswives that he heard the carmen whistle, and swarc—they were his fancies, or his <sup>i</sup>good-nights.

And now is this Vice's <sup>k</sup>dagger become a squire, and talks as familiarly of John of Gaunt, as if he had been sworn brother to him; and I'll be sworn he never saw him but once in the Tilt-yard, and then he <sup>l</sup>burst his head, for crowding among the marshal's men. I saw it; and told John of Gaunt, he beat his own <sup>m</sup>name; for you might have thrust him, and all his apparel, into an eel-skin: the case of a treble hautboy was a mansion for him, a court; and now has he land and beeves. Well, I will be acquainted with him, if I return; and it shall go hard, but I will make him a philosopher's two <sup>n</sup>stones to me. If the young <sup>o</sup>dace be a bait for the old pike, I see no reason in the law of nature but I may snap at him. Let time shape, and there an end. [Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Forest in Yorkshire.

Enter the Archbishop of YORK, MOWBRAY, HASTINGS, and Others.

Arch. What is this forest call'd? [grace.]

Hast. 'Tis Gaultree forest, an't shall please your Grace. Here stand, my lords; and send discover—to know the numbers of our enemies. [Cries forth,] Hast. We have sent forth already.

Arch. 'Tis well done.—My friends and brethren in these great affairs, I must acquaint you, that I have receiv'd New-dated letters from Northumberland; Their cold intent, tenor and substance, thus:—Here doth he wish his person, with such powers As might hold <sup>p</sup>sortance with his quality, The which he could not levy; whereupon He is retir'd, to ripe his growing fortunes, To Scotland; and concludes in hearty prayers, That your attempts may overlive the hazard, And fearful meeting of their opposite. [Ground,]

Mowb. Thus do the hopes we have in him touch And dash themselves to pieces.

Enter a Messenger.

Hast. Now, what news?

Mess. West of this forest, scarcely off a mile, In goodly form comes on the enemy: And, by the ground they hide, I judge their number Upon, or near, the rate of thirty thousand.

Mowb. The just proportion that we gave them out.

<sup>1</sup> Let's away on, and face them in the field.

Enter WESTMORELAND.

Arch. What <sup>q</sup>well-appointed leader fronts us here?

Mowb. I think it is my lord of Westmoreland.

West. Health and fair greeting from our general, The prince, lord John and Duke of Lancaster.

Arch. Say on, my lord of Westmoreland, in peace, What doth concern your coming?

West. Then, my lord, Unto your grace do I in chief address The substance of my speech. If that rebellion Came like itself, in base and abject routs, Led on by bloody youth, <sup>r</sup>guarded with <sup>s</sup>rags, And countenanc'd by boys, and beggary;

I say, if damn'd commotion so appear'd,
In his true, native, and most proper shape,
You, reverend father, and these noble lords,
Had not been here, to dress the ugly form
Of base and bloody insurrection
With your fair honors. You, lord archbishop,
Whose see is by a civil peace maintain'd;
Whose beard the silver hand of peace hath touch'd;
Whose learning and good letters peace hath tutor'd;
Whose white <sup>a</sup>investments figure innocence,
The dove and very blessed spirit of peace,
Wherefore do you so ill translate yourself,
Out of the speech of peace, that bears such grace,
Into the harsh and boisterous tongue of war?
Turning your books to <sup>1</sup> glaives,<sup>b</sup> your ink to blood,
Your pens to lances, and your tongue divine
To a loud trumpet, and <sup>2</sup> report of war?

Arch. Wherefore do I this?—so the question stands:
Briefly to this end.—We are all diseas'd;
And, with our surfeiting, and wanton hours,
Have brought ourselves into a burning fever,
And we must bleed for it: of which disease
Our late king, Richard, being infected, died.
But, my most noble lord of Westmoreland,
I take not on me here as a physician,
Nor do I, as an enemy to peace,
Troop in the throongs of military men;
But, rather, show a while like fearful war,
To diet rank minds, sick of happiness,
And purge th' obstructions, which begin to stop
Our very veins of life. Hear me more plainly.
I have in equal balance justly weigh'd [suffer,
What wrongs our arms may do, what wrongs we
And find our <sup>c</sup>grievances heavier than our offences.
We see which way the stream of time doth run,
And are enforc'd from our most quiet <sup>3</sup>chair
By the rough torrent of occasion;
And have the summary of all our griefs,
When time shall serve, to show in articles,
Which, long ere this, we offer'd to the king,
And might by no suit gain <sup>4</sup>an audience.
When we are wrong'd, and would unfold our griefs,
We are denied access unto his person,
Even by those men that most have done us wrong.
The dangers of the days but newly gone,
Whose memory is written on the earth
With yet appearing blood, and the examples
Of every minute's <sup>d</sup>instance, present now,
Have put us in these ill-beseeming arms,
Not to break peace, or any branch of it,
But to establish here a peace indeed,
Concurring both in name and quality.

West. When ever yet was your appeal denied?
Wherein have you been galled by the king?
What peer hath been suborn'd to grate on you,
That you should seal this lawless bloody book
Of forg'd rebellion with a seal divine,
And consecrate commotion's bitter <sup>e</sup>edge?

Arch. My brother general, the commonwealth,
To brother born an household cruelty,
I make my quarrel in particular.

West. There is no need of any such redress;
Or, if there were, it not belongs to you.

Mowb. Why not to him, in part, and to us all,
That feel the bruises of the days before,
And suffer the condition of these times
To lay a heavy and unequal hand
Upon our honors?

West. O! my good lord Mowbray,

Construe the times to their necessities,
And you shall say indeed, it is the time,
And not the king, that doth you injuries.
Yet, for your part, it not appears to me,
Either from the king, or in the present time,
That you should have an inch of any ground
To build a grief on. Were you not restor'd
To all the duke of Norfolk's signiorities,
Your noble and right-well-remember'd father's?

Mowb. What thing, in honor, had my father lost,
That need to be reviv'd, and breath'd in me?
The king that lov'd him, as the state stood then,
Was, force perforce, compell'd to banish him:
<sup>5</sup>And when that Harry Bolingbroke, and he,
Being mounted, and both roused in their seats,
Their neighing couriers daring of the spur,
Their armed <sup>f</sup>staves in charge, their beavers down,
Their eyes of fire sparkling through <sup>g</sup>sights of steel,
And the loud trumpet blowing them together;
Then, then, when there was nothing could have stay'd

My father from the breast of Bolingbroke,
O! when the king did throw his <sup>h</sup>warder down,
His own life hung upon the staff he threw:
Then threw he down himself, and all their lives,
That, by indictment, and by dint of sword,
Have since miscarried under Bolingbroke.

West. You speak, lord Mowbray, now you know not what.

The earl of Hereford was reputed, then,
In England the most valiant gentleman:
Who knows, on whom fortune would then have smil'd?

But if your father had been victor there,
He ne'er had borne it out of Coventry;
For all the country, in a general voice,
Cried hate upon him; and all their prayers, and love,
Were set on Hereford, whom they doted on,
And bless'd, and grac'd, indeed, more than the king.
But this is mere digression from my purpose.
Here come I from our princely general,
To know your griefs; to tell you from his grace,
That he will give you audience; and wherein
It shall appear that your demands are just,
You shall enjoy them; every thing set off,
That might so much as think you enemies.

Mowb. But he hath forc'd us to compel this offer,
And it proceeds from policy, not love.

West. Mowbray, you <sup>i</sup>overween, to take it so.
This offer comes from mercy, not from fear;
For, lo! within a <sup>k</sup>ken our army lies,
Upon mine honor, all too confident

To give admittance to a thought of fear.
Our battle is more full of names than yours,
Our men more perfect in the use of arms,
Our armor all as strong, our cause the best:
Then, reason 'will our hearts should be as good;
Say you not, then, our offer is compell'd. [Icy.

Mowb. Well, by my will, we shall admit no par-

West. That argues but the shame of your offence:
A rotten case abides no handling.

Hast. Hath the prince John a full commission,
In very ample virtue of his father,
To hear, and absolutely to determine
Of what condition we shall stand upon?

West. That is <sup>m</sup>intended in the general's name.
I muse you make so slight a question. [schedule,

Arch. Then take, my lord of Westmoreland, this
For this contains our general grievances:

<sup>h</sup> Truncheon.—<sup>i</sup> "You overween," i. e., you overrate yourself.—<sup>k</sup> "Within a ken," i. e., within sight.—<sup>l</sup> "Reason will," i. e., it is reasonable.—<sup>m</sup> Understood.

Each several article herein redress'd;
All members of our cause, both here and hence,
That are <sup>a</sup> insinew'd to this action,
Acquitted by a true substantial form;
And present execution of our wills
To us, and to our purposes, confin'd,
We come within our <sup>b</sup> awful banks again,
And knit our powers to the arm of peace.

West. This will I show the general. Please you,
lords,

In sight of both our battles we may meet:
And either end in peace, which God so frame,
Or to the place of difference call the swords
Which must decide it.

Arch. My lord, we will do so. [Exit WEST.]

Mowb. There is a thing within my bosom tells me,
That no conditions of our peace can stand.

Hast. Fear you not that: if we can make our peace

Upon such large terms, and so absolute,
As our conditions shall <sup>c</sup> consist upon,
Our peace shall stand as firm as rocky mountains.

Mowb. Ay, but our valuation shall be such,
That every slight and false-derived cause,
Yea, every idle, <sup>d</sup> nice, and wanton reason,
Shall to the king taste of this action:

That, were our royal <sup>e</sup> faiths martyrs in love,
We shall be winnow'd with so rough a wind,
That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff,
And good from bad find no partition.

Arch. No, no, my lord. Note this,—the king is weary

Of dainty and such <sup>f</sup> picking grievances:
For he hath found, to end one doubt by death
Revives two greater in the heirs of life.

And therefore will he wipe his <sup>g</sup> tables clean,
And keep no tell-tale to his memory,
That may repeat and history his loss

To new remembrance. For full well he knows,
He cannot so precisely weed this land,
As his misdoings present occasion:

His foes are so enrooted with his friends,
That, plucking to unfix an enemy,
He doth unfasten so, and shake a friend.

So that this land, like an offensive wife,
That hath enrag'd <sup>h</sup> her man to offer strokes,
As he is striking, holds his infant up,
And hangs resolv'd correction in the arm
That was uprear'd to execution.

Hast. Besides, the king hath wasted all his rods
On late offenders, that he now doth lack
The very instruments of chastisement:

So that his power, like to a fangless lion,
May offer, but not hold.

Arch. 'Tis very true:

And therefore be assur'd, my good lord marshal,
If we do now make our atonement well,
Our peace will, like a broken limb united,
Grow stronger for the breaking.

Mowb. Be it so.

Here is return'd my lord of Westmoreland.

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

West. The prince is here at hand. Pleaseth your lordship,

To meet his grace just distance 'tween our armies?

Mowb. Your grace of York, in God's name then, set forward.

Arch. Before, and greet his grace, my lord: we come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Forest.

*Enter, from one side, MOWBRAY, the Archbishop,
HASTINGS, and Others: from the other side, Prince
JOHN of LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND, Officers and Attendants.*

P. John. You are well encounter'd here, my cousin in Mowbray.—

Good day to you, gentle lord archbishop;
And so to you, lord Hastings,—and to all.—
My lord of York, it better show'd with you,
When that your flock, assembled by the bell,
Encircled you to hear with reverence
Your exposition on the holy text,

Than now to see you here an iron <sup>i</sup> man,
Cheering a rout of rebels with your drum,
Turning the word to sword, and life to death.
That man, that sits within a monarch's heart,
And ripens in the sunshine of his favor,
Would he abuse the countenance of the king,
Alack! what mischiefs might he set abroad, [Op.]
In shadow of such greatness. With you, lord bish-
It is even so. Who hath not heard it spoken,
How deep you were within the books of God?

To us, the speaker in his parliament;
To us, th' imagin'd voice of God himself;
The very opener and intelligencer,
Between the grace, the sanctities of heaven,
And our dull <sup>j</sup> workings: O! who shall believe,
But you misuse the reverence of your place,
Employ the countenance and grace of heaven

As a false favorite doth his prince's name,
In deeds dishonorable? You have taken <sup>k</sup> up,
Under the counterfeited <sup>l</sup> seal of God,
The subjects of his substitute, my father:

And, both against the peace of heaven and him,
Have here up-sworn'd them.

Arch. Good my lord of Lancaster,
I am not here against your father's peace;

But, as I told my lord of Westmoreland,
The time misorder'd doth, in common <sup>m</sup> sense,
Crowd us, and crush us to this monstrous form

To hold our safety up. I sent your grace
The parcels and particulars of our <sup>n</sup> griefs; [court.]
The which have been with scorn show'd from the Whereon this Hydra-son of war is born;

Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd asleep,
With grant of our most just and right desires,
And true obedience, of this madness cur'd,
Stoop tamely to the foot of majesty.

Mowb. If not, we ready are to try our fortunes
To the last man.

Hast. And though we here fall down,
We have supplies to second our attempt;

If they miscarry, theirs shall second them;
And so <sup>o</sup> success of mischief shall be born,
And heir from heir shall hold this quarrel up,

Whiles England shall have generation. [shallow.]

P. John. You are too shallow, Hastings, much too
To sound the bottom of the after-times. [rectly.]

West. Pleaseth your grace, to answer them di-
How far-forth you do like their articles.

P. John. I like them all, and do <sup>p</sup> "allow them well:
And swear, here, by the honor of my blood,

My father's purposes have been mistook;
And some about him have too lavishly
Wrested his meaning, and authority.—

My lord, these griefs shall be with speed redress'd;
Upon my soul, they shall. If this may please you,

awe of authority.—<sup>c</sup> "Consist," i. e., rest.—<sup>d</sup> Trivial.—<sup>e</sup> "Our royal faiths," i. e., the faith due to a king.—<sup>f</sup> Piddling; insignificant.—<sup>g</sup> Tablets; table-books.

<sup>h</sup> "An iron man," i. e., clad in armor.—<sup>i</sup> "Dull workings,"
i. e., labors of thought.—<sup>k</sup> "Taken up," i. e., raised up in arms.—<sup>l</sup> "In common sense," i. e., in the sense of general danger.—<sup>m</sup> Succession.—<sup>n</sup> Approve.

Discharge your powers unto their several counties,
As we will ours; and here, between the armies,
Let's drink together friendly, and embrace,
That all their eyes may bear those tokens home
Of our restored love, and amity. [ses.]

Arch. I take your princely word for these redress.
P. John. I give it you, and will maintain my word:
And thereupon I drink unto your grace. [the army
Hast. Go, captain, [To an Officer.] and deliver to This news of peace: let them have pay, and part.
I know, it will well please them: hie thee, captain.

[Exit Officer.]

Arch. To you, my noble lord of Westmoreland.

<sup>1</sup>[Drinks.]

West. I pledge your grace: <sup>2</sup>[Drinks.] and, if you knew what pains

I have bestow'd to breed this present peace,
You would drink freely; but my love to you
Shall show itself more openly hereafter.

Arch. I do not doubt you.

West. I am glad of it.—

Health to my lord, and gentle cousin, Mowbray.

Mowb. You wish me health in very happy season;
For I am, on the sudden, something ill.

Arch. Against ill chances men are ever merry,
But heaviness foreruns the good event.

West. Therefore be merry, coz; since sudden sorrow
Serves to say thus,—some good thing comes to-morrow.

Arch. Believe me, I am passing light in spirit.
Mowb. So much the worse, if your own rule be true.

[Shouts within.]

P. John. The word of peace is render'd. Hark, how they shout!

Mowb. This had been cheerful, after victory.

Arch. A peace is of the nature of a conquest,
For then both parties nobly are subdued,
And neither party loser.

P. John. Go, my lord,
And let our army be discharged too.—

[Exit WESTMORELAND.]

And, good my lord, so please you, let <sup>4</sup>your trains
March by us, that we may peruse the men
We should have cop'd withal.

Arch. Go, good lord Hastings;
And, ere they be dismiss'd, let them march by.

[Exit HASTINGS.]

P. John. I trust, lords, we shall lie to-night together.—

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

Now, cousin, wherefore stands our army still?

West. The leaders having charge from you to
Will not go off until they hear you speak. [stand]

P. John. They know their duties.

Re-enter HASTINGS.

Hast. My lord, our army is dispers'd already.

Like youthful steers unyok'd, they take their courses
East, west, north, south; or, like a school broke up,
Each hurries towards his home, and sporting-place.

West. Good tidings, my lord Hastings; for the which

I do arrest thee, traitor, of high treason:—

And you, lord archbishop,—and you, lord Mowbray;
Of capital treason I attach you both.

Mowb. Is this proceeding just and honorable?

West. Is your assembly so?

Arch. Will you thus break your faith?

P. John. I pawn'd thee none.

I promis'd you redress of these same grievances,
Whereof you did complain; which, by mine honor,

I will perform with a most christian care.
But, for you, rebels, look to taste the due
Meet for rebellion, and such acts as yours.
Most shallowly did you these arms commence,
<sup>a</sup>Fondly brought here, and foolishly sent hence.—
Strike up our drums! pursue the scatter'd stray;
Heaven, and not we, hath safely fought to-day.—
Some guard these traitors to the block of death:
Treason's true bed, and yielder up of breath.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—Another part of the Forest.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter FALSTAFF and COLEVILLE, meeting.

Fal. What's your name, sir? of what condition are you; and of what place, I pray?

Cole. I am a knight, sir; and my name is Coleville of the dale.

Fal. Well then, Coleville is your name, a knight is your degree, and your place, the dale: Coleville shall still be your name, a traitor your degree, and the dungeon your <sup>5</sup>dale,—a dale deep enough; so shall you be still Coleville of the dale.

Cole. Are not you sir John Falstaff?

Fal. As good a man as he, sir, whoo'er I am.
Do ye yield, sir, or shall I sweat for you? If I do sweat, they are the drops of thy lovers, and they weep for thy death: therefore, rouse up fear and trembling, and do observance to my mercy.

Cole. I think, you are sir John Falstaff, and in that thought yield me.

Fal. I have a whole school of tongues in this belly of mine, and not a tongue of them all speaks any other word but my name. An I had but a belly of any indifference, I were simply the most active fellow in Europe: my womb, my womb, my womb undoes me.—Here comes our general.

Enter Prince JOHN of LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND, and others.

P. John. The heat is past, follow no farther now.—
Call in the powers, good cousin Westmoreland.—

[Exit WEST.]

Now, Falstaff, where have you been all this while?

When everything is ended, then you come:

These tardy tricks of yours will, on my life,
One time or other break some gallows' back.

Fal. I would be sorry, my lord, but it should be thus: I never knew yet, but rebuke and check was the reward of valor. Do you think me a swallow, an arrow, or a bullet? have I, in my poor and old motion, the expedition of thought? I have speeded hither with the very extremest inch of possibility: I have foundered nine-score and odd posts; and here, travel-tainted as I am, have, in my pure and immaculate valor, taken sir John Coleville of the dale, a most furious knight, and valorous enemy. But what of that? he saw me, and yielded; that I may justly say with the hook-nosed fellow of <sup>b</sup>Rome, I came, saw, and overcame.

P. John. It was more of his courtesy than your deserving.

Fal. I know not: here he is, and here I yield him.
And I beseech your grace, let it be booked with the rest of this day's deeds; or, by the lord, I will have it in a particular ballad else, with mine own picture on the top of it, Coleville kissing my foot. To the which course if I be enforced, if you do not all show like gilt two-pences to me, and I, in the clear sky of fame, o'ershine you as much as the full moon doth the cinders of the <sup>c</sup>element, which show like pins' heads to her, believe not the word of the noble.

Therefore let me have right, and let desert mount.

P. John. Thine's too heavy to mount.

Fal. Let it shine then.

P. John. Thine's too thick to shine.

Fal. Let it do something, my good lord, that may do me good, and call it what you will.

P. John. Is thy name Coleville?

Cole. It is, my lord.

P. John. A famous rebel art thou, Coleville.

Fal. And a famous true subject took him.

Cole. I am, my lord, but as my betters are,
That led me hither: had they been rul'd by me,
You should have won them dearer than you have.

Fal. I know not how they sold themselves, but thou, like a kind fellow, gavest thyself away gratis;
and I thank thee for thee.

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

P. John. Now, have you left pursuit?

West. Retreat is made, and execution stay'd.

P. John. Send Coleville, with his confederates,
To York, to present execution.—

Blunt, lead him hence, and see you guard him sure.
[Exit COLEVILLE, guarded.]

And now despatch we toward the court, my lords.

I hear, the king my father is sore sick:

Our news shall go before us to his majesty,—

Which, cousin, you shall bear,—to comfort him;

And we with sober speech will follow you.

Fal. My lord, I beseech you, give me leave to go through Glostershire; and, when you come to court, stand my good<sup>a</sup> lord, pray, in your good report.

P. John. Fare you well, Falstaff: I, in my<sup>b</sup> condition,

Shall better speak of you than you deserve. [Exit.]

Fal. I would, you had but the wit: 'twere better than your dukedom.—Good faith, this same young sober-blooded boy doth not love me, nor a man can not make him laugh; but that's no marvel, he drinks no wine. There's never any of these demure boys come to any proof, for thin drink doth so over-cool their blood, and making many fish-meals, that they fall into a kind of male green-sickness; and then, when they marry, they get venches. They are generally fools and cowards, which some of us should be too, but for inflammation. A good sherris-sack hath a two-fold operation in it: it ascends me into the brain; dries me there all the foolish, and dull, and cruddy vapors which environ it; makes it apprehensive, quick, forgetive, full of nimble, fiery, and delectable shapes; which, deliver'd o'er to the voice, (the tongue) which is the birth, becomes excellent wit. The second property of your excellent sher-
ris is the warming of the blood; which, before cold and settled, left the liver white and pale, which is the badge of pusillanimity and cowardice: but the sher-
ris warms it, and makes it course from the inwards to the parts extreme. It illumineth the face, which, as a beacon, gives warning to all the rest of this little kingdom, man, to arm; and then the vital commoners, and inland petty spirits, muster me all to their captain, the heart, who, great, and puffed up with this retinue, doth any deed of courage; and this valor comes of sher-
ris. So that skill in the weapon is nothing without sack, for that sets it a-work; and learning, a mere hoard of gold kept by a<sup>d</sup> devil, till sack<sup>e</sup> commences it, and sets it in act and use. Hereof comes it, that prince Harry is valiant; for the cold blood he did naturally inherit of his father, he hath, like lean, sterile, and bare land, manured, husbanded, and tilled, with excellent endeavor of drinking good, and good store of fertile sher-

ris, that he is become very hot, and valiant. If I had a thousand sons, the first human principle I would teach them should be, to forswear thin potatoes, and to addict themselves to sack.

Enter BARDOLPH.

How now, Bardolph?

Bard. The army is discharged all, and gone.

Fal. Let them go. I'll through Glostershire; and there will I visit master Robert Shallow, esquire: I have him already 'tempering between my finger and my thumb, and shortly will I seal with him. Come away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Westminster. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King HENRY, CLARENCE, Prince HUM-PHREY, WARWICK, and others.

K. Hen. Now, lords, if God doth give successful
To this debate that bleedeth at our doors, [End]
We will our youth lead on to higher fields,
And draw no swords but what are sanctified.
Our navy is address'd, our power collected,
Our substitutes in absence well invested,
And every thing lies level to our wish:
Only, we want a little personal strength,
And pause us, till these rebels, now afoot,
Come underneath the yoke of Government.

War. Both which, we doubt not but your majesty
Shall soon enjoy.

K. Hen. Humphrey, my son of Gloster,
Where is the prince your brother? [Windsor.]

P. Humph. I think, he's gone to hunt, my lord, at K. Hen. And how accompanied?

P. Humph. I do not know, my lord.

K. Hen. Is not his brother, Thomas of Clarence, with him? [Here.]

P. Humph. No, my good lord; he is in presence
Cl. What would my lord and father? [Clarence.]

K. Hen. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of How chance thou art not with the prince thy brother?
He loves thee, and thou dost neglect him, Thomas.

Thou hast a better place in his affection,
Than all thy brothers: cherish it, my boy,

And noble offices thou may'st effect
Of mediation, after I am dead,

Between his greatness and thy other brethren.

Therefore omit him not: blunt not his love,

Nor lose the good advantage of his grace,

By seeming cold, or careless of his will,

For he is gracious, if he be<sup>b</sup> observ'd.

He hath a tear for pity, and a hand

Open as day for melting charity;

Yet, notwithstanding, being incens'd, he's flint,

As<sup>c</sup> humorous as winter, and as sudden

As flaws congealed in the spring of day.

His temper, therefore, must be well observ'd:

Chide him for faults, and do it reverently

When you perceive his blood inclin'd to mirth,

But, being moody, give him line and scope,

Till that his passions, like a whale on ground,
Confound themselves with working. Learn this,

Thomas,

And thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends,

A hoop of gold to bind thy brothers in,

<sup>f</sup> An allusion to the old use of soft wax for sealing. —<sup>g</sup> Ready; prepared. —<sup>h</sup> "If he be observ'd," i. e., if respectful attention is shown him. —<sup>i</sup> Capricious; humorous.

That the united vessel of their blood,
Mingled with venom of suggestion,
(As, force perforce, the age will pour it in)
Shall never leak, though it do work as strong
As aconitum, or rash gunpowder.

Cla. I shall observe him with all care and love.

K. Hen. Why art thou not at Windsor with him,
Thomas?

Cla. He is not there to-day: he dines in London.

K. Hen. And how accompanied? can'st thou tell that?

Cla. With Poins, and other his continual followers.

K. Hen. Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds,
And he, the noble image of my youth,
Is overspread with them: therefore, my grief
Stretches itself beyond the hour of death.
The blood weeps from my heart, when I do shape,
In forms imaginary, th' unguided days,
And rotten times, that you shall look upon
When I am sleeping with my ancestors.
For when his headstrong riot hath no curb,
When rage and hot-blood are his counsellors,
When means and lavish manners meet together,
O, with what wings shall his affections fly
Towards fronting peril and oppos'd decay!

War. My gracious lord, you look beyond him quite.
The prince but studies his companions,
Like a strange tongue: wherein, to gain the language,
'Tis needful, that the most immodest word
Be look'd upon, and learn'd; which once attain'd,
Your highness knows, comes to no farther use,
But to be known, and hated. So, like gross terms,
The prince will, in the perfectness of time,
Cast off his followers, and their memory
Shall as a pattern or a measure live,
By which his grace must mete the lives of others,
Turning past evils to advantages. [comb]

K. Hen. 'Tis seldom, when the bee doth leave her In the dead carrion. [Enter WESTMORELAND.] Who's here? Westmoreland?

West. Health to my sovereign, and new happiness
Added to that that I am to deliver!

Prince John, your son, doth kiss your grace's hand:
Mowbray, the bishop Scroop, Hastings, and all,
Are brought to the correction of your law.
There is not now a rebel's sword unsheath'd,
But peace puts forth her olive every where.
The manner how this action hath been borne,
Here at more leisure may your highness read,
With every course in his particular.

[Giving a paper.]

K. Hen. O Westmoreland! thou art a summer bird.
Which ever in the haunch of winter sings
The lifting up of day. [Enter HARCOURT.] Look!
here's more news.

Har. From enemies heaven keep your majesty;
And, when they stand against you, may they fall
As those that I am come to tell you of.
The earl Northumberland, and the lord Bardolph,
With a great power of English, and of Scots,
Are by the sheriff of Yorkshire overthrow'n.
The manner and rude order of the fight,
This packet, please it you, contains at large.

[Giving a packet.]

K. Hen. And wherefore should these good news make me sick?

Will fortune never come with both hands full,
But write her fair words still in foulest letters?
She either gives a stomach, and no food,—
Such are the poor, in health; or else a feast,

*Temptation.—b Aconite or wolf's-bane, a poisonous herb.
—c Passions; desires.—d The detail contained in Prince
John's letter.

And takes away the stomach,—such are the rich,
That have abundance, and enjoy it not.

I should rejoice now at this happy news,
And now my sight fails, and my brain is giddy.—
O me! come near me; now I am much ill.

[Falls back.]

P. Humph. Comfort, your majesty!

Cla. O my royal father!

West. My sovereign lord, cheer up yourself: look up!

War. Be patient, princes: you do know, these fits
Are with his highness very ordinary.

Stand from him, give him air; he'll straight be well.

Cla. No, no; he cannot long hold out these pangs.
Th' incessant care and labor of his mind

Hath wrought the cure, that should confine it in,
So thin, that life looks through, and will break out.

P. Humph. The people fear me; for they do observe Unfather'd heirs, and loathly births of nature:
The seasons change their manners, as the year
Had found some months asleep, and leap'd them over.

Cla. The river hath thrice flow'd, no ebb between;
And the old folk, time's doting chronicles,
Say, it did so, a little time before

That our great grandsire, Edward, sick'd and died.

War. Speak lower, princes, for the king recovers.

P. Humph. This apoplexy will, certain, be his end.

K. Hen. I pray you, take me up, and bear me hence
Into some other chamber: softly, pray.

[They place the KING on a bed in an inner part of the room.]

Let there be no noise made, my gentle friends;

Unless some dull and favorable hand

Will whisper music to my weary spirit.

War. Call for the music in the other room.

K. Hen. Set me the crown upon my pillow here.

Cla. His eye is hollow, and he changes much.

War. Less noise, less noise!

Enter Prince HENRY.

P. Hen. Who saw the duke of Clarence?

Cla. I am here, brother, full of heaviness.

P. Hen. How now! rain within doors, and none
How doth the king? [abroad?]

P. Humph. Exceeding ill.

P. Hen. Heard he the good news yet?
Tell it him.

P. Humph. He alter'd much upon the hearing it.

P. Hen. If he be sick with joy, he will recover Without physic. [speak low;]

War. Not so much noise, my lords.—Sweet prince,
The king your father is dispos'd to sleep.

Cla. Let us withdraw into the other room.

War. Will't please your grace to go along with us?

P. Hen. No; I will sit and watch here by the king.

[Exeunt all but Prince HENRY.]

Why doth the crown lie there, upon his pillow,
Being so troublesome a bedfellow?

O polish'd perturbation! golden care!

That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide

To many a watchful night, sleep with it now!

Yet not so sound, and half so deeply sweet,

As he, whose brow with homely biggin bound,

Snores out the watch of night. O majesty!

When thou dost pinch thy bearer, thou dost sit

Like a rich armor worn in heat of day,

That scalds with safety.—By his gates of breath

There lies a downy feather, which stirs not:

*Wall.—c "Fear me," i. e., make me afraid.—d "Loathly births," i. e., equivocal births; monsters.—e "As the year,"
i. e., as if the year.—f An historical fact. It happened Oct.
12, 1411.—g Slow; soothing.—h Gates.—i A biggin was a head-band of coarse cloth; so called because worn by the Beguines, an order of nuns.

Did he suspire, that light and weightless down
Perforce must move.—My gracious lord! my father!—
This sleep is sound indeed; this is a sleep,
That from this golden <sup>1</sup>ringol<sup>a</sup> hath divorce'd
So many English kings. Thy due from me
Is tears and heavy sorrows of the blood,
Which nature, love, and filial tenderness,
Shall, O dear father! pay thee plenteously:
My due from thee is this imperial crown,
Which, as immediate from thy place and blood,
Derives itself to me.—Lo! here it sits.

[Putting it on his head.
Which heaven shall guard; and put the world's whole
Into one giant arm, it shall not force [strength
This lineal honor from me. This from thee
Will I to mine leave, as 'tis left to me. [Exit.

K. Hen. Warwick! Gloster! Clarence!

Re-enter WARWICK, and the rest.

Clas. Doth the king call?

War. What would your majesty? How fares your grace?

K. Hen. Why did you leave me here alone, my lords?

Clas. We left the prince, my brother, here, my Who undertook to sit and watch by you. [liege,

K. Hen. The prince of Wales? Where is he? He is not here. [let me see him:

War. This door is open; he is gone this way.

P. Humph. He came not through the chamber where we stay'd. [my pillow?

K. Hen. Where is the crown? who took it from War. When we withdrew, my liege, we left it here.

K. Hen. The prince hath ta'en it hence:—go, Is he so hasty, that he doth suppose [seek him out.
My sleep my death?—
Find him, my lord of Warwick; chide him hither.

[Exit WARWICK.

This part of his conjoints with my disease,
And helps to end me.—See, sons, what things you are;
How quickly nature falls into revolt,
When gold becomes her object.

For this the foolish over-careful fathers
Have broke their sleeps with thoughts,
Their brains with care, their bones with industry:
For this they have engrossed and pil'd up
The cauker'd heaps of strange-achieved gold;
For this they have been thoughtful to invest
Their sons with arts, and martial exercises;
When, like the bee, <sup>b</sup>tolling from every flower
The virtuous sweets,
Our thighs pack'd with wax, our mouths with honey,
We bring it to the hive, and, like the bees,
Are murder'd for our pains. This bitter taste
Yield his engrossments to the ending father.—

Re-enter WARWICK.

Now, where is he that will not stay so long,
Till his friend <sup>2</sup>sickness' hands <sup>d</sup>determin'd me?

War. My lord, I found the prince in the next room,
Washing with kindly tears his gentle cheeks;
With such a deep demeanor in great sorrow,
That tyranny, which never quaff'd but blood,
Would, by beholding him, have wash'd his knife
With gentle eye-drops. He is coming hither.

K. Hen. But wherefore did he take away the crown?

Re-enter Prince HENRY.

Lo, where he comes.—Come hither to me, Harry.—
Depart the chamber, leave us here alone.

[Exit CLARENCE, Prince HUMPHREY, Lords, &c.

P. Hen. I never thought to hear you speak again.

K. Hen. Thy wish was father, Harry, to that
I stay too long by thee, I weary thee. [thought:
Dost thou so hunger for mine empty chair,
That thou wilt needs invest thee with mine honors
Before thy hour be ripe? O foolish youth,
Thou seek'st the greatness that will overwhelm thee!
Stay but a little; for my cloud of dignity
Is held from falling with so weak a wind,
That it will quickly drop: my day is dim.
Thou hast stol'n that, which, after some few hours,
Were thine without offence, and at my death
Thou hast seal'd up my <sup>e</sup>expectation:
Thy life did manifest thou lov'dst me not,
And thou wilt have me die assur'd of it.
Thou hid'st a thousand daggers in thy thoughts,
Which thou hast whetted on thy stony heart,
To stab at half an hour of my life.

What! canst thou not forbear me half an hour?

Then get thee gone, and dig my grave thyself,

And bid the merry bells ring to thine ear

That thou art crown'd, not that I am dead.

Let all the tears that should bedew my hearse,

Be drops of balm to sanctify thy head;

Only compound me with forgotten dust:

Give that which gave thee life unto the worms.

Pluck down my officers, break my decrees;

For now a time is come to mock at form.

Harry the fifth is crown'd!—Up, vanity!

Down, royal state! all you sage counsellors, hence;

And to the English court assemble now,

From every region, apes of idleness!

Now, neighbor confines, purge you of your scum:

Have you a ruffian that will swear, drink, dance,

Revel the night, rob, murder, and commit

The oldest sins the newest kind of ways?

Be happy, he will trouble you no more:

England shall double gild his treble guilt,

England shall give him office, honor, might;

For the fifth Harry from curb'd licence plucks

The muzzle of restraint, and the wild dog

Shall flesh his tooth in every innocent.

O my poor kingdom, sick with civil blows!

When that my care could not withhold thy riots,

What wilt thou do when riot is thy care?

O! thou wilt be a wilderness again,

Peopled with wolves, thy old inhabitants.

P. Hen. O, pardon me, my liege! but for my tears, [Kneeling.

The moist impediments unto my speech,

I had forestall'd this dear and deep rebuke,

Ere you with grief had spoke, and I had heard

The course of it so far. There is your crown;

And He that wears the crown immortally,

Long guard it yours! If I affect it more

Than as your honor, and as your renown,

Let me no more from this obedience rise,

Which my most true and inward dutious spirit

Teacheth, this prostrate and exterior bending.

Heaven witness with me, when I here came in,

And found no course of breath within your majesty,

How cold it struck my heart! if I do feign,

O! let me in my present wildness die,

And never live to show th' incredulous world

The noble change that I have purposed.

Coming to look on you, thinking you dead,

And dead almost, my liege, to think you were,

I spake unto the crown, as having sense, [ing,

And thus upbraided it: "The care on thee depend-

Hath fed upon the body of my father;

Therefore, thou, best of gold, art worst of gold.

Other, less fine in carat, is more precious,

—<sup>f</sup> Obedience.

Preserving life in medicine <sup>a</sup>potable:
 But thou, most fine, most honor'd, most renown'd,
 Hast eat thy bearer up." Thus, my most royal
 Accusing it, I put it on my head; [liege,
 To try with it, as with an enemy
 That had before my face murder'd my father,
 The quarrel of a true inheritor:
 But if it did infect my blood with joy,
 Or swell my thoughts to any strain of pride;
 If any rebel or vain spirit of mine
 Did, with the least affection of a welcome,
 Give entertainment to the <sup>1</sup>weight of it,
 Let God for ever keep it from my head,
 And make me as the poorest vassal is,
 That doth with awe and terror kneel to it!

K. Hen. O my son!
 God put it in thy mind to take it hence,
 That thou might'st win the more thy father's love,
 Pleading so wisely in excuse of it.
 Come hither, Harry; sit thou by my bed,
 And hear, I think, the very latest counsel
 That ever I shall breathe. God knows, my son,
 By what by-paths, and indirect crook'd ways,
 I met this crown; and I myself know well
 How troublesome it sat upon my head:
 To thee it shall descend with better quiet,
 Better opinion, better confirmation;
 For all the <sup>b</sup>soil of the achievement goes
 With me into the earth. It seem'd in me,
 But as an honor snatch'd with boisterous hand,
 And I had many living to upbraid
 My gain of it by their assistances;
 Which daily grew to quarrel, and to bloodshed,
 Wounding <sup>c</sup>supposed peace. All these bold <sup>d</sup>fears,
 Thou seest, with peril I have answered;
 For all my reign hath been but as a scene
 Acting that argument, and now my death
 Changes the <sup>e</sup>mode: for what in me was <sup>2</sup>purchase,<sup>f</sup>
 Falls upon thee in a more fairer sort;
 So, thou the garland wear'st <sup>3</sup>successively.
 Yet, though thou stand'st more sure than I could do,
 Thou art not firm enough; since griefs are green,
 And all <sup>3</sup>my friends, which thou must make thy friends,

Have but their stings and teeth newly ta'en out;
 By whose fell working I was first advanc'd,
 And by whose power I well might lodge a fear
 To be again displac'd. Which to avoid,
 I cut <sup>4</sup>some off; and had a purpose now
 To lead out many to the Holy Land,
 Lest rest, and lying still, might make them look Too near unto my state. Therefore, my Harry,
 Be it thy course to busy giddy minds
 With foreign quarrels; that action, hence borne out,
 May waste the memory of the former days.
 More would I, but my lungs are wasted so,
 That strength of speech is utterly denied me.
 How I came by the crown, O God, forgive,
 And grant it may with thee in true peace live!

P. Hen. My gracious liege,
 You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me;
 Then plain, and right, must my possession be:
 Which I, with more than with a common pain,
 'Gainst all the world will rightfully maintain.

Enter Prince JOHN of LANCASTER, WARWICK, Lords, and Others.

K. Hen. Look, look, here comes my John of Lancaster.

P. John. Health, peace, and happiness, to my royal father!

K. Hen. Thou bring'st me happiness, and peace, son John;

But health, alack, with youthful wings is flown
 From this bare, wither'd trunk: upon thy sight,
 My worldly business makes a period.

Where is my lord of Warwick?

P. Hen. My lord of Warwick!

K. Hen. Doth any name particular belong
 Unto the lodging where I first did swoon?

War. 'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my noble lord.

K. Hen. Laud be to God!—even there my life must end.

It hath been prophesied to me many years,

I should not die but in Jerusalem,

Which vainly I suppos'd the Holy Land.—

But, bear me to that chamber; there I'll lie:

In that Jerusalem shall Harry die. [Exit.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Glostershire. A Hall in SHALLOW's House.

Enter SHALLOW, FALSTAFF, BARDOLPH, and Page.

Shal. By cock and <sup>b</sup>pie, sir, you shall not away to-night.—What, Davy, I say!

Fal. You must excuse me, master Robert Shallow.

Shal. I will not excuse you; you shall not be excused; excuses shall not be admitted; there is no excuse shall serve; you shall not be excused.—Why, Davy!

Enter DAVY.

Davy. Here, sir.

Shal. Davy, Davy, Davy,—let me see, Davy; let me see:—yea, marry, William cook, bid him come hither.—Sir John, you shall not be excused.

Davy. Marry, sir, thus; those <sup>i</sup>precepts cannot be served:—and, again, sir,—shall we sow the headland with wheat?

Shal. With red wheat, Davy. But for William cook:—are there no young pigeons?

Davy. Yes, sir.—Here is, now, the smith's note for shoeing, and plough irons.

Shal. Let it be <sup>k</sup>cast, and paid.—Sir John, you shall not be excused.

Davy. Now, sir, a new link to the bucket must needs be had:—and, sir, do you mean to stop any of William's wages, about the sack he lost the other day at Hincley fair?

Shal. He shall answer it.—Some pigeons, Davy; a couple of short-legged hens, a joint of mutton, and any pretty little tiny kickshaws, tell William cook.

Davy. Doth the man of war stay all night, sir?

Shal. Yea, Davy. I will use him well. A friend i' the court is better than a penny in purse. Use his men well, Davy, for they are arrant knaves, and will backbite.

Davy. No worse than they are back-bitten, sir; for they have marvellous foul linen.

Shal. Well conceited, Davy. About thy business, Davy.

Davy. I beseech you, sir, to countenance William Visor of Wincot against Clement Perkes of the bill.

Shal. There are many complaints, Davy, against that Visor: that Visor is an arrant knave, on my knowledge.

Davy. I grant your worship, that he is a knave, sir; but yet, God forbid, sir, but a knave should have some countenance at his friend's request. An honest man, sir, is able to speak for himself, when a knave is not. I have served your worship truly, sir, this eight years; and if I cannot once or twice in a quarter bear out a knave against an honest man, I have but a very little credit with your worship. The knave is mine honest friend, sir; therefore, I beseech your worship, let him be countenanced.

Shal. Go to; I say, he shall have no wrong. Look about, Davy. [Exit DAVY.] Where are you, sir John? Come, come, come; off with your boots.—Give me your hand, master Bardolph.

Bard. I am glad to see your worship.

Shal. I thank thee with all my heart, kind master Bardolph.—And welcome, my tall fellow. [To the Page.] Come, sir John. [Exit SHALLOW.]

Fal. I'll follow you, good master Robert Shallow. Bardolph, look to our horses. [Exeunt BARDOLPH and Page.] If I were sawed into quantities, it should make four dozen of such bearded hermit's staves as master Shallow. It is a wonderful thing, to see the semblable coherence of his men's spirits and his: they, by observing him, do bear themselves like foolish justices; he, by conversing with them, is turned into a justice-like serving man. Their spirits are so married in conjunction with the participation of society, that they flock together in consent, like so many wild geese. If I had a suit to master Shallow, I would humor his men with the imputation of being near their master: if to his men, I would curry with master Shallow, that no man could better command his servants. It is certain, that either wise bearing, or ignorant carriage, is caught, as men take diseases, one of another; therefore, let men take heed of their company. I will devise matter enough out of this Shallow, to keep prince Harry in continual laughter the wearing-out of six fashions, (which is four terms, or two actions) and he shall laugh without intervallums. O! it is much, that a lie with a slight oath, and a jest with a sad brow, will do with a fellow that never had the ache in his shoulders. O! you shall see him laugh, till his face be like a wet cloak ill laid up.

Shal. [Within.] Sir John!

Fal. I come, master Shallow: I come, master Shallow. [Exit FALSTAFF.]

SCENE II.—Westminster. An Apartment in the Palace.

Enter WARWICK, and the Lord Chief Justice.

War. How now, my lord chief justice! whither

Ch. Just. How doth the king? [away!]

War. Exceeding well: his cares are now all ended.

Ch. Just. I hope, not dead.

War. He's walk'd the way of nature, And to our purposes he lives no more. [him:]

Ch. Just. I would, his majesty had call'd me with The service that I truly did his life, Hath left me open to all injuries.

War. Indeed, I think the young king loves you not.

Ch. Just. I know he doth not, and do arm myself To welcome the condition of the time; Which cannot look more hidcously upon me

Than I have drawn it in my fantasy.

Enter Prince JOHN, Prince HUMPHREY, CLARENCE, WESTMORELAND, and Others.

War. Here come the heavy issue of dead Harry: O! that the living Harry had the temper Of him, the worst of these three gentlemen! How many nobles then should hold their places, That must strike sail to spirits of vile sort.

Ch. Just. O God! I fear, all will be overturn'd.

P. John. Good morrow, cousin Warwick, good morrow.

P. Humph. Cla. Good morrow, cousin. [speak.]

P. John. We meet like men that had forgot to War. We do remember; but our argument

Is all too heavy to admit much talk. [us heavy!]

P. John. Well, peace be with him that hath made

Ch. Just. Peace be with us, lest we be heavier!

P. Humph. O! good my lord, you have lost a friend, indeed;

And I dare swear, you borrow not that face

Of seeming sorrow: it is, sure, your own. [find,]

P. John. Though no man be assur'd what grace to You stand in coldest expectation:

I am the sorrier; 'would, 'twere otherwise.

Cla. Well, you must now speak sir John Falstaff fair,

Which swims against your stream of quality.

Ch. Just. Sweet princes, what I did, I did in honor,

Led by th' impartial conduct of my soul;

And never shall you see, that I will beg

A ragged and forestall'd remission.

If truth and upright innocency fail me,

I'll to the king, my master, that is dead,

And tell him who hath sent me after him.

War. Here comes the prince.

Enter King HENRY V.

Ch. Just. Good morrow, and heaven save your majesty!

King. This new and gorgeous garment, majesty,

Sits not so easy on me as you think.—

Brothers, you mix your sadness with some fear:

This is the English, not the Turkish court;

Not Amurath an Amurath succeeds,

But Harry Harry. Yet be sad, good brothers,

For, to speak truth, it very well becomes you:

Sorrow so royally in you appears,

That I will deeply put the fashion on,

And wear it in my heart. Why then, be sad;

But entertain no more of it, good brothers,

Than a joint burden laid upon us all.

For me, by heaven, I bid you be assur'd,

I'll be your father and your brother too;

Let me but bear your love, I'll bear your cares:

Yet weep, that Harry's dead, and so will I;

But Harry lives, that shall convert those tears,

By number, into hours of happiness.

P. John, &c. We hope no other from your majesty.

King. You all look strangely on me;—and you most. [To the Chief Justice.]

You are, I think, assur'd I love you not.

Ch. Just. I am assur'd, if I be measur'd rightly,

Your majesty hath no just cause to hate me.

King. No!

How might a prince of my great hopes forget

So great indignities you laid upon me?

What! rate, rebuke, and roughly send to prison

The immediate heir of England! Was this easy?

* "In consent," i. e., in agreement; in harmony.—"Near their master," i. e., admitted to their master's confidence.—

* The spendthrift here computes by time the operation of an action for debt.—"A sad brow," i. e., a serious face.

* That is, a pardon obtained by beggarly supplication.—
† Amurath IV., emperor of the Turks, died in 1596; his second son, Amurath, who succeeded him, had all his brothers strangled at a feast.—"Was this easy?" i. e., Was this a light offence?

May this be wash'd in Lethe, and forgotten?

Ch. Just. I then did use the person of your father;

The image of his power lay then in me:

And, in th' administration of his law

Whiles I was busy for the commonwealth,

Your highness pleased to forget my place,

The majesty and power of law and justice,

The image of the king whom I presented,

And struck me in my very seat of judgment:

Whereon, as an offender to your father,

I gave bold way to my authority,

And did commit you. If the deed were ill,

Be you contented, wearing now the garland,

To have a son set your decrees at nought;

To pluck down justice from your awful bench;

To trip the course of law, and blunt the sword

That guards the peace and safety of your person:

Nay, more; to spurn at your most royal image,

And mock your workings in a second<sup>a</sup> body.

Question your royal thoughts, make the case yours,

Be now the father, and propose a<sup>b</sup> son;

Hear your own dignity so much profan'd,

See your most dreadful laws so loosely slighted,

Behold yourself so by a son disclaim'd,

And then imagine me taking your part,

And in your power soft silencing your son.

After this cold consideration, sentence me;

And, as you are a king, speak in your<sup>c</sup> state

What I have done, that misbecame my place,

My person, or my liege's sovereignty. [well.]

King. You are right, justice; and you weigh this

Therefore still bear the balance, and the sword;

And I do wish your honors may increase,

Till you do live to see a son of mine

Offend you, and obey you, as I did.

So shall I live to speak my father's words:—

"Happy am I, that have a man so bold,

That dares do justice on my proper son;

And not less happy, having such a son,

That would deliver up his greatness so

Into the hands of justice."—You did commit me,

For which, I do commit into your hand

Th' unstained sword that you have used to bear;

With this<sup>d</sup> remembrance,—that you use the same

With the like bold, just, and impartial spirit,

As you have done 'gainst me. There is my hand.

You shall be as a father to my youth:

My voice shall sound as you do prompt mine ear,

And I will stoop and humble my intents

To your well-practic'd, wise directions.—

And, princes all, believe me, I beseech you:

My father is gone wild into his grave,

For in his tomb lie my affections,

And with his spirit<sup>e</sup> sadly I survive,

To mock the expectation of the world,

To frustrate prophecies, and to raze out

Rotten opinion, who hath writ me down

After my seeming. The tide of blood in me

Hath proudly flow'd in vanity till now:

Now doth it turn, and ebb back to the sea,

Where it shall mingle with the<sup>f</sup> state of floods,

And flow henceforth in formal majesty.

Now, call we our high court a parliament,

And let us choose such limbs of noble counsel,

That the great body of our state may go

In equal rank with the best govern'd nation;

That war, or peace, or both at once, may be

As things acquainted and familiar to us,

<sup>a</sup> "A second body," i. e., a representative.—<sup>b</sup> "Propose a son," i. e., imagine that you have a son.—<sup>c</sup> "In your state," i. e., in your regal character and office.—<sup>d</sup> Admonition; warning.—<sup>e</sup> Seriously; soberly.—<sup>f</sup> "The state of floods," i. e., the majestic dignity of the ocean, the chief of floods.

In which you, father, shall have foremost hand.—

[To the Lord Chief Justice.]

Our coronation done, we will<sup>g</sup> accite,

As I before remember'd, all our state:

And (God consigning to my good intents)

No prince, nor peer, shall have cause to say,

God shorten Harry's happy life one day. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Glostershire. The Garden of SHALLOW's House.

Enter FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, SILENCE, BARDOLPH, the Page, and DAVY.

Shal. Nay, you shall see mine orchard; where, in an arbor, we will eat a last year's pippin of my own grafting, with a dish of carraways, and so forth.—Come, cousin Silence;—and then to bed.

Fal. 'Fore God, you have here a goodly dwelling, and a rich.

Shal. Barren, barren, barren; beggars all, beggars all, sir John:—marry, good air.—Spread, Davy; spread, Davy; well said, Davy.

Fal. This Davy serves you for good uses: he is your serving-man, and your husband.

Shal. A good varlet, a good varlet, a very good varlet, sir John.—By the mass, I have drunk too much sack at supper:—a good varlet. Now sit down, now sit down.—Come, cousin.

Sil. Ah, sirrah! quoth-a,—we shall

Do nothing but eat, and make good cheer. [Singing.]

And praise heaven for the merry year;

When flesh is cheap and females dear,

And lusty lads roam here and there,

So merrily,

And ever among so merrily.

Fal. There's a merry heart!—Good master Silence, I'll give you a health for that anon.

Shal. Give master Bardolph some wine, Davy.

Davy. Sweet sir, sit; I'll be with you anon:—most sweet sir, sit.—Master page, good master page, sit: 'proface! What you want in meat, we'll have in drink. But you must bear: the heart's all.

[Exit.]
Shal. Be merry, master Bardolph;—and my little soldier there, be merry.

Sil. Be merry, be merry, my wife has all; [Singing.]

For women are shrews, both short and tall:

'Tis merry in hall, when beards wag all,

And welcome merry 'shrove-tide.

Be merry, be merry, &c.

Fal. I did not think master Silence had been a man of this mettle.

Sil. Who I? I have been merry twice and once, ere now.

Re-enter DAVY.

Davy. There is a dish of<sup>k</sup> leather-coats for you.

[Setting them before BARDOLPH.]

Shal. Davy,—

Davy. Your worship.—I'll be with you straight.—

A cup of wine, sir?

Sil. A cup of wine, that's brisk and fine, [Singing.]

And drink unto the leman mine;

And a merry heart lives long-a.

Fal. Well said, master Silence.

Sil. An we shall be merry, now comes in the sweet of the night.

Fal. Health and long life to you, master Silence.

Sil. Fill the cup, and let it come;

I'll pledge you a mile to the bottom.

Shal. Honest Bardolph, welcome: if thou wastest any thing, and wilt not call, beshrew thy heart.—Welcome, my little tiny thief; and welcome, indeed, too.—I'll drink to master Bardolph, and to all the cavaleros about London.

Davy. I hope to see London once ere I die.

Bard. An I might see you there, Davy,—

Shal. By the mass, you'll crack a quart together. Ha! will you not, master Bardolph?

Bard. Yea, sir, in a "pottle pot."

Shal. By God's leggin's I thank thee.—The knave will stick by thee, I can assure thee that: he will not out; he is true bred.

Bard. And I'll stick by him, sir.

Shal. Why, there spoke a king. Lack nothing: be merry. [Knocking heard.] Look, who's at door there. Ho! who knocks? [Exit DAVY.]

Fal. Why, now you have done me right.

[To SILENCE, who drinks a bumper.]

Sil. Do me <sup>b</sup>bright,
And dub me knight:
<sup>c</sup>Samingo. [Singing.]

Is't not so?

Fal. 'Tis so.

Sil. Is't so? Why, then say, an old man can do somewhat.

Re-enter DAVY.

Davy. Au't please your worship, there's one Pistol come from the court with news.

Fal. From the court? let him come in.—

Enter PISTOL.

How now, Pistol?

Pist. Sir John, God save you, sir.

Fal. What wind blew you hither, Pistol?

Pist. Not the ill wind which blows no man to good. Sweet knight, th' art now one of the greatest men in the realm.

Sil. By'r lady, I think he be, but Goodman Puff of <sup>d</sup>Barson.

Pist. Puff?

Puff in thy teeth, most recreant coward base!—

Sir John, I am thy Pistol, and thy friend,
And helter-skelter have I rode to thee;
And tidings do I bring, and lucky joys,
And golden times, and happy news of price.

Fal. I pr'ythee now, deliver them like a man of this world.

Pist. A "foutra" for the world, and worldlings base! I speak of Africa, and golden joys.

Fal. O base Assyrian knight! what is thy news? Let king Cophetua know the truth thereof.

Sil. And Robin Hood, Scarlet, and John. [Sings.]

Pist. Shall dunghill curs confront the Helicons?
And shall good news be baffled?

Then, Pistol, lay thy head in Furies' lap.

Shal. Honest gentleman, I know not your breeding.

Pist. Why then, lament therefore.

Shal. Give me pardon, sir:—if, sir, you come with news from the court, I take it, there is but two ways, either to utter them, or to conceal them. I am, sir, under the king, in some authority.

Pist. Under which king, Bezonian? speak, or die.

Shal. Under king Harry.

Pist. Harry the fourth? or fifth?

Shal. Harry the fourth.

Pist.

A "foutra" for thine office!—

Sir John, thy tender lambkin now is king;
Harry the fifth's the man. I speak the truth:
When Pistol lies, do this; and fig me, like
The bragging Spaniard.

Fal. What! is the old king dead?

Pist. As nail in 'door: the things I speak are die.

Fal. Away, Bardolph! saddle my horse.—Master Robert Shallow, choose what office thou wilt in the land, 'tis thine.—Pistol, I will double-charge thee with dignities.

Bard. O joyful day!—I would not take a knight-hood for my fortune.

Pist. What! I do bring good news.

Fal. Carry master Silence to bed.—Master Shallow, my lord Shallow, be what thou wilt, I am fortune's steward. Get on thy boots: we ride all night.

—O, sweet Pistol!—Away, Bardolph. [Exit BARD.]
—Come, Pistol, utter more to me; and, withal, devise something, to do thyself good.—Boot, boot, master Shallow: I know, the young king is sick for me. Let us take any man's horses; the laws of England are at my commandment. Happy are they which have been my friends, and woe unto my lord chief justice!

Pist. Let vultures vile seize on his lungs also!
"Where is the life that late I led," say they;
Why, here it is: Welcome 'this pleasant day!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London. A Street.

Enter Beadles, dragging in Hostess QUICKLY, and DOLL TEAR-SHEET.

Host. No, thou arrant knave: I would to God I might die, that I might have thee hanged; thou hast drawn my shoulder out of joint.

1 Bead. The constables have delivered her over to me, and she shall have whipping-cheer enough, I warrant her. There hath been a man or two lately killed about her.

Dol. Nut-hook, "nut-hook, you lie. Come on: I'll tell thee what, thou damned tripe-visaged rascal, an the child I now go with do miscarry, thou hadst better thou hadst struck thy mother, thou paper-faced villain.

Host. O the Lord, that sir John were come! he would make this a bloody day to somebody. But I pray God the fruit of her womb miscarry!

1 Bead. If it do, you shall have a dozen of cushions <sup>b</sup>again; you have but eleven now. Come, I charge you both go with me, for the man is dead, that you and Pistol beat among you.

Dol. I'll tell thee what, thou thin man in a "censer," I will have you as soundly swinged for this,—you "blue-bottle rogue! you filthily furnished correctioner! If you be not swinged, I'll forswear half-kirtles.

1 Bead. Come, come, you she knight-errant, come.

Host. O God, that right should thus overcome might! Well, of sufferance comes ease.

Dol. Come, you rogue, come: bring me to a justice.

Host. Ay; come, you starved blood-hound.

Dol. Goodman death! Goodman bones!

Host. Thou anatomy thou!

<sup>a</sup> A pottle pot was a measure containing two quarts.—<sup>b</sup> To do a man right, and to do him reason, were formerly the usual expressions in plodding heads. He who drank a bumper on his knees, to the health of his mistress, was dubbed a knight for the evening.—<sup>c</sup> It should be Domingo: quoted from Nashe's plays.—<sup>d</sup> Barston, a village in Warwickshire.—<sup>e</sup> A "foutra," i.e., a fig: a word of contempt.

Dol. Come, you thin thing ; come, you rascal !

1 Bead. Very well. [ Exeunt. ]

SCENE V.—A public Place near Westminster Abbey.

Enter two Grooms, strewing Rushes.

1 Groom. More rushes, more rushes !

2 Groom. The trumpets have sounded twice.

1 Groom. It will be two o'clock ere they come from the coronation. Despatch, despatch.

[ Exeunt Grooms. ]

Enter FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, PISTOL, BARDOLPH, and the Page.

Fal. Stand here by me, master Robert Shallow ; I will make the king do you grace. I will leer upon him, as he comes by, and do but mark the countenance that he will give me.

Pist. God bless thy lungs, good knight.

Fal. Come here, Pistol ; stand behind me.—[ To SHALLOW. ] O ! if I had had time to have made new liveries, I would have bestowed the thousand pound I borrowed of you. But 'tis no matter ; this poor show doth better : this doth infer the zeal I had to see him.

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. It shows my earnestness of affection.

1 Pist. It doth so.

Fal. My devotion.

2 Pist. It doth, it doth, it doth.

Fal. As it were, to ride day and night ; and not to deliberate, not to remember, not to have patience to shift me.

Shal. It is most certain.

Fal. But to stand stained with travel, and sweating with desire to see him : thinking of nothing else ; putting all affairs else in oblivion, as if there were nothing else to be done but to see him.

Pist. 'Tis semper idem, for absque hoc nihil est. 'Tis all in every part.

Shal. 'Tis so, indeed.

Pist. My knight, I will inflame thy noble liver, And make thee rage.

Thy Doll, and Helen of thy noble thoughts, Is in base durance, and contagious prison ;

Haul'd thither

By most mechanical and dirty hand :— [ snake, Rouse up revenge from ebon den with fell Aleecto's For Doll is in ; Pistol speaks nought but truth.

Fal. I will deliver her.

[ Shouts within, and trumpets sound. ]

Pist. There roar'd the sea, and trumpet-clangor sounds.

Enter KING and his Train, including the Chief Justice.

Fal. God save thy grace, king Hal ! my royal Hal !

Pist. The heavens thee guard and keep, most royal aimp of fame !

Fal. God save thee, my sweet boy !

King. My lord chief justice, speak to that vain man.

Ch. Just. Have you your wits ? know you what 'tis you speak ?

Fal. My king ! my Jove ! I speak to thee, my heart !

King. I know thee not, old man : fall to thy prayers ; How ill white hairs become a fool, and jester !

I have long dream'd of such a kind of man,

So surfeit-swell'd, so old, and so profane ;

But, being awake, I do despise my dream.

Make less thy body, <sup>b</sup> hence, and more thy grace ;

Leave gormandizing ; know, the grave doth gape

For thee thrice wider than for other men.

Reply not to me with a fool-born jest :

Presume not that I am the thing I was ;

For God doth know, so shall the world perceive,

That I have turn'd away my former self :

So will I those that kept me company.

When thou dost hear I am as I have been,

Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou wast,

The tutor and the feeder of my riots :

Till then, I banish thee, on pain of death,

As I have done the rest of my misleaders,

Not to come near our person by ten mile.

For competence of life I will allow you,

That lack of means enforce you not to evil ;

And as we hear you do reform yourselves,

We will, according to your strength and qualities,

Give you advancement.—Be it your charge, my lord,

To see perform'd the tenor of our word.—

Set on. [ Exeunt King and his Train. ]

Fal. Master Shallow, I owe you a thousand pound.

Shal. Ay, marry, sir John ; which I beseech you to let me have home with me.

Fal. That can hardly be, master Shallow. Do not you grieve at this : I shall be sent for in private to him. Look you, he must seem thus to the world. Fear not your advancement ; I will be the man yet that shall make you great.

Shal. I cannot perceive how, unless you should give me your doublet, and stuff me out with straw. I beseech you, good sir John, let me have five hundred of my thousand.

Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word : that that you heard was but a color.

Shal. A color, I fear, that you will die in, Sir John.

Fal. Fear no colors : go with me to dinner. Come, lieutenant Pistol ;—come, Bardolph.—I shall be sent for soon at night.

Re-enter Prince JOHN, the Chief Justice, Officers, &c.

Ch. Just. Go, carry sir John Falstaff to the Fleet. Take all his company along with him.

Fal. My lord, my lord !—

Ch. Just. I cannot now speak : I will hear you soon. Take them away.

Pist. Se fortuna me tormenta, 3 il sperare me contenta.

[ Exeunt FAL, SHAL, PIST, BARD, Page, and Officers. ]

P. John. I shall like this fair proceeding of the king's. He hath <sup>c</sup> intent, his wonted followers

Shall all be very well provided for ;

But all are banish'd, till their conversations

Appear more wise and modest to the world.

Ch. Just. And so they are.

P. John. The king hath call'd his parliament, my

Ch. Just. He hath.

P. John. I will lay odds, that, ere this year expire,

We bear our civil swords, and native fire,

As far as France. I heard a bird so sing,

Whose music, to my thinking, pleas'd the king.

Come, will you hence ?

[ Exeunt. ]

EPILOGUE.

First my fear, then my courtesy, last my speech. My fear is your displeasure, my courtesy my duty, and my speech to beg your pardons. If you look for a good speech, now, you undo me ; for what I have to say, is of mine own making, and what indeed

I should say, will, I doubt, prove mine own marring. But to the purpose, and so to the venture.—Be it known to you, (as it is very well) I was lately here in the end of a displeasing play, to pray your patience for it, and to promise you a better. I did mean, indeed, to pay you with this; which, if, like an ill venture, it come unluckily home, I break, and you, my gentle creditors, lose. Here, I promised you, I would be, and here I commit my body to your mercies: bate me some, and I will pay you some; and, as most debtors do, promise you infinitely.

If my tongue cannot entreat you to acquit me, will you command me to use my legs? and yet that were but light payment, to dance out of your debt: but a good conscience will make any possible satisfaction, and so will I. All the gentlewomen here have forgiven me; if the gentlemen will not, then the gentlemen do not agree with the gentlewomen, which was never seen before in such an assembly.

One word more, I beseech you. If you be not too much cloyed with fat meat, our humble author will continue the story, with sir John in it, and make you merry with fair Katharine of France: where, for any thing I know, Falstaff shall die of a sweat, unless already he be killed with your hard opinions; for Oldcastle died a martyr, and this is not the man. My tongue is weary: when my legs are too, I will bid you good night: and so kneel down before you; but, indeed, to pray for the <sup>3</sup> queen.

<sup>2</sup>CHORUS.

Enter CHORUS, <sup>3</sup>as Prologue.

O, for a muse of fire, that would ascend
The brightest heaven of invention!
A kingdom for a stage, princes to act,
And monarchs to behold the swelling scene!
Then should the warlike Harry, like himself,
Assume the port of Mars: and at his heels,
Leash'd in like hounds, should famine, sword, and fire,
Crouch for employment. But pardon, gentles all,
The flat unraised spirit that hath dar'd
On this unworthy scaffold, to bring forth
So great an object: can this cockpit hold
The vasty fields of France? or may we cram

Within this wooden <sup>4</sup>O the very <sup>5</sup>casques,
That did affright the air at Agincourt?
O! pardon, since a crooked figure may
Attest in little place a million;
And let us, ciphers to this great accompt,
On your imaginary <sup>6</sup>forces work.
Suppose, within the girdle of these walls
Are now confin'd two mighty monarchies,
Whose high upreared and abutting fronts
The perilous, narrow ocean parts asunder.
Piece out our imperfections with your thoughts:
Into a thousand parts divide one man,
And make imaginary puissance:
Think, when we talk of horses, that you see them

Carry them here and there, jumping o'er times,
Turning th' accomplishments of many years
Into an hour-glass: for the which supply,
Admit me chorus to this history;
Who, prologue-like, your humble patience pray,
Gently to hear, kindly to judge, our play.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. An Antechamber in the King's Palace.

Enter the Archbishop of CANTERBURY, and Bishop of ELY.

Cant. My lord, I'll tell you, that self bill is urg'd,
Which in th' eleventh year of the last king's reign
Was like, and had indeed against us pass'd,
But that the <sup>a</sup>scrambling and unquiet time
Did push it out of farther <sup>b</sup>question.

Ely. But how, my lord, shall we resist it now?

Cant. It must be thought on. If it pass against us,
We lose the better half of our <sup>c</sup>possessions;
For all the temporal lands, which men devout
By testament have given to the church,
Would they strip from us; being valued thus,—
As much as would maintain, to the king's honor,
Full fifteen earls, and fifteen hundred knights,
Six thousand and two hundred good esquires;
And, to relief of lazars, and weak age,
Of indigent faint souls, past corporal toil,
A hundred alms-houses, right well supplied;
And to the coffers of the king beside,
A thousand pounds by the year. Thus runs the bill.

Ely. This would drink deep.

Cant. 'Twould drink the cup and all.

Ely. But what prevention?

Cant. The king is full of grace, and fair regard.

Ely. And a true lover of the holy church.

Cant. The courses of his youth promis'd it not.
The breath no sooner left his father's body,
But that his wildness, mortified in him,
Seem'd to die too: yea, at that very moment,
Consideration like an angel came,
And whipp'd th' offending Adam out of him,
Leaving his body as a paradise,
T' envelop and contain celestial spirits.
Never was such a sudden scholar made:
Never came reformation in a flood;
With such a heady current, scouring faults;
Nor never head-headed wilfulness
So soon did lose his seat, and all at once,
As in this king.

Ely. We are blessed in the change.

Cant. Hear him but reason in divinity,
And, all-admiring, with an inward wish
You would desire the king were made a prelate:
Hear him debate of commonwealth affairs,
You would say, it hath been all-in-all his study:
<sup>c</sup>List his discourse of war, and you shall hear
A fearful battle render'd you in music:
Turn him to any cause of policy,
The Gordian knot of it he will unloose,
Familiar as his garter; that, when he speaks,
The air, a charter'd libertine, is still,
And the mute wonder lurketh in men's ears,
To steal his sweet and honeyed sentences;
So that the art and practice part of life

Must be the mistress to this <sup>d</sup>theoric:
Which is a wonder, how his grace should glean it,
Since his addiction was to courses vain;
His <sup>e</sup>companies unletter'd, rude, and shallow;
His hours fill'd up with riots, banquets, sports;
And never noted in him any study,
Any retirement, any sequestration
From open haunts and <sup>f</sup>popularity.

Ely. The strawberry grows underneath the nettle,
And wholesome berries thrive and ripen best,
Neighbor'd by fruit of baser quality:

And so the prince obscur'd his contemplation
Under the veil of wildness; which, no doubt,
Grew like the summer grass, fastest by night,
Unseen, yet <sup>g</sup>crecive in his faculty.

Cant. It must be so; for miracles are ceas'd,
And therefore we must needs admit the means,
How things are perfected.

Ely. But, my good lord,
How now for mitigation of this bill
Urg'd by the commons? Doth his majesty
Incline to it, or no?

Cant. He seems indifferent,
Or, rather, <sup>h</sup>swaying more upon our part,
Than cherishing th' exhibitors against us;
For I have made an offer to his majesty,—
Upon our spiritual convocation,
And in regard of causes now in hand,
Which I have open'd to his grace at large,
As touching France,—to give a greater sum
Than ever at one time the clergy yet
Did to his predecessors part withal.

Ely. How did this offer seem receiv'd, my lord?

Cant. With good acceptance of his majesty;
Save, that there was not time enough to hear
(As, I perceiv'd, his grace would fain have done)
The severals, and unhidden <sup>i</sup>passages
Of his true titles to some certain dukedoms,
And, generally, to the crown and seat of France,
Deriv'd from Edward, his great grandfather.

Ely. What was th' impediment that broke this off?

Cant. The French ambassador upon that instant
Crav'd audience; and the hour, I think, is come,
To give him hearing. Is it four o'clock?

Ely. It is.

Cant. Then go we in, to know his embassy,
Which I could with a ready guess declare,
Before the Frenchman speak a word of it.

Ely. I'll wait upon you, and I long to hear it.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room of State in the Same.

Enter King HENRY, GLOSTER, BEDFORD, EXETER, WARWICK, WESTMORELAND, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Where is my gracious lord of Canterbury?
Exe. Not here in presence.

K. Hen. Send for him, good uncle.

West. Shall we call in th' ambassador, my liege?

K. Hen. Not yet, my cousin: we would be resolv'd,
Before we hear him, of some things of weight,
That task our <sup>k</sup>thoughts, concerning us and France.

Enter the Archbishop of CANTERBURY, and Bishop of ELY.

Cant. God, and his angels, guard your sacred
And make you long become it! [throne,

<sup>a</sup> That is, 'His theory must have been taught by art and practice.'—<sup>b</sup> Companions.—<sup>c</sup> 'Popularity,' i. e., familiarity with the common people.—<sup>d</sup> Increasing; growing.—<sup>e</sup> Inclining.—<sup>f</sup> The severals, and unhidden passages,' i. e., the particulars, and unconcealed circumstances.—<sup>g</sup> 'Task our thoughts,' i. e., keep our thoughts busied.

K. Hen. Sure, we thank you. My learned lord, we pray you to proceed,
And justly and religiously unfold,
Why the law of Salique, that they have in France,
Or should, or should not, bar us in our claim.
And God forbid, my dear and faithful lord,
That you should fashion, wrest, or bow your reading,
Or nicely charge your understanding soul,
With opening titles <sup>a</sup> miscreant, whose right
Suits not in native colors with the truth;
For God doth know, how many, now in health,
Shall drop their blood in <sup>b</sup> approbation
Of what your reverence shall incite us to.
Therefore, take heed how you <sup>c</sup> impawn our person,
How you awake our sleeping sword of war:
We charge you in the name of God, take heed;
For never two such kingdoms did contend,
Without much fall of blood; whose guiltless drops
Are every one a woe, a sore complaint,
'Gainst him whose wrongs give edge unto the swords
That make such waste in brief mortality.
Under this conjuration, speak, my lord,
And we will hear, note, and believe in heart.
That what you speak is in your conscience wash'd,
As pure as sin with baptism. [peers,]

Cant. Then hear me, gracious sovereign, and you
That owe yourselves, your lives, and services,
To this imperial throne.—There is no bar
To make against your highness' claim to France,
But this, which they produce from Pharamond,—
In terram Salicam mulieres ne succedant,
"No woman shall succeed in Salique land."
Which Salique land the French unjustly <sup>d</sup> gloze,
To be the realm of France, and Pharamond
The founder of this law, and female bar:
Yet their own authors faithfully affirm,
That the land Salique is in Germany,
Between the floods of Sala and of Elbe;
Where Charles the great, having subdued the Saxons,
There left behind and settled certain French;
Who, holding in disdain the German women
For some dishonest manners of their life,
Establish'd then this law,—to wit, no female
Should be inheretrix in Salique land:
Which Salique, as I said, 'twixt Elbe and Sala,
Is at this day in Germany call'd Meisen.
Then doth it well appear, the Salique law
Was not devised for the realm of France;
Nor did the French possess the Salique land
Until four hundred one and twenty years
After defunction of king Pharamond,
Idly suppos'd the founder of this law;
Who died within the year of our redemption
Four hundred twenty-six, and Charles the great Subdued the Saxons, and did seat the French
Beyond the river Sala in the year
Eight hundred five. Besides, their writers say,
King Pepin, which deposed Childerick,
Did, as heir general, being descended
Of Blithild, which was daughter to king Clothair,
Make claim and title to the crown of France.
Hugh Capet also,—who usurp'd the crown
Of Charles the duke of Lorraine, sole heir male
Of the true line and stock of Charles the great,—
To <sup>e</sup> found his title with some shows of truth,
Though, in pure truth, it was corrupt and naught,
'Convey'd himself as th' heir to the lady Lingare,
Daughter to Charlemain, who was the son
To Lewis the emperor, and Lewis the son

Of Charles the great. Also king Lewis the tenth,
Who was sole heir to the usurper Capet,
Could not keep quiet in his conscience,
Wearing the crown of France, till satisfied
That fair queen Isabel, his grandmother,
Was lineal of the lady Ermengare,
Daughter to Charles the foresaid duke of Lorraine:
By the which marriage the line of Charles the great
Was reunited to the crown of France.
So that, as clear as is the summer's sun,
King Pepin's title, and Hugh Capet's claim,
King Lewis his satisfaction, all appear
To hold in right and title of the female.
So do the kings of France unto this day,
Howbeit they would hold up this Salique law.
To bar your highness claiming from the female;
And rather choose to hide them in a net,
Than amply to 'imbare their crooked titles
Usurp'd from you and your progenitors.

K. Hen. May I with right and conscience make this claim?

Cant. The sin upon my head, dread sovereign;
For in the book of Numbers is it writ,
When the man dies, let the inheritance
Descend unto the daughter. Gracious lord,
Stand for your own; unwind your bloody flag:
Look back into your mighty ancestors:
Go, my dread lord, to your great grandsire's tomb,
From whom you claim: invoke his warlike spirit,
And your great uncle's, Edward the black prince,
Who on the French ground play'd a tragedy,
Making defeat on the full power of France,
Whiles his most mighty father on a hill
Stood smiling, to behold his lion's whelp
Forage in blood of French nobility.
O noble English! that could entertain
With half their forces the full pride of France,
And let another half stand laughing by,
All out of work, and bold for <sup>b</sup> action.

Ely. Awake remembrance of these valiant dead,
And with your puissant arm renew their feats.
You are their heir, you sit upon their throne;
The blood and courage, that renowned them,
Runs in your veins; and my thrice-puissant liege
Is in the very May-morn of his youth,
Ripe for exploits, and mighty enterprises. [earth,]
Exc. Your brother kings, and monarchs of the
Do all expect that you should rouse yourself,
As did the former lions of your blood.

West. They know your grace hath cause, and means, and might;
So hath your <sup>c</sup> highness:—never king of England
Had nobles richer, and more loyal subjects,
Whose hearts have left their bodies here in England,
And lie pavilion'd in the fields of France.

Cant. O! let their bodies follow, my dear liege,
With blood, and sword, and fire, to win your right:
In aid whereof, we of the <sup>e</sup> spirituality
Will raise your highness such a mighty sum,
As never did the clergy at one time
Bring in to any of your ancestors. [French,]

K. Hen. We must not only arm t' invade the
But lay down our proportions to defend Against the Scot; who will make road upon us
With all advantages.

Cant. They of those <sup>b</sup> marches, gracious sovereign, Shall be a wall sufficient to defend
Our inland from the pilfering borderers. [only,]

K. Hen. We do not mean the couraging snatchers

<sup>a</sup> Lay open.—<sup>b</sup> At the battle of Cressy.—<sup>c</sup> For action,
i. e., for want of action.—<sup>d</sup> That is, 'Your highness hath indeed what they think and know you to have.'—<sup>e</sup> Those marches,' i. e., the borders of England and Scotland.

<sup>a</sup> "Opening titles miscreant," i. e., displaying false titles—
proof.—<sup>c</sup> Engage; pledge.—<sup>d</sup> Explain.—<sup>e</sup> "Convey'd himself," i. e., derived his title.

But fear the main <sup>a</sup>intendment of the Scot,
Who hath been still a <sup>1</sup>greedy neighbor to us :
For you shall read, that my great grandfather
Never went with his forces into France,
But that the Scot on his unfurnish'd kingdom
Came pouring, like the tide into a breach,
With ample and brim fulness of his force ;
Galling the gleaned land with hot essays,
Girding with grievous siege castles and towns ;
That England, being empty of defence,
Hath shook, and trembled at th' ill neighborhood.

Cant. She hath been then more <sup>b</sup>fear'd than harm'd, my liege ;

For hear her but exempl'd by herself :
When all her chivalry hath been in France,
And she a mourning widow of her nobles,
She hath herself not only well defended,
But taken, and impounded as a stray,
The king of Scots ; whom she did send to France,
To fill king Edward's <sup>2</sup>train with prisoner kings,
And make their chronicle as rich with praise,
As is the ooze and bottom of the sea
With sunken wreck and sunless treasures.

West. But there's a saying, very old and true,—

“ If that you will France win,
Then with Scotland first begin : ”

For once the eagle, England, being in <sup>c</sup>prey,
To her unguarded nest the weasel, Scot,
Comes sneaking, and so sucks her princely eggs ;
Playing the mouse in absence of the cat,
To tear and havoc more than she can eat.

Eze. It follows then, the cat must stay at home :
Yet that is <sup>3</sup>not a crush'd necessity,
Since we have locks to safeguard necessities,
And pretty traps to catch the petty thieves.
While that the armed hand doth fight abroad,
Th' advised head defends itself at home :
For government, though high, and low, and lower,
Put into parts, doth keep in one <sup>d</sup>consent,
<sup>e</sup>Congreeing in a full and natural close,
Like music.

Cant. Therefore doth heaven divide
The state of man in divers functions,
Setting endeavor in continual motion ;
To which is fixed, as an aim or butt,
Obedience : for so work the honey bees,
Creatures that by rule in nature teach
The <sup>4</sup>art of order to a peopled kingdom :
They have a king, and officers of <sup>5</sup>state ;
Where some, like magistrates, correct at home,
Others, like merchants, venture trade abroad,
Others, like soldiers, armed in their stings,
Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds ;
Which pillage they with merry march bring home
To the tent-royal of their emperor :
Who, busied in his majesty, surveys
The singing masons building roofs of gold,
The <sup>6</sup>civil citizens kneading up the honey,
The poor mechanic porters crowding in
Their heavy burdens at his narrow gate,
The sad-eyed justice, with his surly hum,
Delivering o'er to <sup>7</sup>executors pale
The lazy yawning drone. I this infer,—
That many things, having full reference
To one consent, may work contrariously ;
As many arrows, loosed several ways,
Come to one mark ; as many ways <sup>8</sup>unite ;
As many fresh streams meet in one salt sea ;
As many lines close in the dial's center ;
So may a thousand actions, once afoot,

End in one purpose, and be all well borne
Without defeat. Therefore, to France, my liege.
Divide your happy England into four ;
Whereof take you one quarter into France,
And you withal shall make all Gallia shake.
If we, with thrice such powers left at home,
Cannot defend our own doors from the dog,
Let us be worried, and our nation lose
The name of hardiness, and policy.

K. Hen. Call in the messengers sent from the Dauphin. [Exit an Attendant.]

Now are we well resolv'd : and, by God's help,
And yours, the noble sinews of our power,
France being ours, we'll lend it to our awe,
Or break it all to pieces : or there we'll sit,
Ruling in large and ample <sup>h</sup>empire,
O'er France, and all her almost kingly dukedoms,
Or lay these bones in an unworthy urn,
Tombleless, with no remembrance over them ;
Either our history shall, with <sup>i</sup>a full mouth,
Speak freely of our acts, or else our grave,
Like Turkish mute, shall have a tongueless mouth,
Not worshipp'd with a waxen epitaph.

Enter Ambassadors of France.

Now are we well prepar'd to know the pleasure
Of our fair cousin Dauphin ; for, we hear,
Your greeting is from him, not from the king.

Amb. May't please your majesty, to give us leave
Freely to render what we have in charge ;
Or shall we sparingly show you far off,
The Dauphin's meaning, and our embassy ?

K. Hen. We are no tyrant, but a Christian king,
Unto whose grace our passion is as subject,
As are our wretches fetter'd in our prisons ;
Therefore, with frank and with uncurbed plainness
Tell us the Dauphin's mind.

Amb. Thus then, in few.
Your highness, lately sending into France,
Did claim some certain dukedoms, in the right
Of your great predecessor, <sup>8</sup>Edward third.
In answer of which claim, the prince our master
Says, that you savor too much of your youth,
And bids you be advis'd, there's nought in France
That can be with a nimble <sup>1</sup>galliard won :
You cannot revel into dukedoms there.

He therefore sends you, meeter for your spirit,
This tun of treasure ; and, in lieu of this,

Desires you, let the dukedoms, that you claim,
Hear no more of you. This the Dauphin speaks.

K. Hen. What treasure, uncle ?

Eze. Tennis-balls, my liege. <sup>10</sup>[Opening it.]

K. Hen. We are glad the Dauphin is so pleasant with us.

His present, and your pains, we thank you for :
When we have match'd our rackets to these balls,
We will, in France, by God's grace, play a set,
Shall strike his father's crown into the <sup>k</sup>hazard.
Tell him, he hath made a match with such a wrangler,
That all the courts of France will be disturb'd
With <sup>l</sup>chases. And we understand him well,
How he comes o'er us with our wilder days,
Not measuring what use we made of them.
We never valu'd this poor <sup>m</sup>seat of England,
And therefore, living <sup>n</sup>hence, did give ourself
To barbarous licence ; as 'tis ever common,
That men are merriest when they are from home.
But tell the Dauphin,—I will keep my state ;

—<sup>b</sup> Frightened.—<sup>c</sup>“ In prey,” i. e., in quest of prey.—<sup>d</sup> Harmony ; concord.—<sup>e</sup> Agreeing.—<sup>f</sup> Grave.—<sup>g</sup> Executioners.

Be like a king, and show my <sup>1</sup>soul of greatness,
 When I do rouse me in my throne of France:
 For <sup>2</sup>here I have laid by my majesty,
 And plodded like a man for working days,
 But I will rise there with so full a glory,
 That I will dazzle all the eyes of France,
 Yea, strike the Dauphin blind to look on us.
 And tell the pleasant prince, this mock of his Hath turn'd his balls to <sup>3</sup>gun-stones; and his soul
 Shall stand sore charged for the wasteful vengeance
 That shall fly with them: for many a thousand widows
 Shall this his mock mock out of their dear husbands;
 Mock mothers from their sons, mock castles down,
 And some are yet unborn, and unborn,
 That shall have cause to curse the Dauphin's scorn.
 But this lies all within the will of God,
 To whom I do appeal; and in whose name,
 Tell you the Dauphin, I am coming on,
 To venge me as I may, and to put forth
 My rightful hand in a well hallow'd cause.
 So, get you hence in peace; and tell the Dauphin,
 His jest will savor but of shallow wit,
 When thousands weep, more than did laugh at it.—
 Convey them with safe conduct.—Fare you well.

[Exeunt Ambassadors.]

Erc. This was a merry message.

K. Hen. We hope to make the sender blush at it.
 Therefore, my lords, omit no happy hour,
 That may give furtherance to our expedition;
 For we have now no thought in us but France,
 Save those to God, that run before our business.
 Therefore, let our proportions for these wars
 Be soon collected, and all things thought upon,
 That may with <sup>3</sup>seasonable swiftness add
 More feathers to our wings; for, God before,
 We'll chide this Dauphin at his father's door.
 Therefore, let every man now task his thought,
 That this fair action may on foot be brought.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

Enter CHORUS.

Chor. Now all the youth of England are on fire,
 And silken dalliance in the wardrobe lies:
 Now <sup>4</sup>strive the armorers, and honor's thought
 Reigns solely in the breast of every man.
 They sell the pasture now to buy the horse;
 Following the mirror of all Christian kings,
 With winged heels, as English mercuries:
 For now sits Expectation in the air;
 And hides a sword, from hilts unto the point,
 With crowns imperial, crowns, and coronets,
 Promis'd to Harry, and his followers.
 The French, advis'd by good intelligence
 Of this most dreadful preparation,
 Shake in their fear, and with pale policy
 Seek to divert the English purposes.
 O England! model to thy inward greatness,
 Like little body with a mighty heart,
 What might'st thou do, that honor would thee do,
 Were all thy children kind and natural.
 But see thy fault! France hath in thee found out
 A nest of hollow bosoms, which he fills
 With treacherous crowns, and three corrupted men,
 One, Richard earl of Cambridge, and the second,
 Henry lord Scroop of Marham, and the third,
 Sir Thomas Grey, knight of Northumberland,

* Balls of stone supplied the place of bullets, when ordnance was first used.

Have, for the <sup>5</sup>gilt of France, (O guilt, indeed!)
 Confirm'd conspiracy with fearful France:
 And by their hands this grace of kings must die.
 If hell and treason hold their promises,
 Ere he take ship for France, and in Southampton.
 Linger your patience on; and well digest
 Th' abuse of distance, <sup>6</sup>and so force a play.
 The sum is paid; the traitors are agreed;
 The king is set from London; and the scene
 Is now transported, gentles, to Southampton.
 There is the playhouse now, there must you sit.
 And thence to France shall we convey you safe.
 And bring you back, charming the narrow seas
 To give you gentle pass; for, if we may,
 We'll not offend one stomach with our play.
 But, till the king come forth, and not till then,
 Unto Southampton do we shift our scene. [Exit.]

SCENE I.—London. Eastcheap.

Enter NYM and BARDOLPH.

Bard. Well met, corporal Nym.

Nym. Good morrow, lieutenant Bardolph.

Bard. What, are ancient Pistol and you friends yet?

Nym. For my part, I care not: I say little; but when time shall serve, there shall be <sup>7</sup>smites;—but that shall be as it may. I dare not fight; but I will wink, and hold out mine iron. It is a simple one; but what though? it will toast cheese, and it will endure cold as another man's sword will; and there's an end.

Bard. I will bestow a breakfast to make you friends, and we'll be all three sworn brothers to France: let it be so, good corporal Nym.

Nym. Faith, I will live so long as I may, that's the certain of it; and when I cannot live any longer, I will do as I may: that is my <sup>8</sup>rest, that is the rendezvous of it.

Bard. It is certain, corporal, that he is married to Nell Quickly; and, certainly, she did you wrong, for you were troth-plight to her.

Nym. I cannot tell; things must be as they may: men may sleep, and they may have their throats about them at that time, and some say knives have edges. It must be as it may: though patience be a tired mare, yet she will plod. There must be conclusions. Well, I cannot <sup>9</sup>tell.

Enter PISTOL and Mrs. QUICKLY.

Bard. Here comes ancient Pistol, and his wife.—Good corporal, be patient here.—How now, mine host Pistol?

Pist. Base <sup>10</sup>tike, call'st thou me host? Now, by this hand I swear, I scorn the term; Nor shall my Nell keep lodgers.

Quick. No, by my troth, not long: for we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourteen gentlewomen, that live honestly by the prick of their needles, but it will be thought we keep a bawdy-house straight. [Nym draws his sword.] O well-a-day, lady! if he be not <sup>11</sup>hewn now!—we shall see wilful adultery and murder committed.

Bard. Good lieutenant—good corporal, offer nothing here.

Nym. Fish!

Pist. Fish for thee, Iceland dog; thou prick-eared cur of Iceland! <sup>12</sup>[Draws his sword.]

Quick. Good corporal Nym, show thy valor, and put up your sword.

<sup>10</sup> Gold.—<sup>11</sup> "My rest," i. e., my determination.—<sup>12</sup> "I cannot tell," i. e., I know not what to say or think of it.—<sup>13</sup> A tike was a large dog, now called a mongrel.

Nym. Will you shog off? I would have you solus.<sup>1</sup>

Pist. Solus, egregious dog? O viper vile!

The solus in thy most marvellous face;

The solus in thy teeth, and in thy throat,

And in thy hateful lungs, yea, in thy maw, <sup>2</sup>perdy;

And, which is worse, within thy nasty mouth!

I do retort the solus in thy bowels:

For I can <sup>3</sup>take, and Pistol's cock is up,

And flashing fire will follow.

Nym. I am not <sup>4</sup>Barbasen; you cannot conjure me. I have an humor to knock you indifferently well. If you grow foul with me, Pistol, I will scour you with my rapier, as I may, in fair terms: if you would walk off, I would prick your guts a little, in good terms, as I may; and that's the humor of it.

Pist. O braggart vile, and damned furious wight! The grave doth gape, and doting death is near; Therefore <sup>5</sup>exhale.<sup>2</sup>

Bard. Hear me; hear me what I say:—he that strikes the first stroke, I'll run him up to the hilts, as I am a soldier. [Draws.]

Pist. An oath of mickle might, and fury shall abate. Give me thy fist, thy fore-foot to me give; Thy spirits are most tall.

Nym. I will cut thy throat, one time or other, in fair terms; that is the humor of it.

Pist. Coupe le gorge, that's the word?—I defy thee again.

O hound of <sup>6</sup>Crete, think'st thou my spouse to get?

No; to the <sup>7</sup>spital go,

And from the powdering tub of infamy

Fetch forth the lazar kite of Cressid's <sup>8</sup>kind,

Doll Tear-sheet she by name, and her spouse:

I have, and I will hold, the <sup>9</sup>quondam Quickly

For the only she; and—pauca, there's enough.

Enter the Boy.

Boy. Mine host Pistol, you must come to my master, and your hostess.—He is very sick, and would to bed.—Good Bardolph, put thy face between his sheets, and do the office of a warming-pan: 'faith he's very ill.

Bard. Away, you rogue.

Quick. By my troth, he'll yield the crow a pudding one of these days: the king has killed his heart.—Good husband, come home presently.

Bard. Come, shall I make you two friends? We must to France together. Why, the devil, should we keep knives to cut one another's throats?

Pist. Let floods o'erswell, and fiends for food howl on!

Nym. You'll pay me the eight shillings I won of you at betting?

Pist. Base is the slave that pays.

Nym. That now I will have; and that's the humor of it.

Pist. As manhood shall compound. Push home.

Bard. By this sword, he that makes the first thrust, I'll kill him; by this sword, I will. [course.]

Pist. Sword is an oath, and oaths must have their

Bard. Corporal Nym, an thou wilt be friends, be friends: an thou wilt not, why then be enemies with me too. Pr'ythee, put up.

Nym. I shall have my eight shillings, I won of you at betting?

Pist. A <sup>5</sup>noble shalt thou have, and present pay;

And liquor likewise will I give to thee, And friendship shall combine, and brotherhood: I'll live by Nym, and Nym shall live by me.— Is not this just? for I shall suter be Unto the camp, and profits will accrue.

<sup>5</sup>[Sheathes his sword.]

Give me thy hand.

Nym. I shall have my noble?

Pist. In cash most justly paid.

Nym. Well then, that's the humor of it.

<sup>6</sup>[They shake hands.]

Re-enter Mrs. Quickly.

Quick. As ever you come of women, come in quickly to sir John. Ah, poor heart! he is so shaken of a burning quotidian tertian, that it is most lamentable to behold. Sweet men, come to him.

Nym. The king hath run bad humors on the knight, that's the even of it.

Pist. Nym, thou hast spoke the right;

His heart is fracted and corroborate.

Nym. The king is a good king; but it must be as it may: he passes some humors, and careers.

Pist. Let us condole the knight, for lambkins we will live. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Southampton. A Council-Chamber.

Enter EXETER, BEDFORD, and WESTMORELAND.

Bed. 'Fore God, his grace is bold to trust these traitors.

Ecc. They shall be apprehended by and by.

West. How smooth and even they do bear them— As if allegiance in their bosoms sat, [scelves,]

Crowned with faith, and constant loyalty.

Bed. The king hath note of all that they intend,

By interception which they dream not of.

Ecc. Nay, but the man that was his bedfellow, Whom he hath dall'd and cloy'd with gracious favors; That he should, for a foreign purse, so sell His sovereign's life to death and treachery!

Trumpets sound. Enter King HENRY, SCROOP, CAMBRIDGE, GREY, Lords, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Now sits the wind fair, and we will aboard. My lord of Cambridge,—and my kind lord of Mar- sham.—

And you, my gentle knight, give me your thoughts: Think you not, that the powers we bear with us Will cut their passage through the force of France, Doing the execution, and the act, For which we have in <sup>1</sup>head assembled them?

Scroop. No doubt, my liege, if each man do his best. [suaded]

K. Hen. I doubt not that: since we are well per We carry not a heart with us from hence, That grows not in a fair consent with ours; Nor leave not one behind, that doth not wish Success and conquest to attend on us.

Cam. Never was monarch better fear'd, and lov'd, Than is your majesty: <sup>2</sup>there's not a subject, That sits in heart-grief and uneasiness Under the sweet shade of your government.

Grey. True: those that were your father's enemies, Have steep'd<sup>3</sup> their galls in honey, and do serve you With hearts<sup>4</sup> create of duty and of zeal.

K. Hen. We therefore have great cause of thank— And shall forget the office of our hand, [fulness, Sooner than <sup>5</sup>quittance of desert and merit, According to the weight and worthiness.

Scroop. So service shall with steeld sinews toil, And labor shall refresh itself with hope, <sup>1</sup> "In head," i. e., in force. —<sup>2</sup> Agreement; accord. —<sup>3</sup> "Create," i. e., compounded; made up. —<sup>4</sup> Recompense.

To do your grace incessant services.

K. Hen. We judge no less.—Uncle of Exeter, Enlarge the man committed yesterday, That rail'd against our person: we consider, It was excess of wine that set him on; And, on 'our more <sup>a</sup> advice, we pardon him.

Scroop. That's mercy, but too much security: Let him be punish'd, sovereign; lest example Breed by his sufferance more of such a kind.

K. Hen. O! let us yet be merciful, <sup>2</sup> my lord.

Cam. So may your highness, and yet punish too.
Grey. <sup>3</sup> You show great mercy, if you give him life After the taste of much correction.

K. Hen. Alas! your too much love and care of me Are heavy <sup>b</sup> orisons 'gainst this poor wretch. If little faults, proceeding on <sup>c</sup> distemper, Shall not be wink'd at, how shall we stretch our eye, When capital crimes, chew'd, swallow'd, and digested, Appear before us?—We'll yet enlarge that man, Though Cambridge, Scroop, and Grey, in their dear And tender preservation of our person, [care, Would have him punish'd. And now to our French Who are the <sup>d</sup> state commissioners? [causes:

Cam. I once, my lord:

Your highness bade me ask for it to-day.

Scroop. So did you me, my liege.

Grey. And I, my royal sovereign.

K. Hen. Then, Richard, earl of Cambridge, there is yours:— [knight,

There yours, lord Scroop of Marsham:—and, sir Grey of Northumberland, this same is yours:— Read them; and know, I know your worthiness.—

My lord of Westmoreland, and uncle Exeter, We will aboard to-night.—Why, how now, gentlemen!

What see you in those papers, that you lose So much complexion?—look ye, how they change: Their cheeks are paper.—Why, what read you there, That hath so cowarded and chas'd your blood Out of appearance?

Cam. I do confess my fault, And do submit me to your highness' mercy.

Grey, Scroop. To which we all appeal.

K. Hen. The mercy that was <sup>a</sup> quick in us but late, By your own counsel is suppress'd and kill'd: You must not dare, for shame, to talk of mercy; For your own reasons turn into your bosoms, As dogs upon their masters, worrying you.— See you, my princes, and my noble peers, These English monsters! My lord of Cambridge here,—

You know, how apt our love was to accord To furnish him with all appurtenments Belonging to his honor; and this man Hath, for a few light crowns, lightly conspir'd, And sworn unto the practices of France, To kill us here in Hampton: to the which, This knight, no less for bounty bound to us Than Cambridge is, hath likewise sworn.—But O! What shall I say to thee, lord Scroop? thou cruel, Ingrateful, savage, and inhuman creature! Thou that did'st bear the key of all my counsels, That knew'st the very bottom of my soul, That almost might'st have coin'd me into gold, Would'st thou have practis'd on me for thy use? May it be possible, that foreign hire Could out of thee extract one spark of evil, That might annoy my finger? 'tis so strange,

That, though the truth of it stands off as <sup>e</sup> gross As black and white, my eye will scarcely see it. Treason and murder ever kept together, As two yoke-devils sworn to either's purpose, Working so <sup>f</sup> grossly in a natural <sup>g</sup> course, That admiration did not <sup>h</sup> whoop at them: But thou, 'gainst all proportion, didst bring in Wonder to wait on treason, and on murder: And whatsoever cunning fiend it was, That wrought upon thee so preposterously, Hath got the voice in hell for excellence, And other devils, that suggest by treasons, Do botch and bungle up damnation With patches, colors, and with forms, being fetch'd From glistening semblances of piety: But he that <sup>i</sup> temper'd thee bade thee stand up, Gave thee no instance why thou should'st do treason, Unless to dub thee with the name of traitor. If that same demon, that hath gull'd thee thus, Should with his lion gait walk the whole world, He might return to vasty <sup>j</sup> Tartar back, And tell the legions—I can never win A soul so easy as that Englishman's.

O, how hast thou with jealousy infected The sweetness of <sup>k</sup> alliance! Show men dutiful! Why, so didst thou: seem they grave and learned? Why, so didst thou: come they of noble family? Why, so didst thou: seem they religious? Why, so didst thou: or are they spare in diet; Free from gross passion, or of mirth or anger; Constant in spirit, not swerving with the blood; Garnish'd and deck'd in modest <sup>l</sup> complement; Not working with the eye without the ear, And but in purged judgment trusting neither? Such, and so finely <sup>m</sup> bolted, didst thou seem; And thus thy fall hath left a kind of blot, To mark the full-fraught man, and best <sup>n</sup> indued, With some suspicion. I will weep for thee, For this revolt of thine, methinks, is like Another fall of man.—Their faults are open: Arrest them to the answer of the law, And God acquit them of their practices.

Etc. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Richard earl of Cambridge.

I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Henry lord Scroop, of Marsham.

I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Thomas Grey, knight of Northumberland.

Scroop. Our purposes God justly hath discover'd, And I repent my fault more than my death; Which I beseech your highness to forgive, Although my body pay the price of it.

Cam. For me,—the gold of France did not seduce, Although I did admit it as a motive, The sooner to effect what I intended: But God be thanked for prevention; Which I in <sup>o</sup> sufferance heartily will rejoice, Beseeching God and you to pardon me.

Grey. Never did faithful subject more rejoice At the discovery of most dangerous treason, Than I do at this hour joy o'er myself, Prevented from a damned enterprise. My fault, but not my body, pardon, sovereign.

K. Hen. God quit you in his mercy! Hear your sentence.

You have conspir'd against our royal person,

Join'd with an enemy proclaim'd, and from his coffers
 Receiv'd the golden earnest of our death;
 Wherein you would have sold your king to slaughter,
 His princes and his peers to servitude,
 His subjects to oppression and contempt,
 And his whole kingdom unto desolation.
 Touching our person, seek we no revenge;
 But we our kingdom's safety must so tender,
 Whose ruin you have sought, that to her laws
 We do deliver you. Get you therefore hence,
 Poor miserable wretches, to your death;
 The taste whereof, God, of his merry, give you
 Patience to endure, and true repentance
 Of all your dear offences.—Bear thee hence.

[Exeunt Conspirators, guarded.]

Now, lords, for France; the enterprize whereof
 Shall be to you, as us, like glorions.
 We doubt not of a fair and lucky war,
 Since God so graciously hath brought to light
 This dangerous treason, lurking in our way
 To hinder our beginnings: we doubt not now,
 But every rub is smoothened on our way.
 Then, forth, dear countrymen: let us deliver
 Our puissance into the hand of God,
 Putting it straight in expedition.
 Cheerly to sea; the signs of war advance:
 No king of England, if not king of France.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—London. Mrs. QUICKLY's House, in Eastcheap.

Enter PISTOL, Mrs. QUICKLY, NYM, BARDOLPH, and Boy.

Quick. Pr'ythee, honey-sweet husband, let me bring thee to Staines.

Pist. No; for my manly heart doth yearn.—

Bardolph, be blythe; Nym, rouse thy vaunting veins;
 Boy, bristle thy courage up; for Falstaff he is dead,
 And we must yearn therefore.

Bard. 'Would I were with him, wheresome'er he is, either in heaven, or in hell.

Quick. Nay, sure, he's not in hell: he's in Arthur's bosom, if ever man went to Arthur's bosom.
 'A made a fine end and went away, an it had been any christom child; 'a parted ev'n just between twelve and one, ev'n at the turning o' the tide: for after I saw him fumble with the sheets, and play with flowers, and smile upon his finger's end, I knew there was but one way; for his nose was as sharp as a pen 'on a table of green frieze. How now, sir John? quoth I: what, man! he of good cheer. So 'a cried out—God, God, God! three or four times: now I, to comfort him, bid him, 'a should not think of God; I hoped, there was no need to trouble himself with any such thoughts yet.
 So, 'a bade me lay more clothes on his feet: I put my hand into the bed, and felt them, and they were as cold as any stone; then I felt to his knees, and so upward, and upward, and all was as cold as any stone.

Nym. They say, he cried out of sack.

Quick. Ay, that 'a did.

Bard. And of women.

Quick. Nay, that 'a did not.

Boy. Yes, that 'a did; and said, they were devils
 incarnate.

Quick. 'A could never abide carnation; 'twas a color he never liked.

Boy. 'A said once, the devil would have him about women.

Quick. 'A did in some sort, indeed, handle women;
 but then he was 'rheumatic, and talked of the whore of Babylon.

Boy. Do you not remember, 'a saw a flea stick upon Bardolph's nose, and 'a said it was a black soul burning in hell?

Bard. Well, the fuel is gone that maintained that fire: that's all the riches I got in his service.

Nym. Shall we shog? the king will be gone from Southampton.

Pist. Come, let's away.—My love, give me thy lips
 Look to my chattels, and my movables:
 Let senses rule; the word is, "Pitch and pay;"
 Trust none;

For oaths are straws, men's faiths are wafer-cakes,
 And hold-fast is the only dog, my duck:
 Therefore, caveto be thy counsellor.

Go, clear thy <sup>d</sup> crystals.—Yoke-fellows in arms,
 Let us to France: like horse-leeches, my boys,
 To suck, to suck, the very blood to suck!

Boy. And that is but unwholesome food, they say.

Pist. Touch her soft mouth, and march.

Bard. Farewell, hostess.

[Kissing her.]

Nym. I cannot kiss, that is the humor of it; but adieu.

Pist. Let housewifery appear: keep close, I thee command.

Quick. Farewell; adieu.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—France. A Room in the French
 King's Palace.

Flourish. Enter the French King attended; the Dauphin, the Duke of BURGUNDY, the Constable, and Others.

Fr. King. Thus come the English with full power upon us,

And more than carefully it us concerns,
 To answer royally in our defences.

Therefore the dukes of Berry, and of Bretagne,
 Of Brabant, and of Orleans, shall make forth,
 And you, prince Dauphin, with all swift despatch,
 To line, and new repair, our towns of war
 With men of courage, and with means defendant:
 For England his approaches makes as fierce,
 As waters to the sucking of a gulph.

It fits us, then, to be as provident
 As fear may teach us, out of late examples
 Left by the fatal and neglected English
 Upon our fields.

Dau. My most redoubted father,

It is most meet we arm us 'gainst the foe;
 For peace itself should not so 'dull a kingdom,
 (Though war, nor no known quarrel, were in question)
 But that defences, musters, preparations,
 Should be maintain'd, assembled, and collected,
 As were a war in expectation.

Therefore, I say, 'tis meet we all go forth,
 To view the sick and feeble parts of France:
 And let us do it with no show of fear;
 No, with no more, than if we heard that England
 Were busied with a Whitsun morris dance:
 For, my good liege, she is so idly king'd,
 Her sceptre so fantastically borne
 By a vain, giddy, shallow, humorous youth,
 That fear attends her not.

Con.

O peace, prince Dauphin!
 You are too much mistaken in this king.
 Question your grace the late ambassadors,
 With what great state he heard their embassy,
 How well supplied with noble counsellors,

 dry thine eyes.—<sup>e</sup> "Dull," i. e., render torpid, inactive.

How modest in <sup>a</sup>exception, and, withal,
How terrible in constant resolution,
And you shall find, his vanities <sup>b</sup>forespent
Were but the outside of the Roman Brutus,
Covering discretion with a coat of folly;
As gardeners do with ordure hide those roots
That shall first spring, and be most delicate.

Dan. Well, 'tis not so, my lord high constable;
But though we think it so, it is no matter:
In cases of defence, 'tis best to weigh
The enemy more mighty than he seems,
So the proportions of defence are fill'd;
Which, of a weak and niggardly <sup>c</sup>projection,
Doth like a miser, spoil his coat with scanting
A little cloth.

Fr. King. Think we king Harry strong;
And, princes, look, you strongly arm to meet him.
The kindred of him hath been flesh'd upon us,
And he is bred out of that bloody <sup>d</sup>strain,
That haunted us in our familiar paths:
Witness our too much memorable shame,
When Cressy battle fatally was struck,
And all our princes captiv'd by the hand
Of that black name, Edward black prince of Wales;
Whilst that his 'mighty sire, on mountain standing,
Up in the air, crown'd with the golden sun,
Saw his heroic seed, and smil'd to see him,
Mangle the work of nature, and deface
The patterns that by God, and by French fathers
Had twenty years been made. This is a stem
Of that victorious stock; and let us fear
The native mightiness and <sup>e</sup>fate of him.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Ambassadors from Harry King of England
Do crave admittance to your majesty.

Fr. King. We'll give them present audience. Go, and bring them.

[Exit Mess. and certain Lords.]

You see, this chase is hotly follow'd, friends.

Dau. Turn head, and stop pursuit; for coward dogs
Most spend their mouths, when what they seem to threaten

Runs far before them. Good my sovereign,
Take up the English short, and let them know
Of what a monarchy you are the head:
Self-love, my liege, is not so vile a sin
As self-neglecting.

Re-enter Lords, with EXETER and Train.

Fr. King. From our brother of England?

Eze. From him; and thus he greets your majesty.

He wills you, in the name of God Almighty,
That you divest yourself, and lay apart
The borrow'd glories, that by gift of heaven,
By law of nature, and of nations, 'long
To him, and to his heirs; namely, the crown,
And all wide-stretched honors that pertain,
By custom and the ordinance of times,
Unto the crown of France. That you may know,
'Tis no sinister, nor no awkward claim,
Pick'd from the worm-holes of long-vanish'd days,
Nor from the dust of old oblivion rak'd,
He sends you this most memorable <sup>f</sup>line,

[Giving a pedigree.]

In every branch truly demonstrative;
Willing you overlook this pedigree,
And when you find him evenly deriv'd
From his most fam'd of famous ancestors,

<sup>a</sup> "How modest in exception," i. e., how diffident in making objections.—<sup>b</sup> Past; forepassed.—<sup>c</sup> Contrivance.—<sup>d</sup> Lineage.—<sup>e</sup> The "fate of him," is what is allotted him by destiny.—<sup>f</sup> "Spend their mouths," i. e., bark.—<sup>g</sup> That is, this genealogy; this deduction of his lineage.

Edward the third, he bids you then resign
Your crown and kingdom, indirectly held
From him, the native and true challenger.

Fr. King. Or else what follows?

Eze. Bloody constraint; for if you hide the crown
Even in your hearts, there will he rake for it:
Therefore, in fierce tempest is he coming,
In thunder, and in earthquake, like a Jove,
That, if requiring fail, he will compel:
And bids you, in the bowels of the Lord,
Deliver up the crown, and to take mercy
On the poor souls, for whom this hungry war
Opens his vasty jaws; and on your head
Turning the widows' tears, the orphans' cries,
The dead men's blood, the pining maidens' groans,
For husbands, fathers, and betrothed lovers,
That shall be swallow'd in this controversy.
This is his claim, his threat'ning, and my message;
Unless the Dauphin be in presence here,
To whom expressly I bring greeting too.

Fr. King. For us, we will consider of this farther:
To-morrow shall you bear our full intent
Back to our brother of England.

Dau. For the Dauphin,
I stand here for him: what to him from England?

Eze. Scorn, and defiance, slight regard, contempt,
And any thing that may not misbecome
The mighty sender, doth he prize you at.
Thus says my king: and, if your father's highness
Do not, in grant of all demands at large,
Sweeten the bitter mock you sent his majesty,
He'll call you to so hot an answer of it,
That caves and wombly vaultages of France
Shall <sup>h</sup>chide your trespass, and return your mock
In second accent of his ordinance.

Dau. Say, if my father render fair return,
It is against my will; for I desire
Nothing but odds with England: to that end,
As matching to his youth and vanity,
I did present him with the Paris balls.

Eze. He'll make your Paris Louvre shake for it,
Were it the mistress court of mighty Europe.
And, be assur'd, you'll find a difference,
As we his subjects have in wonder found,
Between the promise of his greener days,
And these he masters now. Now he weighs time,
Even to the utmost grain; that you shall read
In your own losses, if he stay in France. [full.]

Fr. King. To-morrow shall you know our mind at

Eze. Despatch us with all speed, lest that our king
Come here himself to question our delay,
For he is footed in this land already. [conditions.]

Fr. King. You shall be soon despatch'd with fair
A night is but small breath, and little pause,
To answer matters of this consequence.

<sup>2</sup> [Flourish. Exit.]

ACT III.

Enter CHORUS.

Chor. Thus with imagin'd wing our swift scene flies,
In motion of no less celerity
Than that of thought. Suppose, that you have seen
The well-appointed king at Hampton pier
Embark his royalty; and his brave fleet
With silken streamers the young Phœbus fanning:
Play with your fancies, and in them behold,
Upou the hempen tackle ship-boys climbing;
Hear the shrill whistle, which doth order give <sup>1</sup> "Chide," i. e., resound; echo.—<sup>2</sup> Well-furnished.

To sounds confus'd: behold the threaden sails,
<sup>1</sup>Blown with th' invisible and creeping wind,
 Draw the huge bottoms through the furrow'd sea,
 Breasting the lofty surge. O! do but think,
 You stand upon the <sup>2</sup>rivage, and behold
 A city on th' inconstant billows dancing;
 For so appears this fleet majestic,
 Holding due course to Harfleur. Follow, follow!
 Grapple your minds to sterneage of this <sup>3</sup>navy;
 And leave your England, as dead midnight still,
 Guarded with grandsires, babies, and old women,
 Either past, or not arriv'd to, pith and puissance:
 For who is he, whose chin is but enrich'd
 With one appearing hair, that will not follow
 These cull'd and choice-drawn cavaliers to France?
 Work, work your thoughts, and therein see a siege:
 Behold the ordnance on their carriages,
 With fatal mouths gaping on girded Harfleur.
 Suppose, th' ambassador from the French comes back;
 Tells Harry that the king doth offer him
 Katharine his daughter; and with her, to dowry,
 Some petty and unprofitable dukedoms.
 The offer likes not; and the nimble gunner
 With <sup>4</sup>linstock now the devilish cannon touches, [Alarm; and <sup>5</sup>Chambers go off.
 And down goes all before them. Still be kind,
 And eke out our performance with your mind. [Exit.

SCENE I.—France. Before Harfleur.

Alarums. Enter King HENRY, EXETER, BEDFORD, GLOSTER, and Soldiers, with Scaling Ladders.

K. Hen. Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more;
 Or close the wall up with our English dead!
 In peace, there's nothing so becomes a man,
 As modest stillness, and humility;
 But when the blast of war blows in our ears,
 Then imitate the action of the tiger:
 Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood,
 Disguise fair nature with hard-favor'd rage:
 Then lend the eye a terrible aspect;
 Let it pry through the <sup>6</sup>portage of the head,
 Like the brass cannon; let the brow o'erwhelm it,
 As fearfully, as doth a galled rock
 O'erhang and jutty his <sup>7</sup>confounded base,
 Swill'd with the wild and wasteful ocean.
 Now set the teeth, and stretch the nostril wide;
 Hold hard the breath, and bend up every spirit
 To his full height!—On, on, you noblest English!
 Whose blood is <sup>8</sup>fet from fathers of war-proof,
 Fathers, that, like so many Alexanders,
 Have in these parts from morn till even fought,
 And sleath'd their swords for lack of argument.
 Dishonor not your mothers: now attest,
 That those whom you call'd fathers did beget you.
 Be copy now to men of grosser blood,
 And teach them how to war.—And you, good yeomen,
 Whose limbs were made in England, show us here
 The mettle of your pasture: let us swear
 That you are worth your breeding; which I doubt not,
 For there is none of you so mean and base,
 That hath not noble lustre in your eyes.
 I see you stand like greyhounds in the <sup>9</sup>k slips,
 Straining upon the start. The game's afoot:
 Follow your spirit; and upon this charge,

Cry—God for Harry! England! and Saint George!
 [Exeunt. Alarm, and Chambers go off.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Forces pass over; then enter NYM, BARDOLPH, PISTOL, and Boy.

Bard. On, on, on, on, on! to the breach, to the breach!

Nym. Pray thee, corporal, stay: the knoecks are too hot; and for mine own part, I have not a <sup>1</sup>case of lives: the humor of it is too hot, that is the very plain-song of it. [abound;

Pist. The plain song is most just, for humors do

Knocks go and come,

<sup>2</sup>To all and some

God's vassals <sup>3</sup>feel the same;

And sword and shield,

In bloody field,

Do win immortal fame.

Boy. Would I were in an alchouse in London! I would give all my fame for a pot of ale, and safety.

Pist. And I:

If wishes would prevail with me,

My purpose should not fail with me,

But thither would I <sup>4</sup>now.

Boy. <sup>5</sup>And as duly,

But not as truly,

As bird doth sing on bough.

Enter FLUELLEN.

Flu. Up to the preach, you dogs! avaunt, you cullions! [Driving them forward.

Pist. Be merciful, great duke, to men of <sup>6</sup>mould!

Abate thy rage, abate thy manly rage;

Abate thy rage, great duke! [chuck!

Good <sup>7</sup>bawcock, bate thy rage; use lenity, sweet

Nym. These be good humors!—your honor wins bad humors.

[FLUELLEN drives out NYM, PISTOL, and BARDOLPH.

Boy. As young as I am, I have observed these three swashers. I am boy to them all three, but all they three, though they would serve me, could not be man to me; for, indeed, three such antics do not amount to a man. For Bardolph, he is white-livered, and red-faced; by the means whereof, 'a faces it out, but fights not. For Pistol, he hath a killing tongue, and a quiet sword; by the means whereof 'a breaks words, and keeps whole weapons. For Nym, he hath heard, that men of few words are the <sup>8</sup>best men; and therefore he scorns to say his prayers, lest 'a should be thought a coward: but his few bad words are match'd with as few good deeds; for 'a never broke any man's head but his own, and that was against a post when he was drunk. They will steal anything, and call it <sup>9</sup>purchase. Bardolph stole a lute-case; bore it twelve leagues, and sold it for three halfpence. Nym and Bardolph are sworn brothers in filching, and in Calais they stole a fire-shovel: I knew by that piece of service the men would carry <sup>10</sup>coals. They would have me as familiar with men's pockets, as their gloves or their handkerchiefs; which makes much against my manhood, if I should take from another's pocket, to put into mine, for it is plain pocketing up of wrongs. I must leave them, and seek some better service: their villainy goes against my weak stomach, and therefore I must cast it up. [Exit.]

Re-enter FLUELLEN, GOWER following.

Gow. Captain Fluellen, you must come presently to the mines: the duke of Gloster would speak with you.

Flu. To the mines? tell you the duke, it is not so good to come to the mines; for, look you, the mines is not according to the disciplines of the war: the concavities of it is not sufficient; for, look you, th' athversary (you may discuss unto the duke, look you) is digged himself four yards under the countermine. By Cheshu, I think, 'a will plow up all, if there is not better directions.

Gow. The duke of Gloster, to whom the order of the siege is given, is altogether directed by an Irishman; a very valiant gentleman, i' faith.

Flu. It is captain Macmorris, is it not?

Gow. I think it be.

Flu. By Cheshu, he is an ass, as in the world. I will verify as much in his peard: he has no more directions in the true disciplines of the wars, look you, of the Roman disciplines, than is a puppy-dog.

Enter MACMORRIS and JAMY, at a distance.

Gow. Here 'a come; and the Scots captain, captain Jamy, with him.

Flu. Captain Jamy is a marvellous valorous gentleman, that is certain; and of great expedition, and knowledge in the ancient wars, upon my particular knowledge of his directions: by Cheshu, he will maintain his argument as well as any military man in the world, in the disciplines of the pristine wars of the Romans.

Jamy. I say, gude day, captain Fluellen.

Flu. God-den to your worship, goot captain James.

Gow. How now, Captain Macmorris! have you quit the mines? have the pioneers given o'er?

Mac. By Chrish la, tish ill done: the work ish give over, the trumpet sound the retreat. By my hand, I swear, and my father's soul, the work ish ill done; it ish give over: I would have blowed up the town, so Chrish save me, la, in an hour. O! tish ill done, tish ill done; by my hand, tish ill done.

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I peseech you now will you vouchsafe me, look you, a few disputations with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the wars, the Roman wars, in the way of argument, look you, and friendly communication; partly, to satisfy my opinion, and partly, for the satisfaction, look you, of my mind, as touching the direction of the military discipline: that is the point.

Jamy. It sall be very gude, gude feith, gude captains bath: and I sall quit you with gude leve, as I may pick occasion; that sall I, marry.

Mac. It is no time to discourse, so Chrish save me. The day is hot, and the weather, and the wars, and the king, and the dukes; it is no time to discourse. The town is beseeched, and the trumpet calls us to the breach, and we talk, and, by Chrish, do nothing: 'tis shame for us all; so God sa' me, 'tis shame to stand still; it is shame, by my hand: and there is throats to be cut, and works to be done, and there ish nothing done, so Chrish sa' me, la.

Jamy. By the mess, ere these eyes of mine take themselves to slumber, aile do gude service, or aile lig i' the grund for it; ay, or go to death; and aile pay it as valorously as I may, that sall I surely do, that is the bief and the long. Marry, I wad full fain heard some question 'tween you tway.

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I think, look you, under your correction, there is not many of your nation—

Mac. Of my nation! What ish my nation? ish a villain, and a bastard, and a knave, and a rascal? What ish my nation? Who talks of my nation?

Flu. Look you, if you take the matter otherwise than is meant, captain Macmorris, peradventure, I shall think you do not use me with that affability as in discretion you ought to use me, look you; being as goot a man as yourself, both in the disciplines of wars, and in the derivation of my birth, and in other particularities.

Mac. I do not know you so good a man as myself: so Chrish sa' me, I will cut off your head.

Gow. Gentlemen both, you will mistake each other.

Jamy. An! that's a foul fault. [A Parley sounded.]

Gow. The town sounds a parley.

Flu. Captain Macmorris, when there is more better opportunity to be required, look you, I will be so bold as to tell you, I know the disciplines of wars; and there is an end. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. Before the Gates of Harfleur.

Enter King HENRY, his Train and Forces. The Governor and some Citizens on the Walls.

K. Hen. How yet resolves the governor of the town? This is the latest parley we will admit:

Therefore, to our best mercy give yourselves,

Or, like to men proud of destruction,

Defy us to our worst; for, as I am a soldier,

A name that in my thoughts becomes me best,

If I begin the battery once again,

I will not leave the half-achieved Harfleur,

Till in her ashes she lie buried.

The gates of mercy shall be all shut up;

And the flesh'd soldier, rough and hard of heart,

In liberty of bloody hand shall range

With conscience wide as hell, moving like grass

Your fresh fair virgins, and your flowering infants.

What is it then to me, if impious war,

Array'd in flames like to the prince of fiends,

Do, with his smirch'd complexion, all <sup>b</sup> fell feats

Enlink'd to waste and desolation?

What is't to me, when you yourselves are cause,

If your pure maidens fall into the hand

Of hot and forcing violation?

What rein can hold licentious wickedness,

When down the hill he holds his fierce career?

We may as bootless spend our vain command

Upon th' enraged soldiers in their spoil,

As send precepts to the Leviathan

To come ashore. Therefore, you men of Harfleur,

Take pity of your town, and of your people,

Whiles yet my soldiers are in my command;

Whiles yet the cool and temperate wind of grace

O'erblows the filthy and contagious clouds

Of heady murder, spoil, and villainy.

If not, why, in a moment look to see

The blind and bloody soldier with foul hand

Defile the locks of your shrill-shrieking daughters;

Your fathers taken by the silver beards,

And their most reverend heads dash'd to the walls;

Your naked infants spitted upon pikes,

Whiles the mad mothers with their howls confus'd

Do break the clouds, as did the wives of Jewry

At Herod's bloody-hunting slaughtermen.

What say you? will you yield, and this avoid,

Or, guilty in defence, be thus destroy'd?

Gow. Our expectation hath this day an end.

The Dauphin, whom of succor we entreated,

Returns us that his powers are not yet ready

To raise so great a siege. Therefore, great king, * Requite; answer.

<sup>b</sup> Cruel; savage.—“O'erblows,” i. e., drives off.

We yield our town and lives to thy soft mercy.
Enter our gates; dispose of us, and ours,
For we no longer are defensible.

K. Hen. Open your gates!—Come, uncle Exeter,
Go you and enter Harfleur; there remain,

<sup>1</sup> [Gates opened.]

And fortify it strongly 'gainst the French;
Use mercy to them all. For us, dear uncle,
The winter coming on, and sickness growing
Upon our soldiers, we will retire to Calais.
To-night in Harfleur will be your guest;
To-morrow for the march are we 'address.

[Flourish. The KING, &c. enter the TOWN.

SCENE IV.—Rouen. A Room in the Palace.

Enter KATHARINE and ALICE.

Kath. Alice, tu as esté en Angleterre, et tu parles bien le langage.

Alice. Un peu, madame.

Kath. Je te prie, m'enseigne; il faut que j'apprenne à parler. Comment appelez vous la main, en Anglois?

Alice. La main? elle est appelée, de hand.

Kath. De hand. Et les doigts?

Alice. Les doigts? ma foy, je oublie les doigts; mais je me souviendrai. Les doigts? je pense, qu'ils sont appelé de fingres; ouy, de fingres.

Kath. La main, de hand; les doigts, de fingres.
Je pense, que je suis le bon escolier. J'ay gagné deux mots d'Anglois vistement. Comment appelez vous les ongles?

Alice. Les ongles? les appellons, de nails.

Kath. De nails. Ecoutez; dites moi, si je parle bien: de hand, de fingres, de nails.

Alice. C'est bien dit, madame; il est fort bon Anglois.

Kath. Dites moi l'Anglois pour le bras.

Alice. De arm, madame.

Kath. Et le coude.

Alice. De elbow.

Kath. De elbow. Je m'en suisz la répétition de tous les mots, que vous m'avez appris d's à présent.

Alice. Il est trop difficile, madame, comme je pense.

Kath. Excusez moi, Alice; écoutez: de hand, de fingre, de nails, de arm, de bilbow.

Alice. De elbow, madame.

Kath. O Seigneur Dieu! je m'en oublie; de elbow. Comment appelez vous le col?

Alice. De nick, madame.

Kath. De nick: Et le menton?

Alice. De chin.

Kath. De sin. Le col, de nick: le menton, de sin.

Alice. Ouy. Sauf vostre honneur; en vérité, vous prononcez les mots aussi droit que les natifs d'Angleterre.

Kath. Je ne doute point d'apprendre par la grace de Dieu, et en peu de temps.

Alice. N'avez vous pas déjà oublié ce que je vous ay enseigné?

Kath. Non, je réciterai à vous promptement. De hand, de fingre, de nails,—

Alice. De nails, madame.

Kath. De nails, de arme, de ilbow.

Alice. Sauf vostre honneur, de elbow.

Kath. Ainsi d's je; de elbow, de nick, et de sin:
Comment appelez vous le pied et la robe?

Alice. De foot, madame; et de con.

Kath. De foot, et de con? O Seigneur Dieu! ces sont mots de son nauvais, corruptible, grosse, et impudique, et non pour les dames d'honneur d'user.

Je ne voudrais prononcer ces mots devant les seigneurs de France, pour tout le monde. Il faut de foot, et de con, néanmoins. Je réciterai une autre fois ma leçon ensemble: de hand, de fingre, de nails, de arm, de elbow, de nick, de sin, de foot, de con.

Alice. Excellent, madame!

Kath. C'est assez pour une fois: allons nous à dîner. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The Same. Another Room in the Same.

Enter the French KING, the Dauphin, Duke of Bourbon, the Constable of France, and others.

Fr. King. 'Tis certain, he hath pass'd the river Somme.

Con. And if he be not fought withal, my lord,
Let us not live in France: let us quit all,
And give our vineyards to a barbarous people.

Dau. O Dieu vivant! Shall a few sprays of us,
The emptying of our father's<sup>b</sup> luxury,
Our scions, put in wild and savage stock,
Spirt up so suddenly into the clouds,
And overlook their grafters?

[Bastards.]

Bour. Normans, but bastard Normans, Norman
Mort de ma vie! if they march along
Unfought withal, but I will sell my dukedom,
To buy a<sup>c</sup> shlobbery and a ditty farm
In that<sup>d</sup> nook-shotten isle of Albion.

[mettle?]

Con. Dieu de batailles! where have they this
Is not their climate foggy, raw, and dull,

On whom, as in despite, the sun looks pale,
Killing their fruit with frowns? Can sodden water,
A drench for<sup>e</sup> sur-rein'd jades, their barley broth,
Deceit their cold blood to such valiant heat?

And shall our quick blood, spirited with wine,
Seem frosty? O! for honor of our land,
Let us not hang like roping icicles
Upon our houses' thatch, whiles a more frosty people
Sweat drops of gallant youth in our rich fields,
Poor we may call them, in their native lords.

Dau. By faith and honor,

Our madams mock at us, and plainly say,
Our mettle is bred out; and they will give
Their bodies to the lust of English youth,
To new-store France with bastard warriors.

Bour. They bid us to the English dancing-schools,
And teach<sup>f</sup> lavoltas high, and swift<sup>g</sup> corantos;
Saying, our grace is only in our heels,
And that we are most lofty runaways.

Fr. King. Where is Montjoy, the herald? speed him hence:

Let him greet England with our sharp defiance.—
Up, princes! and, with spirit of honor, edg'd
More sharper than your swords, hie to the field.
Charles De-la-bret, high constable of France;
Yon dukes of Orleans, Bourbon, and of Berry,
Alençon, Brabant, Bar, and Burgundy;
Jacques Chatillon, Rambures, Vandemont,
Beaumont, Grandpré, Roussi, and Fauconberg,
Foix, Lestrale, Bouciqualt, and Charolois,
High dukes, great princes, barons, lords, and knights,
For your great<sup>h</sup> states, now quit you of great shames.
Bar Harry England, that sweeps through our land
With<sup>i</sup> pennons painted in the blood of Harfleur:
Rush on his host, as doth the melted snow
Upon the valleys, whose low vassal seat
The Alps doth spit and void his rheum upon.
Go, down upon him,—you have power enough,—
And in a captive chariot into Rouen

<sup>b</sup> Lust.—<sup>c</sup> Wet; moist.—<sup>d</sup> A "nook-shotten isle" is an island shooting out into promontories.—<sup>e</sup> "Sur-rein'd," i. e., overridden.—<sup>f</sup> The tarolta (Fr. la volte) was an old sprightly dance.—<sup>g</sup> Dances.—<sup>h</sup> Flags; streamers.

Bring him our prisoner.

Con. This becomes the great.
Sorry am I, his numbers are so few,
His soldiers sick, and furnish'd in their march,
For, I am sure, when he shall see our army,
He'll drop his heart into the sink of fear,
And for 'achievement offer us his ransom.

Fr. King. Therefore, lord constable, haste on Montjoy;

And let him say to England, that we send
To know what willing ransom he will give.—
Prince Dauphin, you shall stay with us in Rouen.

Dau. Not so, I do beseech your majesty. [us.—

Fr. King. Be patient, for you shall remain with Now, forth, lord constable, and princes all,
And quickly bring us word of England's fall.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—The English Camp in Picardy.

Enter GOWER and FLUELLEN.

Gow. How now, captain Fluellen? come you from the bridge?

Flu. I assure you, there is very excellent services committed at the bridge.

Gow. Is the duke of Exeter safe?

Flu. The duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Agamemnon; and a man that I love and honor with my soul, and my heart, and my duty, and my life, and my living, and my uttermost power: he is not (God be praised, and plessed!) any hurt in the world; but keeps the bridge most valiantly, with excellent discipline. There is an ancient, lieutenant, there, at the bridge,—I think, in my very conscience, he is as valiant a man as Mark Antony, and he is a man of no estimation in the world; but I did see him do as gallant service.

Gow. What do you call him?

Flu. He is called ancient Pistol.

Gow. I know him not.

Enter PISTOL.

Flu. Here is the man.

Pist. Captain, I thee beseech to do me favors:
The duke of Exeter doth love thee well.

Flu. Ay, I praise Got; and I have merited some love at his hands.

Pist. Bardolph, a soldier firm and sound of heart,
And buxom valor, hath, by cruel fate
And giddy fortune's furious fickle wheel,
That goddess blind,
That stands upon the rolling restless stone,—

Flu. By your patience, ancient Pistol. Fortune is painted blind, with a <sup>b</sup>muffler afore her eyes, to signify to you that fortune is blind; and she is painted also with a wheel, to signify to you, which is the moral of it, that she is turning, and inconstant, and mutability, and variation: and her foot, look you, is fixed upon a spherical stone, which rolls, and rolls, and rolls. In good truth, the poet makes a most excellent description of it: fortune is an excellent moral. [him;

Pist. Fortune is Bardolph's foe, and frowns on
For he hath stol'n a <sup>c</sup>pax, and hanged must 'a be.
A damned death!

Let gallows gape for dog, let man go free,
And let not hemph his wine-pipe suffocate.
But Exeter hath given the doom of death,

For <sup>pax</sup> of little price:

Therefore, go speak, the duke will hear thy voice,
And let not Bardolph's vital thread be cut
With edge of penny cord, and vile reproach:
Speak, captain, for his life, and I will thee requite.

Flu. Ancient Pistol, I do partly understand your meaning.

Pist. Why then, rejoice therefore.

Flu. Certainly, ancient, it is not a thing to rejoice at; for if, look you, he were my brother, I would desire the duke to use his good pleasure, and put him to execution, for discipline ought to be used. [friendship

Pist. Die and be damn'd; and <sup>d</sup>fico for thy

Flu. It is well.

[Exit PISTOL, <sup>2</sup>making the sign.

Flu. Very good.

Gow. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit rascal: I remember him now; a bawd; a cutpurse.

Flu. I'll assure you, 'a utter'd as prave words at the pridge, as you shall see in a summer's day.
But it is very well, what he has spoke to me; that is well, I warrant you, when time is serve.

Gow. Why, 'tis a gull, a fool, a rogue; that now and then goes to the wars, to grace himself at his return into London under the form of a soldier.
And such fellows are perfect in the great commanders' names, and they will learn you by rote where services were done;—at such and such a <sup>f</sup>sconce, at such a breach, at such a convey; who came off bravely, who was shot, who disgraced, what terms the enemy stood on: and this they con perfectly in the phrase of war, which they trick up with <sup>2</sup>new coined oaths: and what a beard of the general's <sup>3</sup>cut, and a horrid suit of the camp, will do among foaming bottles, and ale-washed wits, is wonderful to be thought on. But you must learn to know such slanders of the age, or else you may be marvellously mistook.

Flu. I tell you what, captain Gower; I do perceive, he is not the man that he would gladly make show to the world he is: if I find a hole in his coat,
I will tell him my mind. [Drum heard.] Hark you, the king is coming, and I must speak with him from the pridge.

Enter King HENRY, GLOSTER, and Soldiers <sup>4</sup>sick and tattered.

Flu. Got pless your majesty!

K. Hen. How now, Fluellen? cam'st thou from the bridge?

Flu. Ay, so please your majesty. The duke of Exeter has very gallantly maintained the pridge:
the French is gone off, look you, and there is gallant and most prave passages. Marry, th' adversary was have possession of the pridge, but he is enforced to retire, and the duke of Exeter is master of the pridge. I can tell your majesty, the duke is a prave man.

K. Hen. What men have you lost, Fluellen?

Flu. The perdition of th' adversary hath been very great, reasonably great: marry, for my part, I think the duke hath lost never a man, but one that is like to be executed for robbing a church; one Bardolph, if your majesty know the man: his face is all <sup>b</sup>bubukles, and <sup>c</sup>whelks, and <sup>k</sup>knobs, and flames of fire; and his lips plows at his nose, and it is like a coal of fire, sometimes plue, and sometimes red; but his nose is executed, and his fire's out.

<sup>a</sup> "For achievement," i. e., instead of achieving a victory over us.—<sup>b</sup> A muffer was a fold of linen for concealing the face of a woman.—<sup>c</sup> The pax was a little image of Christ, or a metallic plate with a crucifix engraved on it, which the people used to kiss after the service, the ceremony being considered the kiss of peace.

K. Hen. We would have all such offenders so cut off: and we give express charge, that in our marches through the country, there be nothing compelled from the villages, nothing taken but paid for; none of the French upbraided, or abused in disdainful language, for when lenity and cruelty play for a kingdom, the gentler gamester is the soonest winner.

Tucket. Enter MONTJOY.

Mont. You know me by my <sup>a</sup> habit.

K. Hen. Well then, I know thee: what shall I
Mont. My master's mind. [know of thee?

K. Hen. Unfold it.

Mont. Thus says my king:—Say thou to Harry of England, Though we seemed dead, we did but sleep; advantage is a better soldier than rashness. Tell him, we could have rebuked him at Harfleur; but that we thought not good to bruise an injury, till it were full ripe: now we speak upon our <sup>b</sup> cue, and our voice is imperial. England shall repent his folly, see his weakness, and admire our sufferance. Bid him, therefore, consider of his ransom; which must proportion the losses we have borne, the subjects we have lost, the disgrace we have digested; which, in weight to re-answer, his pettiness would bow under. For our losses, his exchequer is too poor; for the effusion of our blood, the muster of his kingdom too faint a number; and for our disgrace, his own person, kneeling at our feet, but a weak and worthless satisfaction. To this add defiance; and tell him, for conclusion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose condemnation is pronounced. So far my king and master: so much my office.

K. Hen. What is thy name? I know thy quality.

Mont. Montjoy. [back,

K. Hen. Thou dost thy office fairly. Turn thee And tell thy king,—I do not seek him now, But could be willing to march on to Calais Without impeachment; for, to say the sooth, Though 'tis no wisdom to confess so much Unto an enemy of craft and vantage, My people are with sickness much enfeebled; My numbers lessen'd, and those few I have, Almost no better than so many French: Who, when they were in health, I tell thee, herald, I thought upon one pair of English legs Did march three Frenchmen.—Yet, forgive me, God, That I do brag thus!—this your air of France Hath blown that vice in me: I must repent. Go, therefore, tell thy master, here I am: My ransom is this frail and worthless trunk, My army but a weak and sickly guard; Yet, God before, tell him we will come on, Though France himself, and such another neighbor, Stand in our way. There's for thy labor, Montjoy.

Go, bid thy master well advise himself: If we may pass, we will; if we be hinder'd, We shall your tawny ground with your red blood Discolor: and so, Montjoy, fare you well. The sum of all our answer is but this: We would not seek a battle, as we are, Nor, as we are, we say, we will not shun it: So tell your master.

Mont. I shall deliver so. Thanks to your highness. [Exit MONTJOY.

Glo. I hope they will not come upon us now.

K. Hen. We are in God's hand, brother, not in theirs.

March to the bridge; it now draws toward night. Beyond the river we'll encamp ourselves, And on to-morrow bid them march away. [Exit.

SCENE VII.—The French Camp, near Agincourt.

Enter the Constable of France, the Lord RAMBURES, the Duke of ORLEANS, the Dauphin, and others.

Con. Tut! I have the best armor of the world. Would it were day!

Orl. You have an excellent armor; but let my horse have his due.

Con. It is the best horse of Europe.

Orl. Will it never be morning?

Dau. My lord of Orleans, and my lord high constable, you talk of horse and armor—

Orl. You are as well provided of both as any prince in the world.

Dau. What a long night is this!—I will not change my horse with any that treads but on four pasterns. Ca, ha! He bounds from the earth, as if his entrails were <sup>2</sup> air; le cheval volant, the Pegasus, qui a les narines de feu! When I bestride him, I soar, I am a hawk: he trots the air; the ear sings when he touches it: the basest horn of his hoof is more musical than the pipe of Hermes.

Orl. He's of the color of the nutmeg.

Dau. And of the heat of the ginger. It is a beast for Perseus: he is pure air and fire, and the dull elements of earth and water never appear in him; but only in patient stillness, while his rider mounts him: he is, indeed, a horse; and all other jades you may call beasts.

Con. Indeed, my lord, it is a most absolute and excellent horse.

Dau. It is the prince of palfreys: his neigh is like the bidding of a monarch, and his countenance enforces homage.

Orl. No more, cousin.

Dau. Nay, the man hath no wit, that cannot, from the rising of the lark to the lodging of the lamb, vary deserved praise on my palfrey: it is a theme as fluent as the sea; turn the sands into eloquent tongues, and my horse is argument for them all. 'Tis a subject for a sovereign to reason on, and for a sovereign's sovereign to ride on; and for the world (familiar to us, and unknown) to lay apart their particular functions, and wonder at him. I once writ a sonnet in his praise, and began thus: "Wonder of Nature!"—

Orl. I have heard a sonnet begin so to one's mistress.

Dau. Then did they imitate that which I compos'd to my courser; for my horse is my mistress.

Orl. Your mistress bears well.

Dau. Me well; which is the prescript praise, and perfection of a good and particular mistress.

Con. Nay, for methought yesterday, your mistress shrewdly shook your back.

Dau. So, perhaps, did yours.

Con. Mine was not bridled.

Dau. Oh! then, belike, she was old and gentle; and you rode, like a <sup>3</sup> kern of Ireland, your French horse off, and in your strait trowsers.

Con. You have good judgment in horsemanship.

Dau. Be warned by me, then: they that ride so, and ride not warily, fall into foul bogs. I had rather have my horse to my mistress.

Con. I had as lief have my mistress a jade.

Dau. I tell thee, constable, my mistress wears his own hair.

Con. I could make as true a boast as that, if I had a sow to my mistress.

Dau. Le chien est retourné à son propre vomissement, et la truie lavée aubourbier: thou makest use of anything.

Con. Yet do I not use my horse for my mistress; or any such proverb, so little kin to the purpose.

Ram. My lord constable, the armor, that I saw in your tent to-night, are those stars, or suns, upon it?

Con. Stars, my lord.

Dau. Some of them will fall to-morrow, I hope.

Con. And yet my sky shall not want.

Dau. That may be; for you bear a many superfluous, and 'twere more honor some were away.

Con. Even as your horse bears your praises; who would trot as well, were some of your brags dismounted.

Dau. Would, I were able to load him with his desert! Will it never be day? I will trot to-morrow a mile, and my way shall be paved with English faces.

Con. I will not say so, for fear I should be faced out of my way; but I would it were morning, for I would fain be about the ears of the English.

Ram. Who will go to hazard with me for twenty prisoners?

Con. You must first go yourself to hazard, ere you have them.

Dau. 'Tis midnight: I'll go arm myself. [Exit.]

Orl. The Dauphin longs for morning.

Ram. He longs to eat the English.

Con. I think he will eat all he kills.

Orl. By the white hand of my lady, he's a gallant prince.

Con. Swear by her foot, that she may tread out the oath.

Orl. He is simply the most active gentleman of France.

Con. Doing is activity, and he will still be doing.

Orl. He never did harm, that I heard of.

Con. Nor will do none to-morrow: he will keep that good name still.

Orl. I know him to be valiant.

Con. I was told that, by one that knows him better than you.

Orl. What's he?

Con. Marry, he told me so himself; and he said, he cared not who knew it.

Orl. He needs not; it is no hidden virtue in him.

Con. By my faith, sir, but it is; never any body saw it, but his luckey: 'tis a hooded valor, and when it appears it will 'bate.

Orl. Ill will never said well.

Con. I will cap that proverb with—there is flattery in friendship.

Orl. And I will take up that with—give the devil his due.

Con. Well placed: there stands your friend for the devil: have at the very eye of that proverb, with—a pox of the devil.

Orl. You are the better at proverbs, by how much—a fool's bolt is soon shot.

Con. You have shot over.

Orl. 'Tis not the first time you were overshot.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord high constable, the English lie within fifteen hundred paces of your tents.

Con. Who hath measured the ground?

Mess. The lord Grandpré.

Con. A valiant and most expert gentleman.—Would it were day!—Alas, poor Harry of England!—he longs not for the dawning, as we do.

Orl. What a wretched and <sup>b</sup>peevish fellow is this king of England, to mope with his fat-brained followers so far out of his knowledge.

Con. If the English had any apprehension, they would run away.

Orl. That they lack; for if their heads had any intellectual armor, they could never wear such heavy head-pieces.

Ram. That island of England breeds very valiant creatures: their mastiffs are of unmatchable courage.

Orl. Foolish curs! that run winking into the mouth of a Russian bear, and have their heads crushed like rotten apples. You may as well say, that's a valiant flea, that dare eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion.

Con. Just, just; and the men do sympathize with the mastiffs in robustious and rough coming on, leaving their wits with their wives: and, then, give them great meals of beef, and iron and steel, they will eat like wolves, and fight like devils.

Orl. Ay, but these English are shrewdly out of beef.

Con. Then shall we find to-morrow they have only stomachs to eat, and none to fight. Now is it time to arm: come, shall we about it? [Ten.]

Orl. It is now two o'clock: but, let me see; by We shall have each a hundred Englishmen.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

Enter CHORUS.

Chor. Now entertain conjecture of a time,
When creeping murmur, and the poring dark,
Fills the wide vessel of the universe.
From camp to camp, through the foul womb of night,
The hum of either army <sup>c</sup>stilly sounds,
That the fix'd sentinels almost receive
The secret whispers of each other's watch:
Fire answers fire, and through their paly flames
Each battle sees the other's <sup>d</sup>umber'd face:
Steed threatens steed, in high and boastful neighs
Piercing the night's dull ear; and from the tents,
The armorers, accomplishing the knights,
With busy hammers closing rivets up,
Give dreadful note of preparation.
The country cocks do crow, the clocks do toll,
And the third hour of drowsy <sup>e</sup>morning's nam'd.
Proud of their numbers, and secure in soul,
The confident and <sup>e</sup>over-lusty French
Do the low-rated English play at dice;
And chide the cripple, tardy-gaited night,
Who, like a foul and ugly witch, doth limp
So tediously away. The poor condemned English,
Like sacrifices, by their watchful fires
Sit patiently, and inly ruminate
The morning's danger; and their gesture sad,
Investing lank-lean cheeks, and war-worn coats,
Presenteth them unto the gazing moon
So many horrid ghosts. O! now, who will behold
The royal captain of this ruin'd band,
Walking from watch to watch, from tent to tent,
Let him cry—Praise and glory on his head!
For forth he goes, and visits all his host,
Bids them good-morrow with a modest smile,
And calls them brothers, friends, and countrymen.

* Fall off; lessen.

Upon his royal face there is no note,
How dread an army hath enrounded him,
Nor doth he dedicate one jot of color
Unto the weary and all-watchèd night;
But freshly looks, and over-bears<sup>a</sup> attain't,
With cheerful semblance, and sweet majesty;
That every wretch, pining and pale before,
Beholding him, plucks comfort from his looks.
A largess universal, like the sun,
His liberal eye doth give to every one,
Thawing cold fear, that mean and gentle all,
Behold, as may unworthiness define,
A little touch of Harry in the night.
And so our scene must to the battle fly;
Where, O for pity! we shall much disgrace—
With four or five most vile and ragged foils,
Right ill dispos'd, in brawl ridiculous,—
The name of Agincourt. Yet, sit and see;
<sup>b</sup>Minding true things by what their mockeries be.

[Exit.

SCENE I.—The English Camp at Agincourt.

Enter KING HENRY, BEDFORD, and GLOSTER.

K. Hen. Gloster, 'tis true that we are in great danger;

The greater, therefore, should our courage be.—
Good morrow, brother Bedford.—God Almighty!
There is some soul of goodness in things evil
Would men observingly distil it out,
For our bad neighbor makes us early stirrers,
Which is both healthful, and good husbandry:
Besides, they are our outward consciences,
And preachers to us all; admonishing,
That we should<sup>c</sup> dress us fairly for our end.
Thus may we gather honey from the weed,
And make a moral of the devil himself.

Enter ERPINGHAM.

Good morrow, old sir Thomas Erpingham:
A good soft pillow for that good white head
Were better than a churlish turf of France.

Erp. Not so, my liege: this lodging likes me better,
Since I may say, now lie I like a king. [pains,

K. Hen. 'Tis good for men to love their present
Upon example; so the spirit is eased:
And when the mind is quicken'd, out of doubt,
The organs, though defunct and dead before,
Break up their drowsy grave, and newly move
With casted<sup>d</sup> slough and fresh<sup>e</sup> legerity.
Lend me thy cloak, sir Thomas.—Brothers both,
Commend me to the princes in our camp;
Do my good morrow to them; and, anon,
Desire them all to my pavilion.

Glo. We shall, my liege.

[Exit GLOSTER and BEDFORD.

Erp. Shall I attend your grace?

K. Hen. No, my good knight;
Go with my brothers to my lords of England:
I and my bosom must debate a while,
And, then, I would no other company.

Erp. The Lord in heaven bless thee, noble Harry!

[Exit ERPINGHAM.

K. Hen. God-a-mercy, old heart! thou speak'st cheerfully.

Enter PISTOL.

Pist. Qui va là?

K. Hen. A friend.

Pist. Discuss unto me; art thou officer?

Or art thou base, common, and popular?

K. Hen. I am a gentleman of a company.

Pist. Trail'st thou the puissant pike?

K. Hen. Even so. What are you?

Pist. As good a gentleman as the emperor.

K. Hen. Then you are a better than the king.

Pist. The king's a bawcock, and a heart of gold,
A lad of life, an' imp of fame;

Of parents good, of fist most valiant:

I kiss his dirty shoe, and from heart-string

I love the lovely bully. What's thy name?

K. Hen. Harry le Roy. [ish crew?

Pist. Le Roy! a Cornish name: art thou of Corn-

K. Hen. No, I am a Welshman.

Pist. Know'st thou Fluellen?

K. Hen. Yes.

Pist. Tell him, I'll knock his leek about his pate,
Upon Saint David's day.

K. Hen. Do not you wear your dagger in your cap that day, lest he knock that about yours.

Pist. Art thou his friend?

K. Hen. And his kinsman too.

Pist. The<sup>h</sup> fico for thee then!

K. Hen. I thank you. God be with you!

Pist. My name is Pistol called. [Exit.

K. Hen. It<sup>i</sup> sorts well with your fierceness.

Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER, severally.

Gow. Captain Fluellen!

Flu. So, in the name of Cheshu Christ, speak lower. It is the greatest admiration in the universal world, when the true and ancient prerogatives and laws of the wars is not kept. If you would take the pains but to examine the wars of Pompey the Great, you shall find, I warrant you, that there is no tiddle taddle, or pibble pabble, in Pompey's camp:
I warrant you, you shall find the ceremonies of the wars, and the cares of it, and the forms of it, and the sobriety of it, and the modesty of it, to be otherwise.

Gow. Why, the enemy is loud; you hear him all night.

Flu. If the enemy is an ass and a fool, and a prating coxcomb, is it meet, think you, that we should also, look you, be an ass, and a fool, and a prating coxcomb? in your own conscience now?

Gow. I will speak lower.

Flu. I pray you, and beseech you, that you will.

[Exit GOWER and FLUELLEN.

K. Hen. Though it appear a little out of fashion,
There is much care and valor in this Welshman.

<sup>1</sup> Enter JOHN BATES, ALEXANDER COURT, and MICHAEL WILLIAMS.

Court. Brother John Bates, is not that the morning which breaks yonder?

Bates. I think it be; but we have no great cause to desire the approach of day.

Will. We see yonder the beginning of the day, but I think we shall never see the end of it.—Who goes there?

K. Hen. A friend.

Will. Under what captain serve you?

K. Hen. Under sir Thomas Erpingham.

Will. A good old commander, and a most kind gentleman. I pray you, what thinks he of our estate?

K. Hen. Even as men wrecked upon a sand, that look to be washed off the next tide.

Bates. He hath not told his thought to the king?

K. Hen. No; nor it is not meet he should; for, though I speak it to you, I think the king is but a

<sup>a</sup> Weariness.—<sup>b</sup> "Minding," i. e., calling to remembrance.
—<sup>c</sup> Prepare; make ready.—<sup>d</sup> Slough is the skin which ser-

man, as I am: the violet smells to him, as it doth to me; the element shows to him, as it doth to me; all his senses have but human<sup>a</sup> conditions: his ceremonies laid by, in his nakedness he appears but a man, and though his affections are higher mounted than ours, yet, when they stoop, they stoop with the like wing. Therefore, when he sees reason of fears, as we do, his fears, out of doubt, be of the same relish as ours are: yet in reason no man should possess him with any appearance of fear, lest he, by showing it, should dishearten his army.

Bates. He may show what outward courage he will; but, I believe, as cold a night as 'tis, he could wish himself in Thames up to the neck: and so I would he were, and I by him, at all adventures, so we were quit here.

K. Hen. By my troth, I will speak my conscience of the king: I think, he would not wish himself any where but where he is.

Bates. Then, I would he were here alone; so should he be sure to be ransomed, and a many poor men's lives saved.

K. Hen. I dare say, you love him not so ill, to wish him here alone, howsoever you speak this, to feel other men's minds. Methinks, I could not die any where so contented as in the king's company, his cause being just, and his quarrel honorable.

Will. That's more than we know.

Bates. Ay, or more than we should seek after; for we know enough, if we know we are the king's subjects. If his cause be wrong, our obedience to the king wipes the crime of it out of us.

Will. But, if the cause be not good, the king himself hath a heavy reckoning to make: when all those legs, and arms, and heads, chopped off in a battle, shall join together at the latter day, and cry all—"We died at such a place;" some swearing, some crying for a surgeon, some upon their wives left poor behind them, some upon the debts they owe, some upon their children<sup>b</sup> rawly left. I am afraid there are few die well, that die in a battle; for how can they charitably dispose of any thing, when blood is their argument? Now, if these men do not die well, it will be a black matter for the king that led them to it, whom to disobey were against all proportion of subjection.

K. Hen. So, if a son, that is by his father sent about merchandise, do sinfully miscarry upon the sea, the imputation of his wickedness, by your rule, should be imposed upon his father that sent him: or if a servant, under his master's command, transporting a sum of money, be assailed by robbers, and die in many irreconciled iniquities, you may call the business of the master the author of the servant's damnation. But this is not so: the king is not bound to answer the particular endings of his soldiers, the father of his son, nor the master of his servant; for they purpose not their death, when they purpose their services. Besides, there is no king, be his cause never so spotless, if it come to the arbitrement of swords, can try it out with all unspotted soldiers. Some, peradventure, have on them the guilt of premeditated and contrived murder; some, of beguiling virgins with the broken seals of perjury; some, making the wars their bulwark, that have before gored the gentle bosom of peace with pillage and robbery. Now, if these men have defeated the law, and outrun native<sup>c</sup> punishment, though they can outstrip men, they have no wings to fly from God: war is his beadle: war is his vengeance; so that here men are punished, for before-breach of the king's laws, in now the king's quarrel: where they feared the death, they have borne life away, and where they would be safe, they perish: then, if they die unprovided, no more is the king guilty of their damnation, than he was before guilty of those impieties for the which they are now visited. Every subject's duty is the king's; but every subject's soul is his own. Therefore, should every soldier in the wars do as every sick man in his bed, wash every mote out of his conscience; and dying so, death is to him advantage; or not dying, the time was blessedly lost, wherein such preparation was gained: and, in him that escapes, it were not sin to think, that making God so free an offer, he let him outlive that day to see his greatness, and to teach others how they should prepare.

Will. 'Tis certain, every man that dies ill, the ill upon his own head: the king is not to answer it.

Bates. I do not desire he should answer for me; and yet I determine to fight lustily for him.

K. Hen. I myself heard the king say, he would not be ransomed.

Will. Ay, he said so to make us fight cheerfully; but when our throats are cut, he may be ransomed, and we ne'er the wiser.

K. Hen. If I live to see it, I will never trust his word after.

Will. You<sup>d</sup> pay him then! That's a perilous shot out of an elder gun, that a poor and a private displeasure can do against a monarch. You may as well go about to turn the sun to ice with fanning in his face with a peacock's feather. You'll never trust his word after! come, 'tis a foolish saying.

K. Hen. Your reproof is something too<sup>e</sup> round: I should be angry with you, if the time were convenient.

Will. Let it be a quarrel between us, if you live.

K. Hen. I embrace it.

Will. How shall I know thee again?

K. Hen. Give me any gage of thine, and I will wear it in my bonnet: then, if ever thou dar'st acknowledge it, I will make it my quarrel.

Will. Here's my glove: give me another of thine.

K. Hen. There.

Will. This will I also wear in my cap: if ever thou come to me and say, after to-morrow, "This is my glove," by this hand, I will take thee a box on the ear.

K. Hen. If ever I live to see it, I will challenge it.

Will. Thou dar'st as well be hanged.

K. Hen. Well, I will do it, though I take thee in the king's company.

Will. Keep thy word: fare thee well.

Bates. Be friends, you English fools, be friends: we have French quarrels enow, if you could tell how to reckon.

K. Hen. Indeed, the French may lay twenty French crowns to one they will beat us, for they bear them on their shoulders; but it is no English treason to cut French crowns, and to-morrow the king himself will be a clipper. [Exeunt Soldiers. Upon the king! let us our lives, our souls, Our debts, our careful wives, our children, and Our sins, lay on the king!—we must bear all. O hard condition! twin-born with greatness, Subject to the breath of every fool, Whose sense no more can feel but his own wringing! What infinite heart's ease must kings neglect, That private men enjoy?

<sup>d</sup>"You pay him," i. e., you bring him to account; you punish him.—<sup>e</sup>"Too round," i. e., too rough; too unceremonious.

And what have kings, that privates have not too,
 Save ceremony, save general ceremony?
 And what art thou, thou idol ceremony?
 What kind of god art thou, that suffer'st more
 Of mortal griefs, than do thy worshippers?
 What are thy rents? what are thy comings-in?
 O ceremony, show me but thy worth!
 What is thy soul<sup>1</sup> but adulation?
 Art thou aught else but place, degree, and form?
 Creating awe and fear in other men,
 Wherein thou art less happy, being fear'd,
 Than they in fearing.
 What drink'st thou off, instead of homage sweet,
 But poison'd flattery? O! be sick, great greatness,
 And bid thy ceremony give thee cure.
 Think'st thou, the fiery fever will go out
 With titles blown from adulation?
 Will it give place to flexure and low bending?
 Can'st thou, when thou command'st the beggar's knee,
 Command the health of it? No, thou proud dream,
 That play'st so subtly with a king's repose:
 I am a king, that find thee; and I know,
 'Tis not the balm, the sceptre, and the ball,
 The sword, the mace, the crown imperial,
 The inter-tissued robe of gold and pearl,
 The <sup>a</sup>farced title running 'fore the king,
 The throne he sits on, nor the tide of pomp
 That beats upon the high shore of this world;
 No, not all these, thrice-gorgeous ceremony,
 Not all these laid in bed majestical,
 Can sleep so soundly as the wretched slave,
 Who, with a body fill'd, and vacant mind,
 Gets him to rest, cramm'd with <sup>2</sup>distasteful bread,
 Never sees horrid night, the child of hell,
 But, like a lucky, from the rise to set,
 Sweats in the eye of Phoebus, and all night
 Sleeps in Elysium; next day, after dawn,
 Doth rise and help <sup>b</sup>Hyperion to his horse,
 And follows so the ever running year
 With profitable labor to his grave:
 And, but for ceremony, such a wretch,
 Winding up days with toil, and nights with sleep,
<sup>3</sup>Hath the fore-hand and vantage of a king.
 The slave, a member of the country's peace,
 Enjoys it, but in gross brain little <sup>c</sup>wots,
 What watch the king keeps to maintain the peace,
 Whose hours the peasant best <sup>d</sup>advantages.

Enter ERPINGHAM.

Erp. My lord, your nobles, jealous of your absence,
 Seek through your camp to find you.

K. Hen. Good old knight,
 Collect them all together at my tent:
 I'll be before thee.

Erp. I shall do't, my lord. [Exit.]

K. Hen. O, God of battles! steel my soldiers' hearts:
 Possess them not with fear: take from them now
 The sense of reckoning, if th' opposed numbers
 Pluck their hearts from them!—Not to-day, O Lord!
 O! not to-day, think not upon the fault
 My father made in compassing the crown.
 I Richard's body have interred new,
 And on it have bestow'd more contrite tears,
 Than from it issued forced drops of blood.
 Five hundred poor I have in yearly pay,
 Who twice a day their wither'd hands hold up
 Toward heaven, to pardon blood; and I have built
 Two chantries, where the sad and solemn priests
 Sing still for Richard's soul. More will I do;
 Though all that I can do is nothing worth,

<sup>a</sup> "The farced title running 'fore the king," i. e., 'the tumid, puffy titles with which a king's name is introduced.'—

<sup>b</sup> The sun.—<sup>c</sup> Knows.—<sup>d</sup> "Best advantages," i. e., best reaps the advantage of.

Since that my penitence comes after all,
 Imploring pardon.

Enter GLOSTER.

Glo. My liege!

K. Hen. My brother Gloster's voice?—Ay;
 I know thy errand, I will go with thee.—
 The day, my friends, and all things stay for me.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The French Camp.

Enter Dauphin, ORLEANS, RAMBURES, and others.

Orl. The sun doth gild our armor: up, my lords!
Dau. Montez à cheval!—My horse! valet! lac-quay! ha!

Orl. O brave spirit!

Dau. « Via! — les eaux et la terre!

Orl. Rien puis? l'air et le feu!

Dau. Ciel! Cousin Orleans.

Enter Constable.

Now, my lord Constable! [neigh.]

Con. Hark, how our steeds for present service
Dau. Mount them, and make incision in their hides,
 That their hot blood may spin in English eyes,
 And doubt them with superfluous courage: Ha!

Ram. What, will you have them weep our horses' blood?

How shall we then behold their natural tears?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The English are embattled, you French peers.

Con. To horse, you gallant princes! straight to Do but behold you poor and starved band, [horse!
 And your fair show shall suck away their souls,
 Leaving them but the shales and husks of men.
 There is not work enough for all our hands;
 Scarcely blood enough in all their sickly veins,
 To give each naked curtle-ax a stain,
 That our French gallants shall to-day draw out,
 And sheath for lack of sport: let us but blow on them,
 The vapor of our valor will o'erturn them.
 'Tis positive 'gainst all exceptions, lords,
 That our superfluous lackeys, and our peasants,
 Who in unnecessary action swarm
 About our squares of <sup>4</sup>battles, were <sup>5</sup>enow
 To purge this field of such a <sup>6</sup>hilding foe,
 Though we upon this mountain's basis by
 Took stand for idle speculation:
 But that our honors must not. What's to say?
 A very little little let us do,
 And all is done. Then, let the trumpets sound
 The <sup>7</sup>tucket-sonnance, and the note to mount:
 For our approach shall so much dare the field,
 That England shall couch down in fear, and yield.

Enter GRANDPRE.

Grand. Why do you stay so long, my lords of France?

You! island carrions, desperate of their bones,
 Ill-favor'dly become the morning field:
 Their ragged <sup>1</sup>curtains poorly are let loose,
 And our air shakes them passing scornfully.
 Big Mars seems bankrupt in their beggar'd host,
 And faintly through a rusty beaver peeps.
 The horsemen sit like fixed <sup>2</sup>candlesticks,
 With torch-staves in their <sup>3</sup>hands; and their poor jades
 Lob down their heads, dropping the hides and hips,
 The gum down-roping from their pale-dead eyes,

Away!—<sup>2</sup> Enough.—<sup>3</sup> Mean; despicable.—<sup>4</sup> "The tucket-sonnance," i. e., an introductory flourish.—<sup>5</sup> Colors.—<sup>6</sup> Fix'd candlesticks," i. e., ancient candlesticks in the form of human figures.

And in their pale dull mouths the gimmal<sup>a</sup> bit
Lies, foul with chew'd grass, still and motionless;
And their executors, the knavish crows,
Fly o'er them, all impatient for their hour.
Description cannot suit itself in words,
To demonstrate the life of such a battle,
In life so lifeless as it shows itself. [for death.

Con. They have said their prayers, and they stay

Dau. Shall we go send them dinners, and fresh suits,
And give their fasting horses provender,
And after fight with them?

Con. I stay but for my guard. On, to the field!
I will the banner from a trumpet take,
And use it for my haste. Come, come, away!
The sun is high, and we outwear the day. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The English Camp.

Enter<sup>1</sup> all the English Host: GLOSTER, BEDFORD, EXETER, SALISBURY, and WESTMORELAND.

Glo. Where is the king?

Bed. The king himself is rode to view their battle.

West. Of fighting men they have full threescore thousand.

Exe. There's five to one; besides, they all are fresh.

Sal. God's arm strike with us! 'tis a fearful odds.
God be wi' you, princes all; I'll to my charge:

If we no more meet, till we meet in heaven,
Then, joyfully,—my noble lord of Bedford,—
My dear lord Gloster,—and my good lord Exeter,—
And my kind kinsman,—warriors all, adieu!

Bed. Farewell, good Salisbury; and good luck go with thee!

Exe. Farewell, kind lord. Fight valiantly to-day:
And yet I do thee wrong, to mind thee of it,
For thou art fram'd of the firm truth of valor.

[Exit SALISBURY.

Bed. He is as full of valor, as of kindness;
Princely in both.

West. O! that we now had here

Enter King HENRY.

But one ten thousand of those men in England,
That do no work to-day.

K. Hen. What's he, that wishes so?
My cousin Westmoreland?—No, my fair cousin:

If we are mark'd to die, we are<sup>2</sup> enow
To do our country loss; and if to live,

The fewer men, the greater share of honor.

God's will! I pray thee, wish not one man more.

By Jove, I am not covetous for gold;

Nor care I who doth feed upon my cost;

It yearns me not if men my garments wear;

Such outward things dwell not in my desires;

But, if it be a sin to covet honor,

I am the most offending soul alive.

No, 'faith, my coz, wish not a man from England:

God's peace! I would not lose so great an honor,

As one man more, methinks, would share from me,

For the best hope I have. O! do not wish one more:

Rather proclaim it, Westmoreland, through my host,

That he, which hath no stomach to this fight,

Let him depart; his passport shall be made,

And crowns for convoy put into his purse:

We would not die in that man's company,

That fears his fellowship to die with us.

This day is call'd—the feast of Crispian:

He, that outlives this day, and comes safe home,

Will stand a tip-toe when this day is nam'd,

And rouse him at the name of Crispian.

He, that shall live this day, and see old age,

Will yearly on the vigil feast his friends,

And say—to-morrow is Saint Crispian:
Then will he strip his sleeve, and show his scars.

Old men forget; yet all shall be forgot,

But he'll remember with advantages

What feats he did that day. Then shall our names,

Familiar in their mouths as household words,—

Harry the king, Bedford and Exeter,

Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Gloster,—

Be in their flowing cups freshly remember'd.

This story shall the good man teach his son,

And Crispin Crispian shall ne'er go by,

From this day to the ending of the world,

But we in it shall be remembered;

We few, we happy few, we band of brothers:

For he, to-day that sheds his blood with me,

Shall be my brother: be he ne'er so vile,

This day shall gentle his condition:

And gentlemen in England, now a-bed,

Shall think themselves accurs'd they were not here,

And hold their manhoods cheap, whiles any speaks

That fought with us upon Saint Crispian's day.

Enter SALISBURY.

Sal. My sovereign lord, bestow yourself with speed:

The French are<sup>3</sup> bravely in their battles set,

And will with all expedience charge on us.

K. Hen. All things are ready, if our minds be so.

West. Perish the man whose mind is backward now! [land, cousin?

K. Hen. Thou dost not wish more help from Eng-

West. God's will! my liege, would you and I alone,
Without more help, might fight this royal battle.

K. Hen. Why, now thou hast<sup>4</sup> unwish'd five thousand men,

Which likes me better than to wish us one.—

You know your places: God be with you all!

Tucket. Enter MONTJOY.

Mont. Once more I come to know of thee, king
If for thy ransom thou wilt now compound, [Harry,

Before thy most assured overthrow?

For, certainly, thou art so near the gulf,

Thou needs must be engulged. Besides, in mercy,

The Constable desires thee thou wilt<sup>5</sup> mind

Thy followers of repentance; that their souls

May make a peaceful and a sweet retire [bodies

From off these fields, where, wretches, their poor
Must lie and fester.

K. Hen. Who hath sent thee now?

Mont. The Constable of France.

K. Hen. I pray thee, bear my former answer back:

Bid them achieve me, and then sell my bones.

Good God! why should they mock poor fellows thus?

The man, that once did sell the lion's skin

While the beast liv'd, was kill'd with hunting him.

A many of our bodies shall, no doubt,

Find native graves, upon the which, I trust,

Shall witness live in<sup>6</sup> brass of this day's work;

And those that leave their valiant bones in France,

Dying like men, though buried in your dunghills,

They shall be fam'd: for there the sun shall greet them,

And draw their honors reeking up to heaven,

Leaving their earthly parts to choke your clime,

The smell whereof shall breed a plague in France.

Mark, then, rebounding valor in our English;

That, being dead, like to the bullet's grazing,

Break out into a second course of mischief,

Killing in<sup>7</sup> reflex of mortality.

Let me speak proudly:—Tell the Constable,

We are but warriors for the working-day;

<sup>a</sup> That is, shall advance him to the rank of a gentleman.—

i. e., in brazen plates, anciently let into tombstones.

<sup>a</sup> "Gimnal-bit," i. e., double-linked bit.—<sup>b</sup> Enough.

Our gayness and our <sup>a</sup>gilt are all <sup>b</sup>besmirch'd
With rainy marching in the painful field;
There's not a piece of feather in our host,
(Good argument, I hope, we will not fly)
And time hath worn us into slovenry;
But, by the mass, our hearts are in the trim;
And my poor soldiers tell me, yet ere night
They'll be in fresher robes, <sup>c</sup>for they will pluck
The gay new coats o'er the French soldiers' heads,
And turn them out of service. If they do this,
As, if God please, they shall, my ransom then
Will soon be levied. Herald, save thou thy labor;
Come thou no more for ransom, gentle herald;
They shall have none, I swear, but these my joints,
Which, if they have as I will leave 'em them,
Shall yield them little, tell the Constable.

Mont. I shall, king Harry: and so fare thee well.
Thou never shalt hear herald any more. [Exit.]

K. Hen. I fear, thou wilt once more come <sup>d</sup>here for a ransom.

Enter the Duke of York.

York. My lord, most humbly on my knee I beg
The leading of the <sup>e</sup>vaward. [March away:]

K. Hen. Take it, brave York. <sup>f</sup>Now, soldiers,
And how thou pleasest, God, dispose the day!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Field of Battle.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter French Soldier, Pistol, and Boy.

Pist. Yield, cur.

Fr. Sol. Je pense, que vous êtes le gentilhomme de bonne qualité.

Pist. Quality? Callino, castore me! art thou a gentleman? What is thy name? <sup>g</sup>discuss.

Fr. Sol. O seigneur Dieu!

Pist. O! seigneur Dew should be a gentleman.

<sup>h</sup>Perpend my words, O seigneur Dew, and mark:—
O seigneur Dew, thou diest on point of 'fox,
Except, O seigneur, thou do give to me
Egregious ransom.

Fr. Sol. O, prenez miséricorde! ayez pitié de moi!

Pist. Mow shall not serve, I will have forty moys;
For I will fetch thy <sup>i</sup>rim out at thy throat,
In drops of crimson blood.

Fr. Sol. Est il impossible d'échapper la force de ton bras?

Pist. Brass, cur?

Thou damned and <sup>j</sup>luxurious mountain goat,
Offer'st me brass?

Fr. Sol. O pardonnez moi!

Pist. Say'st thou me so? is that a tun of <sup>k</sup>moys?—
Come hither, boy: ask me this slave in French,
What is his name.

Boy. Escoutez; comment êtes vous appelé?

Fr. Sol. Monsieur le Fer.

Boy. He says his name is master Fer.

Pist. Master Fer! I'll fer him, and <sup>l</sup>firk him, and ferret him.—Discuss the same in French unto
him.

Boy. I do not know the French for fer, and ferret, and firk.

Pist. Bid him prepare, for I will cut his throat.

Fr. Sol. Que dit-il, monsieur?

Boy. Il me commande à vous dire que vous faites vous prêt; car ce soldat ici est disposé tout à cette heure de couper votre gorge.

Pist. Oui, couper le gorge, par ma foi, pensant,
Unless thou give me crowns, brave crowns;
Or mangled shalt thou be by this my sword.

Fr. Sol. O! je vous supplie pour l'amour de Dieu, me pardonner. Je suis le gentilhomme de bonne maison: gardez ma vie, et je vous donnerai deux cents écus.

Pist. What are his words?

Boy. He prays you to save his life: he is a gentleman of a good house; and, for his ransom, he will give you two hundred crowns.

Pist. Tell him,—my fury shall abate, and I
The crowns will take.

Fr. Sol. Petit monsieur, que dit-il?

Boy. Encore qu'il est contre son serment de par-donner aucun prisonnier; néanmoins, pour les écus que vous l'avez promis, il est content à vous donner la liberté, le franchisement.

Fr. Sol. Sur mes genoux, je vous donne mille re-merciemens; et je m'estime heureux que je suis tombé entre les mains d'un chevalier, je pense, le plus brave, vaillant, et tres distingué seigneur d'Angleterre.

Pist. Expound unto me, boy.

Boy. He gives you, upon his knees, a thousand thanks; and he esteems himself happy that he hath fallen into the hands of one (as he thinks) the most brave, valorous, and thrice-worthy seigneur of England.

Pist. As I suck blood, I will some mercy show.—
Follow me! [Exit Pistol.]

Boy. Suivez vous le grand capitaine. I did never [Exit French Soldier.]

know so full a voice issue from so empty a heart:
but the <sup>m</sup>song is true,—“the empty vessel makes the greatest sound.” Bardolph, and Nym, had ten times more valor than this roaring devil <sup>n</sup>the old play, that every one may pare his nails with a wooden dagger, and they are both hanged; and so would this be, if he durst steal anything adventur-ously. I must stay with the lackeys, with the luggage of our camp: the French might have a good prey of us, if <sup>o</sup>they knew of it, for there is none to guard it, but boys. [Exit.]

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field of Battle.

<sup>p</sup>Retreat sounded. Enter Dauphin, ORLEANS, BOURBON, Constable, RAMBURES, and others.

Con. O diable! [du!]

Orl. O seigneur!—le jour est perdu! tout est per-du. Mort de ma vie! all is confounded, all!

Reproach and everlasting shame
Sit mocking in our plumes.—O <sup>q</sup>méchante fortune!—
Do not run away. [A short Alarum.]

Con. Why, all our ranks are broke.

Dau. O <sup>r</sup>perdurable shame!—let's stab ourselves.
Be these the wretches that we play'd at dice for?

Orl. Is this the king we sent to for his ransom?

Bour. Shame, and eternal shame, nothing but shame!

<sup>s</sup>Let us not fly:—in!—Once more back again;

And he that will not follow Bourbon now,

Let him go hence, and, with his cap in hand,

Like a base pander, hold the chamber-door,

Whilst by a slave, no <sup>t</sup>gentler than my dog,

His fairest daughter is contaminate.

Con. Disorder, that hath spoil'd us, friend us now!
Let us in heaps go offer up our lives.

Orl. We are enough, yet living in the field,

plain.—<sup>e</sup> “Perpend,” i. e., consider; attend to.—<sup>f</sup> Fox was an old cant word for a sword, so called from a famous sword-cutter named Fox.—<sup>g</sup> “Rim,” i. e., diaphragm.—<sup>h</sup> Lascivious.
—<sup>i</sup> Pistol's moys are probably intended in his mind for moi-

To smother up the English in our throngs,
If any order might be thought upon.

Bour. The devil take order now. I'll to the throng;
Let life be short, else shame will be too long.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Enter King HENRY and Forces;
EXETER, and others.

K. Hen. Well have we done, thrice-vaillant countrymen:

But all's not done; yet keep the French the field.

Exc. The duke of York commends him to your majesty. [hour

K. Hen. Lives he, good uncle? thrice within this I saw him down, thrice up again, and fighting; From helmet to the spur all blood he was.

Exc. In which array, brave soldier, doth he lie,
Loading the plain; and by his bloody side,
(Yoke-fellow to his honor-owing wounds)
The noble earl of Suffolk also lies.

Suffolk first died; and York, all haggled over,
Comes to him, where in gore he lay insteep'd,
And takes him by the beard, kisses the gashes,
That bloodily did yawn upon his face;

He cries aloud,—“Tarry, dear cousin Suffolk!
My soul shall thine keep company to heaven:
Tarry, sweet soul, for mine; then fly a-breast,
As in this glorious and well-foughten field,
We kept together in our chivalry!”

Upon these words I came and cheer'd him up;
He smil'd me in the face,<sup>a</sup> rought me his hand,
And, with a feeble gripe, says, “Dear my lord,
Commend my service to my sovereign.”

So did he turn, and over Suffolk's neck
He threw his wounded arm, and kiss'd his lips;
And so, espous'd to death, with blood he seal'd
A testament of noble-ending love.

The pretty and sweet manner of it forc'd
Those waters from me, which I would have stopp'd;
But I had not so much of man in me,
But all my mother came into mine eyes,
And gave me up to tears.

K. Hen. I blame you not;
For, hearing this, I must perforce compound
With mistful eyes, or they will issue too.—[Alarums.
But, hark! what new alarm is this same?—
The French have reinforce'd their scatter'd men:—
Then, every soldier kill his prisoners!
Give the word through. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER.

Flu. Kill the poys and the luggage! 'tis expressly against the law of arms: 'tis as arrant a piece of knavery, mark you now, as can be offered. In your conscience now, is it not?

Gow. 'Tis certain, there's not a boy left alive; and the cowardly rascals, that ran from the battle, have done this slaughter: besides, they have burned and carried away all that was in the king's tent; wherefore the king most worthily hath caused every soldier to cut his prisoner's throat. O! 'tis a gallant king.

Flu. Ay, he was porn at Monmouth, captain Gower. What call you the town's name, where Alexander the pig was born?

Gow. Alexander the great.

Flu. Why, I pray you, is not pig, great? The pig, or the great, or the mighty, or the huge, or the magnanimous, are all one reckonings, save the phrase is a little variations.

Gow. I think, Alexander the great was born in Macedon: his father was called Philip of Macedon, as I take it.

Flu. I think, it is in Macedon, where Alexander is porn. I tell you, captain,—if you look in the maps of the world, I warrant you shall find, in the comparisons between Macedon and Monmouth, that the situations, look you, is both alike. There is a river in Macedon, and there is also moreover a river at Monmouth; it is called Wye at Monmouth, but it is out of my prains, what is the name of the other river; but 'tis all one, 'tis alike as my fingers is to my fingers, and there is salmons in both. If you mark Alexander's life well, Harry of Monmouth's life is come after it indifferent well; for there is figures in all things. Alexander, God knows, and you know, in his rages, and his furies, and his wraths, and his cholers, and his moods, and his displeasures, and his indignations, and also being a little intoxicates in his prains, did, in his ales and his angers, look you, kill his best friend, Clytus.

Gow. Our king is not like him in that: he never killed any of his friends.

Flu. It is not well done, mark you now, to take the tales out of my mouth, ere it is made and finished. I speak but in the figures and comparisons of it: as Alexander killed his friend Clytus, being in his ales and his cups, so also Harry Monmouth, being in his right wits and his good judgments, turned away the fat knight with the great pelly-doublet: he was full of jests, and gipes, and knaveries, and mocks; I have forgot his name.

Gow. Sir John Falstaff.

Flu. That is he. I'll tell you, there is goot men porn at Monmouth.

Gow. Here comes his majesty.

Alarums. Enter King HENRY, with a part of the English Forces<sup>a</sup> and Prisoners; WARWICK, GLOSTER, EXETER, and others.

K. Hen. I was not angry since I came to France Until this instant.—Take a trumpet, herald; Ride thou unto the horsemen on yond<sup>b</sup> hill: If they will fight with us, bid them come down, Or void the field; they do offend our sight. If they'll do neither, we will come to them, And make them<sup>b</sup> skirr away, as swift as stones Enforced from the old Assyrian slings. Besides, we'll cut the throats of those we have; And not a man of them that we shall take, Shall taste our mercy.—Go, and tell them so.

Enter MONTJOY.

Exc. Here comes the herald of the French, my liege.

Glo. His eyes are humbler than they us'd to be.

K. Hen. How now! what means this, herald? know'st thou not,

That I have fin'd these bones of mine for ransom? Com'st thou again for ransom?

Mont.

No, great king:

I come to thee for charitable licence,
That we may wander o'er this bloody field,
To<sup>3</sup> look our dead, and then to bury them;
To sort our nobles from our common men;
For many of our princes, woe the while!
Lie drown'd and soak'd in mercenary blood;
So do our vulgar drench their peasant limbs
In blood of princes, and their wounded steeds

<sup>b</sup> Scour.

Fret fetlock deep in gore, and with wild rage
Yerk out their armed heels at their dead masters,
Killing them twice. O, give us leave, great king,
To view the field in safety, and dispose
Of their dead bodies.

K. Hen. I tell thee truly, herald,
I know not if the day be ours, or no;
For yet a many of your horsemen peer,
And gallop o'er the field.

Mont. The day is yours.

K. Hen. Praised be God, and not our strength, for it!

What is this castle call'd, that stands hard by?

Mont. They call it Agincourt.

K. Hen. Then call we this the field of Agincourt, Fought on the day of Crispin Crispianus.

Flu. Your grandfather of famous memory, an't please your majesty, and your great-uncle Edward the plack prince of Wales, as I have read in the chronicles, fought a most prave pattle here in France.

K. Hen. They did, Fluellen.

Flu. Your majesty says very true. If your <sup>1</sup>majesty is remembered of it, the Welshmen did goot service in a garden where leeks did grow, wearing leeks in their Monmouth caps, which your majesty knows, to this hour is an honorable padge of the service; and, I do believe, your majesty takes no scorn to wear the leek upon Saint Tavy's day.

K. Hen. I wear it for a memorable honor:

For I am Welsh, you know, good countryman.

Flu. All the water in Wye cannot wash your majesty's Welsh blood out of your body, I can tell you that: Got pless it, and preserve it, as long as it pleases his grace, and his majesty too!

K. Hen. Thanks, good my countryman.

Flu. By Cheshu, I am your majesty's countryman, I care not who know it; I will confess it to all the world: I need not to be ashamed of your majesty, praised be God, so long as your majesty is an honest man.

K. Hen. God keep me so!—Our heralds go with Bring me just notice of the numbers dead, [him:
On both our parts.—Call yonder fellow hither.

[Points to WILLIAMS. Exeunt MONTJOY and others.

Eee. Soldier, you must come to the king.

K. Hen. Soldier, why wear'st thou that glove in thy cap?

Will. An't please your majesty, 'tis the gage of one that I should fight withal, if he be alive.

K. Hen. An Englishman?

Will. An't please your majesty, a rascal that swaggered with me last night; who, if 'a live, and ever daue to challenge this glove, I have sworn to take him a box o' the ear: or, if I can see my glove in his cap, (which he swore, as he was a soldier, he would wear, if alive) I would strike it out soudly.

K. Hen. What think you, captain Fluellen? is it fit this soldier keep his oath?

Flu. He is a "craven and a villain else, an't please your majesty, in my conscience.

K. Hen. It may be, his enemy is a gentleman of great <sup>b</sup>sort, quite from the answer of his degree.

Flu. Though he be as goot a gentleman as the tevil is, as Lucifer and Belzebub himself, it is necessary, look your grace, that he keep his vow and his oath. If he be perjured, see you now, his reputation is as arrant a villain, and a "Jack-sauce, as ever his plack shoe trod upon Got's ground and his earth, in my conscience, la.

K. Hen. Then keep thy vow, sirrah, when thou meet'st the fellow.

Will. So I will, my liege, as I live.

K. Hen. Who serv'st thou under?

Will. Under Captain Gower, my liege.

Flu. Gower is a goot captain, and is goot knowledge, and literated in the wars.

K. Hen. Call him hither to me, soldier.

Will. I will, my liege.

[Exit.

K. Hen. Here, Fluellen; wear thou this favor for me, and stick it in thy cap. When Alençon and myself were down together, I plucked this glove from his helm: if any man challenge this, he is a friend to Alençon, and an enemy to our person; if thou encounter any such apprehend him, an thou dost me love.

Flu. Your grace does me as great honors, as can be desired in the hearts of his subjects: I would fain see the man, that has but two legs, that shall find himself aggrieved at this glove, that is all; but I would fain see it once, and please Got of his grace, that I might see.

K. Hen. Knowest thou Gower?

Flu. He is my dear friend, and please you.

K. Hen. Pray thee, go seek him, and bring him to my tent.

Flu. I will fetch him.

[Exit.

K. Hen. My lord of Warwick, and my brother Gloster.

Follow Fluellen closely at the heels.

The glove, which I have given him for a favor,

May haply purchase him a box o' the ear:

It is the soldier's; I, by bargain, should Wear it myself. Follow, good cousin Warwick:

If that the soldier strike him, (as, I judge

By his blunt bearing, he will keep his word)

Some sudden mischief may arise of it,

For I do know Fluellen valiant,

And, touch'd with choler, hot as gunpowder,

And quickly will return an injury:

Follow, and see there be no harm between them.—

Go you with me, uncle of Exeter. [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—Before King HENRY's Pavilion.

Enter GOWER and WILLIAMS.

Will. I warrant it is to knight you, captain.

Enter FLUELLEN.

Flu. Got's will and his pleasure, captain, I pesceeh you now, come apace to the king: there is more goot toward you, peradventure, than is in your knowledge you dream of.

Will. Sir, know you this glove?

Flu. Know the glove? I know, the glove is a glove.

Will. I know this, and thus I challenge it.

[Strikes him.

Flu. 'Sblood! an arrant traitor, as any's in the universal world, or in France, or in England.

Gow. How now, sir! you villain!

Will. Do you think I'll be forsworn?

Flu. Stand away, captain Gower: I will give treason his payment into ploys, I warrant you.

Will. I am no traitor.

Flu. That's a lie in thy throat.—I charge you in his majesty's name, apprehend him: he is a friend of the duke Alençon's.

Enter WARWICK and GLOSTER.

War. How now, how now! what's the matter?

Flu. My lord of Warwick, here is, praised be God for it! a most contagious treason come to light, look you, as you shall desire in a summer's day.
Here is his majesty.

Enter King HENRY, and EXETER.

K. Hen. How now! what's the matter?

Flu. My liege, here is a villain, and a traitor, that, look your grace, has struck the glove which your majesty is take out of the helmet of Alençon.

Will. My liege, this was my glove; here is the fellow of it; and he that I gave it to in change promised to wear it in his cap: I promised to strike him if he did. I met this man with my glove in his cap, and I have been as good as my word.

Flu. Your majesty hear now, saving your majesty's manhood, what an arrant, rascally, beggarly, lowsy knave it is. I hope your majesty is pear me testimony, and witness, and avouchments, that this is the glove of Alençon, that your majesty is give me, in your conscience now.

K. Hen. Give me thy glove, soldier: look, here is the fellow of it.

'Twas I, indeed, thou promisedst to strike; And thou hast given me most bitter terms.

Flu. And please your majesty, let his neck answer for it, if there is any martial law in the world.

K. Hen. How canst thou make me satisfaction?

Will. All offences, my lord, come from the heart: never came any from mine, that might offend your majesty.

K. Hen. It was ourself thou didst abuse.

Will. Your majesty came not like yourself: you appeared to me but as a common man; witness the night, your garments, your lowliness; and what your highness suffered under that shape, I beseech you, take it for your own fault, and not mine: for had you been as I took you for, I had made no offence; therefore, I beseech your highness, pardon me. [crowns,

K. Hen. Here, uncle Exeter, fill this glove with And give it to this fellow.—Keep it, fellow, And wear it for an honor in thy cap, Till I do challenge it.—Give him the crowns.—And, captain, you must needs be friends with him.

Flu. By this day and this light, the fellow has mettle enough in his pelly.—Hold, there is twelve pence for you, and I pray you to serve God, and keep you out of prawls, and prabbles, and quarrels, and dissensions; and, I warrant you, it is the petter for you.

Will. I will none of your money.

Flu. It is with a goot will. I can tell you, it will serve you to mend your shoes: come, wherefore should you be so pashful? your shoes is not so goot: 'tis a goot silling, I warrant you, or I will change it.

Enter an English Herald.

K. Hen. Now, herald, are the dead number'd?

Her. Here is the number of the slaughter'd French.

[Delivers a Paper.]

K. Hen. What prisoners of good sort are taken, uncle?

Exe. Charles duke of Orleans, nephew to the king; John duke of Bourbon, and lord Bouciquart; Of other lords, and barons, knights, and 'squires, Full fifteen hundred, besides common men.

K. Hen. This note doth tell me of ten thousand French,

That in the field lie slain: of princes, in this number, And nobles bearing banners, there lie dead.<sup>2</sup> [Reads. One hundred twenty-six: added to these, Of knights, esquires, and gallant gentlemen, Eight thousand and four hundred; of the which, Five hundred were but yesterday dubb'd knights:

<sup>a</sup> "Thy glove," i. e., 'the glove that thou hast now in thy cap' it was the king's glove, which he had given to Williams.

So that, in these ten thousand they have lost, There are but sixteen hundred mercenaries; The rest are princes, barons, lords, knights, 'squires, And gentlemen of blood and quality. The names of those their nobles that lie dead,— Charles De-la-bret, high constable of France; Jaques Chatillon, admiral of France; The master of the cross-bows, lord Rambures; Great-master of France, the brave sir Guischaud Dauphin;

John duke of Alençon; Antony duke of Brabant, The brother to the duke of Burgundy; And Edward duke of Bar: of lusty earls, Grandpré, and Roussi, Fauconberg, and Foix, Beaumont, and Marle, Vaudemont, and Lestrale. Here was a royal fellowship of death!—

Where is the number of our English dead?

[Herald presents another Paper.]

Edward the duke of York, the earl of Suffolk,

Sir Richard Ketly, Davy Gam, esquire:

None else of name, and of all other men

But five and twenty. O God! thy arm was here.

<sup>2</sup>[Kneeling.]

And not to us, but to thy arm alone, [gem, Ascribe we all.—<sup>1</sup>[Rising.] When, without strata- But in plain shock, and even play of battle, Was ever known so great and little loss, On one part and on th' other?—Take it, God, For it is only thine!

Exe.

'Tis wonderful!

K. Hen. Come, go we in procession to the village: And be it death, proclaimed through our host, To boast of this, or take that praise from God, Which is his only.

Flu. Is it not lawful, and please your majesty, to tell how many is killed? [ment,

K. Hen. Yes, captain, but with this acknowledgment That God fought for us.

Flu. Yes, my conscience, he did us great goot.

K. Hen. Do we all holy rites:

Let there be sung Non nobis, and Te Deum.

The dead with charity enclos'd in clay,

And then to Calais; and to England then,

Where ne'er from France arrived more happy men.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

Enter CHORUS.

Chor. Vouchsafe<sup>a</sup> all those that have not read the story,

That I may prompt them: and<sup>6</sup> for such as have, I humbly pray them to admit th' excuse Of time, of numbers, and due course of things, Which cannot in their huge and proper life Be here presented. Now, we bear the king Toward Calais: grant him there; there seen, Heave him away upon your winged thoughts, Athwart the sea. Behold, the English beach Pales in the flood with men, with wives, and boys, Whose shouts and claps out-voice the deep-mouth'd Which, like a mighty<sup>b</sup> whiffier, fore the king [sea, Seems to prepare his way. So, let him land, And solemnly see him set on to London. So swift a pace hath thought, that even now You may imagine him upon Blackheath; Where, that his lords desire him, to have borne His bruised helmet, and his bended sword, Before him, through the city, he forbids it, <sup>a</sup> A Whiffier is an officer who walks first in processions.

Being free from vainness and self-glorious pride,
Giving full trophy, signal, and ostent,
Quite from himself, to God. But now behold
In the quick forge and workinghouse of thought,
How London doth pour out her citizens.
The mayor, and all his brethren, in best sort,
Like to the senators of th' antique Rome,
With the plebeians swarming at their heels,
Go forth, and fetch their conquering Cæsar in:
As, by a lower but by loving likelihood,
Were now the general of our gracious empress
(As in good time he may) from Ireland coming,
Bringing rebellion broached on his sword,
How many would the peaceful city quit,
To welcome him! much more, and much more cause,
Did they this Harry. Now, in London place him.
As yet the lamentation of the French
Invites the king of England's stay at home:
The emperor's coming in behalf of France,
To order peace between them; and omit
All the occurrences, whatever chanc'd,
Till Harry's back-return again to France:
There must we bring him; and myself have play'd
The interim, by remembering you, 'tis past.
Then brook abridgment, and your eyes advance,
After your thoughts, straight back again to France.

[Exit.]

SCENE I.—France. An English Court of Guard.

Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER.

Gow. Nay, that's right; but why wear you your leek to-day? Saint Davy's day is past.

Flu. There is occasions, and causes, why and wherefore, in all things: I will tell you, as my friend, captain Gower. The rascally, scald, beggarly, lowsy, prugging knave, Pistol, which you and yourself, and all the world, know to be no pretter than a fellow, look you now, of no merits, he is come to me, and prings me pread and salt yesterday, look you, and bid me eat my leek. It was in a place where I could not breed no contention with him; but I will be so pold as to wear it in my cap till I see him once again, and then I will tell him a little piece of my desires.

Gow. Why, here he comes, swelling like a turkey-cock.

Enter Pistol.

Flu. 'Tis no matter for his swellings, nor his turkeycocks.—Got pless you, ancient Pistol! you scurvy, lowsy knave, Got pless you! [Trojan.]

Pist. Ha! art thou Bedlam? dost thou thirst, base To have me fold up Parca's fatal web?
Hence! I am qualmish at the smell of leek.

Flu. I peseech you heartily, scurvy lowsy knave, at my desires, and my requests, and my petitions, to eat, look you, this leek; because, look you, you do not love it, nor your affections, and your appetites, and your digestions, does not agree with it, I would desire you to eat it.

Pist. Not for Cadwallader, and all his goats.

Flu. There is one goat for you. [Strikes him. Will you be so goot, scald knave, as eat it?]

Pist. Base Trojan, thou shalt die.

Flu. You say very true, scald knave, when Got's will is. I will desire you to live in the mean time, and eat your victuals: come, there is sauce for it. [Striking him again.] You called me yesterday, mountain-squire, but I will make you to-day a squire of low degree. I pray you, fall to: if you can mock a leek, you can eat a leek.

Gow. Enough, captain: you have astonished him.

Flu. I say, I will make him eat some part of my leek, or I will peat his pate four days.—Pite, I pray you; it is goot for your green wound, and your bloody coxcomb.

Pist. Must I bite?

Flu. Yes, certainly, and out of doubt, and out of question too, and ambiguities.

Pist. By this leek, I will most horribly revenge. I eat, and eat I swear—

Flu. Eat, I pray you. Will you have some more sauce to your leek? there is not enough leek to swear by.

Pist. Quiet thy cudgel: thou dost see, I eat.

Flu. Much goot do you, scald knave, heartily. Nay, pray you, throw none away; the skin is goot for your broken coxcomb. When you take occasions to see leeks hereafter, I pray you, mock at 'em; that is all.

Pist. Good.

Flu. Ay, leeks is good.—Hold you; there is a groat to heal your pate.

Pist. Me a groat!

Flu. Yes; verily, and in truth, you shall take it, or I have another leek in my pocket, which you shall eat.

Pist. I take thy groat, in earnest of revenge.

Flu. If I owe you any thing I will pay you in cudgels: you shall be a woodmonger, and buy nothing of me but cudgels. God be wi' you, and keep you, and heal your pate.

[Exit.]

Pist. All hell shall stir for this.

Gow. Go, go; you are a counterfeit cowardly knave. Will you mock at an ancient tradition, begun upon an honorable respect, and worn as a memorable trophy of predeceased valor, and dare not avouch in your deeds any of your words? I have seen you hgleeking and galling at this gentleman twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speak English in the native garb, he could not therefore handle an English cudgel: you find it otherwise; and, henceforth, let a Welsh correction teach you a good English condition. Fure ye well.

[Exit.]

Pist. Doth fortune play the huswife with me now?

News have I, that my Doll is dead i' the hospital Of malady of France;

And there my rendezvous is quite cut off.

Old I do wax, and from my weary limbs

Honor is cudgelled. Well, bawd I'll turn,

And something lean to cutpurse of quick hand.

To England will I steal, and there I'll steal:

And patches will I get unto these cudgell'd scars,

And swear, I got them in the Gallia wars. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—Troyes in Champagne. An Apartment in the French King's Palace.

Enter, at one door, King HENRY, BEDFORD, GLOSTER, EXETER, WARWICK, WESTMORELAND, and other Lords; at another, the French King, Queen ISABEL, the Princess KATHARINE, Lords, Ladies, &c., the Duke of BURGUNDY, and his Train.

K. Hen. Peace to this meeting, wherefore we are Unto our brother France, and to our sister, [met. Health and fair time of day:]—joy and good wishes To our most fair and princely cousin Katharine;—

—<sup>d</sup> Huswife, i. e., jilt; hussy.—<sup>e</sup> Ho-pital.—<sup>f</sup> That is, Peace, for which we are here met, be to this meeting!

And, as a branch and member of this royalty,
By whom this great assembly is contriv'd,
We do salute you, duke of Burgundy:—
And, princes French, and peers, health to you all.

Fr. King. Right joyous are we to behold your face,
Most worthy brother England; fairly met:—
So are you, princes English, every one.

Q. Isa. So happy be the issue, brother England,
Of this good day, and of this gracious meeting,
As we are now glad to behold your eyes;
Your eyes, which hitherto have borne in them
Against the French, that met them in their bent,
The fatal balls of murdering basilisks:
The venom of such looks, we fairly hope,
Have lost their quality, and that this day
Shall change all griefs and quarrels into love.

K. Hen. To cry amen to that thus we appear.

Q. Isa. You English princes all, I do salute you.

Bar. My duty to you both, on equal love.
Great kings of France and England, that I have labor'd

With all my wits, my pains, and strong endeavors,
To bring your most imperial majesties
Unto this<sup>a</sup> bar and royal interview,
Your mightiness on both parts best can witness.
Since, then, my office hath so far prevail'd,
That face to face, and royal eye to eye,
You have congregated, let it not disgrace me,
If I demand before this royal view,
What rub, or what impediment, there is,
Why that the naked, poor, and mangled peace,
Dear nurse of arts,<sup>1</sup> plenty, and joyful births,
Should not in this best garden of the world,
Our fertile France,<sup>2</sup> lift up her lovely visage?
Alas! she hath from France too long been chas'd,
And all her husbandry doth lie on heaps,
Corrupting in its own fertility.
Her vine, the merry cheerer of the heart,
Unpruned dies: her hedges even-pleached,
Like prisoners wildly over-grown with hair,
Put forth disorder'd twigs: her fallow leas
The darnel, hemlock, and rank fumitory,
Do root upon, while that the coulter rusts,
That should<sup>3</sup> deracinate such savagery:
The even mead, that erst brought sweetly forth
The flockled cowslip, burnet, and green clover,
Wanting the scythe, all uncorrected, rank,
Conceives by idleness, and nothing teems,
But hateful docks, rough thistles, kecksies, burs,
Losing both beauty and utility;
And<sup>4</sup> all our vineyards, fallows, meads, and hedges,
Defective in their natures, grow to wildness.
Even so our houses, and ourselves, and children,
Have lost, or do not learn, for want of time,
The sciences that should become our country,
But grow, like savages,—as soldiers will,
That nothing do but meditate on blood,—
To swearing, and stern looks,<sup>5</sup> c<sup>6</sup> diffus'd attire,
And every thing that seems unnatural.
Which to reduce into our former<sup>4</sup> favor,
You are assembled; and my speech entreats,
That I may know the<sup>6</sup> let, why gentle peace
Should not expel these inconveniences,
And bless us with her former qualities. [peace,

K. Hen. If, duke of Burgundy, you would the Whose want gives growth to th' imperfections
Which you have cited, you must buy that peace
With full accord to all our just demands;
Whose tenors and particular effects
You have, c<sup>7</sup>sh<sup>8</sup>delu'd briefly, in your hands.

Bar. The king hath heard them; to the which, as
There is no answer made. [yet,

K. Hen. Well then, the peace,
Which you before so urg'd, lies in his answer.

Fr. King. I have but with a<sup>9</sup> cursory eye
O'er-glanc'd the articles: pleaseth your grace
To appoint some of your council presently

To sit with us once more, with better heed
To re-survey them, we will suddenly
Pass,<sup>4</sup> or accept, and peremptory answer.

K. Hen. Brother, we shall.—Go, uncle Exeter,—
And brother Clarence,—and you, brother Gloucester,—
Warwick,—and Huntingdon,—go with the king;
And take with you free power, to ratify,
Augment, or alter, as your wisdoms best
Shall see<sup>5</sup> advantage for our dignity,
Any thing in, or out of, our demands,
And we'll consign thereto.—Will you, fair sister,
Go with the princes, or stay here with us?

Q. Isa. Our gracious brother, I will go with them.
Haply a woman's voice may do some good,
When articles, too nicely urg'd, be stood on.

K. Hen. Yet leave our cousin Katharine here with
She is our capital demand, compris'd [us:
Within the fore-rank of our articles.

Q. Isa. She hath good leave.

[Exeunt all but King Henry, Katharine, and her Gentlewoman.

K. Hen. Fair Katharine, and most fair!
Will you vouchsafe to teach a soldier terms,
Such as will enter at a lady's ear,
And plead his love-suit to her gentle heart?

Kath. Your majesty shall mock at me; I cannot speak your English.

K. Hen. O fair Katharine! if you will love me soundly with your French heart, I will be glad to hear you confess it brokenly with your English tongue.
Do you like me, Kate?

Kath. Pardonnez moi, I cannot tell what is—like me.

K. Hen. An angel is like you, Kate; and you are like an angel.

Kath. Que dît-il? que je suis semblable à les anges?

Alice. Ouy, vraiment, sauf vostre grace, ainsi dît il.

K. Hen. I said so, dear Katharine, and I must not blush to affirm it.

Kath. O bon Dieu! les langues des hommes sont pleines de tromperies.

K. Hen. What says she, fair one? that the tongues of men are full of deceits?

Alice. Ouy; dat de tongues of de mans is be full of deccits: dat is de princess.

K. Hen. The princess is the better English-woman.
I' faith, Kate, my wooing is fit for thy understanding: I am glad thou canst speak no better English; for, if thou couldst, thou wouldst find me such a plain king, that thou wouldst think I had sold my farm to buy my crown. I know no ways to mince it in love, but directly to say—I love you: then, if you urge farther than to say—Do you in faith? I wear out my suit. Give me your answer; i' faith, do, and so clap hands and a bargain. How say you,
lady?

Kath. Sauf vostre honneur, me understand well.

K. Hen. Marry, if you would put me to verses, or to dance for your sake, Kate, why you undid me:
for the one, I have neither words nor measure; and for the other, I have no strength in<sup>8</sup> measure, yet a reasonable measure in strength. If I could win a lady at leap-frog, or by vaulting into my saddle with my armor on my back, under the correction of bragging be it spoken, I should quickly leap into a wife:

means comeliness of appearance.—<sup>e</sup> Hinderance.

or if I might buffet for my love, or bound my horse for her favors, I could lay on like a butcher, and sit like a jack-an-apes, never off; but, before God, Kate, I cannot look <sup>a</sup>greenly, nor gasp out my eloquence, nor I have no cunning in protestation; only downright oaths, which I never use till urged, nor never break for urgings. If thou canst love a fellow of this temper, Kate, whose face is not worth sunburning, that never looks in his glass for love of any thing he sees there, let thine eye be thy cook. I speak to thee plain soldier: if thou can'st love me for this, take me; if not, to say to thee that I shall die, is true; but for thy love, by the Lord, no; yet I love thee too. And while thou livest, dear Kate, take a fellow of plain and <sup>b</sup>uncoined constancy, for he perforce must do thee right, because he hath not the gift to woo in other places; for these fellows of infinite tongue, that can rhyme themselves into ladies' favors, they do always reason themselves out again. What! a speaker is but a prater; a rhyme is but a ballad. A good leg will <sup>c</sup>fall, a straight back will stoop, a black beard will turn white, a curled pate will grow bald, a fair face will wither, a full eye will wax hollow; but a good heart, Kate, is the sun and the moon; or, rather, the sun, and not the moon, for it shines bright, and never changes, but keeps his course truly. If thou wouldst have such a one, take me; and take me, take a soldier; take a soldier, take a king, and what sayest thou then to my love? speak, my fair, and fairly, I pray thee.

Kath. Is it possible that I should love de enemy of France?

K. Hen. No; it is not possible you should love the enemy of France, Kate; but, in loving me, you should love the friend of France, for I love France so well, that I will not part with a village of it; I will have it all mine: and, Kate, when France is mine and I am yours, then yours is France, and you are mine.

Kath. I cannot tell vat is dat.

K. Hen. No, Kate? I will tell thee in French, which I am sure will hang upon my tongue like a new-married wife about her husband's neck, hardly to be shook off.—Quand j'ai la possession de France, et quand vous avez la possession de moi, (let me see, what then? Saint Dennis be my speed!)—done vostre est France, et vous êtes mienne. It is as easy for me, Kate, to conquer the kingdom, as to speak so much more French. I shall never move thee in French, unless it be to laugh at me.

Kath. Sauf votre honneur, le François que vous parlez, est meilleur que l'Anglois lequel je parle.

K. Hen. No, 'faith, is't not, Kate; but thy speaking of my tongue, and I thine, most truly falsely, must needs be granted to be much at once. But, Kate, dost thou understand this much English? Canst thou love me?

Kath. I cannot tell.

K. Hen. Can any of your neighbors tell, Kate? I'll ask them. Come, I know, thou lovest me: and at night when you come into your closet, you'll question this gentlewoman about me; and I know, Kate, you will, to her, dispraise those parts in me, that you love with your heart: but, good Kate, mock me merrily, the rather, gentle princess, because I love thee cruelly. If ever thou be'st mine, Kate, (as I have a saving faith within me tells me thou shalt) I get thee with scrambling, and thou must therefore needs prove a good soldier-breeder. Shall not thou and I, between Saint Dennis and Saint George, compound a boy, half French, half English, that shall go to Constantinople, and take the Turk by the beard? shall we not? what sayest thou, my fair flower-de-luce?

Kath. I do not know dat.

K. Hen. No; 'tis hereafter to know, but now to promise: do but now promise, Kate, you will endeavor for your French part of such a boy, and for my English moiety take the word of a king and a bachelor. How answer you, la plus belle Katharine du monde, mon très chère et divine déesse.

Kath. Your majesté have fausse French enough to deceivre de most sage damoiselle dat is en France.

K. Hen. Now, fie upon my false French! By mine honor, in true English, I love thee, Kate; by which honor I dare not swear, thou lovest me; yet my blood begins to flatter me that thou dost, notwithstanding the poor and <sup>1</sup>untempting effect of my visage. Now beshrew my father's ambition! he was thinking of civil wars when he got me: therefore was I created with a stubborn outside, with an aspect of iron, that, when I come to woo ladies, I fright them. But, in faith, Kate, the elder I wax, the better I shall appear: my comfort is, that old age, that ill layer-up of beauty, can do no more spoil upon my face: thou hast me, if thou hast me, at the worst; and thou shalt wear me, if thou wear me, better and better. And therefore tell me, most fair Katharine, will you have me? Put off your maiden blushes; avouch the thoughts of your heart with the looks of an empress; take me by the hand, and say—Harry of England, I am thine: which word thou shalt no sooner bless mine ear withal, but I will tell thee aloud—England is thine, Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantagenet is thine; who, though I speak it before his face, if he be not fellow with the best king, thou shalt find the best king of good fellows. Come, your answer in broken music, for thy voice is music, and thy English broken; therefore, queen of all, Katharine, break thy mind to me in broken English: wilt thou have me?

Kath. Dat is, as it shall please de roi mon père.

K. Hen. Nay, it will please him well, Kate: it shall please him, Kate.

Kath. Den it shall also content me.

K. Hen. Upon that I kiss your hand, and I call you my queen.

Kath. Laissez, mon seigneur, laissez, laissez! Ma foi, je ne veux point que vous abaissez vostre grandeur, en baisant la main d'une vostre indigne serviteure: excusez moi, je vous supplie, mon très puissant seigneur.

K. Hen. Then I will kiss your lips, Kate.

Kath. Les dames, et damoiselles, pour estre baisées devant leur nocces il n'est pas la coutume de France.

K. Hen. Madam my interpreter, what says she?

Alice. Dat it is not be de fashion pour les ladies of France,—I cannot tell what is baiser, in English.

K. Hen. To kiss.

Alice. Your majesty entend better que moi.

K. Hen. It is not a fashion for the maids in France to kiss before they are married, would she say?

Alice. Ouy, vraiment.

K. Hen. O, Kate! nice customs curtesy to great kings. Dear Kate, you and I cannot be confined within the weak <sup>d</sup>list of a country's fashion: we are the makers of manners, Kate; and the liberty that follows our places stops the mouths of all find-

faults, as I will do yours, for upholding the nice fashion of your country in denying me a kiss: therefore, patiently, and yielding. [Kissing her.] You have witchcraft in your lips, Kate: there is more eloquence in a sugar touch of them, than in the tongues of the French council; and they should sooner persuade Harry of England, than a general petition of monarchs. Here comes your father.

Enter the French King and Queen, Burgundy, Bedford, Gloster, Exeter, Westmoreland, and other French and English Lords.

Bur. God save your majesty. My royal cousin, Teach you our princess English?

K. Hen. I would have her learn, my fair cousin, how perfectly I love her; and that is good English.

Bur. Is she not apt?

K. Hen. Our tongue is rough, coz, and my <sup>a</sup> condition is not smooth; so that, having neither the voice nor the heart of flattery about me, I cannot so conjure up the spirit of love in her, that he will appear in his true likeness.

Bur. Pardon the frankness of my mirth, if I answer you for that. If you would conjure in her you must make a circle; if conjure up love in her in his true likeness, he must appear naked, and blind. Can you blame her, then, being a maid yet rosed over with the virgin crimson of modesty, if she deny the appearance of a naked blind boy in her naked seeing self? It were, my lord, a hard condition for a maid to consign to.

K. Hen. Yet they do wink, and yield, as love is blind and enforces.

Bur. They are then excused, my lord, when they see not what they do.

K. Hen. Then, good my lord, teach your cousin to consent winking.

Bur. I will wink on her to consent, my lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning: for maids, well summered and warm kept, are like flies at Bartholomew-tide, blind, though they have their eyes; and then they will endure handling, which before would not abide looking on.

K. Hen. This <sup>b</sup>moral ties me over to time, and a hot summer; and so I shall catch the fly, your cousin, in the latter end, and she must be blind too.

Bur. As love is, my lord, before it loves.

K. Hen. It is so: and you may, some of you, thank love for my blindness, who cannot see many a fair French city, for one fair French maid that stands in my way.

Fr. King. Yes, my lord, you see them perspective: the cities turned into a maid, for they are all girdled with maiden walls, that war hath <sup>1</sup>not entered.

K. Hen. Shall Kate be my wife?

Fr. King. So please you.

K. Hen. I am content, so the maiden cities you talk of, may wait on her; so the maid, that stood in the way of my wish, shall show me the way to my will.

Fr. King. We have consented to all terms of reason.

K. Hen. Is't so, my lords of England?

West. The king hath granted every article: His daughter, first; and then in sequel, all, According to their firm proposed natures.

Eac. Only, he hath not yet subscribed this:—

Where your majesty demands,—that the king of France, having any occasion to write for matter of grant, shall name your highness in this form, and with this addition, in French,—Notre très cher fils Henry roi d'Angleterre, heretier de France; and thus in Latin,—Præclarissimus filius noster Henricus, rex Angliæ, et hæres Franciæ.

Fr. King. Nor this I have not, brother, so denied, But your request shall make me let it pass.

K. Hen. I pray you, then, in love and dear alliance Let that one article rank with the rest; And, thereupon, give me your daughter. [raise up

Fr. King. Take her, fair son; and from her blood Issue to me, that the contending kingdoms Of France and England, whose very shores look pale, With envy of each other's happiness, May cease their hatred; and this dear conjunction Plant neighborhood and christian-like accord In their sweet bosoms, that never war advance His bleeding sword 'twixt England and fair France.

All. Amen! [ness all,

K. Hen. Now welcome, Kate:—and bear me wit- That here I kiss her as my sovereign queen.

[Flourish.

Q. Isa. God, the best maker of all marriages, Combine your hearts in one, your realms in one!

As man and wife, being two, are one in love, So be there 'twixt your kingdoms such a spousal, That never may ill office, or fell jealousy, Which troubles oft the bed of blessed marriage, Thrust in between the paction of these kingdoms, To make divorce of their incorporate league; That English may as French, French Englishmen, Receive each other!—God speak this Amen!

All. Amen! [day,

K. Hen. Prepare we for our marriage:—on which My lord of Burgundy, we'll take your oath, And all the peers' for surety of our leagues. Then shall I swear to Kate, and you to me; And may our oaths well kept and prosperous be!

<sup>2</sup>[Scennet. Exeunt.

Enter CHORUS, <sup>3</sup>as Epilogue.

Thus far, with rough and all unable pen,

Our <sup>d</sup>bending author hath pursu'd the story;

Mangling by starts the full course of their glory. Small time, but in that small most greatly liv'd

This star of England. Fortune made his sword, By which the world's best garden he achiev'd, And of it left his son imperial lord.

Of France and England, did this king succeed; Whose state so many had the managing,

That they lost France, and made his England bleed; Which oft our stage hath shown, and for their sake, In your fair minds let this acceptance take. [Exit.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Westminster Abbey.

Dead March. The Corpse of King HENRY the Fifth is discovered, lying in state; attended on by the Dukes of BEDFORD, GLOSTER, and EXETER; the Earl of WARWICK, the Bishop of Winchester, Heralds, &c.

Bol. Hung be the heavens with <sup>a</sup> black, yield day to night!

Comets, importing change of times and states,
Brandish your crystal tresses in the sky,
And with them scourge the bad revolting stars,
That have <sup>b</sup> consented unto Henry's death!

Henry the fifth, too famous to live long!
England ne'er lost a king of so much worth.

Glo. England ne'er had a king, until his time.

Virtue he had deserving to command:

His brandish'd sword did blind men with his beams;

His arms spread wider than a dragon's wings;

His sparkling eyes, replete with wrathful fire,

<sup>a</sup> An allusion to the practice of hanging the stage with black when a tragedy was to be acted.

<sup>b</sup> "Consented unto," i. e., conspired together to promote.

More dazzled and drove back his enemies,
Than mid-day sun fierce bent against their faces.
What should I say? his deeds exceed all speech:
He ne'er lift up his hand, but conquered. [blood?]

Eze. We mourn in black: why mourn we not in Henry is dead, and never shall revive.
Upon a wooden coffin we attend;
And death's dishonorable victory
We with our stately presence glorify,
Like captives bound to a triumphant car.
What! shall we curse the planets of mishap,
That plotted thus our glory's overthrow?
Or shall we think the subtle-witted French
Conjurors and sorcerers, that, afraid of him,
By magic verses have contriv'd his end?

Win. He was a king, bless'd of the King of kings.
Unto the French the dreadful judgment day
So dreadful will not be, as was his sight.

The battles of the Lord of hosts he fought:
The church's prayers made him so prosperous.

Glo. The church? where is it? Had not churchmen pray'd,

His thread of life had not so soon decay'd:
None do you like but an effeminate prince,
Whom, like a school-boy, you may over-awe.

Win. Gloster, whate'er we like, thou art protector,
And lookest to command the prince, and realm.
Thy wife is proud; she holdeth thee in awe,
More than God, or religious churchmen may.

Glo. Name not religion, for thou lov'st the flesh;
And ne'er throughout the year to church thou go'st,
Except it be to pray against thy foes. [in peace.]

Bed. Cease, cease these jars, and rest your minds
Let's to the altar:—Heralds, wait on us.—
Instead of gold, we'll offer up our arms,
Since arms avail not, now that Henry's dead.
Posterity, await for wretched years,
When at their mothers' moist eyes babes shall suck,
Our isle be made a<sup>b</sup> nourish of salt tears,
And none but women left to wail the dead.—
Henry the fifth! thy ghost I invoke;
Prosper thy realm, keep it from civil broils!
Combat with adverse planets in the heavens!
A far more glorious star thy soul will make,
Than Julius Cæsar, or bright<sup>c</sup> Cassiope.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My honorable lords, health to you all.
Sad tidings bring I to you out of France,
Of loss, of slaughter, and discomfiture:
Guienne, Champaigne, Rheims, Orleans,
Paris, Guysors, Poictiers, are all quite lost. [corse?]

Bed. What say'st thou, man, before dead Henry's Speak softly, or the loss of those great towns
Will make him burst his lead, and rise from death.

Glo. Is Paris lost? Is Rouen yielded up?
If Henry were recall'd to life again, [ghost.]
These news would cause him once more yield the

Eze. How were they lost? what treachery was us'd?

Mess. No treachery; but want of men and money.
Among the soldiers this is muttered,—
That here you maintain several factions;
And whilst a field should be despatch'd and fought,
You are disputing of your generals.
One would have lingering wars with little cost;
Another would fly swift, but wanteth wings;
A third man thinks, without expense at all,
By guileful fair words peace may be obtain'd.
Awake, awake, English nobility!
Let not sloth dim your honors new-begot:

Cropp'd are the flower-de-luces in your arms;
Of England's coat one half is cut away.

Eze. Were our tears wanting to this funeral,
These tidings would call forth<sup>c</sup> her flowing tides.

Bed. Me they concern; regent I am of France.—
Give me my steeled coat! I'll fight for France.—
Away with those disgraceful wailing robes!
Wounds will I lend the French instead of eyes,
To weep their<sup>d</sup> intermissive miseries.

Enter another Messenger.

2 Mess. Lords, view these letters, full of bad mis-
France is revolted from the English king, [chance.]
Except some petty towns of no import:

The Dauphin, Charles, is crowned king in Rheims;
The bastard of Orleans with him is join'd;
Reignier, duke of Anjou, doth take his part;
The duke of Alençon flieth to his side.

Eze. The Dauphin crowned king! all fly to him!
O! whither shall we fly from this reproach?

Glo. We will not fly, but to our enemies' throats.—
Bedford, if thou be slack, I'll fight it out. [ness?]

Bed. Gloster, why doubt'st thou of my forward-
An army have I muster'd in my thoughts,
Wherewith already France is over-run.

Enter a third Messenger.

3 Mess. My gracious lords, to add to your laments,
Wherewith you now bedew king Henry's hearse,
I must inform you of a dismal fight,
Betwixt the stout lord Talbot and the French.

Win. What! wherein Talbot overcame? is't so?

3 Mess. O no; wherein lord Talbot was o'er-thrown:

The circumstance I'll tell you more at large.
The tenth of August last, this dreadful lord,
Retiring from the siege of Orleans,
Having full scarce six thousand in his troop,
By three-and-twenty thousand of the French
Was round encompassed and set upon.

No leisure had he to enrank his men;
He wanted pikes to set before his archers;
Instead whereof, sharp stakes, pluck'd out of hedges,
They pitched in the ground confusedly,
To keep the horsemen off from breaking in.
More than three hours the fight continued;
Where valiant Talbot, above human thought,
Enacted wonders with his sword and lance.

Hundreds he sent to hell, and none durst stand him;
Here, there, and every where, enrag'd he<sup>2</sup> flew.
The French exclaim'd, the devil was in arms;
All the whole army stood amaz'd on him.

His soldiers, spying his undaunted spirit,
A Talbot! A Talbot! cried out amain,
And rush'd into the bowels of the battle.

Here had the conquest fully been seal'd up,
If sir John Fastolfe had not play'd the coward:
He being in the<sup>3</sup> rearward, plac'd behind
With purpose to relieve and follow them,
Cowardly fled, not having struck one stroke.

Hence grew the general wreck and massacre:
Enclosed were they with their enemies.
A base Walloon, to win the Dauphin's grace,
Thrust Talbot with a spear into the back;

Whom all France, with their chief assembled strength,
Durst not presume to look once in the face.

Bed. Is Talbot slain? then, I will slay myself,
For living idly here in pomp and ease,
Whilst such a worthy leader, wanting aid,
Unto his dastard foe-men is betray'd.

3 Mess. O, no! he lives; but is took prisoner.

<sup>a</sup> There was a notion long prevalent that life might be destroyed by metrical charms.—<sup>b</sup> Nurse.

<sup>c</sup> "Her," i. e., England's.—<sup>d</sup> "Their intermissive miseries." i. e., miseries which have had but a short intermission.

And lord Scales with him, and lord Hungerford :
Most of the rest slaughter'd, or took, likewise.

Bed. His ransom there is none but I shall pay.
I'll hale the Dauphin headlong from his throne ;
His crown shall be the ransom of my friend :
Four of their lords I'll change for one of ours.—
Farewell, my masters ; to my task will I,
Bonfires in France forthwith I am to make,
To keep our great Saint George's feast withal ;
Ten thousand soldiers with me I will take,
Whose bloody deeds shall cause all Europe quake.

3 Mess. So you had need ; for Orleans is besieg'd.
The English army is grown weak and faint ;
The earl of Salisbury craveth supply,
And hardly keeps his men from mutiny,
Since they, so few, watch such a multitude.

Exc. Remember, lords, your oaths to Henry s<sup>w</sup>orn, Either to quell the Dauphin utterly,
Or bring him in obedience to your yoke.

Bed. I do remember it ; and here take my leave,
To go about my preparation. [Exit.]

Glo. I'll to the Tower, with all the haste I can,
To view th' artillery and munition ;
And then I will proclaim young Henry king. [Exit.]

Exc. To Eltham will I, where the young king is,
Being ordain'd his special governor ;
And for his safety there I'll best devise. [Exit.]

Win. Each hath his place and function to attend :
I am left out ; for me nothing remains.
But long I will not be Jack-out-of-office :
The king from Eltham I intend to steal,
And sit at chiefest stern of public weal. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—France. Before Orleans.

Flourish. Enter CHARLES, with his Forces ; ALEN-
CON, REIGNIER, and others.

Char. Mars his true moving, even as in the heavens,
So in the earth, to this day is not known.
Late did he shine upon the English side ;
Now we are victors, upon us he smiles.
What towns of any moment but we have ?
At pleasure here we lie near Orleans ;

<sup>2</sup>The whites, the famish'd English, like pale ghosts,
Faintly besiege us one hour in a month. [Beves.]

Alen. They want their porridge, and their fat bull—
Either they must be dieted like mules,
And have their provender tied to their mouths,
Or piteous they will look like drowned mice.

Reig. Let's raise the siege. Why live we idly here ?
Tailbot is taken whom we wont to fear ;
Remaineth none but mad-brain'd Salisbury,
And he may well in fretting spend his gall ;
Nor men, nor money, hath he to make war.

Char. Sound, sound alarm ! we will rush on them.
Now, for the honor of the <sup>3</sup>forborne French !
Him I forgive my death, that killeth me,
When he sees me go back one foot, or <sup>4</sup>flee.

[Excant.]

Alarums ; Excursions ; afterwards a Retreat.

Re-enter CHARLES, ALENCON, REIGNIER, and others.

Char. Who ever saw the like ? what men have I !—
Dogs ! cowards ! dastards !—I would ne'er have fled,
But that they left me 'midst my enemies.

Reig. Salisbury is a desperate homicide ;
He fighteth as one weary of his life :

The other lords, like lions wanting food,
Do rush upon us as their hungry <sup>5</sup>prey.

Alen. Froissart, a countryman of ours, records,
England all Olivers and Rowlands bred,

<sup>a</sup> " Their hungry prey," i. e., the prey for which they are hungry.

During the time Edward the third did reign.
More truly now may this be verified ;
For none but Samsons, and Goliasses,
It sendeth forth to skirmish. One to ten !
Lean raw-bou'd rascals ! who would e'er suppose
They had such courage and audacity ?

Char. Let's leave this town ; for they are hair-brain'd slaves,

And hunger will enforce them be more eager :
Of old I know them ; rather with their teeth
The walls they'll tear down, than forsake the siege.

Reig. I think, by some odd <sup>b</sup>gimmals, or device,
Their arms are set like clocks still to strike on ;
Else ne'er could they hold out so, as they do.
By my consent, we'll e'en let them alone.

Alen. Be it so.

Enter the Bastard of Orleans.

Bast. Where's the prince Dauphin ? I have news for him.

Char. <sup>c</sup>Bastard of Orleans, thrice welcome to us.

Bast. Methinks, your looks are sad, your <sup>d</sup>cheer appall'd :

Hath the late overthrow wrought this offence ?
Be not dismay'd, for succor is at hand :
A holy maid hither with me I bring,
Which, by a vision sent to her from heaven,
Ordained is to raise this tedious siege,
And drive the English forth the bounds of France.
The spirit of deep prophecy she hath,
Exceeding the nine <sup>e</sup>sibyls of old Rome ;
What's past and what's to come, she can descry.
Speak, shall I call her in ? Believe my words,
For they are certain and unfallible.

Char. Go, call her in. [Exit Bastard.] But first, to try her skill,

Reignier, stand thou as Dauphin in my place :
Question her proudly, let thy looks be stern.

By this means shall we sound what skill she hath. [Retires.]

Enter LA PUCELLE, Bastard of Orleans, and others.

Reig. Fair maid, is't thou wilt do these wond'rous feats ? [me ?]

Puc. Reignier, is't thou that thinkest to beguile
Where is the Dauphin ?—Come, come from behind ;
I know thee well, though never seen before.
Be not amaz'd, there's nothing hid from me :
In private will I talk with thee apart.—

Stand back, you lords, and give us leave awhile.
Reig. She takes upon her bravely at first dash.

<sup>6</sup>[They retire.]

Puc. Dauphin, I am by birth a shepherd's daughter,
My wit untrain'd in any kind of art.
Heaven and our <sup>g</sup>gracious Lady hath it pleas'd
To shine on my contemptible estate :

Lo ! whilst I waited on my tender lambs,
And to sun's parching heat display'd my cheeks,
God's mother deign'd to appear to me ;

And in a vision full of majesty,
Will'd me to leave my base vocation,
And free my country from calamity.

Her aid she promis'd, and assured success :

In complete glory she reveal'd herself ;
And, whereas I was black and swart before,
With those clear rays which she infus'd on me,
That beauty am I bless'd with, which you see.

Ask me what question thou canst possible see,
And I will answer unpremeditated :

<sup>d</sup> Countenance.—<sup>e</sup> By "the nine sibyls" are probably meant the nine sibylline books brought to one of the Tarquins.

My courage try by combat, if thou dar'st,
And thou shalt find that I exceed my sex.

<sup>a</sup> Resolve on this; thou shalt be fortunate,
If thou receive me for thy warlike mate.

Char. Thou hast astonish'd me with thy high terms.
Only this proof I'll of thy valor make:

In single combat thou shalt buckle with me,
And, if thou vanquishest, thy words are true;

<sup>1</sup> Or, I renounce all confidence in you.

Puc. I am prepar'd. Here is my keen-edg'd sword, Deck'd with five flower-de-luces on each side;
The which at Touraine, in Saint Katharine's churchyard,

Out of a great deal of old iron I chose forth.

Char. Then, come o' God's name: I fear no woman.

Puc. And, while I live, I'll ne'er fly from <sup>2</sup> no man.
[They fight.]

Char. Stay, stay thy hands! thou art an Amazon,
And fightest with the sword of Deborah. [weak.]

Puc. Christ's mother helps me, else I were too

Char. Whoe'er helps thee, 'tis thou that must help
Impatiently I burn with thy desire; [me.]

My heart and hands thou hast at once subdued.

Excellent Pucelle, if thy name be so,

Let me thy servant, and not sovereign, be:

'Tis the French Dauphin sueth thus to thee.

Puc. I must not yield to any rites of love,

For my profession's sacred, from above:

When I have chased all thy foes from hence,
Then will I think upon a recompense. [thrill.]

Char. Mean time look gracious on thy prostrate

Reig. My lord, methinks, is very long in talk.

<sup>3</sup> [They talk apart.]

Alen. Doubtless he shrives this woman to her smock,

Else ne'er could he so long protract his speech.

Reig. Shall we disturb him, since he keeps no mean? [know:]

Alen. He may mean more than we poor men do
These women are shrewd tempters with their tongues.

Reig. My lord, where are you? what devise you on? <sup>4</sup> [To him.]

Shall we give over Orleans, or no?

Puc. Why, no, I say: distrustful recreants!

Fight till the last gasp; I will be your guard.

Char. What she says, I'll confirm: we'll fight it out.

Puc. Assign'd am I to be the English scourge.

This night the siege assuredly I'll raise:

Expect Saint Martin's <sup>5</sup> summer, halcyon days,

Since I have entered into these wars.

Glory is like a circle in the water,

Which never ceaseth to enlarge itself,

Till by broad spreading it disperse to nought.

With Henry's death the English circle ends;

Dispersed are the glories it included.

Now am I like that proud insulting ship,

Which Cæsar and his <sup>6</sup> fortunes bare at once.

Char. Was Mahomet inspired with a dove?

Thou with an eagle art inspired, then.

Helen, the mother of great Constantine,

Nor yet St. Philip's <sup>7</sup> daughters were like thee.

Bright star of Venus fall'n down on the earth,

How may I <sup>8</sup> reverent worship thee enough?

Alen. Leave off delays, and let us raise the siege.

Reig. Woman, do what thou canst to save our honors.

Drive them from Orleans, and be immortaliz'd. [it:]

Char. Presently we'll try.—Come, let's away about
No prophet will I trust, if she prove false. [Exeunt.]

<sup>a</sup> "Resolve on this," i.e., be convinced of this.—<sup>b</sup> "Expect Saint Martin's summer," i.e., expect prosperity after misfortune, like fair weather after winter has begun.—<sup>c</sup> "St. Philip's daughters," i.e., the four daughters of Philip mentioned Acts xxi. 9.

SCENE III.—London. Tower Hill.

Enter, at the Gates, the Duke of GLOSTER, with his Serving-men.

Glo. I am come to survey the Tower this day;
Since Henry's death, I fear, there is <sup>a</sup> conveyance.—
Where be these warders, that they wait not here?
Open the gates! 'Tis Gloster that <sup>1</sup> now calls.

[Servants knock.]

<sup>1</sup> Ward. [Within.] Who's there, that knocks so imperiously?

we answer him:

We do no otherwise than we are will'd. [mine?]

Glo. Who will'd you <sup>2</sup> so? or whose will stands but There's none protector of the realm but I.—

Break <sup>3</sup> up the gates, I'll be your warrantize.

Shall I be flouted thus by dunghill grooms?

GLOSTER'S Men rush at the Tower Gates. Enter, to the gates, WOODVILLE, the Lieutenant.

Wood. [Within.] What noise is this? what traitors have we here?

Glo. Lieutenant, is it you whose voice I hear?

Open the gates! here's Gloster that would enter:

Wood. [Within.] Have patience, noble duke; I may not open;

The cardinal of Winchester forbids:

From him I have express commandment,

That thou, nor none of thine, shall be let in. [me?]

Glo. Faint-hearted Woodville, prizest him 'fore

Arrogant Winchester, that haughty prelate,

Whom Henry, our late sovereign, ne'er could brook?

Thou art no friend to God, or to the king:

Open the gates, or I'll shut thee out shortly.

Enter WINCHESTER, <sup>10</sup> and Servants in tawney coats.

Win. How now, ambitious Humphrey! what means this? [shut out?]

Glo. 'Pill'd priest, dost thou command mo <sup>11</sup> be

Win. I do, thou most usurping <sup>2</sup> proditor,

And not protector, of the king or realm.

Glo. Stand back, thou manifest conspirator,

Thou that contriv'st to murder our dead lord;

Thou that giv'st whores indulgences to <sup>3</sup> sin.

I'll <sup>4</sup> canvass thee in thy broad cardinal's hat,

If thou proceed in this thy insolence. [foot:]

Win. Nay, stand thou back; I will not budge a

This be Damascus, be thou cursed Cain,

To slay thy brother Abel, if thou wilt.

Glo. I will not slay thee, but I'll drive thee back.

Thy scarlet robes, as a child's bearing-cloth

I'll use to carry thee out of this place. [face.]

Win. Do what thou dar'st; I'll beard thee to thy

Glo. What! am I dar'd, and bearded to my face?—

Draw, men, for all this <sup>12</sup> is a privileg'd place;

Blue coats to tawney coats. Priest, beware your beard;

[GLOSTER and his Men attack the Bishop.]

I mean to tug it, and to cuff you soundly.

Under my feet I stamp thy cardinal's hat,

In spite of pope or dignities of church;

Here by the cheeks I'll drag thee up and down.

Win. Gloster, thou'lt answer this before the pope.

Glo. Winchester goose! I cry—a rope! a rope!—
Now beat them hence; why do you let them stay?—
Thee I'll chase hence, thou wolf in sheep's array.—
Out, tawney coats!—out, <sup>a</sup>scarlet hypocrite!

Here GLOSTER's Men beat out the Cardinal's Men, and enter, in the hurly-burly, the Mayor of London and his Officers.

May. Fie, lords! that you, being supreme magistrates,
Thus contumeliously should break the peace!
Glo. Peace, mayor! thou knowest little of my wrongs.

Here's Beaufort, that regards nor God nor king,
Hath here distraint'd the Tower to his use.

Win. Here's Gloster too, a foe to citizens;
One that still motions war, and never peace,
O'ercharging your free purses with large fines;
That seeks to overthrow religion,
Because he is protector of the realm;
And would have armor, here, out of the Tower,
To crown himself king, and suppress the prince.

Glo. I will not answer thee with words, but blows.

[Here they skirmish again.]

May. Nought rests for me, in this tumultuous strife,
But to make open proclamation.—

Come, officer: as loud <sup>1</sup>as thou canst cry.

Off. All manner of men, assembled here in arms this day, against God's peace, and the king's, we charge and command you, in his highness' name, to repair to your several dwelling-places; and not to wear, handle, or use, any sword, weapon, or dagger, henceforward, upon pain of death.

Glo. Cardinal, I'll be no breaker of the law;
But we shall meet, and break our minds at large.

Win. Gloster, we'll meet, to thy dear cost be sure:
Thy heart-blood I will have for this day's work.

May. I'll call for clubs, if you will not away.—
This cardinal's more haughty than the devil.

Glo. Mayor, farewell: thou dost but what thou may'st.

Win. Abominable Gloster! guard thy head;
For I intend to have it <sup>2</sup>off ere long. [Exeunt.]

May. See the coast clear'd, and then we will depart.—

Good God! that nobles should such <sup>b</sup>stomachs bear!
I myself fight not once in forty year. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—France. Before Orleans.

Enter, on the Walls, the Master-Gunner and his Son.

M. Gun. Sirrah, thou know'st how Orleans is besieg'd,

And how the English have the suburbs won.

Son. Father, I know; and oft have shot at them,
Howe'er unfortunate I miss'd my aim. [by me:]

M. Gun. But now thou shalt not. Be thou rul'd
Chief master-gunner um I of this town;
Something I must do to procure me <sup>c</sup>grace.

The prince's <sup>d</sup>espials have informed me,
How th' English, in the suburbs close trench'd,
Wont, through a secret grate of iron bars
In yonder tower to overpeer the city;

And thence discover, how, with most advantage,
They may vex us with shot, or with assault.
To intercept this inconvenience,

A piece of ordnance 'gainst it I have plac'd;
And fully even these three days have I watch'd,

If I could see them. Now, boy, do thou watch,
For I can stay no longer on my post.

If thou spy'st any, run and bring me word,

And thou shalt find me at the governor's. [Exit.]

Son. Father, I warrant you; take you no care:
I'll never trouble you, if I may spy them.

*Enter, in an upper Chamber of a Tower, the Lords
SALISBURY, and TALBOT; Sir WILLIAM GLANS-DALE, Sir THOMAS GARGRAVE, and others.*

Sal. Talbot, my life, my joy! again return'd?

How wert thou handled, being prisoner,
Or by what means got'st thou to be releas'd,
Discourse, I pry'thee, on this turret's top.

Tal. The duke of Bedford had a prisoner,
Called the brave lord <sup>3</sup>of Ponton de Santrailes;
For him I was exchang'd and ransomed.

But with a baser man of arms by far,
Once, in contempt, they would have barter'd me:

Which I, disdaining, scorn'd; and craved death,
Rather than I would be so vile-esteem'd:

In fine, redeem'd I was as I desir'd.

But, O! the treacherous Fastolfe wounds my heart:

Whom with my bare fists I would execute,

If I now had him brought into my power.

Sal. Yet tell'st thou not, how thou wert entertain'd.

Tal. With scoffs, and scorn, and contumelious
In open market-place produc'd they me, [taunts.]

To be a public spectacle to all:

Here, said they, is the terror of the French,

The scare-crow that affrights our children so.

Then broke I from the officers that led me,

And with my nails digg'd stones out of the ground,
To hurl at the beholders of my shame.

My grisly countenance made others fly;

None durst come near for fear of sudden death.

In iron walls they deem'd me not secure;

So great fear of my name 'mongst them was spread,

That they suppos'd I could rend bars of steel,

And spurn in pieces posts of adamant.

Wherefore a guard of chosen shot I had,

That walk'd about me every minute-while,

And if I did but stir out of my bed,

Ready they were to shoot me to the heart.

Sal. I grieve to hear what torments you endur'd,

But we will be reveng'd sufficiently.

Now, it is supper-time in Orleans:

Here, through this grate, I can count every one,

And view the Frenchmen how they fortify:

Let us look in; the sight will much delight thee.—

Sir Thomas Gargrave, and sir William Glansdale,

Let me have your express opinions,
Where is best place to make our battery next.

Gar. I think, at the north gate; for there stand
lords.

Glan. And I, here, at the bulwark of the bridge.

Tal. For aught I see, this city must be famish'd,
Or with light skirmishes enfeebled.

[Shot from the Town. SALISBURY, and Sir

THO. GARGRAVE fall.]

Sal. O Lord! have mercy on us, wretched sinners.

Gar. O Lord! have mercy on me, woeful man.

Tal. What chance is this, that suddenly hath cross'd us?—

Speak, Salisbury; at least, if thou canst speak:

How far'st thou, mirror of all martial men?

One of thine eyes, and thy cheek's side struck off!—

Accurs'd tower! accurs'd fatal hand,

That hath contriv'd this woeful tragedy!

In thirteen battles Salisbury o'ercame;

Henry the fifth he first train'd to the wars;

Whilst any trumpet did sound, or drum struck up,

His sword did ne'er leave striking in the field.—

Yet liv'st thou, Salisbury? though thy speech doth fail,

One eye thou hast to look to heaven for grace:

The sun with one eye vieweth all the world.—

i. e., such haughty pride.—<sup>c</sup> Favor.—<sup>d</sup> Spies.

Heaven, be thou gracious to none alive,
 If Salisbury want mercy at thy hands!—
 Bear hence his body, I will help to bury it.—
 Sir Thomas Gargrave, hast thou any life?
 Speak unto Talbot; nay, look up to him.
 Salisbury, cheer thy spirit with this comfort;
 Thou shalt not die, whiles——
 He beckons with his hand, and smiles on me,
 As who should say, "When I am dead and gone,
 Remember to avenge me on the French."—
 Plantagenet, I will; and, Nero-like,
 Play on the lute, beholding the towns burn:
 Wretched shall France be only in my name.

[An Alarum: it thunders and lightens.]

What stir is this? What tumult's in the heavens?
 Whence cometh this alarum, and the noise?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, my lord! the French have gather'd head:

The Dauphin, with one Joan la Pucelle join'd,
 A holy prophetess, new risen up,
 Is come with a great power to raise the siege.

[SALISBURY lifts himself up and groans.]

Tal. Hear, hear, how dying Salisbury doth groan!
 It irks his heart he cannot be reveng'd.—
 Frenchmen, I'll be a Salisbury to you,
 Pucelle or a puzzel, dolphin or dogfish,
 Your hearts I'll stamp out with my horse's heels,
 And make a quagmire of your mingled brains.—
 Convey me Salisbury into his tent,
 And then we'll try 'what dastard Frenchmen dare.

[Exeunt, bearing out the bodies.]

SCENE V.—The Same. Before one of the Gates.

Alarum. Skirmishings. TALBOT pursues the Dauphin, and drives him: then enter JOAN LA PUCELLE, driving Englishmen before her. Then enter TALBOT.

Tal. Where is my strength, my valor, and my force?
 Our English troops retire, I cannot stay them;
 A woman clad in armor chaseth them.

Enter LA PUCELLE.

Here, here she comes.—I'll have a bout with thee;
 Devil, or devil's dam, I'll conjure thee:
 Blood will I draw on thee; thou art a witch,
 And straightway give thy soul to him thou serv'st.

Puc. Come, come; 'tis only I that must disgrace thee. [They fight.]

Tal. Heavens, can you suffer hell so to prevail?
 My breast I'll burst with straining of my courage,
 And from my shoulders crack my arms asunder,
 But I will chastise this high-minded strumpet.

Puc. Talbot, farewell; thy hour is not yet come;
 I must go victual Orleans forthwith.
 O'ertake me if thou canst; I scorn thy strength.
 Go, go, cheer up thy hunger-starved men;
 Help Salisbury to make his testament:
 This day is ours, as many more shall be.

[PUCELLE enters the Town, with Soldiers.]

Tal. My thoughts are whirled like a potter's wheel;
 I know not where I am, nor what I do.
 A witch by fear, not force, like Hannibal,
 Drives back our troops, and conquers as she lists:
 So bees with smoke, and doves with noisome stench,
 Are from their hives and houses driven away.
 They call'd us for our fierceness English dogs;

* "Pucelle or puzzel," i. e., maid or dirty wench.—<sup>b</sup> The superstition of those times taught, that he who could draw a witch's blood was free from her power.—<sup>c</sup> An allusion to Hannibal's stratagem to escape, by fixing bundles of lighted twigs on the horns of oxen.

Now, like to whelps, we crying run away.

[A short Alarum.]

Hark, countrymen! either renew the fight,
 Or tear the lions out of England's coat;
 Renounce your soil, give sheep in lions' stead:
 Sheep run not half so treacherous from the wolf,
 Or horse, or oxen, from the leopard,
 As you fly from your oft-subdued slaves.

[Alarum. Another skirmish.]

It will not be.—Retire into your trenches:

You all consented unto Salisbury's death,
 For none would strike a stroke in his revenge.—
 Pucelle is enter'd into Orleans

In spite of us, or aught that we could do.

O! would I were to die with Salisbury.

The shame hereof will make me hide my head.

[Alarum. Retreat. Exeunt TALBOT and his Forces.]

SCENE VI.—The Same.

Flourish. Enter, on the Walls, PUCELLE, CHARLES, REIGNIER, ALENÇON, and Soldiers.

Puc. Advance our waving colors on the walls!

Rescu'd is Orleans from the English wolves.

Thus Joan la Pucelle hath perform'd her word.

Char. Divinest creature, bright Astraea's daughter,
 How shall I honor thee for this success?

Thy promises are like Adonis' gardens,
 That one day bloom'd, and fruitful were the next.—
 France, triumph in thy glorious prophetess!—

Recover'd is the town of Orleans:

More blessed hap did ne'er befall our state.

Reig. Why ring not out the bells aloud throughout the town?

Dauphin, command the citizens make bonfires

And feast and banquet in the open streets,

To celebrate the joy that God hath given us. [Joy.]

Alen. All France will be replete with mirth and
 When they shall hear how we have play'd the men.

Char. 'Tis Joan, not we, by whom the day is won,

For which I will divide my crown with her;

And all the priests and friars in my realm

Shall in procession sing her endless praise.

A statelier pyramid to her I'll rear,

Than Rhodope's, or Memphis', ever was:

In memory of her, when she is dead,

Her ashes, in an urn more precious

Than the rich-jewel'd coffer of Darius,

Transported shall be at high festivals

Before the kings and queens of France.

No longer on Saint Dennis will we cry,

But Joan la Pucelle shall be France's saint.

Come in; and let us banquet royally,

After this golden day of victory. [Flourish. Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Same.

Enter to the Gates, a French Sergeant, and Two Sentinels.

Serg. Sirs, take your places, and be vigilant.

If any noise, or soldier, you perceive,

Near to the walls, by some apparent sign

Let us have knowledge at the court of guard.

[Exit Sergeant.]

1 Sent. Sergeant, you shall. Thus are poor ser-
 (When others sleep upon their quiet beds) [vitors
 Constrain'd to watch in darkness, rain, and cold.

* "The court of guard," i. e., the guard-room.

Enter TALBOT, BEDFORD, BURGUNDY, and Forces, with scaling Ladders; their Drums beating a dead march.

Tal. Lord regent, and redoubted Burgundy,
By whose approach the regions of Artois,
Walloon, and Picardy, are friends to us,
This happy night the Frenchmen are secure,
Having all day carous'd and banqueted.
Embrace we, then, this opportunity,
As fitting best to a quittance their deceit,
Contriv'd by art, and baleful sorcery. [his fame,

Bed. Coward of France!—how much he wrongs
Despairing of his own arm's fortitude,
To join with witches, and the help of hell.

Bur. Traitors have never other company.
But what's that Pucelle, whom they term so pure?
Tal. A maid, they say.

Bed. A maid, and be so martial?
Bur. Pray God, she prove not masculine ere long;
If underneath the standard of the French,
She carry armor, as she hath begun. [spirits;
Tal. Well, let them practise and converse with God is our fortress, in whose conquering name
Let us resolve to scale their flinty bulwarks.

Bed. Ascend, brave Talbot; we will follow thee.
Tal. Not all together: better far, I guess,
That we do make our entrance several ways,
That if it chance the one of us do fail,
The other yet may rise against their force.

Bed. Agreed. I'll to you corner.
Bur. And I to this.
Tal. And here will Talbot mount, or make his grave.—

Now, Salisbury, for thee, and for the right
Of English Henry, shall this night appear
How much in duty I am bound to both.

[The English scale the Walls, crying St.

George! a Talbot! and all enter the Town.

Sent. [Within.] Arm, arm! the enemy doth make assault!

<sup>1</sup> Frenchmen leap over the Walls in their skirts. Enter, several ways, BASTARD, ALENÇON, REIGNIER, half ready, and half unready.

Alen. How now, my lords! what, all unready so?

Bast. Unready? ay, and glad we 'scap'd so well.

Reig. 'Twas time, I trow, to wake and leave our Hearing alarms at our chamber doors. [beds,

Alen. Of all exploits, since first I followed arms,

Ne'er heard I of a warlike enterprise

More venturous, or desperate than this.

Bast. I think, this Talbot be a fiend of hell.

Reig. If not of hell, the heavens, sure, favor him.

Alen. Here cometh Charles: I marvel, how he sped.

Enter CHARLES and LA PUCELLE.

Bast. Tut! holy Joan was his defensive guard.

Char. Is this thy cunning, thou deceitful dame?

Didst thou at first, to flatter us withal,

Make us partakers of a little gain,

That now our loss might be ten times so much?

Puc. Wherefore is Charles impatient with his

At all times will you have my power alike? [friend?

Sleeping or waking must I still prevail,

Or will you blame, and lay the fault on me?—

Improvident soldiers! had your watch been good,

This sudden mischief never could have fallen.

Char. Duke of Alençon, this was your default,

That, being captain of the watch to-night,

Did look no better to that weighty charge.

Alen. Had all your quarters been as safely kept,

As that whereof I had the government,
We had not been thus shamefully surpriz'd.

Bast. Mine was secure.

Reig. And so was mine, my lord.

Char. And for myself, most part of all this night,

Within her quarter, and mine own precinct,

I was employ'd in passing to and fro,

About relieving of the sentinels:

Then, how, or which way, should they first break in?

Puc. Question, my lords, no further of the case,

How, or which way: 'tis sure, they found some place

But weakly guarded, where the breach was made;

And now there rests no other shift but this,—

To gather our soldiers, scatter'd and dispers'd,

And lay new <sup>b</sup>platforms to endamage them.

Alarm. Enter an English Soldier, crying, a Talbot! a Talbot! They fly, leaving their Clothes behind.

Sold. I'll be so bold to take what they have left.

The cry of Talbot serves me for a sword;

For I have loaden me with many spoils,

Using no other weapon but his name. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Orleans. Within the Town.

Enter TALBOT, BEDFORD, BURGUNDY, a Captain, and others.

Bed. The day begins to break, and night is fled,
Whose pitchy mantle over-veil'd the earth.
Here sound retreat, and cease our hot pursuit.

[Retreat sounded.

Tal. Bring forth the body of old Salisbury;

And here advance it in the market-place,

The middle centre of this cursed town.—

Now have I paid my vow unto his soul;

For every drop of blood was drawn from him,

There have at least five Frenchmen died to-night.

And that hereafter ages may behold

What ruin happen'd in revenge of him

Within their chiefest temple I'll erect

A tomb, wherein his corpse shall be interr'd:

Upon the which, that every one may read,

Shall be engrav'd the sack of Orleans,

The treacherous manner of his mournful death,

And what a terror he had been to France.

But, lords, in all our bloody massacre,

I c'muse, we met not with the Dauphin's grace,

His new-come champion, virtuous Joan of Arc,

Nor any of his false confederates.

Bed. 'Tis thought, lord Talbot, when the fight began,

Rous'd on the sudden from their drowsy beds

They did, amongst the troops of armed men,

Leap o'er the walls for refuge in the field.

Bur. Myself, as far as I could well discern

For smoke, and dusky vapors of the night,

Am sure I scar'd the Dauphin, and his trull;

When arm in arm they both came swiftly running,

Like to a pair of loving turtle-doves,

That could not live asunder, day or night.

After that things are set in order here,

We'll follow them with all the power we have.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. All hail, my lords! Which of this princely

Call ye the warlike Talbot, for his acts [train

So much applauded through the realm of France?

Tal. Here is the Talbot; who would speak with him?

Mess. The virtuous lady, countess of Auvergne,

With modesty admiring thy renown,

By me entreats, great lord, thou would'st vouchsafe

To visit her poor castle where she <sup>d</sup>lies;

<sup>a</sup> Requite; repay.

That she may boast she hath beheld the man
Whose glory fills the world with loud report.

Bur. Is it even so? Nay, then, I see, our wars
Will turn unto a peaceful comic sport,
When ladies crave to be encounter'd with.—
You may not, my lord, despise her gentle suit. [men

Tal. Ne'er trust me then; for when a world of
Could not prevail with all their oratory,
Yet hath a woman's kindness over-ru'd.—
And therefore tell her, I return great thanks,
And in submission will attend on her.—
Will not your honors bear me company?

Bed. No, truly, it is more than manners will;
And I have heard it said, unbidden guests
Are often welcomest when they are gone.

Tal. Well then, alone, since there's no remedy,
I mean to prove this lady's courtesy. [my mind.

Come hither, captain. [Whispers.—You perceive
Capt. I do, my lord, and mean accordingly.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Auvergne. Count of the Castle.

Enter the COUNTESS and her Porter.

Count. Porter, remember what I gave in charge;
And, when you have done so, bring the keys to me.

Port. Madam I will. [Exit.

Count. The plot is laid: if all things fall out right,
I shall as famous be by this exploit,
As Scythian Thomyris by Cyrus' death.
Great is the rumor of this dreadful knight,
And his achievements of no less account:
Fain would mine eyes be witness with mine ears,
To give their censure of these rare reports.

Enter Messenger and TALBOT.

Mess. Madam, according as your ladyship desir'd,
By message crav'd, so is lord Talbot come. [man?

Count. And he is welcome.—What! is this the Mess. Madam, it is.

Count. Is this the scourge of France?
Is this the Talbot, so much fear'd abroad,
That with his name the mothers still their babes?
I see report is fabulous and false:
I thought I should have seen some Hercules,
A second Hector for his grim aspect,
And large proportion of his strong-knit limbs.
Alas! this is a child, a silly dwarf:
It cannot be, this weak and writhled shrimp
Should strike such terror to his enemies.

Tal. Madam, I have been told to trouble you;
But, since your ladyship is not at leisure,
I'll sort some other time to visit you.

Count. What means he now?—Go ask him, whither he goes.

Mess. Stay, my lord Talbot; for my lady craves
To know the cause of your abrupt departure.

Tal. Marry, for that she's in a wrong belief,
I go to certify her Talbot's here.

Re-enter Porter, with Keys.

Count. If thou be he, then art thou prisoner.
Tal. Prisoner! to whom?

Count. To me, blood-thirsty lord;
And for that cause I train'd thee to my house.
Long time thy shadow hath been thrall to me,
For in my gallery thy picture hangs;
But now the substance shall endure the like,
And I will chain these legs and arms of thine,
That hast by tyranny these many years,
Wasted our country, slain our citizens,
And sent our sons and husbands captivate.

Tal. Ha, ha, ha!

[turn to moan.

Count. Laughest thou, wretch? thy mirth shall
Tal. I laugh to see your ladyship so fond,
To think that you have aught but Talbot's shadow,
Whereon to practise your severity.

Count. Why, art not thou the man?

Tal.

I am indeed.

Count. Then have I substance too.

Tal. No, no, I am but shadow of myself;
You are deceiv'd, my substance is not here;
For what you see, is but the smallest part
And least proportion of humanity.

I tell you, madam, were the whole frame here,
It is of such a spacious lofty pitch,
Your roof were not sufficient to contain it.

Count. This is a riddling merchant for the nonce;
He will be here, and yet he is not here:
How can these contrarieties agree?

Tal. That will I show you, lady, presently.

He winds his Horn. Drums strike up; a Peal of Ordinance. The Gates being forced, enter Soldiers.

How say you, madam? are you now persuaded,
That Talbot is but shadow of himself?

These are his substance, sinews, arms, and strength,
With which he yoketh your rebellious necks,
Razeth your cities, and subverts your towns,
And in a moment makes them desolate.

Count. Victorious Talbot, pardon my abuse:
I find, thou art no less than fame hath bruited,
And more than may be gather'd by thy shape.
Let my presumption not provoke thy wrath;
For I am sorry, that with reverence
I did not entertain thee as thou art.

Tal. Be not dismay'd, fair lady; nor misconstrue
The mind of Talbot, as you did mistake
The outward composition of his body.
What you have done hath not offended me:

No other satisfaction do I crave,
But only, with your patience, that we may Taste of your wine, and see what eates you have;
For soldiers' stomachs always serve them well.

Count. With all my heart; and think me honored
To feast so great a warrior in my house. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—London. The Temple Garden.

Enter the Earls of SOMERSET, SUFFOLK, and WAR-WICK; RICHARD PLANTAGENET, VERNON, and a Lawyer.

Plan. Great lords, and gentlemen, what means this silence?

Dare no man answer in a case of truth?

Suf. Within the Temple hall we were too loud:
The garden here is more convenient.

Plan. Then say at once, if I maintain'd the truth,
Or else was wrangling Somerset in the error?

Suf. Faith, I have been a truant in the law,
And never yet could frame my will to it;
And, therefore, frame the law unto my will.

Som. Judge you, my lord of Warwick, then, between us. [pitch,

War. Between two hawks, which flies the higher
Between two dogs, which hath the deeper mouth,
Between two blades, which bears the better temper,
Between two horses, which doth bear him best,
Between two girls, which hath the merriest eye,
I have, perhaps, some shallow spirit of judgment;
But in these nice sharp quillets of the law,
Good faith, I am no wiser than a daw.

sion.—<sup>e</sup> Reported.—<sup>f</sup> Subtleties.

Plan. Tut, tut! here is a mannerly forbearance:
The truth appears so naked on my side,
That any purblind eye may find it out.

Som. And on my side it is so well apparell'd,
So clear, so shining, and so evident,
That it will glimmer through a blind man's eye.

Plan. Since you are tongue-tied, and so loath to speak,

In dumb <sup>a</sup>significants proclaim your thoughts.

Let him, that is a true-born gentleman,
And stands upon the honor of his birth,
If he suppose that I have pleaded truth,
From off this brier pluck a white rose with me.

Som. Let him that is no coward, nor no flatterer,
But dare maintain the party of the truth,
Pluck a red rose from off this thorn with me.

War. I love no <sup>b</sup>colors; and, without all color

Of base insinuating flattery,
I pluck this white rose with Plantagenet.

Suf. I pluck this red rose with young Somerset;
And say withal, I think he held the right. [more,

Ver. Stay, lords, and gentlemen; and pluck no
Till you conclude that he, upon whose side
The fewest roses are cropp'd from the tree,
Shall yield the other in the right opinion.

Som. Good master Vernon, it is well <sup>c</sup>objected:
If I have fewest, I subscribe in silence.

Plan. And I.

Ver. Then, for the truth and plainness of the case,
I pluck this pale and maiden blossom here,
Giving my verdict on the white rose side,

Som. Prick not your finger as you pluck it off;
Lest, bleeding, you do paint the white rose red,
And fall on my side so, against your will.

Ver. If I, my lord, for my opinion bleed,
Opinion shall be surgeon to my hurt,
And keep me on the side where still I am.

Som. Well, well, come on: who else?

Law. Unless my study and my books be false,
The argument you held was wrong in you;
In sign whereof, I pluck a white rose too.

Plan. Now, Somerset, where is your argument?

Som. Here, in my scabbard; meditating that,
Shall die your white rose in a bloody red. [roses;

Plan. Mean time, your cheeks do counterfeit our
For pale they look with fear, as witnessing
The truth on our side.

Som. No, Plantagenet,
'Tis not for fear, but anger; <sup>1</sup>and thy cheeks
Blush for pure shame to counterfeit our roses,
And yet thy tongue will not confess thy error.

Plan. Hath not thy rose a canker, Somerset?

Som. Hath not thy rose a thorn, Plantagenet?

Plan. Ay, sharp and piercing, to maintain his truth,
Whiles thy consuming canker eats his falsehood.

Som. Well, I'll find friends to wear my bleeding-
That shall maintain what I have said is true, [roses,
Where false Plantagenet dare not be seen.

Plan. Now, by this maiden blossom in my hand,
I scorn thee and thy faction, peevish boy.

Suf. Turn not thy scorn this way, Plantagenet,

Plan. Proud Poole, I will; and scorn both him and thee.

Suf. I'll turn my part thereof into thy throat.

Som. Away, away, good William De-la-Poole.
We grace the yeoman, by conversing with him.

War. Now, by God's will, thou wrong'st him,
Somerset:

His grandfather was Lionel, duke of Clarence,
Third son to the third Edward, king of England.

<sup>a</sup>That is, dumb signs.—<sup>b</sup>"No colors," i. e., no deceits: a play upon the word.—<sup>c</sup>"Well objected," i. e., justly proposed.

Spring crestless <sup>d</sup>yeomen from so deep a root?

Plan. He <sup>e</sup>braves him on the place's <sup>f</sup>privilege,
Or durst not, for his craven heart, say thus.

Som. By him that made me, I'll maintain my words
On any plot of ground in Christendom.

Was not thy father, Richard earl of Cambridge,
For treason executed on our late king's days?

And by his treason stand'st not thou attained,
Corrupted, and <sup>g</sup>exempt from ancient gentry?

His trespass yet lives guilty in thy blood;

And, till thou be restor'd, thou art a yeoman.

Plan. My father was attached, not attained,

Condemn'd to die for treason, but no traitor;

And that I'll prove on better men than Somerset,

Were growing time once ripen'd to my will.

For your <sup>h</sup>partaker Poole, and you yourself,

I'll note you in my book of memory,

To scourge you for this <sup>i</sup>apprehension:

Look to it well, and say you are well warn'd.

Som. <sup>j</sup>Ah! thou shalt find us ready for thee still,

And know us by these colors for thy foes;

For these my friends in spite of thee shall wear.

Plan. And, by my soul, this pale and angry rose,

As <sup>k</sup>cognizance of my blood-drinking hate,

Will I for ever, and my faction, wear,

Until it wither with me in my grave,

Or flourish to the height of my degree.

Suf. Go forward, and be chok'd with thy ambition:

And so farewell, until I meet thee next. [Exit.

Som. Have with thee, Poole.—Farewell, ambitious Richard. [Exit.

Plan. How I am brav'd, and must perforce endure
it! [house,

War. This blot, that they object against your

Shall be wip'd out in the next parliament,

Call'd for the truce of Winchester and Gloster;

And if thou be not then crested York,

I will not live to be accounted Warwick.

Mean time, in signal of my love to thee,

Against proud Somerset, and William Poole,

Will I upon thy party wear this rose.

And here I prophesy,—this brawl to-day,

Grown to this faction in the Temple garden,

Shall send, between the red rose and the white,

<sup>l</sup>Ten thousand souls to death and deadly night.

Plan. Good master Vernon, I am bound to you,

That on my behalf would pluck a flower.

Ver. In your behalf still will I wear the same.

Law. And so will I.

Plan. Thanks, gentle sir:

Come, let us four to dinner. I dare say,

This quarrel will drink blood another day. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Same. A Room in the Tower.

Enter MORTIMER, <sup>m</sup>blind, brought in a Chair by Two Keepers.

Mor. Kind keepers of my weak decaying age,

Let dying Mortimer here rest himself.—

Even like a man new haled from the rack,

So fare my limbs with long imprisonment;

And these grey locks, the <sup>n</sup>pursuivants of death,

Nestor-like aged in <sup>o</sup>a cage of care,

Argue the end of Edmund Mortimer.

These eyes, like lamps whose wasting oil is spent,

Wax dim, as drawing to their <sup>p</sup>exigent:

Weak shoulders, overborne with burdening grief,

And pitiless arms, like to a wither'd vine

That droops his sapless branches to the ground :
Yet are these feet, whose strengthless stay is numb,
Unable to support this lump of clay,
Swift-winged with desire to get a grave,
As witting I no other comfort have.—
But tell me, keeper, will my nephew come ?

1 Keeper. Richard Plantagenet, my lord, will come :
We sent unto the Temple, to his chamber,
And answer was return'd that he will come.

<sup>1</sup> [Exit Keeper.]

Mor. Enough ; my soul shall then be satisfied.—
Poor gentleman, his wrong doth equal mine.
Since Henry Monmouth first began to reign,
Before whose glory I was great in arms,
This loathsome sequestration have I had ;
And even since then hath Richard been obscur'd,
Depriv'd of honor and inheritance :
But now, the arbitrator of despairs,
Just death, kind umpire of men's miseries,
With sweet enlargement doth dismiss me hence.
I would his troubles likewise were expir'd,
That so he might recover what was lost.

Enter RICHARD PLANTAGENET, <sup>2</sup> and Keeper.

1 Keeper. My lord, your loving nephew now is come.

Mor. Richard Plantagenet, my friend, is he come ?

Plan. Ay, noble uncle, thus ignobly us'd,
Your nephew, late despised Richard, comes.

Mor. Direct mine arms I may embrace his neck,
And in his bosom spend my latter gasp.

O ! tell me, when my lips do touch his <sup>3</sup> cheek,
That I may kindly give one fainting kiss.—

And now declare, sweet stem from York's great stock,
Why didst thou say—of late thou wert despis'd ?

Plan. First, lean thine aged back against mine
And in that ease I'll tell thee my <sup>a</sup> disease. [arm,
This day, in argument upon a case,

Some words there grew 'twixt Somerset and me ;
Among which terms he us'd his lavish tongue,
And did upbraid me with my father's death :

Which obloquy set bars before my tongue,
Else with the like I had requited him.

Therefore, good uncle, for my father's sake,
In honor of a true Plantagenet,

And for alliance' sake, declare the cause

My father, earl of Cambridge, lost his head.

Mor. That cause, fair nephew, that imprison'd me,
And hath detain'd me all my flow'ring youth
Within a loathsome dungeon, there to pine,
Was curs'd instrument of his decease.

Plan. Discover more at large what cause that was :
For I am ignorant, and cannot guess.

Mor. I will, if that my fading breath permit,
And death approach not ere my tale be done.

Henry the fourth, grandfather to this king,
Depos'd his <sup>b</sup> nephew Richard, Edward's son,

The first-begotten, and the lawful heir

Of Edward, king the third of that descent :

During whose reign the Percies of the north,
Finding his usurpation most unjust,

Endeavor'd my advancement to the throne.

The reason mov'd these warlike lords to this,
Was for that young king Richard thus remov'd,

(Leaving no heir begotten of his body)

I was the next by birth and parentage ;

For by my mother I deriv'd am

From Lionel duke of Clarence, the third son

To king Edward the third, whereas he

From John of Gaunt doth bring his pedigree,

Being but fourth of that heroic line.

But mark : as, in this <sup>c</sup> haughty great attempt

They labored to plant the rightful heir,
I lost my liberty, and they their lives.
Long after this, when Henry the fifth,
(Succeeding his father Bolingbroke) did reign,
Thy father, earl of Cambridge, then deriv'd
From famous Edmund Langley, duke of York,
Marrying my sister, that thy mother was,
Again, in pity of my hard distress,
Levied an army, <sup>d</sup> weening to redeem,
And have install'd me in the diadem ;
But, as the rest, so fell that noble earl,
And was beheaded. Thus the Mortimers,
In whom the title rested, were suppress'd.

Plan. Of which, my lord, your honor is the last.

Mor. True ; and thou seest, that I no issue have,
And that my fainting words do warrant death.

Thou art my heir : the rest, I wish thee gather ;

But yet be wary in thy studious care.

Plan. Thy grave admonishments prevail with me.
But yet, methinks, my father's execution

Was nothing less than bloody tyranny.

Mor. With silence, nephew, be thou politic :

Strong-fixed is the house of Lancaster,

And, like a mountain, not to be remov'd.

But now thy uncle is removing hence,

As princes do their courts, when they are cloy'd

With long continuance in a settled place.

Plan. O, uncle ! would some part of my young years
Might but redeem the passage of your age.

Mor. Thou dost, then, wrong me ; as the slaughterer doth,

Which giveth many wounds, when one will kill

Mourn not, except thou sorrow for my good ;

Only, give order for my funeral.

And so farewell ; and fair be all thy hopes,

And prosperous be thy life, in peace, and war !

[Dies.]

Plan. And peace, no war, befall thy parting soul !

In prison hast thou spent a pilgrimage,

And like a hermit overpass'd thy days.—

Well, I will lock his counsel in my breast ;

And what I do imagine, let that rest.—

Keepers, convey him hence ; and I myself

Will see his burial better than his life.—

[Exeunt Keepers, bearing out MORTIMER.

Here dies the dusky torch of Mortimer,

Chok'd with ambition of the meaner sort :

And, for those wrongs, those bitter injuries,

Which Somerset hath offer'd to my house,

I doubt not but with honor to redress ;

And therefore haste I to the parliament,

Either to be restored to my blood,

Or make <sup>4</sup> my will th' advancer of my good. [Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Same. The Parliament-House.

Flourish. Enter King HENRY, EXETER, GLOSTER, WARWICK, SOMERSET, and SUFFOLK ; the Bishop of WINCHESTER, RICHARD PLANTAGENET, and others. GLOSTER offers to put up a <sup>a</sup> Bill ; WIN-CHESTER snatches it, and tears it.

Win. Com'st thou with deep premeditated lines,
With written pamphlets studiously devis'd ?

Humphrey of Gloster, if thou canst accuse,

Or ought intend'st to lay unto my charge,

Do it without invention, suddenly ;

As I with sudden and extemporal speech

Purpose to answer what thou canst object.

Glo. Presumptuous priest! this place commands my patience,

Or thou should'st find thou hast dishonor'd me.

Think not, although in writing I prefer

The manner of thy vile outrageous crimes,

That therefore I have forg'd, or am not able

Verbatim to rehearse the method of my pen:

No, prelate; such is thy audacious wickedness,

Thy lewd, pestiferous, and dissentious pranks,

As very infants prattle of thy pride.

Thou art a most pernicious usurer,

Forward by nature, enemy to peace;

Lascivious, wanton, more than well becoms

A man of thy profession, and degree:

And for thy treachery, what's more manifest,

In that thou laid'st a trap to take my life,

As well at London bridge, as at the Tower?

Beside, I fear me, if thy thoughts were sifted,

The king, thy sovereign, is not quite exempt

From envious malice of thy swelling heart.

Win. Gloster, I do defy thee.—Lords, vouchsafe

To give me hearing what I shall reply.

If I were covetous, ambitious, proud,

As he will have me, how am I so poor?

Or how haps it, I seek not to advance

Or raise myself, but keep my wonted calling?

And for dissension, who preserveth peace

More than I do, except I be provok'd?

No, my good lords, it is not that offends;

It is not that that hath incens'd the duke:

It is, because no one should sway but he;

No one but he should be about the king;

And that engenders thunder in his breast,

And makes him roar these accusations forth.

But he shall know, I am as good——

Glo. As good? Thou bastard of my grandfather!—

Win. Ay, lordly sir; for what are you, I pray,

But one imperious in another's throne?

Glo. Am I not the protector, saucy priest?

Win. And am not I a prelate of the church?

Glo. Yes, as an outlaw in a castle keeps,

And useth it to patronage his theft.

Win. Unreverent Gloster!

Glo. Thou art reverent

Touching thy spiritual function, not thy life.

Win. Rome shall remedy this.

War. Room thither then.

My lord, it were your duty to forbear.

Som. Ay, see the bishop be not overborne.

Methinks, my lord should be religious,

And know the office that belongs to such.

War. Methinks, his lordship should be humbler:

It fitteth not a prelate so to plead.

Som. Yes, when his holy state is touch'd so near.

War. State holy, or unhallow'd, what of that?

Is not his grace protector to the king?

Plan. Plantagenet, I see, must hold his tongue;

<sup>3</sup>[Aside.

Lest he be said, "Speak, sirrah, when you should;

Must your bold verdict enter talk with lords?"

Else would I have a fling at Winchester.

K. Hen. Uncles of Gloster, and of Winchester,

The special watchmen of our English weal,

I would prevail, if prayers might prevail,

To join your hearts in love and amity.

O! what a scandal is it to our crown,

That two such noble peers as ye should jar.

Believe me, lords, my tender years can tell,

Civil dissension is a viperous worm,

That gnaws the bowels of the commonwealth.—

[A noise within: Down with the lawney coats!

What tumult's this?

War. An uproar, I dare warrant,
Begun through malice of the bishop's men.

[A noise again: Stones! Stones!

Enter the Mayor of London, and some Citizens.

May. O, my good lords, and virtuous Henry,

Pity the city of London, pity us!

The bishop's and the duke of Gloster's men,

Forbidden late to carry any weapon,

Have fill'd their pockets full of pebble-stones;

And banding themselves in contrary parts,

Do pelt so fast at one another's pates,

That many have their giddy brains knock'd out.

Our windows are broke down in every street,

And we for fear compell'd to shut our shops.

Enter, skirmishing, the Retainers of GLOSTER, and

WINCHESTER, with bloody pates.

K. Hen. We charge you, on allegiance to ourself,

To hold your slaughtering hands, and keep the peace.

Pray, uncle Gloster, mitigate this strife.

1 Serv. Nay, if we be Forbidden stones, we'll fall to it with our teeth.

2 Serv. Do what ye dare; we are as resolute.

[Skirmish again.

Glo. You, of my household, leave this peevish broil,

And set this unaccustom'd fight aside.

1 Serv. My lord, we know your grace to be a man

Just and upright; and, for your royal birth,

Inferior to none but to his majesty;

And ere that we will suffer such a prince,

So kind a father of the commonweal,

To be disgraced by an ink-horn mate,

We, and our wives, and children, all will fight,

And have our bodies slaughter'd by thy foes.

3 Serv. Ay, and the very parings of our nails

Shall pitch a field, when we are dead.

[Skirmish again.

Glo. Stay, stay!

And, if you love me, as you say you do,

Let me persuade you to forbear a while.

K. Hen. O, how this discord doth afflict my soul!—

Can you, my lord of Winchester, behold

My sighs and tears, and will not once relent?

Who should be pitiful, if you be not?

Or who should study to preserve a peace,

If holy churchmen take delight in broils? [ter;

War. Yield, lord protector; and yield, Winches-

Except you mean, with obstinate repulse,

To slay your sovereign, and destroy the realm.

You see what mischief, and what murder too,

Hath been enacted through your enmity;

Then, be at peace, except ye thirst for blood.

Win. He shall submit, or I will never yield.

Glo. Compassion on the king commands me stoop;

Or I would see his heart out, ere the priest

Should ever get that privilege of me.

War. Behold, my lord of Winchester, the duke

Hath banish'd moody discontented fury,

As by his smoothed brows it doth appear:

Why look you still so stern, and tragical?

Glo. Here, Winchester; I offer thee my hand.

<sup>10</sup>[Winchester refuses it.

K. Hen. Fye, uncle Beaufort! I have heard you preach,

That malice was a great and grievous sin;

And will not you maintain the thing you teach,

But prove a chief offender in the same?

War. Sweet king!—the bishop hath a kindly b'gird.

For shame, my lord of Winchester, relent:

<sup>b</sup> "Hath a kindly gird," i. e., feels an emotion of kindness.

What! shall a child instruct you what to do?

Win. Well, duke of Gloster, I will yield to thee;
Love for thy love, and hand for hand I give.

<sup>1</sup> [Gives his hand.]

Glo. Ay; but I fear me, with a hollow heart.

[Aside.]

See here, my friends, and loving countrymen;

This token serveth for a flag of truce,
Betwixt ourselves, and all our followers.

So help me God, as I dissemble not!

Win. So help me God, as I intend it not! [Aside.]

K. Hen. O, loving uncle, and kind duke of Gloster,
How joyful am I made by this contract!—

Away, my masters: trouble us no more,
But join in friendship, as your lords have done.

1 Serv. Content: I'll to the surgeon's.

2 Serv. And so will I.

3 Serv. And I will see what physic the tavern affords.

[Exeunt Mayor, 2 Citizens, Servants, &c.]

War. Accept this scroll, most gracious sovereign,
Which in the right of Richard Plantagenet

We do exhibit to your majesty. [prince,

Glo. Well urg'd, my lord of Warwick:—for, sweet

And if your grace mark every circumstance,
You have great reason to do Richard right;
Especially for those occasions

At Eltham-place I told your majesty.

K. Hen. And those occasions, uncle, were of force:

Therefore, my loving lords, our pleasure is,

That Richard be restored to his blood.

War. Let Richard be restored to his blood;

So shall his father's wrongs be recompens'd.

Win. As will the rest, so willet Winchester.

K. Hen. If Richard will be true, not that alone,

But all the whole inheritance I give,

That doth belong unto the house of York,

From whence you spring by lineal descent.

Plan. Thy <sup>3</sup> honor'd servant vows obedience,

And humble service, till the point of death.

K. Hen. Stoop then, and set your knee against my foot;

And in <sup>4</sup> requerdon of that duty done,

I girt thee with the valiant sword of York.

Rise, Richard, like a true Plantagenet,

And rise created princely duke of York.

Plan. And so thrive Richard as thy foes may fall:

And as my duty springs, so perish they

That grudge one thought against your majesty.

All. Welcome, high prince, the mighty duke of York!

Som. Perish, base prince, ignoble duke of York!

[Aside.]

Glo. Now will it best avail your majesty,

To cross the seas, and to be crown'd in France.

The presence of a king engenders love

Amongst his subjects, and his loyal friends,

As it disseminates his enemies. [goes;

K. Hen. When Gloster says the word, king Henry
For friendly counsel cuts off many foes.

Glo. Your ships already are in readiness.

[Flourish. Exeunt all but EXETER.]

Eze. Ay, we may march in England, or in France,
Not seeing what is likely to ensue.

This late dissension, grown betwixt the peers,

Burns under feigned ashes of forg'd love,

And will at last break out into a flame:

As fester'd members rot but by degrees,

Till bones, and flesh, and sinews, fall away,

So will this base and envious discord breed.

And now I fear that fatal prophecy,

Which, in the time of Henry, nam'd the fifth,

Was in the mouth of every sucking babe,—

That Henry, born at Monmouth, should win all,

And Henry, born at Windsor, should lose all:

Which is so plain, that Exeter doth wish

His days may finish ere that hapless time. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—France. Before Rouen.

Enter LA PUCELLE disguised, and Soldiers dressed like Countrymen, with Sacks upon their Backs.

Puc. These are the city gates, the gates of Rouen,
Through which our policy must make a breach.
Take heed, be wary how you place your words;
Talk like the vulgar sort of market-men,
That come to gather money for their corn.

If we have entrance, (as I hope we shall)

And that we find the slothful watch but weak,

I'll by a sign give notice to our friends,

That Charles the Dauphin may encounter them.

I Sold. Our sacks shall be a mean to sack the city,

And we be lords and rulers over Rouen;

Therefore we'll knock. [Knocks.]

Guard. [Within.] Qui est là?

Puc. Païsans, les pauvres gens de France;

Poor market-folks, that come to sell their corn.

Guard. Enter; go in: the market-bell is rung.

<sup>4</sup> [Opening the gates.]

Puc. Now, Rouen, I'll shake thy bulwarks to the ground. [PUCELLE, &c. enter the City.]

Enter CHARLES, Bastard of ORLEANS, ALENÇON, and Forces.

Char. Saint Dennis bless this happy stratagem,

And once again we'll sleep secure in Rouen.

Bast. Here enter'd Pucelle, and her <sup>5</sup> practisants.

Now she is there, how will she specify

Where is the best and safest passage in?

Alen. By thrusting out a torch from yonder tower;

Which, once discern'd, shows, that her meaning is,—

No way to <sup>6</sup> that, for weakness, which she enter'd.

Enter LA PUCELLE on a Battlement, holding out a Torch burning.

Puc. Behold! this is the happy wedding torch,

That joineth Rouen unto her countrymen,

But burning fatal to the Talbotites.

Bast. See, noble Charles, the beacon of our friend;

The burning torch in yonder turret stands.

Char. Now shine it like a comet of revenge,

A prophet to the fall of all our foes!

Alen. Defer no time; delays have dangerous ends:

Enter, and cry The Dauphin! presently,

And then do execution on the watch. [They enter.]

Alarums. Enter TALBOT, and English Soldiers.

Tal. France, thou shalt rue this treason with thy

If Talbot but survive thy treachery. [tears,

Pucelle, that witch, that damned sorceress,

Hath wrought this hellish mischief unawares,

That hardly we escap'd the <sup>7</sup> pride of France.

[Exeunt to the Town.]

Alarum: Excursions. Enter, from the Town, BED-FORD, brought in sick in a Chair, with TALBOT, BURGUNDY, and the English Forces. Then, enter on the Walls, LA PUCELLE, CHARLES, Bastard,

ALENÇON, REIGNIER, and others.

Puc. Good morrow, gallants. Want ye corn for

I think, the duke of Burgundy will fast, [bread?

Before he'll buy again at such a rate.

way to that," i. e., no way equal to that.—<sup>11</sup> "The pride," i. e., the haughty power.

<sup>a</sup> Recompense.—<sup>b</sup> "Breed," i. e., propagate itself.

Bur. Scoff on, vile fiend, and shameless courtesan!
I trust, ere long, to choke thee with thine own,
And make thee curse the harvest of that corn.

Char. Your grace may starve, perhaps, before that time.

Bed. O! let no words, but deeds, revenge this [treason.

Puc. What will you do, good grey-beard? break
And run a tilt at death within a chair? [a lance,

Tal. Foul fiend of France, and hag of hell's de-Encompass'd with thy lustful paramours, [spite,

Becomes it thee to taunt his valiant age,
And twit with cowardice a man half dead?

Damsel, I'll have a bout with you again,
Or else let Talbot perish with this shame. [peace:

Puc. Are you so hot, sir?—Yet, Pucelle, hold thy
If Talbot do but thunder, rain will follow.—

[Talbot, and the rest, consult together.

God speed the parliament! who shall 'be speaker?

Tal. Dare ye come forth, and meet us in the field?

Puc. Beshke, your lordship takes us then for fools,
To try if that our own be ours, or no.

Tal. I speak not to that railing Hecate,
But unto thee, Alençon, and the rest.

Will ye, like soldiers, come and fight it out?

Alen. Signior, no.

Tal. Signior, hang!—base muleteers of France!
Like peasant foot-boys do they keep the walls,

And dare not take up arms like gentlemen.

Puc. Away, captains! let's get us from the walls,
For Talbot means no goodness by his looks.—

God be wi' you, my lord: we came, but to tell you
That we are here.

[Excunt LA PUCELLE, &c. from the Walls.

Tal. And there will we be too, ere it be long,
Or else reproach be Talbot's greatest fame.—

Vow, Burgundy, by honor of thy house,
Prick'd on by public wrongs sustain'd in France,

Either to get the town again, or die;
And I, as sure as English Henry lives,

And as his father here was conqueror,
As sure as in this late betray'd town

Great Cœur-de-lion's heart was buried,
So sure I swear to get the town, or die.

Bur. My vows are equal partners with thy vows.

Tal. But ere we go, regard this dying prince,
The valiant duke of Bedford.—Come, my lord,

We will bestow you in some better place,
Fitter for sickness, and for crazy age.

Bed. Lord Talbot, do not so dishonor me:
Here will I sit before the walls of Rouen,

And will be partner of your weal, or woe. [you.

Bur. Courageous Bedford, let us now persuade
Bed. Not to be gone from hence; for once I read,

That stout Pendaragon, in his litter, sick,
Came to the field, and vanquished his foes.

Methinks, I should revive the soldiers' hearts,
Because I ever found them as myself.

Tal. Undaunted spirit in a dying breast!—
Then, be it so:—heavens keep old Bedford safe!—

And now no more ado, brave Burgundy,
But gather we our forces out of hand,

And set upon our boasting enemy.

[Excunt BURGUNDY, TALBOT, and Forces, leaving BEDFORD, and others.

Alarum: Excursions. Enter Sir JOHN FASTOLFE,

and a Captain.

Cap. Whither away, sir John Fastolfe, in such haste?

Fast. Whither away? to save myself by flight:
We are like to have the overthrow again.

Cap. What? will you fly, and leave lord Talbot?

Fast. Ay,

All the Talbots in the world, to save my life. [Exit.

Cap. Cowardly knight! ill fortune follow thee! [Exit.

Retreat: Excursions. Enter, from the Town, LA

PUCELLE, ALENÇON, CHARLES, &c. and exeunt, flying.

Bed. Now, quiet soul, depart when Heaven please,
For I have seen our enemies' overthrow.

What is the trust or strength of foolish man?

They, that of late were daring with their scoffs,
Are glad and fain by flight to save themselves.

[Dies, and is carried off in his Chair.

Alarums. Enter TALBOT, BURGUNDY, and others.

Tal. Lost, and recover'd in a day again!

This is 'double honor, Burgundy;
Yet heavens have glory for this victory.

Bur. Warlike and 'matchless Talbot, Burgundy
Enshrines thee in his heart; and there erects

Thy noble deeds, as valor's monument. [now?

Tal. Thanks, gentle duke. But where is Pucelle
I think her old familiar is asleep: [gleeks?

Now where's the Bastard's braves, and Charles his What, all 'a-mort? Rouen hangs her head for grief,

That such a valiant company are fled.

Now will we take some 'order in the town,
Placing therein some expert officers,

And then depart to Paris to the king;
For there young Henry with his nobles lies.

Bur. What wills lord Talbot pleaseth Burgundy.

Tal. But yet, before we go, let's not forget
The noble duke of Bedford, late deceas'd,

But see his 'exequies fulfill'd in Rouen:
A braver soldier never couched lance,

A gentler heart did never sway in court;
But kings, and mightiest potentates must die,

For that's the end of human misery. [Excunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. The Plains near the City.

Enter CHARLES, the Bastard, ALENÇON, LA

PUCELLE, and Forces.

Puc. Dismay not, princes, at this accident,
Nor grieve that Rouen is so recovered:

Care is no cure, but rather corrosive,
For things that are not to be remedied.

Let frantic Talbot triumph for a while,
And like a peacock sweep along his tail,

We'll pull his plumes, and take away his train,
If Dauphin and the rest will be but rul'd.

Char. We have been guided by thee hitherto,
And of thy cunning had no diffidence:

One sudden foil shall never breed distrust.

Bast. Search out thy wit for secret policies,
And we will make thee famous through the world.

Alen. We'll set thy statue in some holy place,
And have thee reverence'd like a blessed saint:

Employ thee, then, sweet virgin, for our good.

Puc. Then thus it must be; this doth Joan devise.

By fair persuasions, mix'd with sugar'd words,
We will entice the duke of Burgundy

To leave the Talbot, and to follow us.

Char. Ay, marry, sweeting, if we could do that,
France were no place for Henry's warriors;

Nor should that nation boast it so with us,
But be 'extirpated from our provinces. [France,

Alen. For ever should they be 'expuls'd from
And not have title of an earldom here.

Puc. Your honors shall perceive how I will work,

'Scoffs.—b "All a-mort," i.e., quite cast down.—c "Take some order," i.e., make some necessary dispositions.—d Funeral rites.—e Extirpated; rooted out.—f Expelled.

To bring this matter to the wished end.

[Drums heard afar off.]

Hark! by the sound of drum you may perceive
Their powers are marching unto Paris-ward.

An English March. Enter, and pass over, TALBOT and his Forces.

There goes the Talbot, with his colors spread,
And all the troops of English after him.

A French March. Enter the Duke of BURGUNDY
and Forces.

Now, in the rearward comes the duke, and his:
Fortune in favor makes him lag behind.
Summon a parley; we will talk with him.

[Trumpets sound a parley.]

Char. A parley with the duke of Burgundy.

Bur. Who craves a parley with the Burgundy?

Puc. The princely Charles of France, thy countryman.

Bur. What say'st thou, Charles? for I am marching hence.

Char. Speak, Pucelle, and enchant him with thy words.

Puc. Brave Burgundy, undoubted hope of France,
Stay; let thy humble handmaid speak to thee.

Bur. Speak on; but be not over-tedious.

Puc. Look on thy country, look on fertile France,
And see <sup>1</sup>her cities and her towns defac'd
By wasting ruin of the cruel foe.

As looks the mother on her <sup>2</sup>lovely babe,

When death doth close his tender dying eyes,

See, see, the pining malady of France:

Behold the wounds, the most unnatural wounds,

Which thou thyself hast given her woful breast.

O! turn thy edged sword another way;

Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those that help.

One drop of blood, drawn from thy country's bosom,

Should grieve thee more than streams of foreign gore:

Return thee, therefore, with a flood of tears,

And wash away thy country's stained spots.

Bur. Either she hath bewitch'd me with her words,
Or nature makes me suddenly relent. [thee,

Puc. Besides, all French and France exclaims on Doubting thy birth and lawful progeny.

Whom join'st thou with, but with a lordly nation

That will not trust thee but for profit's sake?

When Talbot hath set footing once in France,

And fashion'd thee that instrument of ill,

Who then but English Henry will be lord,

And thou be thrust out, like a fugitive?

Call we to mind, and mark but this for proof,

Was not the duke of Orleans thy foe,

And was he not in England prisoner?

But, when they heard he was thine enemy,

They set him free, without his ransom paid,

In spite of Burgundy, and all his friends.

See, then, thou tightest against thy countrymen,

And join'st with them will be thy slaughter-men.

Come, come, return; return, thou wand'ring lord:

Charles, and the rest, will take thee in their arms.

Bur. I am vanquished: these haughty words of
Have batter'd me like roaring cannon-shot, [hers

And made me almost yield upon my knees.—

Forgive me, country, and sweet countrymen!

And, lords, accept this hearty kind embrace:

My forces and my power of men are yours.—

So, farewell, Talbot; I'll no longer trust thee.

Puc. Done like a Frenchman; turn, and turn again!
<sup>3</sup>[Aside.]

Char. Welcome, brave duke! thy friendship makes us fresh.

Bast. And doth beget new courage in our breasts.

Alen. Pucelle hath bravely played her part in this,
And doth deserve a coronet of gold.

Char. Now let us on, my lords, and join our powers,
And seek how we may prejudice the foe. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Paris. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King HENRY, GLOSTER, and other Lords, VERNON, BASSET, &c. To them TALBOT, and some of his Officers.

Tal. My gracious prince, and honorable peers,
Hearing of your arrival in this realm,
I have a while given truce unto my wars,
To do my duty to my sovereign:
In sign whereof, this arm—that hath reclaim'd
To your obedience fifty fortresses,
Twelve cities, and seven walled towns of strength,
Beside five hundred prisoners of esteem,—
Lays fall his sword before your highness' feet;
And with submissive loyalty of heart,
Ascribes the glory of his conquest got,
First to <sup>4</sup>his God, and next unto your grace.

K. Ken. Is this the lord Talbot, uncle Gloucester,
That hath so long been resident in France?

Glo. Yes, if it please your majesty, my liege.

K. Hen. Welcome, brave captain, and victorious
When I was young, (as yet I am not old) [lord.

I do remember how my father said,
A stouter champion never handled sword.

Long since we were <sup>5</sup>resolved of <sup>6</sup>that truth,

Your faithful service, and your toil in war;

Yet never have you tasted our reward,

Or been <sup>7</sup>reguerdon'd with so much as thanks,

Because till now we never saw your face:

Therefore, stand up; and, for these good deserts,

We hero create you earl of Shrewsbury,

And in our coronation take your place.

[Flourish. Exeunt King HENRY, GLOSTER,

TALBOT, and Nobles.

Ver. Now, sir, to you, that were so hot at sea,
Disgracing of these <sup>8</sup>colors, that I wear

In honor of my noble lord of York,

Dar'st thou maintain the former words thou spak'st?

Bas. Yes, sir; as well as you dare patronage

The envious barking of your saucy tongue

Against my lord, the duke of Somerset.

Ver. Sirrah, thy lord I honor as he is.

Bas. Why, what is he? as good a man as York.

Ver. Hark ye; not so: in witness, take ye that.

[Striking him.]

Bas. Villain, thou know'st, the law of arms is such,

That, whoso draws a sword, 'tis present death,

Or else this blow should broach thy dearest blood.

But I'll unto his majesty, and crave

I may have liberty to vengeance this wrong,

When thou shalt see, I'll meet thee to thy cost.

Ver. Well, miscreant, I'll be there as soon as you;

And after meet you sooner than you would. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Same. A Room of State.

Enter King HENRY, GLOSTER, EXETER, YORK, SUFFOLK, SOMERSET, WINCHESTER, WARWICK, TALBOT, the Governor of Paris, and others.

Glo. Lord bishop, set the crown upon his head.

Win. God save king Henry, of that name the sixth!

<sup>6</sup>[Sound Trumpets.]

Glo. Now, governor of Paris, take your oath,—

[Governor kneels.]

<sup>5</sup>Convinced.—<sup>7</sup>Rewarded.—<sup>8</sup>“These colors,” i. e., the badge of a rose.

That you elect no other king but him,
Esteem none friends, but such as are his friends,
And none your foes, but such as shall pretend—
Malicious practices against his state:
This shall ye do, so help you righteous God!

[Exeunt Gov. and his Tram.]

Enter Sir JOHN FASTOLFE.

Fast. My gracious sovereign, as I rode from Calais,
To haste unto your coronation,
A letter was deliver'd to my hands,
Writ to your grace from the duke of Burgundy.

[Gives it.]

Tal. Shame to the duke of Burgundy, and thee!
I vow'd, base knight, when I did meet thee next,
To tear the garter from thy craven's leg;

[Plucking it off.]

Which I have done, because unworthily
Thou wast installed in that high degree.—
Pardon me, princely Henry, and the rest.
This dastard, at the battle of Patay,
When but in all I was six thousand strong,
And that the French were almost ten to one,
Before we met, or that a stroke was given,
Like to a trusty squire, did run away:
In which assault we lost twelve hundred men;
Myself, and divers gentlemen beside,
Were there surpris'd, and taken prisoners.
Then, judge, great lords, if I have done amiss;
Or whether that such cowards ought to wear
This ornament of knighthood, yea, or no?

Glo. To say the truth, <sup>2</sup>his fact was infamous,
And ill beseeeming any common man,
Much more a knight, a captain, and a leader.

Tal. When first this order was ordain'd, my lords,
Knights of the garter were of noble birth,
Valiant and virtuous, full of haughty courage,
Such as were grown to credit by the wars;
Not fearing death, nor shrinking for distress,
But always resolute in worst extremes.
He, then, that is not furnish'd in this sort,
Doth but usurp the sacred name of knight,
Profaning this most honorable order;
And should (if I were worthy to be judge)
Be quite degraded, like a hedge-born swain
That doth presume to boast of gentle blood.

K. Hen. Stain to thy countrymen! thou hear'st thy doom:

Be packing therefore, thou that wast a knight.
Henceforth we banish thee on pain of death.

[Exit FASTOLFE.]

And now, my lord protector, view the letter
Sent from our uncle duke of Burgundy. [His style?]
Glo. What means his grace, that he hath chang'd
No more but, plain and bluntly,—“To the king!”

Hath he forgot he is his sovereign?

Or doth this churlish superscription

Portend some alteration in good will? [cause,—
What's here? [Reads.] “I have upon especial
Mov'd with compassion of my country's wreck,
“Together with the pitiful complaints

“Of such as your oppression feeds upon,—

“Forsaken your perniciuous faction, [France.”

“And join'd with Charles, the rightful king of O, monstrous treachery! Can this be so?
That in alliance, amity, and oaths,

There should be found such false dissembling guile?

K. Hen. What! doth my uncle Burgundy revolt?

Glo. He doth, my lord; and is become <sup>3</sup>thy foe.

K. Hen. Is that the worst this letter doth contain?

Glo. It is the worst, and all, my lord, he writes.

K. Hen. Why then, lord Talbot, there, shall talk with him,
And give him chastisement for this abuse.—

How say you, my lord? are you not content?

Tal. Content, my liege? Yes; but that I'm <sup>4</sup>prevented,

I should have begg'd I might have been employ'd.

K. Hen. Then gather strength, and march unto him straight.

Let him perceive how ill we brook his treason;

And what offence it is to flout his friends.

Tal. I go, my lord; in heart desiring still,
You may behold confusion of your foes. [Exit.]

Enter VERNON and BASSET.

Ver. Grant me the combat, gracious sovereign!

Bass. And me, my lord; grant me the combat too!

York. This is my servant: bear him, noble prince.

Som. And this is mine: sweet Henry, favor him.

K. Hen. Be patient, lords, and give them leave to speak.—

Say, gentlemen, what makes you thus exclaim?

And wherefore crave you combat? or with whom?

Ver. With him, my lord; for he hath done me wrong.

Bass. And I with him; for he hath done me wrong.

K. Hen. What is that wrong whereof you both complain?

First let me know, and then I'll answer you.

Bass. Crossing the sea from England into France,

This fellow, here, with envious carping tongue

Upbraided me about the rose I wear;

Saying, the sanguine color of the leaves

Did represent my master's blushing cheeks,

When stubbornly he did <sup>5</sup>repugn the truth,

About a certain question in the law,

Argu'd betwixt the duke of York and him;

With other vile and ignominious terms:

In confutation of which rude reproach,

And in defence of my lord's worthiness,

I crave the benefit of law of arms.

Ver. And that is my petition, <sup>6</sup>royal lord:

For though he seem, with forged quaint conceit,

To set a gloss upon his bold intent,

Yet know, my lord, I was provok'd by him,

And he first took exceptions at this badge,

Pronouncing, that the paleness of this flower

<sup>7</sup>Bewray'd the faintness of my master's heart.

York. Will not this malice, Somerset, be left?

Som. Your private grudge, my lord of York, will

Though ne'er so cunningly you smother it. [Out,

K. Hen. Good Lord! what madness runs in brain-sick men;

When, for so slight and frivolous a cause,

Such factious emulations <sup>8</sup>still arise.—

Good cousins both, of York and Somerset,

Quiet yourselves, I pray, and be at peace.

York. Let this dissension first be tried by fight,

And then your highness shall command a peace.

Som. The quarrel toucheth none but us alone;

Betwixt ourselves let us decide it, then.

York. There is my pledge; accept it, Somerset.

Ver. Nay, let it rest where it began at first.

Bass. Confirm it so, mine honorable lord.

Glo. Confirm it so? Confounded be your strife,

And perish ye, with your audacious prate!

Presumptuous vassals! are you not asham'd,

With this immodest clamorous outrage

To trouble and disturb the king and us?

And you, my lords, methinks, you do not well,

To bear with their perverse objections;

Much less to take occasion from their mouths

To raise a mutiny betwixt yourselves :

Let me persuade you take a better course. [friends.

Exc. It grieves his highness : good my lords, be
K. Hen. Come hither, you that would be combatants.

Henceforth, I charge you, as you love our favor,
Quite to forget this quarrel, and the cause.—
And you, my lords, remember where we are ;
In France, amongst a fickle wavering nation.
If they perceive dissension in our looks,
And that within ourselves we disagree,
How will their grudging stomachs be provok'd
To wilful disobedience, and rebel ?
Beside, what infamy will there arise,
When foreign princes shall be certified,
That for a toy, a thing of no regard,
King Henry's peers, and chief nobility,
Destroy'd themselves, and lost the realm of France ?
O ! think upon the conquest of my father,
My tender years ; and let us not forego
That for a trifle, that was bought with blood.
Let me be umpire in this doubtful strife.
I see no reason, if I wear this rose,

[Putting on a red Rose.

That any one should therefore be suspicious
I more incline to Somerset than York :
Both are my kinsmen, and I love them both.
As well they may upbraid me with my crown,
Because, forsooth, the king of Scots is crown'd.
But your discretions better can persuade,
Than I am able to instruct or teach :
And therefore, as we hither came in peace,
So let us still continue peace and love.—
Cousin of York, we institute your grace
To be our regent in these parts of France :
And, good my lord of Somerset, unite
Your troops of horsemen with his bands of foot ;
And, like true subjects, sons of your progenitors,
Go cheerfully together, and digest
Your angry choler on your enemies.
Ourself, my lord protector, and the rest,
After some respite, will return to Calais ;
From thence to England ; where I hope ere long
To be presented by your victories
With Charles, Alençon, and that traitorous rout.

[Flourish. Execut King Henry, Glo., Som., Win., Sup., and Basset.

War. My lord of York, I promise you, the king
Prettily, methought, did play the orator.

York. And so he did ; but yet I like it not,
In that he wears the badge of Somerset.

War. Tush ! that was but his fancy, blame him not ;
I dare presume, sweet prince, he thought no harm.

York. And, if I <sup>a</sup> wist he did,—But let it rest ;
Other affairs must now be managed.

[Execut York, Warwick, and Vernon.

Exc. Well didst thou, Richard, to suppress thy
For, had the passions of thy heart burst out, [voice ;
I fear, we should have seen decipher'd there
More rancorous spite, more furious raging broils,
Than yet can be imagin'd or suppos'd.
But howsoe'er, no simple man that sees
This jarring discord of nobility,
This shoudering of each other in the court,
This factious bandying of their favorites,
But that it doth presage some ill event.
Tis <sup>b</sup> much, when sceptres are in children's hands,
But more, when <sup>c</sup> envy breeds <sup>d</sup> unkind division :
There comes the ruin, there begins confusion.

[Exit.

<sup>a</sup> "If I wist he did," i. e., if I thought he did.—<sup>b</sup> "Tis much," i. e., 'tis an alarming circumstance.—<sup>c</sup> Malice.—<sup>d</sup> Unnatural.

SCENE II.—France. Before Bourdeaux.

Enter Talbot, with his Forces.

Tal. Go to the gates of Bourdeaux, trumpeter :
Summon their general unto the wall.

Trumpet sounds a Parley. Enter, on the Walls, the General of the French Forces, and others.

English John Talbot, captains, calls you forth,
Servant in arms to Harry king of England ;
And thus he would.—Open your city gates,
Be humble to us, call my sovereign yours,
And do him homage as obedient subjects,
And I'll withdraw me and my bloody power ;
But, if you frown upon this proffer'd peace,
You tempt the fury of my three attendants,
Lean famine, quartering steel, and climbing fire ;
Who, in a moment, even with the earth
Shall lay your stately and air-braving towers,
If you forsake the offer of their love.

Gen. Thou ominous and fearful owl of death,
Our nation's terror, and their bloody scourge,
The period of thy tyranny approacheth.
On us thou canst not enter but by death ;
For, I protest, we are well fortified,
And strong enough to issue out and fight :
If thou retire, the Dauphin, well appointed,
Stands with the snares of war to tangle thee.
On either hand thee there are squadrons pitch'd
To wall thee from the liberty of flight,
And no way canst thou turn thee for redress,
But death doth front thee with apparent spoil.
And pale destruction meets thee in the face.
Ten thousand French have ta'en the sacrament,
To <sup>e</sup>rive their dangerous artillery
Upon no Christian soul but English Talbot.
Lo ! there thou stand'st, a breathing valiant man,
Of an invincible unconquer'd spirit :
This is the latest glory of thy praise,
That I, thy enemy, <sup>f</sup>due thee withal ;
For ere the glass, that now begins to run,
Finish the process of his sandy hour,
These eyes, that see thee now well colored,
Shall see thee wither'd, bloody, pale, and dead.

[Drum afar off.

Hark ! hark ! the Dauphin's drum, a warning bell,
Sings heavy music to thy timorous soul ;
And mine shall ring thy dire departure out.

[Execut General, &c., from the walls.

Tal. He fables not ; I hear the enemy.—
Out, some light horsemen, and peruse their wings.—
O, negligent and heedless discipline !
How are we park'd, and bounded in a pale !
A little herd of England's timorous deer,
Maz'd with a yelping kennel of French curs !
If we be English deer, be then in <sup>g</sup>blood ;
Not <sup>h</sup>rascal-like, to fall down with a pinch,
But rather moody mad, and desperate stags,
Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel,
And make the cowards stand aloof at bay :
Sell every man his life as dear as mine,
And they shall find dear deer of us, my friends.—
God, and Saint George, Talbot, and England's right, Prosper our colors in this dangerous fight !

[Execut.

SCENE III.—Plains in Gascony.

Enter York, with Forces ; to him, a Messenger.

York. Are not the speedy scouts return'd again,
That dogg'd the mighty army of the Dauphin ?

Moss. They are return'd, my lord; and give it out, That he is march'd to Bourdeaux with his power, To fight with Talbot. As he march'd along, By your *espials were discovered Two mightier troops than that the Dauphin led, Which join'd with him, and made their march for Bourdeaux.

York. A plague upon that villain Somerset, That thus delays my promised supply Of horsemen, that were levied for this siege! Renowned Talbot doth expect my aid, And I am <sup>b</sup>lowed by a traitor villain, And cannot help the noble chevalier. God comfort him in this necessity! If he miscarry, farewell wars in France.

Enter Sir WILLIAM LUCY.

Lucy. Thou princely leader of our English strength, Never so needful on the earth of France, Spur to the rescue of the noble Talbot, Who now is girdled with a waist of iron, And hemm'd about with grim destruction. To Bourdeaux, warlike duke! to Bourdeaux, York! Else, farewell Talbot, France, and England's honor.

York. O God! that Somerset—who in proud heart Doth stop my cornets—were in Talbot's place! So should we save a valiant gentleman, By forfeiting a traitor and a coward. Mad ire, and wrathful fury, make me weep, That thus we die, while remiss traitors sleep.

Lucy. O, send some succor to the distress'd lord!

York. He dies, we lose; I break my warlike word: We mourn, France smiles; we lose, they daily get; All 'long of this vile traitor Somerset. [soul!]

Lucy. Then, God take mercy on brave Talbot's And on his son, young John; whom two hours since I met in travel toward his warlike father. This seven years did not Talbot see his son, And now they meet where both their lives are done.

York. Alas! what joy shall noble Talbot have, To bid his young son welcome to his grave? Away! vexation almost stops my breath, That sunder'd friends greet in the hour of death.—Lucy, farewell: no more my fortune can, But curse the cause I cannot aid the man.—Maine, Blois, Poitiers, and Tours, are won away, 'Long all of Somerset, and his delay.

[Exit YORK with his Forces.]

Lucy. Thus, while the vulture of sedition Feeds in the bosom of such great commanders, Sleeping neglectation doth betray to loss The conquest of our scarce-cold conqueror, That ever-living man of memory, Henry the fifth. Whiles they each other cross, Lives, honors, lands, and all, hurry to loss. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Other Plains of Gascony.

Enter SOMERSET, with his Army; an Officer of TALBOT'S with him.

Som. It is too late; I cannot send them now. This expedition was by York, and Talbot, Too rashly plotted: all our general force Might with a sally of the very town Be buckled with. The over-daring Talbot Hath sullied all his gloss of former honor, By this unheeded, desperate, wild adventure. York set him on to fight, and die in shame, That, Talbot dead, great York might bear the name.

Off. Here is sir William Lucy, who with me Set from our o'er-match'd forces forth for aid.

Enter Sir WILLIAM LUCY.

Som. How now, sir William! whither were you sent? [lord Talbot;]

Lucy. Whither, my lord? from bought and sold Who, <sup>c</sup>ring'd about with bold adversity, Cries out for noble York and Somerset, To beat assailing death from his weak legions: And whiles the honorable captain there Drops bloody sweat from his war-wearied limbs, And, in advantage <sup>d</sup>lingering, looks for rescue, You, his false hopes, the trust of England's honor, Keep off aloof with worthless <sup>e</sup>emulation. Let not your private discord keep away The levied succors that should lend him aid, While he, renowned noble gentleman, Yields up his life unto a world of odds. Orleans, the Bastard, Charles, and Burgundy, Alençon, Reignier, compass him about, And Talbot perisheth by your default. [aid.]

Som. York set him on, York should have sent him

Lucy. And York as fast upon your grace exclaims; Swearing that you withhold his levied host, Collected for this expedition. [horse.]

Som. York lies: he might have sent and had the I owe him little duty, and less love, And take foul scorn to fawn on him by sending.

Lucy. The fraud of England, not the force of France,

Hath now entrapp'd the noble-minded Talbot! Never to England shall he bear his life, But dies betray'd to fortune by your strife.

Som. Come, go; I will despatch the horsemen Within six hours they will be at his aid. [straight:]

Lucy. Too late comes rescue: he is ta'en, or slain, For fly he could not, if he would have fled, And fly would Talbot never, though he might.

Som. If he be dead, brave Talbot, then adieu!

Lucy. His fame lives in the world, his shame in you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The English Camp near Bourdeaux.

Enter TALBOT and JOHN his Son.

Tal. O young John Talbot! I did send for thee, To tutor thee in stratagems of war, That Talbot's name might be in thee reviv'd, When sapless age, and weak unable limbs, Should bring thy father to his drooping chair.

But,—O, malignant and ill-boding stars!—Now thou art come unto a feast of death, A terrible and unavoids danger: Therefore, dear boy, mount on my swiftest horse, And I'll direct thee how thou shalt escape By sudden flight. Come, dally not; begone.

John. Is my name Talbot? and am I your son? And shall I fly? O! if you love my mother, Dishonor not her honorable name, To make a bastard, and a slave of me: The world will say he is not Talbot's blood, That basely fled, when noble Talbot stood.

Tal. Fly to revenge my death, if I be slain.

John. He that flies so will ne'er return again.

Tal. If we both stay, we both are sure to die.

John. Then let me stay; and father, do you fly: Your loss is great, so your regard should be; My worth unknown, no loss is known in me. Upon my death the French can little boast, In yours they will, in you all hopes are lost. Flight cannot stain the honor you have won,

<sup>c</sup> "Environné," <sup>d</sup> "In advantage lingering," i. e., protracting his resistance by the advantage of a strong post. — <sup>e</sup> "Worthless emulation," i. e., envious rivalry. — <sup>f</sup> "Unavoidable." — <sup>g</sup> "Your regard," i. e., your care of your own safety.

* Spies. — <sup>b</sup> Baffled; vanquished.

But mine it will, that no exploit have done :

You fled for vantage every one will swear,

But if I fly, they'll say it was for fear.

There is no hope that ever I will stay,

If the first hour I shrink, and run away.

Here, on my knee, I beg mortality,

Rather than life preserv'd with infamy.

Tal. Shall all thy mother's hopes lie in one tomb ?

John. Ay, rather than I'll shame my mother's womb.

Tal. Upon my blessing I command thee go.

John. To fight I will, but not to fly the foe.

Tal. Part of thy father may be sav'd in thee.

John. No part of him but will be shamed in me.

Tal. Thou never hadst renown, nor canst not lose it. [it ?]

John. Yes, your renowned name : shall flight abuse

Tal. Thy father's charge shall clear thee from that stain.

John. You cannot witness for me, being slain.

If death be so apparent, then both fly. [die ?]

Tal. And leave my followers here, to fight, and my age was never tainted with such shame.

John. And shall my youth be guilty of such blame ?

No more can I be sever'd from your side,

Then can yourself in twain divide :

Stay, go, do what you will, the like do I ;

For live I will not, if my father die.

Tal. Then here I take my leave of thee, fair son, Born to eclipse thy life this afternoon.

Come, side by side together live and die, And soul with soul from France to heaven fly. [Exit.

SCENE VI.—A Field of Battle.

Alarum ; Excursions, wherein TALBOT'S Son is hemmed about, and TALBOT rescues him.

Tal. Saint George and victory ! fight, soldiers, fight !

The regent hath with Talbot broke his word,

And left us to the rage of France's sword.

Where is John Talbot ?—pause and take thy breath ; I gave thee life, and rescued thee from death.

John. O, twice my father ! twice am I thy son :

The life thou gav'st me first was lost and done ;

Till with thy warlike sword, despite of fate,

To my determin'd time thou gav'st new date.

Tal. When from the Dauphin's crest thy sword struck fire,

It warmed thy father's heart with proud desire

Of bold-fac'd victory. Then leaden age,

Quicken'd with youthful spleen and warlike rage,

Beat down Alençon, Orleans, Burgundy,

And from the pride of Gallia rescu'd thee.

The ireful bastard Orleans, that drew blood

From thee, my boy, and had the maidenhood

Of thy first fight, I soon encountered,

And, interchanging blows, I quickly shed

Some of his bastard blood ; and, in disgrace,

Bespoke him thus : " Contaminated, base,

And misbegotten blood I spill of thine,

Mean and right poor ; for that pure blood of mine,

Which thou didst force from Talbot, my brave boy :"—

Here purposing the Bastard to destroy,

Came in strong rescue. Speak, thy father's care,

Art thou not weary, John ? How dost thou fare ?

Wilt thou yet leave the battle, boy, and fly,

Now thou art seal'd the son of chivalry ?

Fly to revenge my death, when I am dead ;

The help of one stands me in little stead.

O ! too much folly is it, well I wot,

* Appointed ; limited.

To hazard all our lives in one small boat.

If I to-day die not with Frenchmen's rage,

To-morrow I shall die with mickle age :

By me they nothing gain, and if I stay,

'Tis but the short'ning of my life one day :

In thee thy mother dies, our household's name,

My death's revenge, thy youth, and England's fame.

All these, and more, we hazard by thy stay ;

All these are sav'd, if thou wilt fly away. [smart ;

John. The sword of Orleans hath not made me

These words of yours draw life-blood from my heart.

On that advantage, bought with such a shame,

(To save a paltry life, and slay bright fame)

Before young Talbot from old Talbot fly,

The coward horse that bears me fall and die !

And b like me to the peasant boys of France,

To be shame's scorn, and subject of mischance !

Surely, by all the glory you have won,

An if I fly I am not Talbot's son :

Then, talk no more of flight, it is no boot,

If son to Talbot, die at Talbot's foot.

Tal. Then follow thou thy desperate sire of Crete,

Thou Icarus. Thy life to me is sweet :

If thou wilt fight, fight by thy father's side,

And, commendable prov'd, let's die in pride. [Exit.

SCENE VII.—Another part of the Same.

Alarums : Excursions. Enter TALBOT wounded, supported by a 2 Soldier.

Tal. Where is my other life ?—mine own is gone :

O, where's young Talbot ? where is valiant John ?—

Triumphant death, smear'd with captivity,

Young Talbot's valor makes me smile at thee.—

When he perceiv'd me shrink, and on my knee,

His bloody sword he brandish'd over me,

And like a hungry lion did commence

Rough deeds of rage, and stern impatience ;

But when my angry guardant stood alone,

Tendering my ruin, and assail'd of none,

Dizzy-ey'd fury, and great rage of heart,

Suddenly made him from my side to start

Into the clust'ring battle of the French :

And in that sea of blood my boy did drench

His overmounting spirit ; and there died

My Icarus, my blossom, in his pride.

Enter Soldiers, bearing the Body of JOHN TALBOT.

3 Sold. O, my dear lord ! lo, where your son is borne ! [to scorn,

Tal. Thou antick, death, which laugh'st us here

Anon, from thy insulting tyranny,

Coupled in bonds of perpetuity,

Two Talbots, winged through the <sup>4</sup>lither sky,

In thy despite shall scape mortality.—

O ! thou whose wounds become hard-favor'd death,

Speak to thy father, ere thou yield thy breath :

Brave death by speaking, whether he will or no ;

Imagine him a Frenchman, and thy foe.—

Poor boy ! he smiles, methinks ; as who should say,

Had death been French, then death had died to-day.

Come, come, and lay him in his father's arms.

My spirit can no longer bear these harms.

Soldiers, adieu ! I have what I would have,

Now my old arms are young John Talbot's grave. [Dies.

Alarums. Exit 4 Soldiers, leaving the two Bodies.

Enter CHARLES, ALENÇON, BURGUNDY, Bastard,

LA PUCELLE, and Forces.

Char. Had York and Somerset brought rescue in, b " Like me," i. e., reduce me to a level with.—c " Tendering my ruin," i. e., watching me with tenderness in my fall.

—d Flexible ; yielding.

We should have found a bloody day of this.

Bast. How the young whelp of Talbot's, raging
"wood,

Did flesh his puny sword in Frenchmen's blood!

Puc. Once I encounter'd him, and thus I said,
"Thou maiden youth be vanquish'd by a maid:"

But with a proud, majestic high scorn,
He answered thus: "Young Talbot was not born

To be the pillage of a <sup>b</sup>giglot wench."

So, rushing in the bowels of the French,

He left me proudly, as unworthy fight. [knight.

Bur. Doubtless, he would have made a noble
Sec, where he lies inlensed in the arms

<sup>1</sup>Of the still bleeding nurser of his harms. [der,

Bast. Hew them to pieces, hack their bones asun-
Whose life was England's glory, Gallia's wonder.

Char. O, no! forbear; for that which we have fled
During the life, let us not wrong it dead.

Enter Sir WILLIAM LUCY, attended; a French Herald preceding.

Lucy. Herald, conduct me to the Dauphin's tent,
To know who <sup>2</sup>hath the glory of the day.

Chor. On what submissive message art thou sent?

Lucy. Submission, Dauphin! 'tis a mere French word;

We English warriors wot not what it means.

I come to know what prisoners thou hast ta'en,

And to survey the bodies of the dead.

Char. For prisoners ask'st thou? hell our prison is.
<sup>3</sup>But tell me briefly whom thou seekest now.

Lucy. But where's the great Alcides of the field,
Valiant lord Talbot, earl of Shrewsbury?

Creoted, for his rare success in arms,

Grent earl of Washford, Waterford, and Valence;

Lord Talbot of Goodrig and Urchinfield,

Lord Strange of Blackmere, lord Verdun of Alton,

Lord Cromwell of Wingfield, lord Furnival of Shef-

The thrice victorious lord of Falconbridge; [field,

Knight of the noble order of St. George,

Worthy Saint Michael, and the golden fleece;

Great marshal to Henry the sixth

Of all his wars within the <sup>4</sup>realms of France?

Puc. Here is a silly stately style indeed!

The Turk, that two and fifty kingdoms hath,

Writes not so tedious a style as this,—

Him, that thou magnifiest with all these titles,

Stinking, and fly-blown, lies here at our feet.

Lucy. Is Talbot slain? the Frenchman's only scourge,

Your kingdom's terror and black Nemesis?

O! were mine eye-balls into bullets turn'd,

That I in rage might shoot them at your faces.

O! that I could but call these dead to life,

It were enough to fright the realm of France.

Were but his picture left among you here,

It would <sup>5</sup>amaze the proudest of you all.

Give me their bodies, <sup>6</sup>that I bear them forth,

And give them burial as beseems their worth.

Puc. I think, this upstart is old Talbot's ghost,

He speaks with such a proud commanding spirit.

For God's sake, let him have 'em; <sup>7</sup>keep them here,

They would but stink, and putrefy the air.

Char. Go, take their bodies hence.

Lucy. I'll bear them hence:

But from their <sup>7</sup>very ashes shall be rear'd

A phoenix that shall make all France afear'd.

Char. So we be rid of them, <sup>8</sup>do what thou wilt.

And now to Paris, in this conquering vein:

All will be ours, now bloody Talbot's slain.

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King HENRY, GLOSTER, and EXETER.

K. Hen. Have you perus'd the letters from the pope,
The emperor, and the earl of Armagnac?

Glo. I have, my lord; and their intent is this:—
They humbly sue unto your excellence,

To have a godly peace concluded of
Between the realms of England and of France.

K. Hen. How doth your grace affect their motion?

Glo. Well, my good lord; and as the only means
To stop effusion of <sup>9</sup>much Christian blood,

And 'stablish quietness on every side.

K. Hen. Ay, marry, uncle; for I always thought,
It was both impious and unnatural,

That such <sup>4</sup>immanity and bloody strife

Should reign among professors of one faith.

Glo. Beside, my lord, the sooner to effect,

And surer bind, this knot of amity,

The earl of Armagnac, near <sup>10</sup>kin to Charles,

A man of great authority in France,

Proffers his only daughter to your grace

In marriage, with a large and sumptuous dowry.

K. Hen. Marriage, uncle? alas! my years are
And fitter is my study and my books, [young,

Than wanton dalliance with a paramour.

Yet, call th' ambassadors; and, as you please,

So let them have their answers every one:

I shall be well content with any choice,

Tends to God's glory and my country's weal.

Enter a Legate, and two Ambassadors, with WIN-CHESTER, as a Cardinal.

Etc. What! is my lord of Winchester install'd,

And call'd unto a Cardinal's degree?

Then, I perceive that will be verified,

Henry the fifth did sometime prophesy,—

"If once he come to be a cardinal,

He'll make his cap co-equal with the crown."

K. Hen. My lords ambassadors, your several suits
Have been consider'd and debated on.

Your purpose is both good and reasonable;

And, therefore, are we certainly resolv'd,

To draw conditions of a friendly peace;

Which, by my lord of Winchester, we mean

Shall be transported presently to France.

Glo. And for the proffer of my lord, your master,
I have inform'd his highness so at large,

As—liking of the lady's virtuous gifts,

Her beauty, and the value of her dower,—

He doth intend she shall be England's queen.

K. Hen. In argument and proof of which contract, Bear her this jewel, pledge of my affection.—
<sup>11</sup>[Gives it.

And so, my lord protector, see them guarded,

And safely brought to Dover; where, in shipp'd,

Commit them to the fortune of the sea.

[Exeunt King HENRY and Train; GLOSTER,

EXETER, and Ambassadors.

Win. Stay, my lord legate: you shall first receive
The sum of money, which I promised

Should be deliver'd to his holiness

For clothing me in these grave ornaments.

Leg. I will attend upon your lordship's leisure.
<sup>12</sup>[Exit.

Win. Now, Winchester will not submit, I trow,

Or be inferior to the proudest peer.

Humphrey of Gloster, thou shalt well perceive,

That, neither in birth, or for authority,

<sup>d</sup> Inhumanity; cruelty.

The bishop will be overborne by thee :
I'll either make thee stoop, and bend thy knee,
Or sack this country with a mutiny. <sup>1</sup>[Exit.]

SCENE II.—France. Plains in Anjou.

Enter CHARLES, BURGUNDY, ALENÇON, LA PUCELLE, and Forces, marching.

Char. These news, my lords, may cheer our droop—
'Tis said, the stout Parisians do revolt, [ing spirits.
And turn again unto the warlike French.

Alen. Then, march to Paris, royal Charles of France,
And keep not back your powers in dalliance.

Puc. Peace be amongst them, if they turn to us ;
Else ruin combat with their palaces !

Enter a Scout.

Scout. Success unto our valiant general,
And happiness to his accomplices ! [speak.

Char. What tidings send our scouts ? I prythee,

Scout. The English army, that divided was Into two parties, is now conjoin'd in one,
And means to give you battle presently.

Char. Somewhat too sudden, sirs, the warning is ;
But we will presently provide for them.

Bur. I trust, the ghost of Talbot is not there :
Now he is gone, my lord, you need not fear.

Puc. Of all base passions fear is most accus'd.—
Command the conquest, Charles, it shall be thine ;
Let Henry fret, and all the world repine.

Char. Then on, my lords ; and France be fortunate !
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. Before Angiers.

Alarums ; Excursions. Enter LA PUCELLE.

Puc. The regent conquers, and the Frenchmen fly.—

Now help, ye charming spells, and <sup>a</sup>periapts ;
An ye, choice spirits, that admonish me,
And give me signs of future accidents : [Thunder.
You speedy helpers, that are substitutes
Under the lordly monarch of the north,
Appear, and aid me in this enterprize !

Enter Fiends.

This speedy and quick appearance argues proof
Of your accustomed diligence to me.
Now, ye familiar spirits, that are call'd
Out of the powerful regions under earth,
Help me this once, that France may get the field.

[They walk, and speak not.]

O ! hold me now with silence over-long.

<sup>b</sup>Where I was wont to feed you with my blood,
I'll lop a member off, and give it you,

In earnest of a farther benefit,
So you do condescend to help me now.—

[They hang their heads.]

No hope to have redress ?—My body shall Pay recompense, if you will grant my suit.

[They shake their heads.]

Cannot my body, nor blood-sacrifice,
Entreat you to your wanted furtherance ?
Then take my soul ; my body, soul, and all,
Before that England give the French the foil.

[They depart.]

See ! they forsake me. Now the time is come,
That France must <sup>c</sup>vail her lofty-plumed crest,
And let her head fall into England's lap.
My ancient incantations are too weak,
And hell too strong for me to buckle with.
Now, France, thy glory droopeth to the dust. [Exit.]

Alarums. Enter French and English, fighting ; LA PUCELLE and YORK fight hand to hand. LA PUCELLE is taken. The French fly.

York. Damsel of France, I think, I have you fast :
Unchain your spirits now with spelling charms,
And try if they can gain your liberty.—

A goodly prize, fit for the devil's grace !

See, how the ugly witch doth bend her brows,

As if, with Circe, she would change my shape.

Puc. Chang'd to a worse shape thou canst not be.

York. O ! Charles the Dauphin is a proper man :

No shape but his can please your dainty eye.

Puc. A plaguing mischief light on Charles, and
And may ye both be suddenly surpris'd [thee !

By bloody hands, in sleeping on your beds !

York. Fell, <sup>d</sup>banning hag ! enchantress, hold thy tongue.

Puc. I prythee, give me leave to curse a while.

York. Curse, miscreant, when thou comest to the stake. [Exeunt.]

Alarums. Enter SUFFOLK, leading in

Lady MARGARET.

Suf. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner.

[Gazes on her.]

O, fairest beauty ! do not fear, nor fly,
For I will touch thee but with reverent hands :

I kiss these fingers [Kissing her hand] for eternal
And lay them gently on thy tender side. [peace,

Who art thou ? say, that I may honor thee.

Mar. Margaret my name, and daughter to a king,
The king of Naples, whosoe'er thou art.

Suf. An earl I am, and Suffolk am I call'd.

Be not offended, nature's miracle,

Thou art allotted to be ta'en by me :

So doth the swan her downy cygnets save,

Keeping them prisoners underneath her wings.

Yet, if this servile usage once offend,

Go, and be free again, as Suffolk's friend.

[She turns away as going.]

O, stay !—I have no power to let her go :

My hand would free her, but my heart says—no.

As plays the sun upon the glassy <sup>3</sup>stream,

Twinkling another counterfeited beam,

So seems this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes.

Fain would I woo her, yet I dare not speak :

I'll call for pen and ink, and write my mind.

Fie, De la Poole ! <sup>e</sup>disable not thyself ;

Hast not a tongue ? is she not here thy prisoner ?

Wilt thou be daunted at a woman's sight ?

Ay ; beauty's princely majesty is such,

Confounds the tongue, and <sup>f</sup>mocks the sense of touch.

Mar. Say, earl of Suffolk, if thy name be so,

What ransom must I pay before I pass ?

For, I perceive, I am thy prisoner.

Suf. How canst thou tell she will deny thy suit,
Before thou make a trial of her love ? [Aside.]

Mar. Why speak'st thou not ? what ransom must I pay ?

Suf. She's beautiful, and therefore to be woo'd ;
She is a woman, therefore to be won. [Aside.]

Mar. Wilt thou accept a ransom, yea, or no ?

Suf. Fond man ! remember that thou hast a wife ;
Then, how can Margaret be thy paramour ? [Aside.]

Mar. I were best to leave him, for he will not hear.

Suf. There all is marr'd ; there lies a cooling car.

Mar. He talks at random : sure, the man is mad.

Suf. And yet a dispensation may be had.

Mar. And yet I would that you would answer me.

Suf. I'll win this lady Margaret. For whom ?

Why, for my king : tush ! that's a wooden 'thing.

<sup>d</sup> Cursing.—<sup>e</sup> Dispraise ; impeach.—<sup>f</sup> "A wooden thing," i. e., an awkward business ; an undertaking not likely to succeed.

Mar. He talks of wood : it is some carpenter.

Suf. Yet so my <sup>a</sup> fancy may be satisfied, <sup>1</sup> [Aside.
And peace established between these realms.
But there remains a scruple in that, too ;
For though her father be the king of Naples,
Duke of Anjou and Maine, yet is he poor,
And our nobility will scorn the match.

Mar. Hear ye, captain ? Are you not at leisure ?

Suf. It shall be so, disdain they ne'er so much :

<sup>2</sup> [Aside.

Henry is youthful, and will quickly yield.—

Madam, I have a secret to reveal. [knight,

Mar. What though I be enthralld ? he seems a
And will not any way dishonor me. [Aside.

Suf. Lady, vouchsafe to listen what I say.

Mar. Perhaps, I shall be rescu'd by the French,
And then I need not crave his courtesy. [Aside.

Suf. Sweet madam, give me hearing in a cause—

Mar. Tush ! women have been captivate ere now.

[Aside.

Suf. Lady, <sup>3</sup> pray tell me, wherefore talk you so ?

Mar. I cry you mercy, 'tis but quid pro quo.

Suf. Say, gentle princess, would you not <sup>4</sup> then
Your bondage happy, to be made a queen ? [between

Mar. <sup>5</sup> A queen in bondage is more vile to me

Than is a slave in base servility,

For princes should be free.

Suf. And so shall you,
If happy England's royal king be <sup>6</sup> true.

Mar. Why, what concerns his freedom unto me ?

Suf. I'll undertake to make thee Henry's queen ;
To put a golden sceptre in thy hand,

And set a precious crown upon thy head,

If thou wilt condescend to be my—

Mar. What ?

Suf. His love.

Mar. I am unworthy to be Henry's wife.

Suf. No, gentle madam ; I unworthy am

To woo so fair a dame to be his wife,

And have no portion in the choice myself.

How say you, madam ; are you so content ?

Mar. And if my father please, I <sup>7</sup> give consent.

Suf. Then, call our captains, and our colors forth !

And, madam, at your father's castle walls

We'll crave a parley, to confer with him.

[Troops come forward.

A Parley sounded. Enter REIGNIER, on the Walls.

Suf. See, Reignier, see thy daughter prisoner.

Reig. To whom ?

Suf. To me.

Reig. Suffolk, what remedy ?

I am a soldier, and unapt to weep,

Or to exclaim on fortune's fickleness.

Suf. Yes, there is remedy enough, my lord :

Consent, and for thy honor give consent,

Thy daughter shall be wedded to my king,

Whom I with pain have woo'd and won thereto,

And this her easy-held imprisonment

Hath gain'd thy daughter princely liberty.

Reig. Speak Suffolk as he thinks ?

Suf. Fair Margaret knows,

That Suffolk doth not flatter, <sup>8</sup> face, or feign.

Reig. Upon thy princely warrant I descend

To give thee answer of thy just demand.

[Exit, from the Walls.

Suf. And here I will expect thy coming <sup>9</sup> down.

Trumpets sounded. Enter REIGNIER, below.

Reig. Welcome, brave earl, into our territories :

Command in Anjou what your honor pleases.

Suf. Thanks, Reignier, happy for so sweet a child,
Fit to be made companion with a king :

What answer makes your grace unto my suit ?

Reig. Since thou dost deign to woo her little worth,
To be the princely bride of such a lord,
Upon condition I may quietly
Enjoy mine own, the county Maine, and Anjou,
Free from oppression or the stroke of war,
My daughter shall be Henry's, if he please.

Suf. That is her ransom, I deliver her ;
And those two counties, I will undertake,
Your grace shall well and quietly enjoy.

Reig. And I again, in Henry's royal name,
As deputy unto that gracious king,
Give thee her hand, for sign of plighted faith.

Suf. Reignier of France, I give thee kingly thanks,
Because this is in traffic of a king :

And yet, methinks, I could be well content

To be mine own attorney in this case.

I'll over, then, to England with this news,

And make this marriage to be solemniz'd.

So, farewell, Reignier. Set this diamond safe

In golden palaces, as it becomes.

Reig. I do embrace thee, as I would embrace

The Christian prince, king Henry, were he here.

Mar. Farewell, my lord. Good wishes, praise, and prayers,

Shall Suffolk ever have of Margaret. [Going.

Suf. Farewell, sweet madam ! But hark you, Margaret ;

No princely commendations to my king ?

Mar. Such commendations as become a maid,

A virgin, and his servant, say to him.

Suf. Words sweetly plac'd, and modestly directed.

But, madam, I must trouble you again,—

No loving token to his majesty ?

Mar. Yes, my good lord ; a pure unspotted heart,

Never yet taint with love, I send the king.

Suf. And this withal. [Kisses her.

Mar. That for thyself : I will not so presume,

To send such <sup>10</sup> peevish tokens to a king.

[Exeunt REIGNIER and MARGARET.

Suf. O, wert thou for myself !—But, Suffolk, stay ;

Thou may'st not wander in that labyrinth :

There Minotaurs, and ugly treasons, lurk.

Solicit Henry with her wondrous praise :

Bethink thee on her virtues that surmount,

<sup>11</sup> Mid natural graces that extinguish art ;

Repeat their semblance often on the seas,

That when thou com'st to kneel at Henry's feet,

Thou may'st bemoan him of his wits with wonder.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.—Camp of the Duke of YORK,
in Anjou.

Enter YORK, WARWICK, and others.

York. Bring forth that sorceress, condemn'd to burn.

Enter LA PUCELLE, guarded ; and a Shepherd.

Shep. Ah, Joan ! this kills thy father's heart out—
Have I sought every country far and near, [Right.

And, now it is my chance to find thee out,

Must I behold thy <sup>12</sup> timeless cruel death ?

Ah, Joan ! sweet daughter Joan, I'll die with thee.

Puc. Decrepit <sup>13</sup> miser ! base ignoble wretch !

I am descended of a gentler blood :

Thou art no father, nor no friend, of mine. [so :

Shep. Out, out !—My lords, an please you, 'tis not

I did beget her, all the parish knows :

Her mother liveth yet, can testify,

She was the first fruit of my bachelorship.

War. Graceless ! wilt thou deny thy parentage ?

a miserable creature.

York. This argues what her kind of life hath been ;
Wicked and vile, and so her death concludes.

Shep. Fie, Joan ! that thou wilt be so <sup>a</sup> obstacle !
God knows, thou art a <sup>b</sup> collop of my flesh,
And for thy sake have I shed many a tear :
Deny me not, I pr'ythee, gentle Joan.

Puc. Peasant, avaunt !—You have suborn'd this
Of purpose to obscure my noble birth.

Shep. 'Tis true, I gave a noble to the priest,
The morn that I was wedded to her mother.
Kneel down and take my blessing, good my girl.—
Wilt thou not stoop ? Now cursed be the time
Of thy nativity ! I would, the milk
Thy mother gave thee, when thou suck'dst her breast,
Had been a little ratsbane for thy sake ;
Or else, when thou didst keep my lambs a-field,
I wish some ravenous wolf had eaten thee.
Dost thou deny thy father, cursed drab ?

O ! burn her, burn her : hanging is too good. [Exit.
York. Take her away ; for she hath lived too long,
To fill the world with vicious qualities. [demn'd ;

Puc. First, let me tell you whom you have con-
Not me begotten of a shepherd swain,
But issu'd from the progeny of kings :
Virtuous, and holy ; chosen from above,
By inspiration of celestial grace,
To work exceeding miracles on earth.
I never had to do with wicked spirits :
But you,—that are polluted with your lusts,
Stain'd with the guiltless blood of innocents,
Corrupt and tainted with a thousand vices,—
Because you want the grace that others have,
You judge it straight a thing impossible
To compass wonders, but by help of devils.
No ; misconceived Joan of Arc hath been
A virgin from her tender infancy,
Chaste and immaculate in very thought ;
Whose maiden blood, thus rigorously effus'd,
Will cry for vengeance at the gates of heaven.

York. Ay, ay.—Away with her to execution !

War. And hark ye, sirs ; because she is a maid,
Spare her for no fagots, let there be enow :
Place barrels of pitch upon the fatal stake,
That so her torture may be shortened.

Puc. Will nothing turn your unrelenting hearts ?—
Then, Joan, discover thine infirmity,
That warranteth by law to be thy privilege.—
I am with child, ye bloody homicides :
Murder not, then, the fruit within my womb,
Although ye hale me to a violent death. [child ?

York. Now, heaven forefend ! the holy maid with War. The greatest miracle that e'er ye wrought !
Is all your strict preciseness come to this ?

York. She and the Dauphin have been juggling :
I did imagine what would be her refuge.

War. Well, go to : we will have no bastards live ;
Especially, since Charles must father it.

Puc. You are deceiv'd ; my child is none of his :
It was Alençon, that enjoy'd my love.

York. Alençon, that notorious Machiavel !
It dies, an if it had a thousand lives.

Puc. O ! give me leave ; I have deluded you :
'Twas neither Charles, nor yet the duke I nam'd,
But Reignier, king of Naples, that prevail'd.

War. A married man : that's most intolerable.

York. Why, here's a girl ! I think, she knows not
There were so many, whom she may accuse. [well,

War. It's sign she hath been liberal and free.

York. And, yet, forsooth, she is a virgin pure.—
Strumpet, thy words condemn thy brat, and thee :
Use no entreaty, for it is in vain.

Puc. Then lead me hence :—with whom I leave my curse.

May never glorious sun reflex his beams
Upon the country where you make abode ;
But darkness and the gloomy shade of death
Environ you, till mischief, and despair
Drive you to break your necks, or hang yourselves !
[Exit, guarded.

York. Break thou in pieces, and consume to ashes,
Thou foul accursed minister of hell !

Enter Cardinal BEAUFORT, attended.

Car. Lord regent, I do greet your excellence
With letters of commission from the king.
For know, my lords, the states of Christendom,
Mov'd with remorse of these outrageous broils,
Have earnestly implor'd a general peace
Betwixt our nation and the aspiring French ;
And here at hand the Dauphin, and his train,
Approacheth to confer about some matter.

York. Is all our travail turn'd to this effect ?
After the slaughter of so many peers,
So many captains, gentlemen, and soldiers,
That in this quarrel have been overthrown,
And sold their bodies for their country's benefit,
Shall we at last conclude effeminate peace ?

Have we not lost most part of all the towns,
By treason, falsehood, and by treachery,
Our great progenitors had conquered ?—
O, Warwick, Warwick ! I foresee with grief
The utter loss of all the realm of France.

War. Be patient, York ! if we conclude a peace,
It shall be with such strict and severe covenants,
As little shall the Frenchmen gain thereby.

*Enter CHARLES, attended ; ALENÇON, Bastard.
REIGNIER, and others.*

Char. Since, lords of England, it is thus agreed,
That peaceful truce shall be proclaimed in France,
We come to be informed by yourselves
What the conditions of that league must be.

York. Speak, Winchester ; for boiling choler chokes
The hollow passage of my <sup>1</sup> prison'd voice,
By sight of these our <sup>2</sup> baleful enemies.

Win. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted thus :—
That, in regard king Henry gives consent,
Of mere compassion, and of lenity,
To ease your country of distressful war,
And suffer you to breathe in fruitful peace,
You shall become true liegemen to his crown.
And, Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear
To pay him tribute, and submit thyself,
Thou shalt be plac'd as viceroy under him,
And still enjoy thy regal dignity.

Alen. Must he be then as shadow of himself ?
Adorn his temples with a <sup>3</sup> coronet,
And yet, in substance and authority,
Retain but privilege of a private man ?
This proffer is absurd and reasonless.

Char. 'Tis known, already that I am possess'd
With more than half the Gallian territories,
And therein reverence'd for their lawful king :
Shall I, for lucre of the rest unvanquish'd,
Deduct so much from that prerogative,
As to be call'd but viceroy of the whole ?
No, lord ambassador ; I'll rather keep
That which I have, than, coveting for more,
Be cast from possibility of all. [means

York. Insulting Charles ! hast thou by secret
Used intercession to obtain a league,
And now the matter grows to compromise,
Stand'st thou aloof upon <sup>2</sup> comparisons ?

Either accept the title thou usurp'st,
Of benefit proceeding from our king,
And not of any challenge of desert,
Or we will plague thee with incessant wars.

Reig. My lord, you do not well in obstinacy
To cavil in the course of this contract:
If once it be neglected, ten to one,
We shall not find like opportunity.

Alen. To say the truth, it is your policy [Aside to CHARLES.

To save your subjects from such massacre,
And ruthless slaughters as are daily seen
By our proceeding in hostility;
And, therefore take this compact of a truce,
Although you break it when your pleasure serves.

War. How say'st thou, Charles? shall our condition stand? [terest

Char. It shall; only reserv'd, you claim no in-
In any of our towns of garrison.

York. Then swear allegiance to his majesty;
As thou art knight, never to disobey,
Nor be rebellious to the crown of England,
Thou, nor thy nobles, to the crown of England.—

[CHARLES, and his Nobles, give tokens of fealty.
So; now dismiss your army when ye please:
Hang up your ensigns, let your drums be still,
For here we 'interchange a solemn peace. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King HENRY, in conference with SUFFOLK; GLOSTER and EXETER following.

K. Hen. Your wondrous rare description, noble earl,
Of beauteous Margaret hath astonish'd me:
Her virtues, graced with external gifts,
Do breed love's settled passions in my heart;
And like as rigor of tempestuous gusts
Provokes the mightiest hulk against the tide,
So am I driven by breath of her renown,
Either to suffer shipwreck, or arrive
Where I may have fruition of her love.

Suf. Tush! my good Lord, this superficial tale
Is but a preface of her worthy praise:
The chief' perfections of that lovely dame,
(Had I sufficient skill to utter them)
Would make a volume of enticing lines,
Able to ravish any dull conceit.
And, which is more, she is not so divine,
So full replete with choice of all delights,
But with as humble lowliness of mind,
She is content to be at your command;
Command, I mean, of virtuous chaste intents,
To love and honor Henry as her lord.

K. Hen. And otherwise will Henry ne'er presume.
Therefore, my lord protector, give consent,
That Margaret may be England's royal queen.

Glo. So should I give consent to flatter sin.
You know, my lord, your highness is betroth'd
Unto another lady of esteem;
How shall we, then, dispense with that contract,
And not deface your honor with reproach?

Suf. As doth a ruler with unlawful oaths:
Or one that, at a triumph having vow'd
To try his strength, forsaketh yet the lists
By reason of his adversary's odds.
A poor earl's daughter is unequal odds,
And therefore may be broke without offence. [that?

Glo. Why, what, I pray, is Margaret, more than Her father is no better than an earl,
Although in glorious titles he excel?

Suf. Yes, my good lord, her father is a king,

The king of Naples and Jerusalem;
And of such great authority in France,
As his alliance will confirm our peace,
And keep the Frenchmen in allegiance.

Glo. And so the earl of Armagnac may do,
Because he is near kinsman unto Charles.

Exe. Beside, his wealth doth warrant a liberal dower,
Where Reiguiet sooner will receive, than give.

Suf. A dower, my lords! disgrace not so your king,
That he should be so abject, base, and poor,
To choose for wealth, and not for perfect love.

Henry is able to enrich his queen,
And not to seek a queen to make him rich.
So worthless peasants bargain for their wives,
As market-men for oxen, sheep, or horse.
Marriage is a matter of more worth,
Than to be dealt in by attorneyship:

Not whom we will, but whom his grace affects,
Must be companion of his nuptial bed;

And therefore, lords, since he affects her best,
The most of all these reasons bindeth us,

In our opinions she should be preferred.

For what is wedlock forced but a hell,
An age of discord and continual strife?

Whereas the contrary bringeth bliss,
And is a pattern of celestial peace.

Whom should we match with Henry, being a king,
But Margaret that is daughter to a king?

Her peerless feature, joined with her birth,
Approves her fit for none but for a king:

Her valiant courage, and undaunted spirit,
(More than in women commonly is seen)

Will answer our hope in issue of a king;

For Henry, son unto a conqueror,

Is likely to beget more conquerors,

If with a lady of so high resolve,

As is fair Margaret, he be link'd in love.

Then yield, my lords; and here conclude with me,
That Margaret shall be queen, and none but she.

K. Hen. Whether it be through force of your report
My noble lord of Suffolk, or for that

My tender youth was never yet attaint

With any passion of inflaming love,

I cannot tell; but this I am assur'd,

I feel such sharp dissension in my breast,

Such fierce alarms both of hope and fear,

As I am sick with working of my thoughts.

Take, therefore, shipping; post, my lord, to France;

Agree to any covenants, and procure

That Lady Margaret do vouchsafe to come

To cross the seas to England, and be crown'd

King Henry's faithful and anointed queen.

For your expenses and sufficient charge,

Among the people gather up a tenth.

Be gone, I say; for till you do return,

I rest perplexed with a thousand cares.—

And you, good uncle, banish all offence:

If you do censure me by what you were,

Not what you are, I know it will excuse

This sudden execution of my will.

And so conduct me, where from company

I may revolve and ruminate my grief. [Exit.

Glo. Ay, grief, I fear me, both at first and last.

[Exeunt GLOSTER and EXETER.

Suf. Thus Suffolk hath prevail'd; and thus he goes,

As did the youthful Paris once to Greece,

With hope to find the like event in love,

But prosper better than the Trojan did.

Margaret shall now be queen, and rule the king;

But I will rule both her, the king, and realm. [Exit.

* "At a triumph," i. e., at a tournament, mask, or revel.

b "By attorneyship," i. e., by the intervention of another man's choice.—c Judge.—d Sorrow.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. A Room of State in the Palace.

Flourish of Trumpets: then Hautboys. Enter, on one side, KING HENRY, DUKE OF GLOSTER, SALISBURY, WARWICK, and CARDINAL BEAUFORT; on the other, QUEEN MARGARET, led in by SUFFOLK; YORK, SOMERSET, BUCKINGHAM, and others, following.

Suf. As by your high imperial majesty
 I had in charge at my depart for France,
 As procurator to your excellence,
 To marry princess Margaret for your grace;
 So, in the famous ancient city Tours,

In presence of the kings of France and Sicil,
 The dukes of Orleans, Calaber, Bretagne, and Alençon, [bishops,
 Seven earls, twelve barons, and twenty reverend
 I have perform'd my task, and was espous'd:
 And humbly now upon my bended knee,
 In sight of England and her lordly peers,
 Deliver up my title in the queen
 To your most gracious hands, that are the substance
 Of that great shadow I did represent;
 The happiest gift that ever marquess gave,
 The fairest queen that ever king receiv'd. [Margaret:
K. Hen. Suffolk, arise.—Welcome, queen Mar-
 I can express no kinder sign of love,
 Than this kind kiss.—O Lord! that lends me life,
 Lend me a heart replete with thankfulness;

For thou hast given me, in this beauteous face,
A world of earthly blessings to my soul,
If sympathy of love unite our thoughts. [lord,

Q. Mar. Great king of England, and my gracious
The mutual conference that my mind hath had
By day, by night, waking, and in my dreams,
In courtly company, or at my beads,
With you mine <sup>a</sup>alderlievest sovereign,
Makes me the bolder to salute my king
With ruder terms, such as my wit affords,
And over-joy of heart doth minister. [speech,

K. Hen. Her sight did ravish, but her grace in Her words y-clad with wisdom's majesty,
Makes me from wondering fall to weeping joys:
Such is the fullness of my heart's content.
Lords, with one cheerful voice welcome my love.

All. Long live queen Margaret, England's happiness!

Q. Mar. We thank you all. [Flourish.

Suf. My lord protector, so it please your grace,
Here are the articles of contracted peace,
Between our sovereign, and the French king Charles,
For eighteen months, concluded by consent.

Glo. [Reads.] "Imprimis: It is agreed between the French king, Charles, and William de la Poole, marquess of Suffolk, ambassador for Henry, king of England,—that the said Henry shall espouse the lady Margaret, daughter unto Reignier king of Naples, Sicilia, and Jerusalem, and crown her queen of England ere the thirtieth of May next ensuing.—Item,—That the duchy of Anjou and the county of Maine, shall be released and delivered to the king her father"— [Pausing.

K. Hen. Uncle, how now?

Glo. Pardon me, gracious lord;
Some sudden qualm hath struck me at the heart,
And dimm'd mine eyes, that I can read no farther.

K. Hen. Uncle of Winchester, I pray, read on.

Car. [Reads.] "Item: It is farther agreed between them,—that the duchies of Anjou and Maine shall be released and delivered over to the king her father; and she sent over of the king of England's own proper cost and charges, without having any dowry."

K. Hen. They please us well.—Lord marquess, kneel <sup>2</sup>thce down:

We here create thee the first duke of Suffolk,
And girt thee with the sword.—Cousin of York,
We here discharge your grace from being regent
Of the parts of France, till term of eighteen months
Be full expir'd.—Thanks, uncle Winchester,
Gloster, York, Buckingham, Somerset,
Salisbury, and Warwick;

We thank you all for this great favor done,
In entertainment to my princely queen.
Come, let us in; and with all speed provide
To see her coronation be perform'd.

[Exeunt King, Queen, and SUFFOLK.

Glo. Brave peers of England, pillars of the state,
To you duke Humphrey must unload his grief,
Your grief, the common grief of all the land.
What! did my brother Henry spend his youth,
His valor, coin, and people, in the wars?
Did he so often lodge in open field,
In winter's cold, and summer's parching heat,
To conquer France, his true inheritance?
And did my brother Bedford toil his wits,
To keep by policy what Henry got?
Have you yourselves, Somerset, Buckingham,
Brave York, Salisbury, and victorious Warwick,
Receiv'd deep scars in France and Normandy?

Or hath mine uncle Beaufort, and myself,
With all the learned council of the realm,
Studied so long, sat in the council-house
Early and late, debating to and fro
How France and Frenchmen might be kept in awe?
And hath his highness in his infancy
Been crowned in Paris, in despite of foes?
And shall these labors, and these honors, die?
Shall Henry's conquest, Bedford's vigilance,
Your deeds of war, and all our counsel, die?
O peers of England! shameful is this league:
Fatal this marriage; cancelling your fame,
Blotting your names from books of memory,
Razing the characters of your renown,
Defacing monuments of conquer'd France,
Undoing all, as all had never been. [course?

Car. Nephew, what means this passionate distress peroration with such <sup>b</sup>circumstance?

For France, 'tis ours; and we will keep it still.

Glo. Ay, uncle, we will keep it, if we can;

But now it is impossible we should.

Suffolk, the new-made duke that rules the roast,
Hath given the duchies of Anjou, and Maine,
Unto the poor king Reignier, whose large style
Agrees not with the leanness of his purse.

Sal. Now, by the death of him that died for all,
These counties were the keys of Normandy.—
But wherefore weeps Warwick, my valiant son?

War. For grief, that they are past recovery;
For, were there hope to conquer them again,
My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes no tears.
Anjou and Maine! myself did win them both;
Those provinces these arms of mine did conquer:
And are the cities that I got with wounds,
Deliver'd up again with peaceful words?
Mort Dieu!

York. For Suffolk's duke, may he be suffocate
That dims the honor of this warlike isle!
France should have torn and rent my very heart,
Before I would have yielded to this league.
I never read but England's kings have had Large sums of gold, and dowries, with their wives;
And our king Henry gives away his own,
To match with her that brings no vantages.

Glo. A proper jest, and never heard before,
That Suffolk should demand a whole fifteenth,
For costs and charges in transporting her! [France.
She should have stay'd in France, and starv'd in Before—

Car. My lord of Gloster, now you grow too hot.
It was the pleasure of my lord the king.

Glo. My lord of Winchester, I know your mind:
'Tis not my speeches that you do dislike,
But 'tis my presence that doth trouble ye.
Rancor will out: proud prelate, in thy face
I see thy fury. If I longer stay,
We shall begin our ancient bickerings.—
Lordings, farewell; and say, when I am gone,
I prophesied, France will be lost ere long. [Exit.

Car. So, there goes our protector in a rage.
'Tis known to you he is mine enemy;
Nay, more, an enemy unto you all,
And no great friend, I fear me, to the king.
Consider, lords, he is the next of blood,
And heir apparent to the English crown:
Had Henry got an empire by his marriage,
And all the wealthy kingdoms of the west,
There's reason he should be displeas'd at it.
Look to it, lords: let not his smothering words
Bewitch your hearts; be wise, and circumspect.
What though the common people favor him,

<sup>b</sup> "Such circumstance," i. e., such circumstances of aggra-vation.

Calling him "Humphrey the good Duke of Gloster;"
Clapping their hands, and crying with loud voice—
"Jesu maintain your royal excellence!"

With—"God preserve the good duke Humphrey!"
I fear me, lords, for all this flattering gloss,
He will be found a dangerous protector.

Buck. Why should he, then, protect our sovereign,
He being of age to govern of himself?—

Cousin of Somerset, join you with me,
And all together, with the duke of Suffolk,
We'll quickly hoise duke Humphrey from his seat.

Car. This weighty business will not brook delay;
I'll to the duke of Suffolk presently. [Exit.]

Som. Cousin of Buckingham, though Humphrey's
And greatness of his place be grief to us, [Pride,
Yet let us watch the haughty cardinal.

His insolence is more intolerable
Than all the princes in the land beside:
If Gloster be displac'd, he'll be protector.

Buck. Or thou, or I, Somerset, will be protector,
Despite duke Humphrey, or the cardinal.

[Exeunt BUCKINGHAM and SOMERSET.]

Sal. Pride went before, ambition follows him.

While these do labor for their own preferment,
Behoves it us to labor for the realm.

I never saw but Humphrey, duke of Gloster,
Did bear him like a noble gentleman.

Of have I seen the haughty cardinal,
More like a soldier, than a man of the church,

As stout, and proud, as he were lord of all,
Swear like a ruffian, and demean himself

Unlike the ruler of a common-weal.—

Warwick, my son, the comfort of my age,
Thy deeds, thy plainness, and thy house-keeping,

Have won the greatest favor of the commons,
Excepting none but good duke Humphrey:—

And, brother York, thy acts in Ireland,

In bringing them to civil discipline;

Thy late exploits, done in the heart of France,

When thou wert regent for our sovereign,

Have made thee fear'd, and honor'd, of the people.—

Join we together, for the public good,

In what we can to bridle and suppress

The pride of Suffolk, and the cardinal,

With Somerset's and Buckingham's ambition;

And, as we may, cherish duke Humphrey's deeds,

While they do tend to profit of the land.

War. So God help Warwick, as he loves the land,

And common profit of his country.

York. And so says York, for he hath greatest cause.

Sal. Then let's make haste away, and look into the main.

War. Unto the main? O father! Maine is lost;

That Maine, which by main force<sup>2</sup> did Warwick win,

And would have kept, so long as breath did last.

Main chance, father, you meant; but I meant Maine,

Which I will win from France, or else be slain.

[Exeunt WARWICK and SALISBURY.]

York. Anjou and Maine are given to the French;

Paris is lost; the state of Normandy

Stands on a tickle point now they are gone.

Suffolk concluded on the articles,

The peers agreed, and Henry was well pleas'd,

To change two dukedoms for a duke's fair daughter.

I cannot blame them all: what is't to them?

'Tis thine they give away, and not their own.

Pirates may make cheap pennyworths of their pillage,

And purchase friends, and give to courtézans.

Still revelling, like lords, till all be gone;

While as the silly owner of the goods

Weeps over them, and wrings his<sup>3</sup> helpless hands,

And shakes his head, and trembling stands aloof,

* Ticklish.

While all is shar'd, and all is borne away,
Ready to starve, and dare not touch his own:
So York must sit, and fret, and bite his tongue,
While his own lands are bargain'd for, and sold.
Methinks, the realms of England, France, and Ire-
Bear that proportion to my flesh and blood, [land,
As did the fatal brand Althea burn'd.

Unto the prince's heart of <sup>o</sup> Calydon.

Anjou and Maine, both given unto the French!

Cold news for me; for I had hope of France,

Even as I have of fertile England's soil.

A day will come when York shall claim his own;

And therefore I will take the Nevils' parts,

And make a show of love to proud duke Humphrey,

And, when I spy advantage, claim the crown,

For that's the golden mark I seek to hit.

Nor shall proud Lancaster usurp my right,

Nor hold the sceptre in his childish fist,

Nor wear the diadem upon his head,

Whose church-like humors fit not for a crown.

Then, York, be still awhile, till time do serve:

Watch thou, and wake, when others be asleep,

To pry into the secrets of the state,

Till Henry, surfeiting in joys of love,

With his new bride, and England's dear-bought queen,

And Humphrey with the peers be fill'd in jars:

Then will I raise aloft the milk-white rose,

With whose sweet smell the air shall be perfum'd,

And in my standard bear the arms of York,

To grapple with the house of Lancaster;

And, force perforce, I'll make him yield the crown,

Whose bookish rule hath pull'd fair England down.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in the Duke of GLOSTER'S House.

Enter GLOSTER and the Duchess.

Duch. Why droops my lord, like over-ripen'd corn,

Hanging the head at Ceres' plenteous load?

Why doth the great duke Humphrey knit his brows,

As frowning at the favors of the world?

Why are thine eyes fix'd to the sullen earth,

Gazing on that which seems to dim thy sight?

What seest thou there? king Henry's diadem,

Enchas'd with all the honors of the world?

If so, gaze on, and grovel on thy face,

Until thy head be circled with the same.

Put forth thy hand; reach at the glorious gold.—

What, is't too short? I'll lengthen it with mine;

And having both together heav'd it up,

We'll both together lift our heads to heaven,

And never more abase our sight so low,

As to vouchsafe one glance unto the ground.

Glo. O Nell! sweet Nell, if thou dost love thy lord,

Banish the canker of ambitious thoughts:

And may that thought, when I imagine ill

Against my king and nephew, virtuous Henry,

Be my last breathing in this mortal world.

My troublous dream this night doth make me sad.

Duch. What dream'd my lord? tell me, and I'll requite it

With sweet rehearsal of my morning's dream.

Glo. Methought, this staff, mine office-badge in court,

Was broke in twain: by whom, I have forgot,

But, as I think, 't was by the cardinal;

And on the pieces of the broken wand

Were plac'd the heads of Edmund duke of Somerset,

And William de la Poole, first duke of Suffolk.

<sup>2</sup> Melcager; whose life was to continue only so long as a certain firebrand should last. Althea having thrown it into the fire, he expired in torments.

This was my dream: what it doth bode God knows.

Duch. Tut! this was nothing but an argument,
That he that breaks a stick of Gloster's grove
Shall lose his head for his presumption.
But list to me, my Humphrey, my sweet duke:
Methought, I sat in seat of majesty,
In the cathedral church of Westminster, <sup>a</sup> crown'd;
And in that chair where kings and queens were
Where Henry, and dame Margaret, kneel'd to me,
And on my head did set the diadem.

Glo. Nay, Eleanor, then must I chide outright.
Presumptuous dame! <sup>a</sup> ill-nurture'd Eleanor!
Art thou not second woman in the realm,
And the protector's wife, below'd of him?
Hast thou not worldly pleasure at command,
Above the reach or compass of thy thought?
And wilt thou still be hammering treachery,
To tumble down thy husband, and thyself,
From top of honor to disgrace's feet?
Away from me, and let me hear no more.

Duch. What, what, my lord! are you so choleric
With Eleanor, for telling but her dream?
Next time I'll keep my dreams unto myself,
And not be check'd.

Glo. Nay, be not angry; I am pleas'd again.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord protector, 'tis his highness' pleasure,
You do prepare to ride unto St. Albans,
<sup>b</sup> Whereas the king and queen do mean to hawk.

Glo. I go.—Come, Neil; thou wilt ride with us?

Duch. Yes, my good lord, I'll follow presently.

[Exit GLOSTER and Messenger.]

Follow I must; I cannot go before,
While Gloster bears this base and humble mind.
Were I a man, a duke, and next of blood,
I would remove these tedious stumbling-blocks,
And smooth my way upon their headless necks:
And, being a woman, I will not be slack
To play my part in fortune's pageant.—
Where are you there? Sir John! nay, fear not, man,
We are alone; here's none but I, thou, and I.

Enter Hume.

Hume. Jesus preserve your royal majesty!

Duch. What say'st thou? majesty! I am but grace.

Hume. But, by the grace of God, and Hume's
Your grace's title shall be multiplied. <sup>c</sup> [advice,

Duch. What say'st thou, man? hast thou as yet confer'd

With Margery Jourdain, the cunning witch,
And Roger Bolingbroke, the conjurer,
And will they undertake to do me good? <sup>d</sup> [highness

Hume. This they have promised,—to show your
A spirit rais'd from depth of under ground,
That shall make answer to such questions,
As by your grace shall be propounded him.

Duch. It is enough: I'll think upon the questions.
When from St. Albans we do make return,
We'll see these things effected to the full.
Here, Hume, take this reward: make merry, man,
With thy confederates in this weighty cause.

[Exit Duchess.]

Hume. Hume must make merry with the duchess'
gold,

Marry, and shall. But how now, Sir John Hume!

Seal up your lips, and give no words but mum:

The business asketh silent secrecy.

Dame Eleanor gives gold to bring the witch:

Gold cannot come amiss, were she a devil.

Yet have I gold flies from another coast:

I dare not say, from the rich cardinal,

And from the great and new-made duke of Suffolk;
Yet I do find it so: for, to be plain,
They, knowing dame Eleanor's aspiring humor,
Have hired me to undermine the duchess,
And buz these conjurations in her brain.
They say, a crafty knave does need no broker;
Yet am I <sup>2</sup> Suffolk's, and the cardinal's broker.
Hume, if you take not heed, you shall go near
To call them both a pair of crafty knaves.
Well, so it stands; and thus, I fear, at last,
Hume's knavery will be the duchess' wreck,
And her attainture will be Humphrey's fall.
<sup>d</sup> Sort how it will, I shall have gold for all. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter PETER, and others, with Petitions.

1 Pet. My masters, let's stand close: my lord protector will come this way by and by, and then we may deliver our supplications in <sup>3</sup> sequel.

2 Pet. Marry, the Lord protect him, for he's a good man. Jesu bless him!

Enter SUFFOLK and Queen MARGARET.

1 Pet. Here 'a comes, methinks, and the Queen with him. I'll be the first, sure.

2 Pet. Come back, fool! this is the duke of Suffolk, and not my lord protector.

Suf. How now, fellow! would'st any thing with me?

1 Pet. I pray my lord, pardon me: I took ye for my lord protector.

Q. Mar. "To my lord protector!" are your supplications to his lordship? Let me see them. What is thine?

1 Pet. Mine is, an't please your grace, against John Goodman, my lord cardinal's man, for keeping my house, and lands, and wife, and all, from me.

Suf. Thy wife too! that is some wrong indeed.—What's yours?—What's here? [Reads.] "Against the duke of Suffolk, for enclosing the commons of Melford."—How now, sir knave?

2 Pet. Alas! sir, I am but a poor petitioner of our whole township.

Peter. [Presenting his petition.] Against my master, Thomas Horner, for saying, that the duke of York was rightful heir to the crown.

Q. Mar. What say'st thou? Did the duke of York say, he was rightful heir to the crown?

Peter. That my master was? No, forsooth: my master said, that he was; and that the king was an usurper.

Suf. Who is there? [Enter Servants.]—Take this fellow in, and send for his master with a pursuivant presently.—We'll hear more of your matter before the king. [Exit Servants with PETER.]

Q. Mar. And as for you, that love to be protected Under the wings of our protector's grace, Begin your suits anew, and sue to him.

[Tears the Petition.]

Away, base <sup>e</sup> cullions!—Suffolk, let them go.

All. Come, let's be gone. [Exit Petitioners.]

Q. Mar. My lord of Suffolk, say, is this the guise, Is this the fashion in the court of England?

Is this the government of Britain's isle,

And this the royalty of Albion's king?

What! shall king Henry be a pupil still,

Under the surly Gloster's governance?

Am I a queen in title and in style,

And must be made a subject to a duke?

I tell thee, Poole, when in the city Tours,

<sup>d</sup> "Sort how it will," i. e., let the issue be as it will.—<sup>e</sup> Scoundrels.

Thou ran'st a tilt in honor of my love,
And stol'st away the ladies' hearts of France,
I thought king Henry had resembled thee,
In courage, courtship, and proportion;
But all his mind is bent to holiness,
To number Ave-Marias on his beads:
His champions are the prophets and apostles;
His weapons, holy saws of sacred writ;
His study is his tilt-yard, and his loves
Are brazen images of canoniz'd saints.
I would, the college of the cardinals
Would choose him pope, and carry him to Rome,
And set the triple crown upon his head:
That were a state fit for his holiness.

Suf. Madam, be patient: as I was cause
Your highness came to England, so will I
In England work your grace's full content.

Q. Mar. Beside the haught protector, have we Beaufort,

The imperious churchman; Somerset, Buckingham,
And grumbling York: and not the least of these,
But can do more in England than the king.

Suf. And he of these that can do most of all,
Cannot do more in England than the Nevils:
Salisbury and Warwick are no simple peers.

Q. Mar. Not all these lords do vex me half so much,

As that proud dame, the lord protector's wife:
She sweeps it through the court with troops of ladies,
More like an empress than duke Humphrey's wife.
Strangers in court do take her for the queen:
She bears a duke's revenues on her back,
And in her heart she scorns our poverty.
Shall I not live to be aveng'd on her?
Contemptuous base-born <sup>a</sup>callat as she is,
She vaunted 'mongst her minions t'other day,
The very train of her worst wearing gown
Was better worth than all my father's lands,
Till Suffolk gave two dukedoms for his daughter.

Suf. Madam, myself have lim'd a bush for her;
And plac'd a quire of such enticing birds,
That she will light to listen to their lays,
And never mount to trouble you again.
So, let her rest; and, madam, list to me,
For I am bold to counsel you in this.
Although we fancy not the cardinal,
Yet must we join with him, and with the lords,
Till we have brought duke Humphrey in disgrace.
As for the duke of York, this late <sup>b</sup>complaint
Will make but little for his benefit:
So, one by one, <sup>c</sup>we will weed all the realm,
And you yourself shall steer the happy helm.

Enter King HENRY, YORK, and SOMERSET; Duke and Duchess of GLOSTER, Cardinal BEAUFORT, BUCKINGHAM, SALISBURY, and WARWICK.

K. Hen. For my part, noble lords, I care not which;
Or Somerset, or York, all's one to me.

York. If York have ill demean'd himself in France,
Then let him be <sup>c</sup>denay'd the regentship.

Som. If Somerset be unworthy of the place,
Let York be regent: I will yield to him.

War. Whether your grace be worthy, yea, or no,
Dispute not that York is the worthier.

Car. Ambitious Warwick, let thy betters speak.

War. A cardinal's not my better in the field.

Buck. All in this presence are thy betters, Warwick.

War. Warwick may live to be the best of all.

Sal. Peace, son!—and show some reason, Buckingham,

Why Somerset should be preferr'd in this.

Q. Mar. Because the king, forsooth, will have it so.

Glo. Madam, the king is old enough himself

To give his <sup>d</sup>censure. These are no women's matters.

Q. Mar. If he be old enough, what needs your grace
To be protector of his excellence?

Glo. Madam, I am protector of the realm,

And, at his pleasure, will resign my place.

Suf. Resign it, then, and leave thine insolence.

Since thou wert king, (as who is king but thou?)

The commonwealth hath daily run to wreck:

The Dauphin hath prevail'd beyond the seas,

And all the peers and nobles of the realm

Have been as bondmen to thy sovereignty. [bags

Car. The commons hast thou rack'd; the clergy's

Are lank and lean with thy extortions. [tire,

Som. Thy sumptuous buildings, and thy wife's at-
Have cost a mass of public treasury.

Buck. Thy cruelty, in execution

Upon offenders hath exceeded law,

And left thee to the mercy of the law.

Q. Mar. Thy sale of offices, and towns in France,

If they were known, as the suspect is great,

Would make thee quickly hop without thy head.

[Exit GLOSTER. The Queen drops her Fan.

Give me my fan: what, minion! can you not?

[Giving the Duchess a box on the ear.

I cry you mercy, madam: was it you? [man:

Duch. Was't I? yea, I it was, proud French-wo-

Could I come near your beauty with my nails,

I'd set my ten <sup>e</sup>commandments in your face.

K. Hen. Sweet aunt, be quiet: 'twas against her will. [time;

Duch. Against her will! Good king, look to't in She'll hamper thee, and dandle thee like a baby.

Though in this place most master wear no breeches,

She shall not strike dame Eleanor unreveng'd. [Aside.

[Exit Duchess.

Buck. Lord Cardinal, I will follow Eleanor,

And listen after Humphrey, how he proceeds:

She's tickled now; her fume can need no spurs,

She'll gallop fast enough to her destruction.

[Exit BUCKINGHAM

Re-enter GLOSTER.

Glo. Now, lords, my choler being overblown

With walking once about the quadrangle,

I come to talk of commonwealth affairs.

As for your spiteful false objections,

Prove them, and I lie open to the law;

But God in mercy so deal with my soul,

As I in duty love my king and country.

But to the matter that we have in hand.—

I say, my sovereign, York is meekest man

To be your regent in the realm of France.

Suf. Before we make election, give me leave

To show some reason, of no little force,

That York is most unmeet of any man.

York. I'll tell thee, Suffolk, why I am unmeet.

First, for I cannot flatter thee in pride:

Next, if I be appointed for the place,

My lord of Somerset will keep me there,

Without discharge, money, or furniture,

Till France be won into the Dauphin's hands.

Last time I danc'd attendance on his will,

Till Paris was besieg'd, famish'd, and lost.

War. That can I witness; and a fouler fact

Did never traitor in the land commit.

Suf. Peace, headstrong Warwick!

War. Image of pride, why should I hold my peace?

man, against his master. — <sup>c</sup> Denied.

<sup>d</sup> "His censure," i. e., his opinion, judgment. — <sup>e</sup> The marks of her ten fingers and thumbs.

Enter Servants of SUFFOLK, bringing in HORNER and PETER.

Suf. Because here is a man accus'd of treason :
Pray God, the duke of York excuse himself!

York. Doth any one accuse York for a traitor?

K. Hen. What mean'st thou, Suffolk? tell me, what are these?

Suf. Please it your majesty, this is the man
That doth accuse his master of high treason.
His words were these:—that Richard, duke of York,
Was rightful heir unto the English crown,
And that your majesty was an usurper.

K. Hen. Say, man, were these thy words?

Hor. An't shall please your majesty, I never said nor thought any such matter. God is my witness, I am falsely accused by the villain.

Pet. By these ten bones, my lords, [Holding up his hands.] he did speak them to me in the garret one night, as we were scouring my lord of York's armor.

York. Base dung-hill villain, and mechanical,
I'll have thy head for this thy traitor's speech.—
I do beseech your royal majesty,
Let him have all the rigor of the law.

Hor. Alas! my lord, hang me, if ever I spake the words. My accuser is my prentice; and when I did correct him for his fault the other day, he did vow upon his knees he would be even with me. I have good witness of this: therefore, I beseech your majesty, do not cast away an honest man for a villain's accusation.

K. Hen. Uncle, what shall we say to this in law?

Glo. This doom, my gracious lord, if I may Let Somerset be regent o'er the French, [Judge.]
Because in York this breeds suspicion;
And let these have a day appointed them
For single combat in convenient place,
For he hath witness of his servant's malice.
This is the law, and this duke Humfrey's doom.

Som. I humbly thank your royal majesty.

Hor. And I accept the combat willingly.

Pet. Alas! my lord, I cannot fight: for God's sake, pity my case! the spite of this man prevail-eth against me. O, Lord have mercy upon me! I shall never be able to fight a blow. O Lord, my heart!

Glo. Sirrah, or you must fight or else be hang'd.

K. Hen. Away with them to prison; and the day
Of combat shall be the last of the next month.—
Come, Somerset, we'll see thee sent away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Same. The Duke of GLOSTER'S Garden.

Enter MARGERY JOURDAIN, HUME, SOUTHWELL, and BOLINGBROKE.

Hume. Come, my masters: the duchess, I tell you, expects performance of your promises.

Boling. Master Hume, we are therefore provided.
Will her ladyship behold and hear our exorcisms?

Hume. Ay; what else? fear you not her courage.

Boling. I have heard her reported to be a woman of an invincible spirit: but it shall be convenient, master Hume, that you be by her aloft, while we be busy below; and so, I pray you, go in God's name, and leave us. [Exit HUME.] Mother Jourdain, be you prostrate, and grovel on the earth:—John Southwell, read you, and let us to our work.

Enter Duchess above.

Duch. Well said, my masters, and welcome all.
To this<sup>b</sup> gear; the sooner the better.

<sup>a</sup> By exorcise. Shake-speare invariably means to raise spirits, and not to lay them.—<sup>b</sup> "Gear," i. e., matter; business.

Boling. Patience, good lady; wizards know their times,

Deep night, dark night,<sup>a</sup> and silence of the night,
The time of night when Troy was set on fire;
The time when screech-owls cry, and<sup>c</sup> ban-dogs howl,
And spirits walk, and ghosts break<sup>d</sup> ope their graves,
That time best fits the work we have in hand.
Madam, sit you, and fear not: whom we raise,
We will make fast within a hallow'd verge.

[Here they perform the Ceremonies belonging, and make the Circle:<sup>e</sup> BOLINGBROKE reads, Conjuro, &c. *It thunders and lightens terribly;
then the Spirit riseth.*]

Spir. Adsum.

M. Jourd. Asmath!

By the eternal God, whose name and power
Thou tremblest at, answer that I shall ask;
For till thou speak thou shalt not pass from hence.

Spir. Ask what thou wilt.—That I had said and done! [Come?]

Boling. First, of the king: what shall of him be-
Spir. The duke yet lives that Henry shall depose;
But him outlive, and die a violent death.

[As the Spirit speaks, SOUTHWELL writes the answer.]

Boling. What fates await the duke of Suffolk?

Spir. By water shall he die, and take his end.

Boling. What shall befall the duke of Somerset?

Spir. Let him shun castles:

Safer shall he be on the sandy plains

Than where castles mounted stand.

Have done, for more I hardly can endure.

Boling. Descend to darkness, and the burning lake:
<sup>6</sup> Foul fiend, avoid!

[Thunder and lightning. Spirit descends.]

Enter YORK and BUCKINGHAM, hastily, with their Guards.

York. Lay hands upon these traitors, and their trash.

Beldame, I think, we watch'd you at an inch.—

What! madam, are you there? the king and common-weal

Are deeply indebted for this piece of pains:

My lord protector will, I doubt it not,

See you well<sup>d</sup> guardon'd for these good deserts.

Duch. Not half so bad as thine to England's king,
Injurious duke, that threat'st where is no cause.

Buck. True, madam, none at all. What call you this? [Showing her the Papers.]

Away with them! let them be clapp'd up close,

And kept asunder.—You, madam, shall with us:

Stafford, take her to thee.—

[Exit Duchess from above.]

We'll see your trinkets here are all forth-coming;

All.—Away!

[Exeunt Guards, with SOUTH., BOLING., &c.]

York. Lord Buckingham, methinks, you watch'd her well:

A pretty plot, well chosen to build upon!

Now, pray, my lord, let's see the devil's writ.

What have we here?

[Reads.]

"The duke yet lives that Henry shall depose;

But him outlive, and die a violent death."

Why, this is just

Well, to the rest:

"Tell me, what fate awaits the duke of Suffolk?—

By water shall he die, and take his end."

<sup>e</sup> A ban-dog, or bound-dog, was one that was kept chained for his fierceness.—<sup>d</sup> Rewarded.—<sup>e</sup> Why this is just Asio te, Æacida, etc., i. e., 'This is just like the old oracle of double meaning: I say that you, the son of Æacus, the Romans will conquer'; which might be taken either way, as to the result.

"What shall betide the duke of Somerset?—
 Let him shun castles;
 Safer shall he be on the sandy plains,
 Than where castles mounted stand."
 Come, come, my lords;
 These oracles are hardly attain'd,
 And hardly understood.
 The king is now in progress towards Saint Albans;
 With him the husband of this lovely lady: [them;
 Thither go these news, as fast as horse can carry
 A sorry breakfast for my lord protector. [York,
Buck. Your grace shall give me leave, my lord of
 To be the post in hope of his reward.
York. At your pleasure, my good lord.—Who's within there, ho!

Enter a Servant.

Invite my lords of Salisbury, and Warwick,
 To sup with me to-morrow night.—Away. [Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Saint Albans.

Enter King HENRY, Queen MARGARET, GLOSTER, Cardinal, and SUFFOLK, with Falconers hollaing.

Q. Mar. Believe me, lords, for flying at the <sup>a</sup>brook,
 I saw not better sport these seven years' day;
 Yet, by your leave, the wind was very high,
 And, ten to one, old Joan had not gone out.

K. Hen. But what a point, my lord, your falcon
 And what a pitch she flew above the rest. [made,
 To see how God in all his creatures works!
 Yea, man and birds are <sup>b</sup>fain of climbing high.

Suf. No marvel, an it like your majesty,
 My lord protector's hawks do tower so well:
 They know their master loves to be aloft,
 And bears his thoughts above his falcon's pitch.

Glo. My lord, 'tis but a base ignoble mind,
 That mounts no higher than a bird can soar.

Car. I thought as much: he'd be above the clouds.

Glo. Ay, my lord cardinal; how think you by that?
 Were it not good your grace could fly to heaven?

K. Hen. The treasury of everlasting joy!

Car. Thy heaven is on earth; thine eyes and thoughts

<sup>c</sup>Beate on a crown, the treasure of thy heart:
 Pernicious protector, dangerous peer,
 That smooth'st it so with king and commonweal!

Glo. What, cardinal, is your wise-head grown Tantrous and mischievous too? [I so peremptory?
 Churchmen so hot? good uncle, hide such malice;

<sup>2</sup>And with such holiness you well can do it.

Suf. No malice, sir; no more than well becomes
 So good a quarrel, and so bad a peer.

Glo. As who, my lord?

Suf. Why, as you, my lord;
 An't like your lordly lord-protectorship.

Glo. Why, Suffolk, England knows thine insolence.

Q. Mar. And thy ambition, Gloster.

K. Hen. I pry'thee, peace,
 Good queen; and whet not on these furious peers,
 For blessed are the peacemakers on earth.

Car. Let me be blessed for the peace I make Against this proud protector with my sword.

Glo. 'Faith, holy uncle, would 'twere come to that!

[Aside to the Cardinal.
Car. Marry, when thou dar'st. [Aside.

Glo. Make up no factious numbers for the matter;
 In thine own person answer thy abuse. [Aside.

Car. Ay, where thou dar'st not peep: an if thou dar'st,

This evening on the east side of the grove. [Aside.

K. Hen. How now, my lords!

Car. Believe me, cousin Gloster,

Had not your man put up the fowl so suddenly,

We had had more sport.—Come with thy <sup>2</sup>two-hand sword. [Aside to Glo.

Glo. True, uncle.

Car. Are you advis'd, the east side of the grove.

Glo. Cardinal, I am with you. [Aside.

K. Hen. Why, how now, uncle Gloster!

Glo. Talking of hawking; nothing else, my lord.—

Now, by God's mother, priest, I'll shave your crown

For this, or all my <sup>a</sup>fence shall fail. [Aside.

Car. Medice teipsum:

Protector, see to't well, protect yourself. [Aside.

K. Hen. The winds grow high; so do your stomachs, lords.

How irksome is this music to my heart!

When such strings jar, what hope of harmony?

I pray, my lords, let me compound this strife.

Enter one, crying, "A Miracle!"

Glo. What means this noise?

Fellow, what miracle dost thou proclaim?

One. A miracle! a miracle!

Suf. Come to the king: <sup>3</sup>tell him what miracle.

One. Forsooth, a blind man at Saint Alban's shrine,

Within this half hour hath receiv'd his sight;

A man that ne'er saw in his life before. [souds

K. Hen. Now, God be prais'd, that to believing

Gives light in darkness, comfort in despair!

Enter the Mayor of Saint Albans, and his brethren;

and SIMPEX, borne between two persons in a Chair;

his Wife and <sup>4</sup>the Multitude following.

Car. Here come the townsmen on procession,

To present your highness with the man.

K. Hen. Great is his comfort in this earthly vale,

<sup>5</sup>Though by his sight his sin be multiplied. [king;

Glo. Stand by, my masters; bring him near the

His highness' pleasure is to talk with him.

K. Hen. Good fellow, tell us here the circumstance,

That we for thee may glorify the Lord.

What! hast thou been long blind, and now restor'd?

Simp. Born blind, an't please your grace.

Wife. Ay, indeed, was he.

Suf. What woman is this?

Wife. His wife, an't like your worship.

Glo. Hadst thou been his mother, thou could'st have better told.

K. Hen. Where wert thou born?

Simp. At Berwick in the north, an't like your grace.

K. Hen. Poor soul! God's goodness hath been great to thee:

Let never day nor night unhallow'd pass,

But still remember what the Lord hath done.

Q. Mar. Tell me, good fellow, cam'st thou here

Or of devotion, to this holy shrine? [ly chance,

Simp. God knows, of pure devotion; being call'd

A hundred times, and offer'd, in my sleep,

By good Saint Alban; who said,—<sup>6</sup>"Sander, come;

Come, offer at my shrine, and I will help thee."

Wife. Most true, forsooth; and many time and oft

Myself have heard a voice to call him so.

Car. What! art thou lame?

Simp. Ay, God Almighty help me!

Suf. How cam'st thou so?

Simp. A fall off of a tree.

Wife. A plum-tree, master.

Glo. How long hast thou been blind?

Simp. O! born so, master.

Glo. What! and would'st climb a tree?

Simp. But that in all my life, when I was a youth.

Wife. Too true; and bought his climbing very dear. [venture so.]

Glo. 'Mass, thou lov'st plums well, that would'st

Simp. Alas, good master, my wife desir'd some damsons,

And made me climb with danger of my life.

Glo. A subtle knave; but yet it shall not serve.—

Let me see thine eyes:—wink now;—now open
In my opinion yet thou seest not well. [them.—]

Simp. Yes, master, clear as day; I thank God, and Saint Alban. [of?]

Glo. Say'st thou me so? What color is this cloak

Simp. Red, master; red as blood. [gown of?]

Glo. Why, that's well said. What color is my

Simp. Black, forsooth; coal-black as jet. [is of?]

K. Hen. Why then, thou know'st what color jet

Suf. And yet, I think, jet did he never see.

Glo. But cloaks, and gowns, before this day a many.

Wife. Never, before this day, in all his life.

Glo. Tell me, sirrah, what's my name?

Simp. Alas! master, I know not.

Simp. I know not.

Glo. Nor his?

Simp. No, indeed, master.

Glo. What's thine own name?

Simp. Sander Simpcox, an if it please you, master.

Glo. Then, Sander, sit thou there, the lyingest knave

In Christendom. If thou hadst been born blind, Thou might'st as well have known all our names, as
To name the several colors we do wear. [thus]

Sight may distinguish of colors; but suddenly
To nominate them all, it is impossible.—

My lords, Saint Alban here hath done a miracle;
And would ye not think <sup>2</sup>his cunning to be great,
That could restore this cripple to his legs?

Simp. O, master, that you could!

Glo. My masters of Saint Albans, have you not beadles in your town, and things called whips?

May. Yes, my lord, if it please your grace.

Glo. Then send for one presently.

May. Sirrah, go fetch the beadle hither straight.

[Exit an Attendant.]

Glo. Now fetch me a stool hither by and by. [A stool brought out.] Now, sirrah, if you mean to save yourself from whipping, leap me over this stool, and run away.

Simp. Alas! master, I am not able to stand alone;
You go about to torture me in vain.

Re-enter Attendant, and a Beadle with a whip.

Glo. Well, sir, we must have you find your legs.
Sirrah beadle, whip him till he leap over that same stool.

Bead. I will, my lord.—Come on, sirrah; off with your doublet quickly.

Simp. Alas! master, what shall I do? I am not able to stand.

[After the Beadle hath hit him once, he leaps over the stool, and runs away; and the People follow and cry, "A Miracle!"]

K. Hen. O God! seest thou this, and bearest so long?

Q. Mar. It made me laugh to see the villain run.

Glo. Follow the knave; and take this drab away.

Wife. Alas! sir, we did it for pure need. [town.]

Glo. Let them be whipp'd through every market

Till they come to Berwick, from whence they came.

[Exeunt Mayor, Beadle, Wife, &c.]

Car. Duke Humphrey has done a miracle to-day.

Suf. True, made the lame to leap, and fly away.

Glo. But you have done more miracles than I;
You made in a day, my lord, whole towns to fly.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

K. Hen. What tidings with our cousin Buckingham?

Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold.

A <sup>3</sup>sort of naughty persons, <sup>4</sup>lewdly bent,
Under the countenance and confederacy
Of lady Eleanor, the protector's wife,
The ringleader and head of all this rout,
Have practis'd dangerously against your state,
Dealing with witches, and with conjurers,
Whom we have apprehended in the fact;
Raising up wicked spirits from under ground,
Demanding of king Henry's life and death,
And other of your highness' privy council,
As more at large your grace shall understand.

<sup>2</sup>[Giving a paper.]

Car. And so, my lord protector, by this means
Your lady is forthcoming yet at London.

This news, I think, hath turn'd your weapon's edge;
'Tis like, my lord, you will not keep your hour.

Glo. Ambitious churchman, leave t' afflict my heart.
Sorrow and grief have vanquish'd all my powers;
And, vanquish'd as I am, I yield to thee,
Or to the meanest groom. [ones;]

K. Hen. O God! what mischiefs work the wicked Heaping confusion on their own heads thereby.

Q. Mar. Gloster, see here the tainture of thy nest;
And look thyself be faultless, thou wert best.

Glo. Madam, for myself, to heaven I do appeal,
How I have lov'd my king, and commonweal;
And, for my wife, I know not how it stands.
Sorry I am to hear what I have heard;
Noble she is, but if she have forgot
Honor, and virtue, and convers'd with such
As, like to pitch, defile nobility,
I banish her, my bed, and company,
And give her, as a prey to law, and shame,
That hath dishonor'd Gloster's honest name.

K. Hen. Well, for this night, we will repose us here:
To-morrow, toward London, back again,
To look into this business thoroughly,
And call these foul offenders to their answers;
And poise the cause in justice' equal scales,
Whose beam stands sure, whose rightful cause prevails. [Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—London. The Duke of York's Garden.

Enter YORK, SALISBURY, and WARWICK.

York. Now, my good lords of Salisbury and War-
Our simple supper ended, give me leave, [wick,
In this close walk, to satisfy myself
In craving your opinion of my title,
Which is infallible, to England's crown.

Sal. My lord, I long to hear it at <sup>4</sup>the full.

War. Sweet York, begin; and if thy claim be good,
The Nevils are thy subjects to command.

York. Then thus:—

Edward the third, my lords, had seven sons:
The first, Edward the Black Prince, prince of Wales;
The second, William of Hatfield; and the third,
Lionel, duke of Clarence; next to whom,

* Sort is here used for company.—<sup>3</sup>"Lewdly," i. e., wickedly; knavishly.—<sup>4</sup>"Your lady is forthcoming," i. e., your lady is in custody.

Was John of Gaunt, the duke of Lancaster;
The fifth was Edmond Langley, duke of York;
The sixth was Thomas of Woodstock, duke of Gloster;
William of Windsor was the seventh, and last.
Edward, the Black Prince, died before his father,
And left behind him Richard, his only son;
Who, after Edward the third's death, reign'd as king,
Till Henry Bolingbroke, duke of Lancaster,
The eldest son and heir of John of Gaunt,
Crown'd by the name of Henry the fourth,
Seized on the realm; depos'd the rightful king;
Sent his poor queen to France, from whence she came,
And him to Pomfret; where, as all you know,
Harmless Richard was murder'd traitorously.

War. Father, the duke hath told the<sup>1</sup> very truth:
Thus got the house of Lancaster the crown.

York. Which now they hold by force, and not by right;

For Richard, the first son's heir being dead,
The issue of the next son should have reign'd.

Sal. But William of Hatfield died without an heir.
York. The third son, duke of Clarence, from whose line

I claim the crown, had issue—Philippe, a daughter,
Who married Edmond Mortimer, earl of March,
Edmond had issue—Roger, earl of March:
Roger had issue—Edmond, Anne, and Eleanor.

Sal. This Edmond, in the reign of Bolingbroke,
As I have read, laid claim unto the crown;
And but for Owen Glendower had been king,
Who kept him in captivity, till he died.
But to the rest.

York. His eldest sister, Anne,
My mother, being heir unto the crown,
Married Richard, earl of Cambridge; who was
To Edmond Langley, Edward the third's fifth son,
By her I claim the kingdom: she was heir [son].
To Roger, earl of March; who was the son
Of Edmond Mortimer; who married Philippe,
Sole daughter unto Lionel, duke of Clarence:
So, if the issue of the elder son
Succeed before the younger, I am king. [this?]

War. What plain proceeding is more plain than Henry doth claim the crown from John of Gaunt,
The fourth son; York claims it from the third.
Till Lionel's issue fails, his should not reign:
It fails not yet, but flourishes in thee,
And in thy sons, fair slips of such a stock.—
Then, father Salisbury, kneel we together;
And, in this private<sup>2</sup> plot, be we the first,
That shall salute our rightful sovereign
With honor of his birthright to the crown.

Both. Long live our sovereign Richard, England's king!

York. We thank you, lords. But I am not your Till I be crown'd, and that my sword be stain'd
With heart-blood of the house of Lancaster;
And that's not suddenly to be perform'd,
But with advice, and silent secrecy.

Do you, as I do, in these dangerous days,
Wink at the duke of Suffolk's insolence,
At Beaufort's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At Buckingham, and all the crew of them,
Till they have snar'd the shepherd of the flock,
That virtuous prince, the good duke Humphrey.
'Tis that they seek; and they, in seeking that,
Shall find their deaths, if York can prophesy.

Sal. My lord, break we off: we know your mind at full. [wick]

War. My heart assures me, that the earl of War-shall one day make the duke of York a king.

York. And, Nevil, this I do assure myself,
Richard shall live to make the earl of Warwick
The greatest man in England, but the king.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Hall of Justice.

Trumpets sounded. Enter King HENRY, Queen MARGARET, GLOSTER, YORK, SUFFOLK, and SALISBURY; the Duchess of GLOSTER, MARGERY JOURDAIN, SOUTHWELL, HUME, and BOLINGBROKE, under guard.

K. Hen. Stand forth, dame Eleanor Cobham, Gloster's wife.

In sight of God, and us, your guilt is great:
Receive the sentence of the law, for<sup>2</sup> sin
Such as by God's book<sup>3</sup> is adjudg'd to death.—
You four, from hence to prison back again;

[To JOURD. &c.

From thence, unto the place of execution:
The witch in Smithfield shall be burn'd to ashes,
And you three shall be strangled on the gallows.—
You, madam, for you are more nobly born,
Despoiled of your honor in your life,
Shall, after three days' open penance done,
Live in your country here, in banishment,
With sir John Stanley in the Isle of Man. [death

Duch. Welcome is banishment; welcome were my
Glo. Eleanor, the law, thou seest, hath judg'd thee:
I cannot justify whom the law condemns—

[Exeunt the Duchess, and the other prisoners guarded.]

Mine eyes are full of tears, my heart of grief.
Ah, Humphrey! this dishonor in thine age
Will bring thy head with sorrow to the ground.—
I beseech your majesty, give me leave to go;
Sorrow would solace, and mine age would ease.

K. Hen. Stay, Humphrey duke of Gloster. Ere Give up thy staff: Henry will to himself [thou go,
Protector be; and God shall be my hope,
My stay, my guide, and lantern to my feet.
And go in peace, Humphrey; no less behov'd,
Than when thou wert protector to thy king.

Q. Mar. I see no reason why a king of years
Should<sup>4</sup> be protected like a child<sup>5</sup> by peers.
God and king Henry govern England's helm.
Give up your staff, sir, and the king his realm.

Glo. My staff?—here, noble Henry, is my staff;
<sup>6</sup>To think I fain would keep it makes me laugh.

As willingly do I the same resign,
As e'er thy father Henry made it mine:
And even as willingly at thy feet I leave it,
As others would ambitiously receive it.
Farewell, good king: when I am dead and gone,
May honorable peace attend thy throne. [Exit]

Q. Mar. Why, now is Henry king, and Margaret queen;

And Humphrey, duke of Gloster, scarce himself,
That bears so shrewd a main: two pulls at once,—
His lady banish'd, and a limb lopp'd off;
This staff of honor<sup>7</sup> brought:—there let it stand,
Where it best fits to be, in Henry's hand.

Suf. Thus droops this lofty pine, and hangs his sprays;

Thus Eleanor's pride dies in her<sup>7</sup> proudest days.

York. Lords, let him<sup>8</sup> go.—Please it your majesty,
This is the day appointed for the combat;
And ready are the appellant and defendant,
The armorer and his man, to enter<sup>9</sup> lists,
So please your highness to behold the fight. [fore,

Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord; for purposely, there—

<sup>3</sup> "This private plot," i. e., this sequestered spot.

Left I the court to see this quarrel tried.

K. Hen. O' God's name, see the lists and all things fit:

Here let them end it, and God defend the right!

York. I never saw a fellow worse <sup>a</sup>bestead,
Or more afraid to fight, than is the appellant,
The servant of this armorer, my lords.

Enter, on one side, HORNER, and his Neighbors, drinking to him so much that he is drunk; and he enters bearing his staff with a <sup>b</sup>sand-bag fastened to it; a drum before him: at the other side, PETER, with a drum and a similar staff; accompanied by Prentices drinking to him.

1 Neigh. Here, neighbor Horner, I drink to you in a cup of sack. And fear not, neighbor, you shall do well enough.

2 Neigh. And here, neighbor, here's a cup of <sup>c</sup>charneco.

3 Neigh. And here's a pot of good double beer, neighbor: drink, and fear not your man.

Hor. Let it come, 't faith, and I'll pledge you all; and a fig for Peter!

1 Pren. Here, Peter, I drink to thee; and be not afraid.

2 Pren. Be merry, Peter, and fear not thy master: fight for credit of the prentices.

Peter. I thank you all: drink, and pray for me, I pray you, for, I think, I have taken my last draught in this world.—Here, Robin, an if I die, I give thee my apron; and, Will, thou shalt have my hammer:—and here, Tom, take all the money that I have.—O Lord, bless me! I pray God, for I am never able to deal with my master, he hath learnt so much fence already.

Sal. Come, leave your drinking <sup>1</sup>both, and fall to blows.—

Sirrah, what's thy name?

Peter. Peter, forsooth.

Sal. Peter! what more?

Peter. Thump.

Sal. Thump! then see thou thump thy master well.

Hor. Masters, I am come hither, as it were, upon my man's instigation, to prove him a knave, and myself an honest man: and touching the duke of York, I will take my death, I never meant him any ill, nor the king, nor the queen. And therefore, Peter, have at thee with a downright blow.

York. Despatch: this knave's tongue begins to double.

Sound, trumpets, alarm to the combatants.

[Alarum. They fight, and PETER strikes down his Master.]

Hor. Hold, Peter, hold! I confess, I confess treason.

[Dies.]

York. Take away his weapon.—Fellow, thank God, and the good wine in thy master's way.

Peter. O God! have I overcome mine enemies in this presence? O Peter! thou hast prevailed in right.

K. Hen. Go, <sup>2</sup> and take hence that traitor from our sight;

For by his death we do perceive his guilt:

And God in justice hath reveal'd to us

The truth and innocence of this poor fellow,

Which he had thought to have murder'd wrongfully.—

Come, fellow; follow us for thy reward. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Street.

Enter GLOSTER and Servants, in mourning Cloaks.

Glo. Thus, sometimes hath the brightest day a
And after summer evermore succeeds [cloud;]
Barren winter, with his wrathful nipping cold:
So, cares and joys abound, as seasons fleet.—
Sirs, what's o'clock?

Serv. Ten, my lord.

Glo. Ten is the hour that was appointed me
To watch the coming of my punish'd duchess:
<sup>d</sup>Unceath may she endure the flinty streets,
To tread them with her tender-feeling feet.
Sweet Nell, ill can thy noble mind abrook
The abject people, gazing on thy face
With <sup>e</sup>cnivous looks, laughing at thy shame,
That erst did follow thy proud chariot wheels,
When thou didst ride in triumph through the streets.
But, soft! I think, she comes; and I'll prepare
My tear-stain'd eyes to see her miseries.

Enter the Duchess of GLOSTER, in a white sheet, with verses written upon her back, her feet bare, and a taper burning in her hand; Sir JOHN STANLEY, a Sheriff, and Officers.

Serv. So please your grace, we'll take her from the sheriff.

Glo. No, stir not for your lives: let her pass by.

Duch. Come you, my lord, to see my open shame?
Now thou dost penance too. Look, how they gaze:
See, how the giddy multitude do point,
And nod their heads, and throw their eyes on thee.
Ah, Gloster! hide thee from their hateful looks;
And in thy closet pent up rue my shame,
And flout thine enemies, both mine and thine.

Glo. Be patient, gentle Nell: forget this grief.

Duch. Ah, Gloster! teach me to forget myself;
For, whilst I think I am thy married wife,
And thou a prince, protector of this land,
Methinks, I should not thus be led along,
<sup>f</sup>Mail'd up in shame, with papers on my back,
And follow'd with a rabble, that rejoice
To see my tears, and hear my <sup>h</sup>deep-fet groans.
The ruthless flint doth cut my tender feet;
And when I start the envious people laugh,
And bid me be 'advised how I tread.

Ah, Humphrey! can I bear this shameful yoke?
Trow'st thou, that e'er I'll look upon the world,

Or count them happy that enjoy the sun?

No; dark shall be my light, and night my day:

To think upon my pomp, shall be my hell.

Sometime I'll say I am duke Humphrey's wife,

And he a prince, and ruler of the land;

Yet so he rul'd, and such a prince he was,

As he stood by, whilst I, his forlorn duchess,

Was made a wonder, and a pointing-stock,

To every idle rascal follower.

But be thou mild, and blush not at my shame:

Nor stir at nothing, till the axe of death

Hang over thee, as, sure, it shortly will;

For Suffolk,—he that can do all in all

With her, that hateth thee, and hates us all,—

And York, and impious Beaufort, that false priest,

Have all lin'd bushes to betray thy wings;

And, fly thou how thou canst, they'll tangle thee.

But fear not thou, until thy foot be snar'd,

Nor never seek prevention of thy foes.

Glo. Ah, Nell! forbear; thou aimest all awry:

I must offend before I be attainted;

<sup>a</sup> "Worse bestead," i. e., in a worse plight.—<sup>b</sup> According to the old law of duels, knights fought with the lance and sword, but those of inferior rank with an ebony staff, the end of which was fastened a bag crammed hard with sand.
—<sup>c</sup> Charneco was a kind of sweet wine.

<sup>g</sup> "Mail'd up in shame," i. e., wrapped up in disgrace; alluding to the sheet of penance.—<sup>h</sup> Deep-fetched.—<sup>i</sup> "Be advised," i. e., be careful.

And had I twenty times so many foes,
And each of them had twenty times their power,
All these could not procure me any <sup>a</sup>scathe,
So long as I am loyal, true, and crimeless.
Would'st have me rescue thee from this reproach?
Why, yet thy scandal were not wip'd away,
But I in danger for the breach of law.
Thy greatest help is quiet, gentle Nell;
I pray thee, sort thy heart to patience:
These few days' wonder will be quickly worn.

Enter a Herald.

Her. I summon your grace to his majesty's parliament, holden at Bury the first of this next month.

Glo. And my consent ne'er ask'd herein before?
This is close dealing.—Well, I will be there.

[Exit Herald.]

My Nell, I take my leave:—and, master Sheriff,
Let not her penance exceed the king's commission.

Sher. An't please your grace, here my commission
And sir John Stanley is appointed now [stays;
To take her with him to the Isle of Man.

Glo. Must you, sir John, protect my lady here?

Stan. So am I given in charge, may't please your grace.

Glo. Entreat her not the worse, in that I pray
You use her well. The world may laugh <sup>b</sup>again;
And I may live to do you kindness, if
You do it her: and so, sir John, farewell. [well?]

Duch. What! gone, my lord, and bid me not fare-

Glo. Witness my tears, I cannot stay to speak.

[Exeunt GLOSTER and Servants.]

Duch. Art thou gone <sup>1</sup>so? All comfort go with
For none abides with me: my joy is death; [thee,
Death, at whose name I oft have been afraid,
Because I wish'd this world's eternity.—

Stanley, I prythee, go, and take me hence;
I care not whither, for I beg no favor,
Only convey me where thou art commanded.

Stan. Why, madam, that is to the Isle of Man;
There to be us'd according to your state.

Duch. That's bad enough, for I am but reproach:
And shall I, then, be us'd reproachfully?

Stan. Like to a duchess, and duke Humphrey's lady:
According to that state you shall be used.

Duch. Sheriff, farewell, and better than I fare,
Although thou hast been <sup>c</sup>conduct of my shame!

Sher. It is my office; and, madam, pardon me.

Duch. Ay, ay, farewell: thy office is discharg'd.—
Come, Stanley, shall we go? [sheet,

Stan. Madam, your penance done, throw off this
And go we to attire you for our journey.

Duch. My shame will not be shifted with my sheet:
No; it will hang upon my richest robes,
And show itself, attire me how I can.

Go, lead the way: I long to see my prison. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Abbey at Bury.

A Sennet. Enter to the Parliament, King HENRY, Queen MARGARET, Cardinal BEAUFORT, SUFFOLK, YORK, BUCKINGHAM, and others.

K. Hen. I <sup>d</sup>muse, my lord of Gloster is not come:
'Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man,
While'ther occasion keeps him from us now.

Q. Mar. Can you not see, or will you not observe
The strangeness of his alter'd countenance?

With what a majesty he bears himself;
How insolent of late he is become,
How proud, how peremptory, and unlike himself?
We know the time since he was mild and affable;
And if we did but glance a far-off look,
Immediately he was upon his knee,
That all the court admir'd him for submission:
But meet him now, and, he it in the morn,
When every one will give the time of day,
He knits his brow, and shows an angry eye,
And passeth by with stiff unbowed knee,
Disdaining duty that to us belongs.

Small curs are not regarded when they grin,
But great men tremble when the lion roars;
And Humphrey is no little man in England.

First note, that he is near you in descent,
And should you fall, he is the next will mount.

Me <sup>e</sup>seemeth, then, it is no policy,
Respecting what a rancorous mind he bears,
And his advantage following your decease,

That he should come about your royal person,
Or be admitted to your highness' council.

By flattery hath he won the commons' hearts,
And, when he please to make commotion,
'Tis to be fear'd, they all will follow him.

Now 'tis the spring, and weeds are shallow-rooted;
Suffer them now, and they'll o'ergrow the garden,
And choke the herbs for want of husbandry.

The reverend care I bear unto my lord
Made me <sup>f</sup>collect these dangers in the duke.

If it be <sup>g</sup>fond, call it a woman's fear;
Which fear if better reasons can supplant,
I will subscribe and say, I wrong'd the duke.

My <sup>2</sup>lords of Suffolk, Buckingham, and York,
Reprove my <sup>3</sup>allegations if you can,
Or else conclude my words effectual.

Suf. Well hath your highness seen into this duke;
And had I first been put to speak my mind,
I think, I should have told your grace's tale.

The duchess by his subornation,
Upon my life, began her devilish practices:
Or if he were not privy to those faults,

Yet, by <sup>h</sup>reputing of his high descent,
As next the king he was successive heir,
And such high vaunts of his nobility,

Did instigate the bedlam brain-sick duchess,
By wicked means to frame our sovereign's fall.

Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep,
And in his simple show he harbors treason.

The fox barks not when he would steal the lamb:
No, no, my sovereign; Gloster is a man
Unsound'd yet, and full of deep deceit.

Car. Did he not, contrary to form of law,
Devise strange deaths for small offences done?

York. And did he not, in his protectorship,
Levy great sums of money through the realm
For soldiers' pay in France, and never sent it?

By means whereof the towns each day revolted.

Buck. Tut! these are petty faults to faults unknown,
Which time will bring to light in smooth duke Humphrey.

K. Hen. My lords, at once: the care you have of us,
To mow down thorns that would annoy our foot,
Is worthy praise; but shall I speak my conscience?

Our kinsman Gloster is as innocent
From meaning treason to our royal person,
As is the sucking lamb, or harmless dove.

The duke is virtuous, mild, and too well given,
To dream on evil, or to work my downfall.

Q. Mar. Ah! what's more dangerous than this fond affiance?
Seems he a dove? his feathers are but borrow'd,
For he's disposed as the hateful raven.
Is he a lamb? his skin is surely lent him,
For he's inclin'd as is the ravenous wolf.
Who cannot steal a shape, that means deceit?
Take heed, my lord; the welfare of us all
Hangs on the cutting short that fraudulent man.

Enter SOMERSET.

Som. All health unto my gracious sovereign!
K. Hen. Welcome, lord Somerset. <sup>1</sup>What's the news from France?
Som. That all your interest in those territories
Is utterly bereft you: all is lost. [he done.
K. Hen. Cold news, lord Somerset; but God's will York. Cold news for me; for I had hope of France,
[Aside.

As firmly as I hope for fertile England.
Thus are my blossoms blasted in the bud,
And caterpillars eat my leaves away;
But I will remedy this <sup>a</sup>gear ere long,
Or sell my title for a glorious grave.

Enter GLOSTER.

Glo. All happiness unto my lord the king!
Pardon, my liege, that I have stay'd so long.
Suf. Nay, Gloster, know, that thou art come too
Unless thou wert more loyal than thou art. [soon,
I do arrest thee of high treason here.

Glo. Well, Suffolk, yet thou shalt not see me blush,
Nor change my countenance for this arrest:
A heart unsupported is not easily daunted.
The purest spring is not so free from mud.
As I am clear from treason to my sovereign.
Who can accuse me? wherein am I guilty?

York. 'Tis thought, my lord, that you took bribes
of France,
And, being protector, stay'd the soldiers' pay;
By means whereof his highness hath lost France.

Glo. Is it but thought so? What are they that I never robb'd the soldiers of their pay, [I think it?
Nor ever had one penny bribe from France.
So help me God, as I have watch'd the night,
Ay, night by night, in studying good for England,
That do it that e'er I wrested from the king,
Or any great I hoarded to my use,
Be brought against me at my trial day.
No: many a pound of mine own proper store,
Because I would not tax the needy commons,
Have I dispursed to the garrisons,
And never ask'd for restitution.

Car. It serves you well, my lord, to say so much.

Glo. I say no more than truth, so help me God!
York. In your protectorship you did devise Strange tortures for offenders, never heard of,
That England was defam'd by tyranny. [tector,

Glo. Why, 'tis well known that, whiles I was proprietor was all the fault that was in me;
For I should melt at an offender's tears,
And lowly words were ransom for their fault:
Unless it were a bloody murderer,
Or foul felonious thief that deceiv'd poor passengers,
I never gave them condign punishment.

Murder, indeed, that bloody sin, I tortur'd
Above the felon, or what trespass else. [swer'd;

Suf. My lord, these faults are <sup>a</sup>easily, quickly an-
But mightier crimes are laid unto your charge,
Whereof you cannot easily purge yourself.
I do arrest you in his highness' name;
And here commit you to my lord cardinal

To keep, until your farther time of trial.

K. Hen. My lord of Gloster, 'tis my special hope,
That you will clear yourself from all <sup>3</sup>suspect:
My conscience tells me you are innocent.

Glo. Ah, gracious lord! these days are dangerous:
Virtue is chok'd with foul ambition,
And charity chas'd hence by rancor's hand;
Foul subornation is predominant,
And equity exil'd from your highness' land.
I know, their complot is to have my life;
And if my death might make this island happy,
And prove the period of their tyranny,
I would expend it with all willingness;
But mine is made the prologue to their play,
For thousands more, that yet suspect no peril,
Will not conclude their plott'd tragedy.
Beaufort's red sparkling eyes blab his heart's malice,
And Suffolk's cloudy brow his stormy hate;
Sharp Buckingham unburdens with his tongue
The envious load that lies upon his heart;
And dogged York, that reaches at the moon,
Whose overweening arm I have pluck'd back,
By false <sup>b</sup>accuse doth level at my life.—

And you, my sovereign lady, with the rest,
Causeless have laid disgraces on my head,
And with your best endeavor have stir'd up
My <sup>c</sup>liefeest liege to be mine enemy.—
Ay, all of you have laid your heads together:
Myself had notice of your conventicles,
And all to make away my guiltless life.
I shall not want false witness to condemn me,
Nor store of treasons to augment my guilt;
The ancient proverb will be well effected,—
A staff is quickly found to beat a dog.

Car. My liege, his railing is intolerable.
If those that care to keep your royal person
From treason's secret knife, and traitors' rage,
Be thus upbraided, chid, and rated at,
And the offender granted scope of speech,
'Twill make them cool in zeal unto your grace.

Suf. Hath he not twit our sovereign lady, here,
With ignominious words, though clerically couch'd,
As if she had suborned some to swear
False allegations to o'erthrow his state?

Q. Mar. But I can give the loser leave to chide.
Glo. Far truer spoke, than meant: I lose, indeed.
Besrew the winners, for they played me false;
And well such losers may have leave to speak.

Buck. He'll wrest the sense, and hold us here all
Lord Cardinal, he is your prisoner. [day.—

Car. Sirs, take away the duke, and guard him sure.

Glo. Ah! thus king Henry throws away his crutch,
Before his legs be firm to bear his body:
Thus is the shepherd beaten from thy side,
And wolves are gnarling who shall gnaw thee first.
Ah, that my fear were false! ah, that it were!
For, good king Henry, thy decay I fear.

[Exeunt Attendants with GLOSTER.

K. Hen. My lords, what to your wisdoms seemeth best,

Do, or undo, as if myself were here. <sup>4</sup>[Rising.

Q. Mar. What! will your highness leave the parliament? [grief,

K. Hen. Ay, Margaret, my heart is drown'd with Whose flood begins to flow within mine eyes;
My body round engirt with misery,
For what's more miserable than discontent?—
Ah, uncle Humphrey! in thy face I see
The map of honor, truth, and loyalty;
And yet, good Humphrey, is the hour to come,
That e'er I prov'd thee false, or fear'd thy faith.

What lowering star now envies thy estate,
That these great lords, and Margaret our queen,
Do seek subversion of thy harmless life?
Thou never didst them wrong, nor no man wrong:
And as the butcher takes away the calf,
And binds the wretch, and beats it when it strays,
Bearing it to the bloody slaughter-house;
Even so, remorseless, have they borne him hence:
And as the dam runs lowing up and down,
Looking the way her harmless young one went,
And can do nought but wail her darling's loss;
Even so myself bewails good Gloster's case,
With sad unhelpful tears; and with dimm'd eyes
Look after him, and cannot do him good,
So mighty are his vowed enemies.
His fortunes I will weep; and 'twixt each groan,
Say—"Who's a traitor? Gloster he is none."

[Exit.]

Q. Mar. <sup>1</sup>Fair lords, cold snow melts with the sun's hot beams.

Henry my lord is cold in great affairs,
Too full of foolish pity; and Gloster's show
Beguiles him, as the mournful crocodile
With sorrow snares relenting passengers;
Or as the snake, roll'd in a flowering <sup>a</sup>bank,
With shining checker'd <sup>b</sup>slough, doth sting a child,
That for the beauty thinks it excellent.
Believe me, lords, were none more wise than I,
(And yet herein I judge mine own wit good)
This Gloster should be quickly rid the world,
To rid us from the fear we have of him.

Car. That he should die is worthy policy,
But yet we want a color for his death:
'Tis meet he be condemn'd by course of law.

Suf. But, in my mind that were no policy:
The king will labor still to save his life;
The commons haply rise to save his life:

As yet we have but trivial argument,
More than mistrust, that shows him worthy death.

York. So that, by this, you would not have him die.

Suf. Ah! York, no man alive so fair as I.

York. 'Tis York that hath <sup>2</sup>most reason for his death.—

But, my lord cardinal, and you, <sup>3</sup>lord Suffolk,
Say, as you think, and speak it from your souls,
Wer't not all one an empty eagle were set
To guard the chicken from a hungry kite,
As place duke Humphrey for the king's protector?

Q. Mar. So the poor chicken should be sure of death.

Suf. Madam, tis true: and wer't not madness, then,
To make the fox surveyor of the fold?
Who, being accus'd a crafty murderer,
His guilt should be but idly posted over,
Because his purpose is not executed?
No; let him die, in that he is a fox,
By nature prov'd an enemy to the flock,
Before his chaps be stain'd with crimson blood,
As Humphrey's prov'd by reasons to my liege.
And do not stand on quilllets how to slay him:
Be it by gins, by snares, by subtilty,
Sleeping, or waking, 'tis no matter how,
So he be dead; for that is good deceit
Which mates him first, that first intends deceit.

Q. Mar. Thrice noble Suffolk, <sup>4</sup>resolutely spoke.

Suf. Not resolute, except so much were done,
For things are often spoke, and seldom meant;
But, that my heart accordeth with my tongue,—
Seeing the deed is meritorious,
And to preserve my sovereign from his foe,—

Say but the word, and I will be his <sup>d</sup>priest. [folk,
Car. But I would have him dead, my lord of Suff-
Ere you can take due <sup>e</sup>order for a priest.

Say, you consent, and <sup>e</sup>censure well the deed,
And I'll provide his executioner;
I tender so the safety of my liege.

Suf. Here is my hand; the deed is worthy doing.

Q. Mar. And so say I.

York. And I: and now we three have spoke it,
It <sup>f</sup>skills not greatly who impugns our doom.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Great lords, from Ireland am I come again,
To signify that rebels there are up,
And put the Englishmen unto the sword.
Send succors, lords, and stop the rage betime,
Before the wound do grow incurable;
For, being green, there is great hope of help.

Car. A breach that craves a quick <sup>g</sup>expedient stop.
What counsel give you in this weighty cause?

York. That Somerset be sent as regent thither.

'Tis meet that lucky ruler be employ'd;
Witness the fortune he hath had in France.

Som. If York, with all his <sup>h</sup>far-fet policy,
Had been the regent there instead of me,
He never would have stay'd in France so long.

York. No, not to lose it all, as thou hast done.

I rather would have lost my life betimes,
Than bring a burden of dishonor home,
By staying there so long, till all were lost.
Show me one scar character'd on thy skin:
Men's flesh preserv'd so whole do seldom win. [fire,

Q. Mar. Nay then, this spark will prove a raging
If wind and fuel be brought to feed it with.—

No more, good York;—sweet Somerset, be still:—
Thy fortune, York, hadst thou been regent there, Might happily have prov'd far worse than his.

York. What, worse than nought? nay, then a shame take all.

Som. And, in the number, thee, that wishest shame.

Car. My lord of York, try what your fortune is.

The uncivil <sup>i</sup>kernes of Ireland are in arms,
And temper clay with blood of Englishmen:

To Ireland will you lead a band of men,
Collected choicely, from each county some,
And try your hap against the Irishmen?

York. I will, my lord, so please his majesty.

Suf. Why our authority is his consent,
And what we do establish, he confirms:
Then, noble York, take thou this task in hand.

York. I am content. Provide me soldiers, lords,
Whiles I take order for mine own affairs.

Suf. A charge, lord York, that I will see perform'd.
But now return we to the false duke Humphrey.

Car. No more of him; for I will deal with him,
That henceforth, he shall trouble us no more:
And so break off; the day is almost spent.
Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of that event.

York. My lord of Suffolk, within fourteen days,
At Bristol I expect my soldiers,
For there I'll ship them all for Ireland.

Suf. I'll see it truly done, my lord of York.

[Exeunt all but YORK.]

York. Now, York, or never, steel thy fearful
And change misdoubt to resolution: [thoughts,
Be that thou hop'st to be, or what thou art
Resign to death; it is not worth the enjoying.
Let pale-fac'd fear keep with the mean-born man,
And find no harbor in a royal heart. [thought,
Faster than spring-time showers comes thought on

<sup>d</sup> "His priest," i. e., his attendant at the last scene.—<sup>e</sup> "Censure well the deed," i. e., judge well of it; have a good opinion of it.—<sup>f</sup> "It skills not," i. e., it matters not.—<sup>g</sup> Expeditious.—<sup>h</sup> Far-fetched.—<sup>i</sup> Boors.

And not a thought but thinks on dignity.
 My brain, more busy than the laboring spider,
 Weaves tedious snares to trap mine enemies.
 Well, nobles, well; 'tis politically done,
 To send me packing with an host of men:
 I fear me you but warm the starved snake,
 Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will sting your hearts.
 'Twas men I lack'd, and you will give them me:
 I take it kindly; yet, be well assur'd,
 You put sharp weapons in a madman's hands.
 Whiles I in Ireland<sup>1</sup> march a mighty band,
 I will stir up in England some black storm,
 Shall blow ten thousand souls to heaven, or hell;
 And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage
 Until the golden<sup>2</sup> circuit on my head,
 Like to the glorious sun's transparent beams,
 Do calm the fury of this mad-bred<sup>3</sup> flaw.
 And, for a minister of my intent,
 I have seduc'd a headstrong Kentishman,
 John Cade of Ashford,
 To make commotion, as full well he can,
 Under the title of John Mortimer.
 In Ireland have I seen this stubborn Cade
 Oppose himself against a troop of<sup>4</sup> kernes;
 And fought so long, till that his thighs with darts
 Were almost like a sharp-quill'd porcupine:
 And, in the end being rescu'd, I have seen
 Him caper upright, like a wild<sup>5</sup> Morisco,
 Shaking the bloody darts, as he his bells.
 Full often, like a shag-hair'd crafty kerne,
 Hath he conversed with the enemy,
 And undiscover'd come to me again,
 And given me notice of their villainies.
 This devil here shall be my substitute;
 For that John Mortimer, which now is dead,
 In face, in gait, in speech, he doth resemble:
 By this I shall perceive the commons' mind,
 How they affect the house and claim of York.
 Say, he be taken, rack'd, and tortured,
 I know, no pain they can inflict upon him
 Will make him say I mov'd him to those arms.
 Say, that he thrive, as 'tis great like he will,
 Why, then from Ireland come I with my strength,
 And reap the harvest which that rascal sow'd;
 For, Humphrey being dead, as he shall be,
 And Henry put apart,<sup>6</sup> then next for me. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—Bury. A Room in the Palace.

Enter certain Murderers, <sup>3</sup> running over the Stage.

1 Mur. Run to my lord of Suffolk; let him know,
 We have despatch'd the duke, as he commanded.

2 Mur. O, that it were to do!—What have we done?
 Didst ever hear a man so penitent?

1 Mur. Here comes my lord.

Enter SUFFOLK.

Suf. Now, sirs, have you despatch'd this thing?

1 Mur. Ay, my good lord, he's dead. [house;]

Suf. Why, that's well said. Go, get you to my
 I will reward you for this venturous deed.

The king and all the peers are here at hand.
 Have you laid fair the bed? are all things well,
 According as I gave directions?

1 Mur. 'Tis, my good lord.

Suf. Away! be gone. [Exeunt Murderers.]

Sound Trumpets. Enter King HENRY, Queen
 MARGARET, Cardinal BEAUFORT, SOMERSET,
 Lords, and others.

K. Hen. Go, call our uncle to our presence straight:

Say, we intend to try his grace to-day,
 If he be guilty, as 'tis published.

Suf. I'll call him presently, my noble lord. [Exit.]

K. Hen. Lords, take your places; and, I pray you Proceed no straiter 'gainst our uncle Gloster, [all,
 Than from true evidence, of good esteem,
 He be approv'd in practice culpable.

Q. Mar. God forbid any malice should prevail,

That faultless may condemn a noble man!

Pray God he may acquit him of suspicion!

K. Hen. I thank thee, Meg; these words content me much.—

Re-enter SUFFOLK.

How now! why look'st thou pale? why tremblest thou?

Where is our uncle? what's the matter, Suffolk?

Suf. Dead in his bed, my lord; Gloster is dead.

Q. Mar. Marry, God forefend! [night,

Car. God's secret judgment!—I did dream to-
 The duke was dumb, and could not speak a word.

[The King swoons.]

Q. Mar. How fares my lord?—Help, lords! the king is dead.

Som. Rear up his body: wring him by the nose.

Q. Mar. Run, go; help, help!—O, Henry, ope thine eyes!

Suf. He doth revive again.—Madam, be patient.

K. Hen. O heavenly God!

Q. Mar. How fares my gracious lord? [fort!

Suf. Comfort, my sovereign! gracious Henry, com-

K. Hen. What! doth my lord of Suffolk comfort
 Came he right<sup>1</sup> now to sing a raven's note, [me?

Whose dismal tune bereft my vital powers,

And thinks he, that the chirping of a wren,

By crying comfort from a hollow breast,

Can chase away the first-conceived sound?

Hide not thy poison with such sugar'd words.

Lay not thy hands on me; forbear, I say:

Their touch affrights me as a serpent's sting.

Thou baleful messenger, out of my sight!

Upon thine eye-balls murderous tyranny

Sits in grim majesty to fright the world.

Look not upon me, for thine eyes are wounding.—

Yet do not go away:—come, basilisk,

And kill the innocent gazer with thy sight;

For in the shade of death I shall find joy,

In life, but double death, now Gloster's dead.

Q. Mar. Why do you rate my lord of Suffolk thus?

Although the duke was enemy to him,

Yet he, most Christian-like, laments his death:

And for myself, foe as he was to me,

Might liquid tears, or heart-offending groans,

Or blood-consuming sighs recall his life,

I would be blind with weeping, sick with groans,

Look pale as primrose with blood-drinking sighs,

And all to have the noble duke alive.

What know I how the world may deem of me?

For it is known, we were but hollow friends;

It may be judg'd, I made the duke away:

So shall my name with slander's tongue be wounded,

And princes' courts be fill'd with my reproach.

This get I by his death. Ah me, unhappy,

To be a queen, and crown'd with infamy!

K. Hen. Ah, woe is me for Gloster, wretched man!

Q. Mar. Be woe for me, more wretched than he is.

What! dost thou turn away, and hide thy face?

I am no loathsome leper; look on me.

What, art thou, like the adder, waxen deaf?

Be poisonous too, and kill thy forlorn queen.

Is all thy comfort shut in Gloster's tomb?

Why, then, dame Margaret was ne'er thy joy:

<sup>a</sup> "The golden circuit," i. e., the crown.—<sup>b</sup> Gust of wind.
<sup>c</sup> Kernes were light-armed Irish foot-soldiers. Kern also signified a boor, a rustic.—<sup>d</sup> "Morisco," i. e., a Moor in a morris dance.

<sup>e</sup> "Right now," i. e. just now.

Erect his statue, then, and worship it,
 And make my image but an alehouse sign.
 Was I for this high wreck'd upon the sea,
 And twice by awkward wind from England's bank
 Drove back again unto my native clime?
 What boded this, but well-forewarning wind
 Did seem to say,—Seek not a scorpion's nest,
 Nor set no footing on this unkind shore.
 What did I then, but curs'd th' ungentle gusts;
 And he that loos'd them from their brazen caves;
 And bade them blow towards England's blessed shore,
 Or turn our stern upon a dreadful rock.
 Yet Æolus would not be a murderer,
 But left that hateful office unto thee:
 The pretty vaulting sea refus'd to drown me,
 Knowing that thou would'st have me drown'd on shore,
 With tears as salt as sea through thy unkindness:
 The splitting rocks cover'd in the sinking sands,
 And would not dash me with their ragged sides,
 Because thy flinty heart, more hard than they,
 Might in thy palace perish Margaret.
 As far as I could ken thy chalky cliffs,
 When from the shore the tempest beat us back,
 I stood upon the hatches in the storm;
 And when the dusky sky began to rob
 My earnest-gaping sight of thy land's view,
 I took a costly jewel from my neck,—
 A heart it was, bound in with diamonds,—
 And threw it towards thy land. The sea receiv'd it,
 And so I wish'd thy body might my heart:
 And even with this I lost fair England's view,
 And bade mine eyes be packing with my heart,
 And call'd them blind and dusky spectacles,
 For losing ken of Albion's wished coast.
 How often have I tempted Suffolk's tongue
 (The agent of thy foul inconstancy)
 To sit and witch me, as Ascanius did,
 When he to madding Dido would unfold
 His father's acts, commenc'd in burning Troy?
 Am I not witch'd like her, or thou not false like him?
 Ah me! I can no more. Die, Margaret,
 For Henry weeps that thou dost live so long.

Noise within. Enter WARWICK and SALISBURY.
The Commons press to the door.

War. It is reported, mighty sovereign,
 That good duke Humphrey traitorously is murder'd
 By Suffolk and the cardinal Beaufort's means.
 The commons, like an angry hive of bees
 That want their leader, scatter up and down,
 And care not who they sting in his revenge.
 Myself have calm'd their spleenful mutiny,
 Until they hear the order of his death. [true;

K. Hen. That he is dead, good Warwick, 'tis too
 But how he died, God knows, not Henry.
 Enter his chamber, view his breathless corpse,
 And comment then upon his sudden death.

War. That I shall do, my liege.—Stay, Salisbury,
 With the rude multitude, till I return.

[WARWICK goes into an inner Room, and SALISBURY retires.]

K. Hen. O thou that judgest all things, stay my thoughts!

My thoughts that labor to persuade my soul,
 Some violent hands were laid on Humphrey's life.
 If my suspect be false, forgive me, God,
 For judgment only doth belong to thee.
 Fain would I go to chafe his paly lips
 With twenty thousand kisses, and to <sup>2</sup>rain
 Upon his face an ocean of salt tears,
 To tell my love unto his dumb deaf trunk,
 And with my fingers feel his hand unfeeling;
 But all in vain are these mean obsequies,

And to survey his dead and earthy image,
 What were it but to make my sorrow greater?

*The Doors of an inner Chamber are thrown open,
 and GLOSTER is discovered dead in his Bed;
 WARWICK and others standing by it.*

War. Come hither, gracious sovereign; view this body.

K. Hen. That is to see how deep my grave is made;
 For with his soul fled all my worldly solace,

<sup>3</sup> And, seeing him, I see my life in <sup>2</sup> death.

War. As surely as my soul intends to live
 With that dread King, that took our state upon him
 To free us from his Father's wrathful curse,
 I do believe that violent hands were laid
 Upon the life of this thrice-famed duke.

Suf. A dreadful oath, sworn with a solemn tongue!
 What instance gives lord Warwick for his vow?

War. See, how the blood is settled in his face.
 Oft have I seen a timely-parted <sup>4</sup> ghost,
 Of ashy semblance, meagre, pale, and bloodless,
 Being all descended to the laboring heart;
 Who, in the conflict that it holds with death,
 Attracts the same for aidance 'gainst the enemy;
 Which with the heart there cools, and ne'er returneth
 To blush and beautify the cheek again.

But see, his face is black, and full of blood;
 His eye-balls further out than when he liv'd,
 Staring full ghastly like a strangled man: [gling;
 His hair uprear'd, his nostrils stretch'd with strug-
 His hands abroad <sup>5</sup> display'd, as one that grasp'd,
 And tugg'd for life, and was by strength subdued.
 Look on the sheets his hair, you see, is sticking;
 His well-proportion'd beard made rough and rugged,
 Like to the summer's corn by tempest lodg'd.

It cannot be but he was murder'd here;
 The least of all these signs were probable. [death?

Suf. Why, Warwick, who should do the duke to Myself, and Beaufort, had him in protection,
 And we, I hope, sir, are no murderers.

War. But both of you were vow'd duke Humphrey's foes,

And you, forsooth, had the good duke to keep:
 'Tis like, you would not feast him like a friend,
 And 'tis well seen he found an enemy.

Q. Mar. Then you, belike, suspect these noblemen
 As guilty of duke Humphrey's timeless death.

War. Who finds the heifer dead, and bleeding fresh,
 And sees fast by a butcher with an axe,
 But will suspect 'twas he that made the slaughter?
 Who finds the partridge in the puttock's nest,
 But may imagine how the bird was dead,
 Although the kite soar with unbloodied beak?
 Even so suspicious is this tragedy. [your knife?

Q. Mar. Are you the butcher, Suffolk? where's
 Is Beaufort term'd a kite? where are his talons?

Suf. I wear no knife, to slaughter sleeping men;
 But here's a vengeful sword, rusted with ease,
 That shall be scoured in his rancorous heart,
 That slanders me with murder's crimson badge.—
 Say, if thou dar'st, proud lord of Warwickshire,
 That I am faulty in duke Humphrey's death.

[Exeunt Cardinal, Sox., and others.]

War. What dares not Warwick, if false Suffolk dare him?

Q. Mar. He dares not calm his contumelious spirit,
 Nor cease to be an arrogant controller,
 Though Suffolk dares him twenty thousand times.

War. Madam, be still, with reverence may I say;

For every word you speak in his behalf
Is slander to your royal dignity.

Suf. Blunt-witted lord, ignoble in demeanor,
If ever lady wrong'd her lord so much,
Thy mother took into her blameful bed
Some stern untutor'd churl, and noble stock
Was graft with crab-tree slip; whose fruit thou art,
And never of the Nevils' noble race.

War. But that the guilt of murder bucklers thee,
And I should rob the deathsman of his fee,
Quitting thee thereby of ten thousand shames,
And that my sovereign's presence makes me mild,
I would, false murderous coward, on thy knee
Make thee beg pardon for thy passed speech,
And say, it was thy mother that thou meant'st;
That thou thyself wast born in bastardy:
And, after all this fearful homage done,
Give thee thy hire, and send thy soul to hell,
Pernicious bloodsucker of sleeping men.

Suf. Thou shalt be waking while I shed thy blood,
If from this presence thou dar'st go with me.

War. Away even now, or I will drag thee hence.
Unworthy though thou art, I'll cope with thee,
And do some service to duke Humphrey's ghost.

[Exeunt SUFFOLK and WARWICK.]

K. Hen. What stronger breast-plate than a heart untainted?

Thrice is he arm'd, that hath his quarrel just;
And he but naked, though lock'd up in steel,
Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted.

[A noise within.]

Q. Mar. What noise is this?

Re-enter SUFFOLK and WARWICK, with their Weapons drawn.

K. Hen. Why, how now, lords! your wrathful weapons drawn

Here in our presence! dare you be so bold?—

Why, what tumultuous clamor have we here?

Suf. The traitorous Warwick, with the men of Set all upon me, mighty sovereign. [Bury,

Noise of a Crowd within. Re-enter SALISBURY.

Sal. Sirs, stand apart; [Speaking to those within.] the king shall know your mind.—

Dread lord, the commons send you word by me,
Unless lord Suffolk straight be done to death,
Or banished fair England's territories,
They will by violence tear him from your palace,
And torture him with grievous lingering death.
They say, by him the good duke Humphrey died;
They say, in him they fear your highness' death;
And mere instinct of love, and loyalty,
Free from a stubborn opposite intent,
As being thought to contradict your liking,
Makes them thus forward in his banishment.
They say, in care of your most royal person,
That, if your highness should intend to sleep,
And charge, that no man should disturb your rest,
In pain of your dislike, or pain of death,
Yet notwithstanding such a strait edict,
Were there a serpent seen, with forked tongue,
That slyly glided towards your majesty,
It were but necessary you were wak'd;
Lest, being suffer'd in that harmful slumber,
The mortal<sup>a</sup> worm might make the sleep eternal:
And therefore do they cry, though you forbid,
That they will guard you, wh'er you will or no,
From such fell serpents as false Suffolk is;
With whose envenomed and fatal sting,
Your loving uncle, twenty times his worth,
They say, is shamefully bereft of life.

Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king,
my lord of Salisbury!

Suf. 'Tis like the commons, rude unpolish'd hinds,
Could send such message to their sovereign;
But you, my lord, were glad to be employ'd.
To show how<sup>b</sup> quaint an orator you are:
But all the honor Salisbury hath won,
Is, that he was the lord ambassador,
Sent from a<sup>c</sup> sort of tinkers to the king.

Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king,
or we will all break in!

K. Hen. Go, Salisbury, and tell them all from me,
I thank them for their tender loving care,
And had I not been<sup>d</sup> cited so by them,
Yet did I purpose as they do entreat;
For sure, my thoughts do hourly prophesy
Mischance unto my state by Suffolk's means:
And therefore, by his majesty I swear,
Whose far unworthy deputy I am,
He shall not breathe infection in this<sup>d</sup> air
But three days longer, on the pain of death.

[Exit SALISBURY.]

Q. Mar. O Henry! let me plead for gentle Suffolk.

K. Hen. Ungentle queen, to call him gentle Suffolk.

No more, I say: if thou dost plead for him,
Thou wilt but add increase unto my wrath.
Had I but said, I would have kept my word,
But, when I swear, it is irrevocable.—
If after three days' space thou here be'st found
On any ground that I am ruler of,
The world shall not be ransom for thy life.—
Come, Warwick, come; good Warwick, go with me,
I have great matters to impart to thee.

[Exeunt K. HENRY, WARWICK, Lords, &c.]

Q. Mar. Mischance, and sorrow, go along with you!
Heart's discontent, and sour affliction,
Be playfellows to keep you company.
There's two of you; the devil make a third,
And threefold vengeance tend upon your steps!

Suf. Cease, gentle queen, these execrations,
And let thy Suffolk take his heavy leave. [wretch!]

Q. Mar. Fie, coward woman, and soft-hearted
Hast thou not spirit to curse thine enemy?

Suf. A plague upon them! wherefore should I curse them?

Would curses kill, as doth the mandrake's groan,
I would invent as bitter-searching terms,
As curse, as harsh, and horrible to hear,
Deliver'd strongly through my fixed teeth,
With full as many signs of deadly hate,
As lean-fac'd Envy in her loathsome cave.
My tongue should stumble in mine earnest words;
Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten flint;
My hair be fix'd on end, as one distract;
Ay, every joint should seem to curse and ban:
And even now my burden'd heart would break,
Should I not curse them. Poison be their drink!
Gall, worse than gall, the daintiest that they taste!
Their sweetest shade, a grove of cypress trees!
Their chiefest prospect, murdering basilisks!
Their softest touch, as 'sharp as lizards' stings!
Their music, frightful as the serpent's hiss,
And boding screech-owls make the concert full!
All the foul terrors in dark-seated hell— [thyself;

Q. Mar. Enough, sweet Suffolk: thou torment'st
And these dread curses, like the sun 'gainst glass,
Or like an overcharged gun, recoil,
And turn the force of them upon thyself.

Suf. You bade me<sup>e</sup> ban, and will you bid me leave?
Now, by the ground that I am banish'd from,

Well could I curse away a winter's night,
Though standing naked on a mountain top,
Where biting cold would never let grass grow,
And think it but a minute spent in sport.

Q. Mar. O! let me entreat thee, cease. Give me thy hand,

That I may dew it with my mournful tears;
Nor let the rain of heaven wet this place,
To wash away my woeful monuments.
O! could this kiss be printed in thy hand,
That thou might'st think upon these by the seal,
Through whom a thousand sighs are breath'd for thee.
So, get thee gone, that I may know my grief;
'Tis but surmis'd whilst thou art standing by,
As one that surfeits, thinking on a want.

I will repeat thee, or, be well assur'd,
Adventure to be banished myself;
And banished I am, if but from thee.
Go; speak not to me: even now be gone.—
O! go not yet.—Even thus two friends condemn'd
Embrace, and kiss, and take ten thousand leaves,
Loather a hundred times to part than die.
Yet now farewell; and farewell life with thee.

Suf. Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banished,
Once by the king, and three times thrice by thee.
'Tis not the land I care for, wert thou thence:
A wilderness is populous enough,
So Suffolk had thy heavenly company;
For where thou art, there is the world itself,
With every several pleasure in the world,
And where thou art not, desolation.
I can no more.—Live thou to joy thy life;
Myself<sup>1</sup> to joy in nought, but that thou liv'st.

Enter VAUX.

Q. Mar. Whither goes Vaux so fast? what news,
Vaux. To signify unto his majesty, [I pr'ythee?
That cardinal Beaufort is at point of death;
For suddenly a grievous sickness took him,
That makes him gasp, and stare, and catch the air,
Blaspheming God, and cursing men on earth.
Sometime he talks as if duke Humphrey's ghost
Were by his side; sometime he calls the king,
And whispers to his pillow, as to him,
The secrets of his overcharged soul:
And I am sent to tell his majesty,
That even now he cries aloud for him.

Q. Mar. Go, tell this heavy message to the king.

[Exit VAUX.

Ah me! what is this world? what news are these?
But wherefore grieve I at an hour's poor loss,
Omitting Suffolk's exile, my soul's treasure?
Why only, Suffolk, mourn I not for thee,
And with the southern clouds contend in tears?
Theirs for the earth's increase, mine for my sorrows.
Now, get thee hence: the king, thou know'st, is coming:

If thou be found by me, thou art but dead.

Suf. If I depart from thee, I cannot live;
And in thy sight to die, what were it else,
But like a pleasant slumber in thy lap?
Here could I breathe my soul into the air,
As mild and gentle as the cradle-babe,
Dying with mother's dug between its lips;
<sup>a</sup> Where, from thy sight, I should be raging mad,
And cry out for thee to close up mine eyes,
To have thee with thy lips to stop my mouth:
So should'st thou either turn my flying soul,
Or I should breathe it so into thy body,
And then it liv'd in sweet Elysium.
To die by thee, were but to die in jest;
From thee to die, were torture more than death.

<sup>a</sup> Whereas.

O! let me stay, befall what may befall. [rosive,

Q. Mar. Away! though parting be a fretful cor-
It is applied to a deathful wound.

To France, sweet Suffolk: let me hear from thee;
For wheresoe'r thou art in this world's globe,
I'll have an <sup>b</sup> Iris that shall find thee out.

Suf. I go.

Q. Mar. And take my heart with thee.

Suf. A jewel, lock'd in the woeful'st<sup>c</sup> casket
That ever did contain a thing of worth.

Even as a splitted bark, so sunder we:

This way fall I to death.

Q. Mar.

This way for me.

[Exeunt, severally.

SCENE III.—London. Cardinal BEAUFORT's Bedchamber.

Enter King HENRY, SALISBURY, WARWICK, and others. The Cardinal in bed; Attendants with him.

K. Hen. How fares my lord? speak, Beaufort, to thy<sup>3</sup> king. [treasure,

Car. If thou be'st death, I'll give thee England's Enough to purchase such another island,
So thou wilt let me live, and feel no pain.

K. Hen. Ah, what a sign it is of evil life,
Where death's approach is seen so terrible!

War. Beaufort, it is thy sovereign speaks to thee.

Car. Bring me unto my trial when you will.

Died he not in his bed? where should he die?

Can I make men live, whe'r they will or no?—

O! torture me no more, I will confess.—

Alive again? then show me where he is:

I'll give a thousand pound to look upon him.—

He hath no eyes, the dust hath blinded them.—

Comb down his hair: look! look! it stands upright,

Like lime-twigs set to catch my winged soul.—

Give me some drink; and bid the apothecary

Bring the strong poison that I bought of him.

K. Hen. O, thou eternal mover of the heavens,

Look with a gentle eye upon this wretch!

O! beat away the busy meddling fiend,

That lays strong siege unto this wretch's soul,

And from his bosom purge this black despair.

War. See, how the pangs of death do make him grin.

Sal. Disturb him not; let him pass peaceably.

K. Hen. Peace to his soul, 4if't God's good pleasure be.

Lord cardinal, if thou think'st on heaven's bliss,

Hold up thy hand, make signal of thy hope.—

<sup>6</sup>[Car. dies.

He dies, and makes no sign.—O God, forgive him!

War. So had a death argues a monstrous life.

K. Hen. Forbear to judge, for we are sinners all.—

Close up his eyes, and draw the curtain close,

And let us all to meditation. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Kent. The Sea-shore near Dover.

*Firing heard at Sea. Then enter from a Boat, a Captain, a Master, a Master's-Mate, WALTER
WHITMORE, and others; with them SUFFOLK, disguised; and other Gentlemen, prisoners.*

Cap. The gaudy, blabbing, and<sup>c</sup> remorseful day
Is crept into the bosom of the sen,
And now loud-howling wolves arouse the jades

<sup>b</sup> Iris was the messenger of Juno.—<sup>c</sup> Pitiful.

That drag the tragic melancholy night;
 Who with their drowsy, slow, and flagging wings
 Clip dead men's graves, and from their misty jaws
 Breathe foul contagious darkness in the air.
 Therefore, bring forth the soldiers of our prize;
 For whilst our pinnace anchors in the Downs,
 Here shall they make their ransom on the sand,
 Or with their blood stain this discolored shore.—
 Master, this prisoner freely give I thee;—
 And, thou that art his mate, make boot of this;—
 The other, [Pointing to Suffolk,] Walter Whitmore, is thy share.

1 Gent. What is my ransom, master? let me know.
Mast. A thousand crowns, or else lay down your head.

Mate. And so much shall you give, or off goes yours.
Cap. What! think you much to pay two thousand crowns,

And bear the name and port of gentlemen?—
 Cut both the villains' throats!—for die you shall:
 Can lives of those which we have lost in fight,
 Be counterpois'd with such a petty sum?

1 Gent. I'll give it, sir; and therefore spare my life.

2 Gent. And so will I, and write home for it straight.

Whit. I lost mine eye in laying the prize aboard,
 And, therefore, to revenge it shalt thou die;

[To Suff.]

And so should these, if I might have my will.

Cap. Be not so rash: take ransom; let him live.

Suf. Look on my George: I am a gentleman.

Rate me at what thou wilt, thou shalt be paid.

Whit. And so am I; my name is Walter Whitmore.

How now! why start'st thou? what, doth death af-fright?

[death.]

Suf. Thy name affrights me, in whose sound is
 A cunning man did calculate my birth,
 And told me that by water I should die:
 Yet let not this make thee be bloody minded;
 Thy name is Gaultier, being rightly sounded.

Whit. Gaultier, or Walter, which it is, I care not;
 Never yet did base dishonor blur our name,
 But with our sword we wip'd away the blot;
 Therefore, when merchant-like I sell revenge,
 Broke be my sword, my arms torn and defac'd,
 And I proclaim'd a coward through the world!

[Lays hold on Suffolk.]

Suf. Stay, Whitmore; for thy prisoner is a prince,
 The duke of Suffolk, William de la Poole.

Whit. The duke of Suffolk muffled up in rags!

Suf. Ay, but these rags are no part of the duke:
 Jove sometime went disguis'd, and why not I?

Cap. But Jove was never slain, as thou shalt be.

Suf. Obscure and lowly swain, king Henry's blood,
 The honorable blood of Lancaster,
 Must not be shed by such a jaded groom.

Hast thou not kiss'd thy hand, and held my stirrup?
 Bare-headed plodded by my foot-cloth mule,
 And thought thee happy when I shook my head?

How often hast thou waited at my cup,
 Fed from my trencher, kneel'd down at the board,
 When I have feasted with queen Margaret?
 Remember it, and let it make thee crest-fall'n;
 Ay, and allay this thy abortive pride.

How in our voiding lobby hast thou stood,
 And duly waited for my coming forth.
 This hand of mine hath writ in thy behalf,
 And therefore shall it charm thy riotous tongue.

Whit. Speak, captain, shall I stab the foul-tongu'd slave?

Cap. First let my words stab him, as he hath me.

Suf. Base slave, thy words are blunt, and so art thou.

Cap. Convey him hence, and on our long boat's side
 Strike off his head.

Suf. Thou dar'st not for thy own.

Cap. Yes, Poole.

Suf. Poole?

Cap. Poole, Sir Poole, lord?

Ay, kennel, puddle, sink; whose filth and dirt
 Troubles the silver spring where England drinks.
 Now, will I dam up this thy yawning mouth,
 For swallowing the treasure of the realm: [ground;
 Thy lips, that kiss'd the queen, shall sweep the
 And thou, that smil'st at good duke Humphrey's death,
 Against the senseless winds shalt grin in vain,
 Who in contempt shall hiss at thee again:

And wedded be thou to the hags of hell,
 For daring to affy a mighty lord
 Unto the daughter of a worthless king,
 Having neither subject, wealth, nor diadem.

By devilish policy art thou grown great,
 And, like ambitious Sylla, overgor'd
 With goblets of thy mother's bleeding heart.
 By thee Anjou and Maine were sold to France:

The false revolting Normans thorough thee
 Disdain to call us lord; and Picardy
 Hath slain their governors, surpris'd our forts,
 And sent the ragged soldiers wounded home.

The princely Warwick, and the Nevils all,
 Whose dreadful swords were never drawn in vain,
 As hating thee, are rising up in arms:

And now the house of York—thrust from the crown,
 By shameful murder of a guiltless king,
 And lofty, proud, encroaching tyranny,—

Burns with revenging fire; whose hopeful colors
 Advance our half-fac'd sun, striving to shine,

Under the which is writ—In vitis nubibus.

The commons, here in Kent, are up in arms;

And to conclude, reproach, and beggary,

Crept into the palace of our king,
 And all by thee.—Away!—Convey him hence.

Suf. O, that I were a god, to shoot forth thunder
 Upon these paltry, servile, abject drudges!

Small things make base men proud: this villain, here,
 Being captain of a pinnace, threatens more
 Than Barchus the strong Illyrian pirate.

Drones suck not eagles' blood, but rob bee-hives.

It is impossible, that I should die

By such a lowly vassal as thyself.

Thy words move rage, and not remorse, in me:

I go of message from the queen to France;

I charge thee, waft me safely cross the channel.

Cap. Walter!—

Whit. Come, Suffolk, I must waft thee to thy death.

Suf. Pend gelidus timor occupat artus:—it is thee
 I fear.

[thee.]

Whit. Thou shalt have cause to fear before I leave
 What! are ye daunted now? now will ye stoop?

1 Gent. My gracious lord, entreat him; speak him fair.

Suf. Suffolk's imperial tongue is stern and rough,
 Us'd to command, untaught to plead for favor.

Far be it we should honor such as these

With humble suit: no, rather let my head

Stoop to the block, than these knees bow to any,

Save to the God of heaven, and to my king;

And sooner dance upon a bloody pole,

Than stand uncover'd to the vulgar groom.

True nobility is exempt from fear:

More can I bear, than you dare execute.

Cap. Hale him away, and let him talk no more.

* Such a jaded groom," i. e., such a low fellow.

"To affy," i. e., to betroth in marriage.—Edward III. bore for his device the rays of the sun dispersing themselves out of a cloud.—A pinnace formerly signified a ship of small burden, built for speed.

Suf. Come, soldiers, show what cruelty ye can,
That this my death may never be forgot.—
Great men oft die by vile <sup>a</sup>bezonians:
A Roman sworder and banditto slave
Murder'd sweet Tully; Brutus' bastard hand
Stabb'd Julius Cæsar; savage islanders
Pompey the great, and Suffolk dies by pirates.

[Exit Suf., with Whit., and others.]

Cap. And as for these whose ransom we have set,
It is our pleasure one of them depart:
Therefore, come you with us, and let him go.

[Exeunt all but the first Gentleman.]

Re-enter WHITMORE, with SUFFOLK'S Body.

Whit. There let his head and lifeless body lie,
Until the queen, his mistress, bury it. [Exit.]

1 Gent. O, barbarous and bloody spectacle!
His body will I bear unto the king:
If he revenge it not, yet will his friends;
So will the queen, that living held him dear.

[Exit, with the Body.]

SCENE II.—Blackheath.

Enter GEORGE BEVIS and JOHN HOLLAND.

Geo. Come, and get thee a sword, though made of a lath: they have been up these two days.

John. They have the more need to sleep now then.

Geo. I tell thee, Jack Cade, the clothier, means to dress the commonwealth, and turn it, and set a new nap upon it.

John. So he had need, for 'tis threadbare. Well,
I say, it was never merry world in England, since gentlemen came up.

Geo. O miserable age! Virtue is not regarded in handicrafts-men.

John. The nobility think scorn to go in leather aprons.

Geo. Nay more; the king's council are no good workmen.

John. True; and yet it is said,—labor in thy vocation: which is as much as to say,—let the magistrates be laboring men; and therefore should we be magistrates.

Geo. Thou hast hit it; for there's no better sign of a brave mind, than a hard hand.

John. I see them! I see them! There's Best's son, the tanner of Wingham.

Geo. He shall have the skins of our enemies to make dog's leather of.

John. And Dick, the butcher.

Geo. Then is sin struck down like an ox, and in-iquity's throat cut like a calf.

John. And Smith, the weaver.

Geo. Argo, their thread of life is spun.

John. Come, come; let's fall in with them.

Drum. Enter CADE, DICK the Butcher, SMITH the Weaver, and others in great number.

Cade. We John Cade, so termed of our supposed father,—

Dick. Or rather, of stealing a <sup>b</sup>cade of herrings.

[Aside.]

Cade. —For our enemies shall fall before us, inspired with the spirit of putting down kings and princes,—Command silence. [Noise.]

Dick. Silence!

Cade. My father was a Mortimer,—

Dick. He was an honest man, and a good bricklayer. [Aside.]

Cade. My mother a Plantagenet,—

Dick. I knew her well; she was a midwife.

[Aside.]

Cade. My wife descended of the Lucies,—

Dick. She was, indeed, a pedlar's daughter, and sold many laces. [Aside.]

Smith. But, now of late, not able to travel with her furred pack, she washes bucks here at home.

[Aside.]

Cade. Therefore am I of an honorable house.

Dick. Ay, by my faith, the field is honorable, and there was he born under a hedge; for his father had never a house, but the <sup>c</sup>cage. [Aside.]

Cade. Valiant I am.

Smith. 'A must needs, for beggary is valiant.

[Aside.]

Cade. I am able to endure much.

Dick. No question of that, for I have seen him whipped three market days together. [Aside.]

Cade. I fear neither sword nor fire.

Smith. He need not fear the sword, for his coat is of proof.<sup>1</sup>

Dick. But, methinks, he should stand in fear of fire, being burnt i' the hand for stealing of sheep.

[Aside.]

Cade. Be brave then; for your captain is brave, and vows reformation. There shall be in England seven half-penny loaves sold for a penny: the three-hooped pot shall have ten hoops; and I will make it felony, to drink small beer. All the realm shall be in common, and in Cheapside shall my palfrey go to grass. And, when I am king, (as king I will be)—

All. God save your majesty!

Cade. I thank you, good people:—there shall be no money; all shall eat and drink on my score; and I will apparel them all in one livery, that they may agree like brothers, and worship me their lord.

Dick. The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers.

Cade. Nay, that I mean to do. Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment? that parchment, being scribbled o'er, should undo a man? Some say, the bee stings; but I say, 'tis the bee's wax, for I did but seal once to a thing, and I was never mine own man since. How now! who's there?

Enter some, bringing in the Clerk of Chatham.

Smith. The clerk of Chatham: he can write and read, and cast account.

Cade. O monstrous!

Smith. We took him setting of boys' copies.

Cade. Here's a villain!

Smith. He's a book in his pocket, with red letters in't.

Cade. Nay then, he is a conjurer.

Dick. Nay, he can make <sup>d</sup>obligations, and write court-hand.

Cade. I am sorry for't: the man is a proper man, of mine honor; unless I find him guilty, he shall not die.—Come hither, sirrah, I must examine thee:
what is thy name?

Clerk. Emmanuel.

Dick. They use to write it on the top of letters.—
'Twill go hard with you.

Cade. Let me alone.—Dost thou use to write thy name, or hast thou a mark to thyself, like an honest plain-dealing man?

Clerk. Sir, I thank God, I have been so well brought up that I can write my name.

All. He hath confessed: away with him! he's a villain, and a traitor.

<sup>a</sup> A bezonian is a mean low person.—<sup>b</sup> A "cade," i. e., a barrel.

<sup>c</sup> Little places for harlots and vagabonds, set commonly in the market-place, were called cages.—<sup>d</sup> Bonds.

Cade. Away with him, I say! hang him with his pen and ink-horn about his neck.

[Exeunt some with the Clerk.]

Enter MICHAEL.

Mich. Where's our general?

Cade. Here I am, thou particular fellow.

Mich. Fly, fly! sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the king's forces.

Cade. Stand, villain, stand, or I'll fell thee down. He shall be encountered with a man as good as himself: he is but a knight, is 'a?

Mich. No.

Cade. To equal him, I will make myself a knight presently. [Kneels.] — Rise up sir John Mortimer. [Rises.] Now have at him.

Enter Sir HUMPHREY STAFFORD, and WILLIAM his Brother, with Drum and Forces.

Staf. Rebellious hinds, the filth and scum of Kent, Mark'd for the gallows, lay your weapons down: Home to your cottages, forsake this groom. The king is merciful, if you revolt.

W. Staf. But angry, wrathful, and inclin'd to blood, If you go forward: therefore yield, or die.

Cade. As for these silken-coated slaves, I pass <sup>a</sup> not: It is to you, good people, that I speak, O'er whom in time to come I hope to reign; For I am rightful heir unto the crown.

Staf. Villain! thy father was a plasterer; And thou thyself a sheerman, art thou not?

Cade. And Adam was a gardener.

W. Staf. And what of that? [March.]

Cade. Marry, this:—Edmund Mortimer, earl of Marston, Married the duke of Clarence's daughter, did he not?

Staf. Ay, sir.

Cade. By her he had two children at one birth.

W. Staf. That's false.

Cade. Ay, there's the question; but, I say, 'tis true. The elder of them, being put to nurse, Was by a beggar-woman stol'n away; And, ignorant of his birth and parentage, Became a bricklayer when he came to age. His son am I: deny it, if you can.

Dick. Nay, 'tis too true; therefore, he shall be king. Smith. Sir, he made a chimney in my father's house, and the bricks are alive at this day to testify it: therefore, deny it not.

Staf. And will you credit this base drudge's words, That speaks he knows not what?

All. Ay, marry, will we; therefore, get ye gone.

W. Staf. Jack Cade, the duke of York hath taught you this.

Cade. He lies, for I invented it myself. [Aside.] —Go to, sirrah: tell the king from me, that for his father's sake, Henry the fifth, in whose time boys went to span-counter for French crowns, I am content he shall reign; but I'll be protector over him.

Dick. And, furthermore, we'll have the lord Say's head, for selling the dukedom of Maine.

Cade. And good reason; for thereby is England maimed, and fain to go with a staff, but that my puissance holds it up. Fellow kings, I tell you that that lord Say hath gelded the commonwealth, and made it an enunch; and more than that, he can speak French, and therefore he is a traitor.

Staf. O, gross and miserable ignorance!

Cade. Nay, answer, if you can: the Frenchmen are our enemies: go to then, I ask but this; can he that speaks with the tongue of an enemy be a good counsellor, or no?

All. No, no; and therefore we'll have his head.

W. Staf. Well, seeing gentle words will not prevail, Assail them with the army of the king.

Staf. Herald, away; and, throughout every town, Proclaim them traitors that are up with Cade; That those which fly before the battle ends, May, even in their wives' and children's sight, Be hang'd up for example at their doors.—<sup>2</sup> All you, that be the king's friends, follow me.

[Exeunt the two STAFFORDS and Forces.]

Cade. And you, that love the commons, follow Now show yourselves men; 'tis for liberty. [Me.— We will not leave one lord, one gentleman: Spare none but such as go in clouted <sup>b</sup> shoon, For they are thrifty honest men, and such As would (but that they dare not) take our parts.

Dick. They are all in order, and march toward us.

Cade. But then are we in order, when we are most out of order. Come; march! forward! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another Part of Blackheath.

Alarums. The two Parties enter, and fight, and both the STAFFORDS are slain.

Cade. Where's Dick, the butcher of Ashford?

Dick. Here, sir.

Cade. They fell before thee like sheep and oxen, and thou behavedst thyself as if thou hadst been in thine own slaughter-house: therefore thus will I reward thee,—The Lent shall be as long again as it is; and thou shalt have a license to kill for a hundred <sup>3</sup> years, lacking one.

Dick. I desire no more.

Cade. And, to speak truth, thou deservest no less. This monument of the victory will I bear; <sup>4</sup> [Putting on STAFFORD's armor.] and the bodies shall be dragged at my horse's heels, till I do come to London, where we will have the mayor's sword borne before us.

Dick. If we mean to thrive and do good, break open the jails, and let out the prisoners.

Cade. Fear not that, I warrant thee. Come; let's march towards London. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King HENRY, reading a Supplication; the Duke of BUCKINGHAM and Lord SAY with him: at a distance, Queen MARGARET, mourning over SUFFOLK's Head.

Q. Mar. Oft have I heard that grief softens the mind, <sup>5</sup> [Aside.]

And makes it fearful and degenerate; Think, therefore, on revenge, and cease to weep. But who can cease to weep, and look on this? Here may his head lie on my throbbing breast; But where's the body that I should embrace?

Buck. What answer makes your grace to the rebels' supplication?

K. Hen. I'll send some holy bishop to entreat; For God forbid, so many simple souls Should perish by the sword! And I myself, Rather than bloody war shall cut them short, Will parley with Jack Cade their general.—But stay, I'll read it over once again.

Q. Mar. Ah, barbarous villains! hath this lovely face <sup>6</sup> [Aside.]

Rul'd like a wandering planet over me, And could it not enforce them to relent, That were unworthy to behold the same?

K. Hen. Lord Say, Jack Cade hath sworn to have thy head.

<sup>a</sup> "I pass not," i. e., I care not.

Say. Ay, but I hope, your highness shall have his.

K. Hen. How, now, madam!

<sup>1</sup> Lamenting still, and mourning Suffolk's death?

I fear me, love, if that I had been dead,

Thou wouldst not have mourn'd so much for me.

Q. Mar. No, my love; I should not mourn, but die for thee.

Enter a Messenger.

K. Hen. How now! what news? why com'st thou in such haste?

Mess. The rebels are in Southwark: fly, my lord!

Jack Cade proclaims himself lord Mortimer,

Descended from the duke of Clarence' house,

And calls your grace usurper openly,

And vows to crown himself in Westminster.

His army is a ragged multitude

Of hinds and peasants, rude and merciless:

Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother's death

Hath given them heart and courage to proceed.

All scholars, lawyers, courtiers, gentlemen,

They call false caterpillars, and intend their death.

K. Hen. O graceless men! they know not what they do.

Buck. My gracious lord, retire to Kenilworth, Until a power be rais'd to put them down.

Q. Mar. Ah! were the duke of Suffolk now alive, These Kentish rebels would be soon appeas'd.

K. Hen. Lord Say, the traitors hate thee, Therefore away with us to Kenilworth.

Say. So might your grace's person be in danger.

The sight of me is odious in their eyes;

And therefore in this city will I stay,

And live alone as secret as I may.

Enter another Messenger.

<sup>2</sup> Mess. Jack Cade hath gotten London-bridge: Fly and forsake their houses. [the citizens]

The rascal people, thirsting after prey,

Join with the traitor; and they jointly swear,

To spoil the city, and your royal court.

Buck. Then linger not, my lord: away, take horse.

K. Hen. Come, Margaret: God, our hope, will succor us.

Q. Mar. My hope is gone, now Suffolk is deceas'd.

K. Hen. Farewell, my lord: [To Lord SAY.] trust not the Kentish rebels.

Buck. Trust no body, for fear you be betray'd.

Say. The trust I have is in mine innocence, And therefore am I bold and resolute. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The Same. The Tower.

Enter Lord SCALES, and others, walking on the Walls. Then enter certain Citizens, below.

Scales. How now! is Jack Cade slain?

<sup>1</sup> Cit. No, my lord, nor likely to be slain; for they have won the bridge, killing all those that withstand them. The lord mayor craves aid of your honor from the Tower, to defend the city from the rebels.

Scales. Such aid as I can spare, you shall command, But I am troubled here with them myself:

The rebels have assay'd to win the Tower.

But get you to Smithfield, and gather head,

And thither I will send you Matthew Gough.

Fight for your king, your country, and your lives;

And so farewell: <sup>2</sup> rebellion never thrives. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—The Same. Cannon Street.

Enter JACK CADE, and his Followers. He strikes his Staff on London-stone.

Cade. Now is Mortimer lord of this city. And here, sitting upon London-stone, I charge and command, that, of the city's cost, the pissing-conduit run nothing but claret wine this first year of our reign. And now, henceforward, it shall be treason for any that calls me other than lord Mortimer.

Enter a Soldier, running.

Sold. Jack Cade! Jack Cade!

Cade. Knock him down there. [They kill him.]

Smith. If this fellow be wise, he'll never call you Jack Cade more: I think, he hath a very fair warning.

Dick. My lord, there's an army gathered together in Smithfield.

Cade. Come then, let's go fight with them. But, first, go and set London-bridge on fire; and, if you can, burn down the Tower too. Come, let's away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—The Same. Smithfield.

Alarm. Enter, on one side, CADE, and his Company; on the other, the Citizens, and the King's Forces, headed by MATTHEW GOUGH. They fight; the Citizens are routed, and MATTHEW GOUGH is slain.

Cade. So, sirs.—Now go some and pull down the Savoy; others to the inns of court: down with them all.

Dick. I have a suit unto your lordship.

Cade. Be it a lordship, thou shalt have it for that word.

Dick. Only, that the laws of England may come out of your mouth.

John. Mass, 'twill be sore law, then; for he was thrust in the mouth with a spear, and 'tis not whole yet. [Aside.]

Smith. Nay, John, it will be stinking law; for his breath stinks with eating toasted cheese. [Aside.]

Cade. I have thought upon it; it shall be so. Away! burn all the records of the realm: my mouth shall be the parliament of England.

John. Then we are like to have biting statutes, unless his teeth be pulled out. [Aside.]

Cade. And henceforward all things shall be in common.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, a prize, a prize! here's the lord Say, which sold the towns in France; he that made us pay one and twenty <sup>3</sup>fifteens, and one shilling to the pound, the last subsidy.

Enter GEORGE BEVIS, with the Lord SAY.

Cade. Well, he shall be beheaded for it ten times.—Ah, thou <sup>4</sup>say, thou serge, nay, thou buckram lord! now art thou within point-blank of our jurisdiction regal. What canst thou answer to my majesty, for giving up of Normandy unto monsieur Basimecu, the dauphin of France? Be it known unto thee by these presents, even the presence of Lord Mortimer, that I am the besom that must sweep the court clean of such filth as thou art. Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm in erecting a grammar-school: and whereas, before, our fore-fathers had no other books but the score and the tally, thou hast caused printing to be used; and, contrary to the king, his crown, and dignity, thou hast built a paper-mill. It will be proved to thy face, that thou hast men about thee, that usually talk of a noun, and a verb, and such abominable words as no Christian ear can endure to hear. Thou hast appointed justices of peace, to call poor men before them about matters they were not able to answer: moreover, thou hast put them in prison; and because they could not read, thou hast hanged <sup>a</sup> them; when, indeed, only for that cause they have been most worthy to live. Thou dost ride in a <sup>b</sup> foot-cloth, dost thou not?

Say. What of that?

Cade. Marry, thou oughtest not to let thy horse wear a cloak, when honestest men than thou go in their hose and doublets.

Dick. And work in their shirt too; as myself, for example, that am a butcher.

Say. You men of Kent,—

Dick. What say you of Kent?

Say. Nothing but this: 'tis bonna terra, mala gens.

Cade. Away with him! away with him! he speaks Latin. [will.]

Say. Hear me but speak, and bear me where you Kent, in the commentaries Cæsar writ,
Is term'd the civilst place of all this isle;
Sweet is the country, because full of riches;
The people liberal, valiant, active, <sup>1</sup> worthy,
Which makes me hope you are not void of pity.
I sold not Maine, I lost not Normandy;
Yet, to recover them, would lose my life.

Justice with favor have I always done;
Prayers and tears have mov'd me, gifts could never.
When have I aught exacted at your hands,
Kent, to maintain the king, the realm, and you?
Large gifts have I bestow'd on learned clerks,
Because my book prefer'd me to the king:
And, seeing ignorance is the curse of God,
Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven,
Unless you be possess'd with devilish spirits,
You cannot but forbear to murder me.
This tongue hath parley'd unto foreign kings
For your behoof.—

Cade. Tut! when struck'st thou one blow in the field?

Say. Great men have reaching hands: oft have I Those that I never saw, and struck them dead.

Geo. O monstrous coward! what, to come behind folks? [good.]

Say. These cheeks are pale for watching for your Cade. Give him a box o' the ear, and that will make 'em red again.

Say. Long sitting, to determine poor men's causes, Hath made me full of sickness and diseases.

Cade. Ye shall have a hempen caudle, then, and the <sup>2</sup> help of hatchet.

Dick. Why dost thou quiver, man?

Say. The palsy, and not fear, provoketh me.

Cade. Nay, he nods at us; as who should say, I'll be even with you. I'll see if his head will stand steadier on a pole, or no. Take him away, and behead him.

Say. Tell me, wherein have I offended most?

Have I affected wealth, or honor; speak?

Are my chests fill'd up with extorted gold?

Is my apparel sumptuous to behold?

Whom have I injur'd, that ye seek my death?

These hands are free from guiltless <sup>3</sup> blood-shedding,
This breast from harboring foul deceitful thoughts.
O, let me live!

Cade. I feel remorse in myself with his words; but I'll bridle it: he shall die, an it be but for pleading so well for his life.—Away with him! he has a <sup>4</sup> familiar under his tongue: he speaks not o'

God's name. Go, take him away, I say, and strike off his head presently; and then break into his son-in-law's house, sir James Cromer, and strike off his head, and bring them them both upon two poles thither.

All. It shall be done.

[prayers,

Say. Ah, countrymen! if when you make your God should be so odurate as yourselves,

How would it fare with your departed souls?

And therefore yet relent, and save my life.

Cade. Away with him, and do as I command ye.

[Exeunt some with Lord SAY.

The proudest peer in the realm shall not wear a head on his shoulders, unless he pay me tribute: there shall not a maid be married, but she shall pay to me her maidenhead, ere they have it. Men shall hold of me in capite; and we charge and command, that their wives be as free as heart can wish, or tongue can tell.

Dick. My lord, when shall we go to Cheapside, and take up commodities upon our bills?

Cade. Marry, presently.

All. O brave!

Re-enter Rebels, with the Heads of Lord SAY and his Son-in-law.

Cade. But is not this braver?—Let them kiss one another, for they loved well, when they were alive. <sup>3</sup> [Jowl them together.] Now part them again, lest they consult about the giving up of some more towns in France. Soldiers, defer the spoil of the city until night; for with these borne before us, instead of maces, will we ride through the streets; and at every corner have them kiss.—Away! [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—Southwark.

Alarum. Enter CADE, and all his Rabblement.

Cade. Up Fish-street! down Saint Magnus' corner! kill and knock down! throw them into Thames! —[A Parley sounded, then a Retreat.] What noise is this I hear? Dare any be so bold to sound retreat or parley, when I command them kill?

Enter BUCKINGHAM and Old CLIFFORD, with Forces.

Buck. Ay, here they be that dare, and will disturb thee.

Know, Cade, we come ambassadors from the king
Unto the commons whom thou hast misled;
And here pronounce free pardon to them all,
That will forsake thee, and go home in peace.

Clif. What say ye, countrymen? will ye <sup>4</sup> repent,
And yield to mercy, whilst 'tis offer'd you,
Or let a <sup>5</sup> rebel lead you to your deaths?

Who loves the king, and will embrace his pardon,
Fling up his cap, and say—God save his majesty!
Who hateth him, and honors not his father,
Henry the fifth, that made all France to quake,
Shake he his weapon at us, and pass by.

All. God save the king! God save the king!

Cade. What! Buckingham, and Clifford, are ye so brave?—And you, base peasants, do ye believe him? will you needs be hanged with your pardons about your necks? Hath my sword therefore broke through London Gates, that you should leave me at the White Hart in Southwark? I thought ye would never have given out these arms, till you had recovered your ancient freedom; but you are all recreants, and dastards, and delight to live in slavery to the nobility. Let them break your backs with burdens, take your houses over your heads, ravish your wives and daughters before your faces. For me,—I will make shift for one; and so—God's curse 'light upon you all!

All. We'll follow Cade: we'll follow Cade.

<sup>a</sup> That is, they were hanged because they could not claim the benefit of clergy.—<sup>b</sup> A foot-cloth was a kind of housing which covered the body of the horse.—<sup>c</sup> "Guiltless blood-shedding," i. e., shedding innocent blood.—<sup>d</sup> "A familiar," i. e., a demon who was supposed to attend at call.

Clif. Is Cade the son of Henry the fifth,
That thus you do exclaim, you'll go with him?
Will he conduct you through the heart of France,
And make the meaneſt of you earls and dukes?
Alas, he hath no home, no place to fly to;
Nor knows he how to live, but by the ſpoil,
Unless by robbing of your friends, and us.
We'r not a ſhame, that whilst you live at jar,
The fearful French, whom you late vanquiſhed,
Should make a ſtart o'er ſeas, and vanquiſh you?
Methinks, already, in this civil broil,
I ſee them lordſing in London ſtreets,
Crying—Villagcois! unto all they meet.
Better ten thouſand baſe-born Cades miſcarry,
Than you ſhould ſtoop unto a Frenchman's mercy.
To France, to France! and get what you have loſt:
Spare England, for it is your native coaſt.
Henry hath money, you are ſtrong and manly:
God on our ſide, doubt not of victory.

All. A Clifford! a Clifford! we'll follow the king, and Clifford.

Cade. Was ever feather ſo lightly blown to and fro, as this multitude? the name of Henry the fifth hales them to an hundred miſchiefs, and makes them leave me deſolate. I ſee them lay their heads together, to ſurpriſe me: my ſword, make way for me, for here is no ſtaying.—In deſpite of the devils and hell, have through the very miſt of you; and heavens and honor be witneſs, that no want of reſolution in me, but only my followers' baſe and ignominious treaſons, makes me betake me to my heels.

[Exit.

Buck. What! is he fled? go ſome, and follow him;
And he, that brings his head unto the king,
Shall have a thouſand crowns for his reward.—

[Excunt ſome of them.

Follow me, ſoldiers: we'll deviſe a mean

To reconcile you all unto the king. [Excunt.

SCENE IX.—Kenilworth Caſtle.

Sound Trumpets, Enter King HENRY, Queen MAR-GARET, and SOMERSET, on the Terrace of the Caſtle.

K. Hen. Was ever king that joy'd an earthly throne,

And could command no more content than I?

No ſooner was I crept out of my cradle,

But I was made a king, at nine months old:

Was never ſubject long'd to be a king,

As I do long and wiſh to be a ſubject.

Enter BUCKINGHAM and CLIFFORD.

Buck. Health, and glad tidings, to your majeſty!

K. Hen. Why, Buckingham, is the traitor, Cade, ſurpris'd?

Or is he but retir'd to make him ſtrong?

Enter, below, a number of CADE'S Followers, with Halters about their Necks.

Clif. He's fled, my lord, and all his powers do yield,
And humbly thus, with halters on their necks,
Expect your highneſs' doom, of life, or death.

K. Hen. Then, heaven, ſet ope thy everlaſting gates,

To entertain my vows of thanks and praiſe!—

Soldiers, this day have you redeem'd your lives,

And ſhow'd how well you love your prince and coun-

Continue ſtill in this ſo good a mind, [try:

And Henry, though he be unfortunate,

Assure yourſelves, will never be unkind:

And ſo, with thanks, and pardon to you all,

I do diſmiſs you to your ſeveral countries.

All. God ſave the king! God ſave the king!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Pleaſe it your grace to be advertis'd,
The duke of York is newly come from Ireland,
And with a puiſſant, and united power
Of Gallowglaſſes, and ſtout <sup>2</sup>Irish <sup>3</sup>kernes,
Is marching hitherward in proud array;
And ſtill proclaimeth, as he comes along,
His arms are only to remove from thee
The duke of Somereſet, whom he terms a traitor.

K. Hen. Thus ſtands my ſtate, 'twixt Cade and York diſtreſs'd,

Like to a ſhip, that, having ſcap'd a tempeſt,
Is ſtraightway calm'd, and boarded with a pirate.
But <sup>b</sup>now is Cade driven back, his men diſpers'd,
And now is York in arms to ſecond him.—

I pray thee, Buckingham, <sup>2</sup>then go and meet him,

And aſk him, what's the reaſon of theſe arms?

Tell him, I'll ſend duke Edmund to the Tower;—

And, Somereſet, we will commit thee thither,

Until his army be diſmiſs'd from him.

Som. My lord,

I'll yield myſelf to priſon willingly,

Or unto death to do my country good.

K. Hen. In any caſe, be not too rough in terms,
For he is fierce, and cannot brook hard language.

Buck. I will, my lord; and doubt not ſo to deal,
As all things ſhall redound unto your good.

K. Hen. Come, wife, let's in, and learn to govern better;

For yet may England curſe my wretched reign.

[Excunt.

SCENE X.—KENT. IDEN'S Garden.

Enter CADE.

Cade. Fie on ambition! fie on myſelf; that have a ſword, and yet am ready to famiſh! Theſe five days have I hid me in theſe woods, and durſt not peep out, for all the country is laid for me; but now am I ſo hungry, that if I might have a leaſe of my life for a thouſand years, I could ſtay no longer.
Wherefore, <sup>4</sup>o'er a brick-wall have I climb'd into this garden, to ſee if I can eat graſs, or pick a ſallet another while, which is not amiſs to cool a man's ſtomach this hot weather. And, I think, this word ſallet was born to do me good: for, many a time, but for a <sup>5</sup>sallet, my brain-pan had been cleft with a brown bill; and, many a time, when I have been dry and bravely marching, it hath ſerved me inſtead of a quart-pot to drink in; and now the word ſallet muſt ſerve me to feed on.

Enter IDEN, with Servants.

IDEN. Lord! who would live turmoiled in the court,
And may enjoy ſuch quiet walks as theſe?

This ſmall inheritance, my father left me,

Contenteth me, and ſo worth a monarchy.

I ſeek not to wax great by others' waning,

Or gather wealth I care not with what eny;

Sufficieth that I have maintain my ſtate,

And ſends the poor well pleaſed from my gate.

Cade. Here's the god of the ſoil come to ſeize me for a ſtray, for entering his fee-ſimple without leave. A villain! thou wilt betray me, and get a thouſand crowns of the king by carrying my head to him; but I'll make thee eat iron like an oſtrich, and ſwallow my ſword like a great pin, ere thou and I part.

IDEN. Why, rude companion, whatſo'er thou be,
I know thee not; why then ſhould I betray thee?

<sup>a</sup> The kernes and Gallowglaſſes were two orders of foot ſoldiers among the Irish.—<sup>b</sup> But now, I c., but juſt now
—<sup>c</sup> A sallet is a kind of helmet.

Is't not enough, to break into my garden,
And like a thief to come to rob my grounds,
Climbing my walls in spite of me, the owner,
But thou wilt brave me with these saucy terms?

Cade. Brave thee? ay, by the best blood that ever was broached, and beard thee too. Look on me well: I have eat no meat these five days; yet, come thou and thy fine men, and if I do not leave you as dead as a door nail, I pray God I may never eat grass more.

Iden. Nay, it shall ne'er be said, while England
That Alexander Iden, <sup>2</sup>squire of Kent, [stands,
Took odds to combat a poor famish'd man.

Oppose thy steadfast-gazing eyes to mine;
See if thou canst outface me with thy looks.
Set limb to limb, and thou art far the lesser;
Thy hand is but a finger to my fist;
Thy leg a stick, compared with this truncheon:
My foot shall fight with all the strength thou hast;
And if mine arm be heaved in the air,
Thy grave is digg'd already in the earth.
As for words, whose greatness answers words,
Let this my sword report what speech forbears.

Cade. By my valor, the most complete champion that ever I heard.—Steel, if thou turn the edge, or cut not out the burly-boned clown in chimes of beef ere thou sleep in thy sheath, I beseech Jove on my knees, thou mayest be turned to hobnails. [They fight. CADE falls.] O! I am slain. Famine, and no other, hath slain me: let ten thousand devils come against me, and give me but the ten meals I have lost, and I'd defy them all. Withier, garden; and be henceforth a burying-place to all that do dwell in this house, because the unconquered soul of Cade is fled.

Iden. Is't Cade that I have slain, that monstrous traitor?

Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deed,
And hang thee o'er my tomb, when I am dead:
Ne'er shall this blood be wiped from thy point,
But thou shalt wear it as a herald's coat,
To emblaze the honor that thy master got.

Cade. Iden, farewell; and be proud of thy victory. Tell Kent from me, she hath lost her best man, and exhort all the world to be cowards; for I, that never feared any, am vanquished by famine,
not by valor. [Dies.]

Iden. How much thou wrong'st <sup>a</sup>me, heaven be my judge.

Die, damned wretch, the curse of her that bare thee!
And as I thrust thy body with my sword,
So wish I, I might thrust thy soul to hell.
Hence will I drag thee headlong by the heels
Unto a dunghill, which shall be thy grave,
And there cut off thy most ungracious head;
Which I will bear in triumph to the king,
Leaving thy trunk for crows to feed upon.

[Exit, dragging out the body.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Same. <sup>3</sup>The Fields between Dartford and Blackheath.

The King's Camp on one side: on the other, enter YORK attended, with Drum and Colors; his Irish Forces at some distance.

York. From Ireland thus comes York, to claim his right,

And pluck the crown from feeble Henry's head:
Ring, bells, aloud; burn, bonfires, clear and bright,
To entertain great England's lawful king.
Ah, sancta majestas! who would not buy thee dear?
Let them obey, that know not how to rule;
This hand was made to handle nought but gold:
I cannot give due action to my words,
Except a sword, or sceptre, balance <sup>b</sup> it.
A sceptre shall it have, have I a soul,
On which I'll toss the flower-de-luce of France.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

Whom have we here? Buckingham, to disturb me?
The king hath sent him, sure: I must dissemble.

Buck. York, if thou meanest well, I greet thee well. [greeting.]

York. Humphrey of Buckingham, I accept thy Art thou a messenger, or come of pleasure?

Buck. A messenger from Henry, our dread liege,
To know the reason of these arms in peace;
Or why, thou—being a subject as I am,—
Against thy oath and true allegiance sworn,
Should'st raise so great a power without his leave,
Or dare to bring thy force so near the court.

York. Scarce can I speak, my cholier is so great.
<sup>5</sup>[Aside.]

O! I could hew up rocks, and fight with flint,
I am so angry at these abject terms;
And now, like Ajax Telamonius,
On sheep or oxen could I spend my fury.
I am far better born than is the king,
More like a king, more kingly in my thoughts;
But I must make fair weather yet a while,
Till Henry be more weak, and I more strong.—<sup>6</sup>
O Buckingham, I pry'thee, pardon me,
That I have given no answer all this while:
My mind was troubled with deep melancholy.
The cause why I have brought this army hither,
Is to remove proud Somerset from the king,
Seditious to his grace, and to the state.

Buck. That is too much presumption on thy part;
But if thy arms be to no other end,
The king hath yielded unto thy demand:
The duke of Somerset is in the Tower.

York. Upon thine honor, is he prisoner?

Buck. Upon mine honor, he is prisoner.

York. Then, Buckingham, I do dismiss my powers.—

Soldiers, I thank you all; disperse yourselves:
Meet me to-morrow in Saint George's field,
You shall have pay, and every thing you wish.
And let my sovereign, virtuous Henry,
Command my eldest son,—nay, all my sons,
As pledges of my fealty and love;
I'll send them all, as willing as I live:
Lands, goods, horse, armor, any thing I have
Is his to use, so Somerset may die.

Buck. York, I commend this kind submission:
We twain will go into his highness' tent.

Enter King HENRY, attended.

K. Hen. Buckingham, doth York intend no harm
That thou be marcheth with thee arm in arm? [to us,
York. In all submission and humility,
York doth present himself unto your highness.

K. Hen. Then what intend these forces thou dost bring?

York. To have the traitor Somerset from hence;
And fight against that monstrous rebel, Cade,
Who since I heard to be discomfited.

Enter IDEN, with CADE's Head.

Iden. If one so rude, and of so mean condition,

<sup>a</sup> "How much thou wrong'st me," i. e., by undervaluing my prowess.

<sup>b</sup> "Balance it," i. e., balance my hand.

May pass into the presence of a king,
Lo! I present your grace a traitor's head,
The head of Cade, whom I in combat slew.

K. Hen. The head of Cade!—Great God, how just art thou!—

O! let me view his visage being dead,
That living wrought me such exceeding trouble.
Tell me, my friend, art thou the man that slew him?

Iden. I was, an't like your majesty. [degree?

K. Hen. How art thou call'd, and what is thy Iden. Alexander Iden, that's my name;
A poor esquire of Kent, that loves his king.

Buck. So please it you, my lord, 'twere not amiss,
He were created knight for his good service.

K. Hen. Iden, kneel down: [He kneels.] rise up a knight.

We give thee for reward a thousand marks;

And will, that thou henceforth attend on us.

Iden. May Iden live to merit such a bounty, [Rising.

And never live but true unto his liege. [the queen:

K. Hen. See, Buckingham! Somerset comes with Go, bid her hide him quickly from the duke.

Enter Queen MARGARET and SOMERSET.

Q. Mar. For thousand Yorks he shall not hide his head,

But boldly stand, and front him to his face.

York. How now! is Somerset at liberty?

Then, York, unloose thy long imprison'd thoughts,
And let thy tongue be equal with thy heart.

Shall I endure the sight of Somerset?—

False king, why hast thou broken faith with me,
Knowing how hardly I can brook abuse?

King did I call thee? no, thou art not king;

Not fit to govern and rule multitudes,

Which dar'st not, no, nor canst not rule a traitor.

That head of thine doth not become a crown;

Thy hand is made to grasp a palmer's staff,

And not to grace an awful princely sceptre.

That gold must round engirt these brows of mine;

Whose smile and frown, like to Achilles' spear,

Is able with the change to kill and cure.

Here is a hand to hold a sceptre up,

And with the same to act controlling laws.

Give place: by heaven, thou shalt rule no more

O'er him whom heaven created for thy ruler.

Som. O monstrous traitor!—I arrest thee, York,

Of capital treason 'gainst the king and crown.

Obey, audacious traitor: kneel for grace. [of these,

York. Would'st have me kneel? first let me ask

If they can brook I bow a knee to man?

Sirrah, call in my sons to be my bail;

[Exit an Attendant.

I know, ere they will have me go to a ward,

They'll pawn their swords for my enfranchisement.

Q. Mar. Call hither Clifford; bid him come again,

To say, if that the bastard boys of York

Shall be the surety for their traitor father.

York. O! blood-spotted Neapolitan,

Outcast of Naples, England's bloody scourge,

The sons of York, thy betters in their birth,

Shall be their father's bail; and bane to those

That for my surety will refuse the boys.

Enter EDWARD and RICHARD PLANTAGENET, with Forces, at one side; at the other, with Forces also, old CLIFFORD and his Son.

See where they come: I'll warrant they'll make it good. [bail.

Q. Mar. And here comes Clifford, to deny their

Clif. Health and all happiness to my lord the king! [Kneels.

York. I thank thee, Clifford: say, what news with Nay, do not fright us with an angry look: [thee?
We are thy sovereign, Clifford; kneel again;
For thy mistaking so, we pardon thee.

Clif. This is my king, York: I do not mistake;
But thou mistak'st me much, to think I do.—
To bedlam with him! is the man grown mad?

K. Hen. Ay, Clifford; a bedlam and ambitious humor

Makes him oppose himself against his king.

Clif. He is a traitor: let him to the Tower,
And chop away that factious pate of his.

Q. Mar. He is arrested, but will not obey:

His sons, he says, shall give their words for him.

York. Will you not, sons?

Edw. Ay, noble father, if our words will serve.

Rich. And if words will not, then our weapons shall.

Clif. Why, what a brood of traitors have we here!

York. Look in a glass, and call thy image so;

I am thy king, and thou a false-hearted traitor.—

Call hither to the stake my two brave<sup>b</sup> bears,

That with the very shaking of their chains

They may astonish these<sup>a</sup> fell-looking curs;

Bid Salisbury, and Warwick, come to me.

Drums. Enter WARWICK and SALISBURY, with Forces.

Clif. Are these thy bears? we'll bait thy bears to
And manacle the<sup>c</sup> bear-ward in their chains, [death,
If thou dar'st bring them to the baiting-place.

Rich. Oft have I seen a hot o'erweening cur

Run back and bite, because he was withheld;

Who, having suffer'd with the bear's fell paw,

Hath clapp'd his tail between his legs, and cry'd:

And such a piece of service will you do,

If you oppose yourselves to match lord Warwick.

Clif. Hence, heap of wrath, foul indigested lump,
As crooked in thy manners as thy shape!

York. Nay, we shall heat you thoroughly anon.

Clif. Take heed, lest by your heat you burn yourselves. [bow?—

K. Hen. Why, Warwick, hath thy knee forgot to Old Salisbury,—shame to thy silver hair,

Thou mad misleader of thy brain-sick son!—

What, wilt thou on thy death-bed play the ruffian,

And seek for sorrow with thy spectacles?

O! where is faith? O! where is loyalty?

If it be banish'd from the frosty head,

Where shall it find a harbor in the earth?—

Wilt thou go dig a grave to find out war,

And shame thine honorable age with blood?

Why art thou old, and want'st experience?

Or wherefore dost abuse it, if thou hast it?

For shame! in duty bend thy knee to me,

That bows unto the grave with mickle age.

Sal. My lord, I have consider'd with myself

The title of this most renowned duke;

And in my conscience do repute his grace

The rightful heir to England's royal seat.

K. Hen. Hast thou not sworn allegiance unto me?

Sal. I have. [an oath?

K. Hen. Canst thou dispense with heaven for such

Sal. It is great sin to swear unto a sin,

But greater sin to keep a sinful oath.

Who can be bound by any solemn vow

To do a murderous deed, to rob a man,

To force a spotless virgin's chastity,

To reave the orphan of his patrimony,

To wring the widow from her custom'd right,

And have no other reason for this wrong,

<sup>b</sup> The Novils, curls of Warwick, had a bear and a ragged staff for their crest.—Bear-keeper.

<sup>a</sup> Custody; confinement.

But that he was bound by a solemn oath?

Q. Mar. A subtle traitor needs no sophister.

K. Hen. Call Buckingham, and bid him arm himself.

York. Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou I am resolv'd for death, or dignity.

Clif. The first I warrant thee, if dreams prove true.

War. You were best to go to bed, and dream again, To keep thee from the tempest of the field.

Clif. I am resolv'd to bear a greater storm,

Than any thou canst conjure up to-day;

And that I'll write upon thy <sup>a</sup>burgonet,

Might I but know thee by thy household badge.

War. Now, by my father's badge, old Nevil's crest,

The rampant bear chain'd to the ragged staff,

This day I'll wear aloft my burgonet,

(As on a mountain-top the cedar shows,

That keeps his leaves in spite of any storm)

Even to affright thee with the view thereof.

Clif. And from thy burgonet I'll rend thy bear,

And tread it underfoot with all contempt,

Despite the bear-ward that protects the bear.

Y. Clif. And so to arms, victorious father,

To quell the rebels, and their 'complices.

Rich. Fie! charity! for shame! speak not in spite,

For you shall sup with Jesu Christ to-night.

Y. Clif. Foul <sup>b</sup>stigmatic, that's more than thou canst tell.

Rich. If not in heaven, you'll surely sup in hell.

[Exeunt severally.]

SCENE II.—Saint Albans.

Alarums: Exeursions. Enter WARWICK.

War. Clifford of Cumberland! 'tis Warwick calls;
And if thou dost not hide thee from the bear,
Now, when the angry trumpet sounds alarm,
And dead men's cries do fill the empty air,
Clifford, I say, come forth and fight with me!
Proud northern lord, Clifford of Cumberland,
Warwick is hoarse with calling thee to arms.

Enter YORK.

How now, my noble lord! what, all a-foot?

York. The deadly-handed Clifford slew my steed;
But match to match I have encounter'd him,
And made a prey for carrion kites and crows
Even of the bony beast he lov'd so well.

Enter CLIFFORD.

War. Of one or both of us the time is come.

York. Hold, Warwick! seek thee out some other
For I myself must hunt this deer to death. [chace,

War. Then, nobly, York; 'tis for a crown thou
As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to-day, [fight'st.—
It grieves my soul to leave thee unassail'd.

[Exit WARWICK.]

Clif. What seest thou in me, York? why dost thou pause?

York. With thy brave bearing should I be in love,
But that thou art so fast mine enemy. [esteem,

Clif. Nor should thy prowess want praise and
But that 'tis shown ignobly, and in treason.

York. So let it help me now against thy sword,
As I in justice and true right express it.

Clif. My soul and body on the action both!—

York. A dreadful 'lay!—address thee instantly.

Clif. La fin couronne les œuvres.

[They fight, and CLIFFORD falls and dies.]

York. Thus war hath given thee peace, for thou art still.

Peace with his soul, heaven, if it be thy will! [Exit.]

Enter young CLIFFORD.

Y. Clif. Shame and confusion! all is on the rout:

Fear frames disorder, and disorder wounds

Where it should guard. O war! thou son of hell,

Whom angry heavens do make their minister,

Throw in the frozen bosoms of our part

Hot coals of vengeance!—Let no soldier fly:

Ho that is truly dedicate to war,

Hath no self-love; nor he, that loves himself,

Hath not essentially, but by circumstance,

The name of valor.—O! let the vile world end,
[Seeing his Father's body.]

And the <sup>d</sup>premised flames of the last day

Knit earth and heaven together!

Now let the general trumpet blow his blast,

Particularities and petty sounds

To 'cease!—Wast thou ordain'd, dear father,

To lose thy youth in peace, and to 'achieve

The silver livery of <sup>e</sup>advised age,

And, in thy <sup>b</sup>reverence, and thy chair-days, thus

To die in ruffian battle?—Even at this sight,

My heart is turn'd to stone: and while 'tis mine,

It shall be stony. York not our old men spares;

No more will I their babes: tears virginal

Shall be to me even as the dew to fire;

And Beauty, that the tyrant oft reclaima,

Shall to my flaming wrath be oil and flax.

Henceforth I will not have to do with pity:

Meet I an infant of the house of York,

Into as many <sup>i</sup>goblets will I cut it,

As wild Medea young Absyrtus did:

In cruelty will I seek out my fame.

Come, thou new ruin of old Clifford's house;

[Taking up the Body.]

As did Æneas old Anchises bear,

So bear I thee upon my manly shoulders;

But then, Æneas bare a living load,

Nothing so heavy as these woes of mine. [Exit.]

Enter RICHARD PLANTAGENET and SOMERSET, fighting: SOMERSET is slain.

Rich. So, lie thou there;—

For, underneath an alehouse' paltry sign,

The Castle in Saint Albans, Somerset

Hath made the wizard famous in his death.

Sword, hold thy temper; heart, be wrathful still:

Priests pray for enemies, but princes kill. [Exit.]

Alarums: Exeursions. Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, and others, flying.

Q. Mar. Away, my lord! you are slow: for shame, away! [garet, stay,

K. Hen. Can we outrun the heavens? good Mar-

Q. Mar. What are you made of? you'll nor fight,

Now is it manhood, wisdom, and defence, [nor fly:

To give the enemy way; and to secure us

By what we can, which can no more but fly.

[Alarum afar off.]

If you be ta'en, we then should see the bottom

Of all our fortunes; but if we haply scape,

(As well we may, if not through your neglect)

We shall to London get; where you are lov'd,

And where this breach, now in our fortunes made,

May readily be stopp'd.

Enter young CLIFFORD.

Y. Clif. But that my heart's on future mischief set,

I would speak blasphemy ere bid you fly;

But fly you must: uncurable discomfit

Reigns in the hearts of all our present <sup>k</sup>parts.

<sup>e</sup> "To cease," i. e., to put a stop to.—<sup>f</sup> "To achieve," i. e., to arrive at.—<sup>g</sup> Circumspect; cautious.—<sup>h</sup> "In thy reverence," i. e., in that period of life which is entitled to command reverence.—<sup>i</sup> Mouthfuls.—<sup>k</sup> Parts is used for party.

Away, for your relief; and we will live
To see their day, and them our fortune give.
Away, my lord, away! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Fields near Saint Albans.

Alarum: Retreat. Flourish; then enter YORK,
RICHARD PLANTAGENET, WARWICK, and Soldiers, with Drum and Colors.

York. <sup>1</sup>Old Salisbury, who can report of him?
That winter lion, who in rage forgets
Aged contusions and all <sup>2</sup>bruise of time,
And, like a gallant in the <sup>3</sup>bloom of youth,
Repairs him with occasion? this happy day
Is not itself, nor have we won one foot,
If Salisbury be lost.

Rich. My noble father,
Three times to-day I help him to his horse
Three times <sup>a</sup>bestrid him; thrice I led him off,
Persuaded him from any farther act:
But still, where danger was, still there I met him;
And like rich hangings in a homely house,
So was his will in his old feeble body.

<sup>a</sup> "Bestrid him," i. e., defended him when fallen by striding over him.

But, noble as he is, look where he comes.

Enter SALISBURY.

Sal. Now, by my sword, well hast thou fought to-day;

By the mass, so did we all.—I thank you, Richard:
God knows how long it is I have to live,
And it hath pleas'd him, that three times to-day
You have defended me from imminent death.—
Well, lords, we have not got that which we <sup>b</sup>have:
'Tis not enough our foes are this time fled,
Being opposites of such repairing <sup>c</sup>nature.

York. I know our safety is to follow them;
For, as I hear, the king is fled to London,
To call a present court of parliament:
Let us pursue him, ere the writs go forth.—
What says lord Warwick? shall we after them?

War. After them? nay, before them, if we can.
Now, by my hand, lords, 'twas a glorious day:
Saint Albans' battle, won by famous York,
Shall be eterniz'd in all age to come.—
Sound, drums and trumpets!—and to London all;
And more such days as these to us befall! [Exeunt.]

<sup>b</sup> That is, 'We have not secured that which we have acquired.'—<sup>c</sup> That is, 'Being enemies that are likely so soon to rally, and recover themselves from this defeat.'

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. The Parliament-House.

Drums. Some Soldiers of York's party break in. Then, enter the Duke of York, EDWARD, RICHARD, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and others, with white Roses in their Hats.

War. I wonder how the king escap'd our hands.

York. While we pursued the horsemen of the north,
He slyly stole away, and left his men:

Whereat the great lord of Northumberland,

Whose warlike ears could never brook retreat,
Cheer'd up the drooping army; and himself,
Lord Clifford, and lord Stafford, all a-breast,
Charg'd our main battle's front, and, breaking in,
Were by the swords of common soldiers slain.

Edw. Lord Stafford's father, duke of Buckingham,
Is either slain, or wounded dangerously:
I cleft his beaver with a downright blow;
That this is true, father, behold his blood.

[Showing his bloody Sword.
Mont. And, brother, here's the earl of Wiltshire's blood, [To YORK, showing his.

Whom I encounter'd as the battles joined.

Rich. Speak thou for me, and tell them what I did.

[Throwing down the Duke of Somerset's Head.]

York. Richard hath best deserv'd of all my sons.—

But, is your grace dead, my lord of Somerset?

Nor. Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt!

Rich. Thus do I hope to shake king Henry's head!

War. And so do I.—Victorious prince of York,

Before I see thee seated in that throne,

Which now the house of Lancaster usurps,

I vow by heaven these eyes shall never close.

This is the palace of the fearful king,

And this the regal seat: possess it, York;

For this is thine, and not king Henry's heirs'.

York. Assist me, then, sweet Warwick, and I will;

For hither we have broken in by force.

Nor. We'll all assist you: he, that flies, shall die.

York. Thanks, gentle Norfolk.—Stay by me, my lords:—

And, soldiers, stay, and lodge by me this night.

War. And, when the king comes, offer him no violence,

Unless he seek to thrust you out by force.

[They retire.]

York. The queen this day here holds her parliament,

But little thinks we shall be of her council.

By words or blows here let us win our right.

Rich. Arm'd as we are, let's stay within this house.

War. The bloody parliament shall this be call'd,

Unless Plantagenet, duke of York, be king,

And bashful Henry depos'd, whose cowardice

Hath made us by-words to our enemies.

York. Then leave me not, my lords; be resolute, I mean to take possession of my right.

War. Neither the king, nor he that loves him best,

The proudest he that holds up Lancaster,

Dares stir a wing, if Warwick shake his <sup>a</sup> bells.

I'll plant Plantagenet, root him up who dares.—

Resolve thee, Richard; claim the English crown.

[Warwick leads YORK to the Throne, who seats himself.]

[Flourish. Enter King HENRY, CLIFFORD, NORTHUMBERLAND, WESTMORELAND, EXETER, and others, with red Roses in their Hats.]

K. Hen. My lords, look where the sturdy rebels sit, Even in the chair of state! belike, he means,

Back'd by the power of Warwick, that false peer,

To aspire unto the crown, and reign as king.—

Earl of Northumberland, he slew thy father:—

And thine, lord Clifford: <sup>1</sup> you have vow'd revenge

On him, his sons, his favorites, and his friends.

North. If I be not, heavens be reveng'd on me!

Clif. The hope thereof makes Clifford mourn in steel.

[Clown: West. What! shall we suffer this? let's pluck him My heart for anger burns; I cannot brook it.

K. Hen. Be patient, gentle earl of Westmoreland.

Clif. Patience is for poltroons, such as he:

He durst not sit there had your father liv'd.

My gracious lord, here in the parliament

Let us assail the family of York.

North. Well hast thou spoken, cousin: be it so.

K. Hen. Ah! know you not, the city favors them, And they have troops of soldiers at their beck?

Exe. But when the duke is slain, they'll quickly fly.

K. Hen. Far be the thought of this from Henry's heart,

To make a shambles of the parliament-house!

Cousin of Exeter, frowns, words, and threats,

<sup>a</sup> Hawks had sometimes little bells hung on them, perhaps to dare the birds; that is, to fright them from rising.

Shall be the war that Henry means to use.

[They advance to the Duke.]

Thou factious duke of York, descend my throne,

And kneel for grace and mercy at my feet:

I am thy sovereign.

York. I am thine.

[Of York.]

Exe. For shame! come down: he made thee duke

York. 'Twas my inheritance, as the earldom was.

Exe. Thy father was a traitor to the crown.

War. Exeter, thou art a traitor to the crown

In following this usurping Henry.

Clif. Whom should he follow, but his natural king?

War. True, Clifford; that is Richard, duke of York.

K. Hen. And shall I stand, and thou sit in my throne?

York. It must and shall be so. Content thyself.

War. Be duke of Lancaster: let him be king.

West. He is both king and duke of Lancaster; And that the lord of Westmoreland shall maintain.

War. And Warwick shall disprove it. You forget, That we are those which chas'd you from the field,

And slew your fathers, and with colors spread

March'd through the city to the palace gates.

North. Yes, Warwick, I remember it to my grief;

And, by his soul, thou and thy house shall rue it.

West. Plantagenet, of thee, and these thy sons,

Thy kinsmen, and thy friends, I'll have more lives,

Than drops of blood were in my father's veins.

Clif. Urge it no more; lest that instead of words

I send thee, Warwick, such a messenger,

As shall revenge his death before I stir. [threats.

War. Poor Clifford! how I scorn his worthless

York. Will you, we show our title to the crown?

If not, our swords shall plead it in the field.

K. Hen. What title hast thou, traitor, to the crown?

Thy father was, as thou art, duke of York;

Thy grandfather, Roger Mortimer, earl of March.

I am the son of Henry the fifth,

Who made the Dauphin and the French to stoop,

And seiz'd upon their towns and provinces.

War. Talk not of France, <sup>b</sup> sith thou hast lost it all.

K. Hen. The lord protector lost it, and not I:

When I was crown'd, I was but nine months old.

Rich. You are old enough now, and yet, methinks, you lose.

Father, tear the crown from the usurper's head.

Edw. Sweet father, do so: set it on your head.

Mont. Good brother, [To YORK.] as thou lov'st and honor'st arms,

Let's fight it out, and not stand cavilling thus.

Rich. Sound drums and trumpets, and the king

York. Sons, peace! [will fly.

K. Hen. Peace thou, and give king Henry leave to speak.

War. Plantagenet shall speak first: hear him, lords; And be you silent and attentive too,

For he that interrupts him shall not live. [throne,

K. Hen. Think'st thou, that I will leave my kingly

Wherein my grandsire, and my father, sat?

No: first shall war unpeople this my realm;

Ay, and their colors—often borne in France,

And now in England, to our heart's great sorrow,—

Shall be my winding sheet.—Why fittist you, lords?

My title's good, and better far than his.

War. Prove it, Henry, and thou shalt be king.

K. Hen. Henry the fourth by conquest got the crown.

York. 'Twas by rebellion against his king.

K. Hen. I know not what to say: my title's weak.— [Aside.

Tell me, may not a king adopt an heir?

<sup>b</sup> Since.

York. What then?

K. Hen. An if he may, then am I lawful king;
For Richard, in the view of many lords,
Resign'd the crown to Henry the fourth,
Whose heir my father was, and I am his.

York. He rose against him, being his sovereign,
And made him to resign his crown perforce.

War. Suppose, my lords, he did it unconstrain'd,
Think you, 'twere <sup>a</sup> prejudicial to his crown?

Exc. No; for he could not so resign his crown,
But that the next heir should succeed and reign.

K. Hen. Art thou against us, duke of Exeter?

Exc. His is the right, and therefore pardon me.

York. Why whisper you, my lords, and answer not?

Exc. My conscience tells me he is lawful king.

K. Hen. All will revolt from me, and turn to him.

North. Plantagenet, for all the claim thou lay'st,
Think not, that Henry shall be so depos'd.

War. Depos'd he shall be in despite of all.

North. Thou art deceiv'd: 'tis not thy southern
Of Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent, [power,
Which makes thee thus presumptuous and proud,
Can set the duke up in despite of me.

Clif. King Henry, be thy title right or wrong,
Lord Clifford vows to fight in thy defence:

May that ground gape, and swallow me alive,
Where I shall kneel to him that slew my father!

K. Hen. O Clifford, how thy words revive my heart!

York. Henry of Lancaster, resign <sup>1</sup> my crown.—
What matter you, or what conspire you, lords?

War. Do right unto this princely duke of York,
Or I will fill the house with armed men,
And, o'er the chair of state, where now he sits,
Write up his title with usurping blood.

[He stamps, and the Soldiers show themselves.]

K. Hen. My lord of Warwick, hear me but one
Let me for this my life-time reign as king. [word.

York. Confirm the crown to me, and to mine heirs,
And thou shalt reign in quiet while thou liv'st.

K. Hen. I am content: Richard Plantagenet,
Enjoy the kingdom after my decease.

Clif. What wrong is this unto the prince your son?

War. What good is this to England, and himself?

West. Base, fearful, and despairing Henry!

Clif. How hast thou injur'd both thyself and us!

West. I cannot stay to hear these articles.

North. Nor I.

Clif. Come, cousin, let us tell the queen these news.

West. Farewell, faint-hearted and degenerate king,
In whose cold blood no spark of honor bides.

North. Be thou a prey unto the house of York,
And die in bands for this unmanly deed!

Clif. In dreadful war may'st thou be overcome,
Or live in peace, abandon'd, and despis'd!

[Exeunt NORTHUMBERLAND, CLIFFORD, and WESTMORELAND.]

War. Turn this way, Henry, and regard them not.

Exc. They seek <sup>b</sup> revenge, and therefore will not

K. Hen. Ah, Exeter! [yield.

War. Why should you sigh, my lord?

K. Hen. Not for myself, lord Warwick, but my son,
Whom I unnaturally shall disinherit.

But be it as it may, I here entail
The crown to thee, and to thine heirs for ever;

[To YORK.]

Conditionally, that here thou take an oath

To cease this civil war, and, whilst I live,

To honor me as thy king and sovereign;

And neither by treason, nor hostility,

To seek to put me down, and reign thyself.

York. This oath I willingly take, and will perform.

[Coming from the Throne.]

War. Long live king Henry!—Plantagenet, embrace him. [sons!

K. Hen. And long live thou, and these thy forward

York. Now York and Lancaster are reconcil'd.

Exc. Accurs'd be he, that seeks to make them foes!

[Sennet. The Lords come forward.]

York. Farewell, my gracious lord: I'll to my <sup>c</sup> castle.

War. And I'll keep London with my soldiers.

Nor. And I to Norfolk with my followers.

Mont. And I unto the sea, from whence I came.

[*Exeunt YORK, and his Sons, WARWICK, NORFOLK,
MONTAGUE, Soldiers, and Attendants.*]

K. Hen. And I, with grief and sorrow, to the court.

Enter Queen MARGARET and the Prince of WALES.

Exc. Here comes the queen, whose looks <sup>d</sup> bewray her anger:

I'll steal away.

K. Hen. Exeter, so will I. [Going.

Q. Mar. Nay, go not from me; I will follow thee.

K. Hen. Be patient, gentle queen, and I will stay.

Q. Mar. Who can be patient in such extremes?

Ah, wretched man! would I had died a maid,

And never seen thee, never borne thee son,

Seeing thou hast prov'd so unnatural a father!

Hath he deserv'd to lose his birthright thus?

Had'st thou but lov'd him half so well as I,

Or felt that pain which I did for him once,

Or nourish'd him, as I did with my blood,

Thou wouldst have left thy dearest heart-blood there,

Rather than have made that savage duke thine heir,

And disinherited thine only son.

Prince. Father, you cannot disinherit me.

If you be king, why should not I succeed! [son:—

K. Hen. Pardon me, Margaret;—pardon me, sweet
The earl of Warwick, and the duke, enforce'd me.

Q. Mar. Enforce'd thee! art thou king, and wilt be forc'd?

I shame to hear thee speak. Ah, timorous wretch!

Thou hast undone thyself, thy son, and me,

And given unto the house of York such head,

As thou shalt reign but by their sufferance.

T' entail him and his heirs unto the crown,

What is it, but to make thy sepulchre,

And creep into it far before thy time?

Warwick is chancellor, and the lord of Calais;

Stern Faulconbridge commands the narrow seas;

The duke is made protector of the realm;

And yet shalt thou be safe? such safety finds

The trembling lamb, environed with wolves.

Had I been <sup>e</sup> queen, which once I was,

The soldiers should have toss'd me on their pikes,

Before I would have granted to that act;

But thou prefer'st thy life before thine honor:

And seeing thou dost, I here divorce myself,

Both from thy table, Henry, and thy bed,

Until that act of parliament be repeal'd,

Whereby my son is disinherited.

The northern lords, that have forsworn thy colors,

Will follow mine, if once they see them spread;

And spread they shall be, to thy foul disgrace,

And utter ruin of the house of York.

Thus do I leave thee.—Come, son, let's away:

Our army is ready; come, we'll after them.

K. Hen. Stay, gentle Margaret, and hear me speak.

Q. Mar. Thou hast spoke too much already: get thine gone.

K. Hen. Gentle son Edward, thou wilt stay with me?

Q. Mar. Ay, to be murder'd by his enemies.

Prince. When I return with victory from the field,

I'll see your grace; till then, I'll follow her.

Q. Mar. Come, son; away! we may not linger thus.

[Exeunt Queen MARGARET, and the Prince.]

K. Hen. Poor queen! how love to me, and to her son,

Hath made her break out into terms of rage.

Revenge'd may she be on that hateful duke,

Whose haughty spirit, winged with desire,

Will cost my crown, and like an empty eagle

<sup>a</sup>Tire on the flesh of me, and of my son!

The loss of those three <sup>b</sup>lords torments my heart:

I'll write unto them, and entreat them fair.—

Come, cousin; you shall be the messenger.

Exc. And I, I hope, shall reconcile them all.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in Sandal Castle, near Wakefield.

Enter EDWARD, RICHARD, and MONTAGUE.

Rich. Brother, though I be youngest, give me leave.

Edw. No; I can better play the orator.

Mont. But I have reasons strong and forcible.

Enter YORK.

York. Why, how now, sons, and brother! at a strife?

What is your quarrel? how began it first?

Edw. No quarrel, but a slight contention.

York. About what? [us;]

Rich. About that which concerns your grace, and The crown of England, father, which is yours.

York. Mine, boy? not till king Henry be dead.

Rich. Your right depends not on his life, or death.

Edw. Now you are heir, therefore enjoy it now:

By giving the house of Lancaster leave to breathe, It will outrun you, father, in the end.

York. I took an oath that he should quietly reign.

Edw. But for a kingdom any oath may be broken: I would break a thousand oaths to reign one year.

Rich. No; God forbid, your grace should be for-

York. I shall be, if I claim by open war. [sworn.

Rich. I'll prove the contrary, if you'll hear me speak.

York. Thou canst not, son: it is impossible.

Rich. An oath is of no moment, being not took

Before a true and lawful magistrate,

That hath authority over him that swears:

Henry had none, but did usurp the place;

Then, seeing 'twas he that made you to depose,

Your oath, my lord, is vain and frivolous.

Therefore, to arms! And, father, do but think,

How sweet a thing it is to wear a crown,

Within whose circuit lies Elysium,

And all that poets feign of bliss and joy.

Why do we linger thus? I cannot rest,

Until the white rose, that I wear, be dyed

Even in the lukewarm blood of Henry's heart.

York. Richard, enough: I will be king, or die.—

Brother, thou shalt to London presently,

And whet on Warwick to this enterprise.—

Thou, Richard, shalt to the duke of Norfolk,

And tell him privily of our intent.—

You, Edward, shall unto my lord Cobham,

With whom the Kentishmen will willingly rise:

In them I trust; for they are soldiers,

<sup>c</sup>Witty, courteous, liberal, full of spirit.—

While you are thus employ'd, what resteth more,

But that I seek occasion how to rise,

And yet the king not privy to my drift,

Nor any of the house of Lancaster?

Enter a Messenger.

But, stay.—What news? Why com'st thou in such post? [lords,

Mess. The queen, with all the northern earls and <sup>1</sup>Intends here to besiege you in your castle.

She is hard by with twenty thousand men,

And therefore fortify your hold, my lord.

York. Ay, with my sword. What, think'st thou, that we fear them?—

Edward and Richard, you shall stay with me:

My brother Montague shall post to London.

Let noble Warwick, Cobham, and the rest,

Whom we have left protectors of the king,

With powerful policy strengthen themselves,

And trust not simple Henry, nor his oaths.

Mont. Brother, I go; I'll win them, fear it not: And thus most humbly I do take my leave. [Exit.]

Enter Sir JOHN and Sir HUGH MORTIMER.

York. Sir John, and sir Hugh Mortimer, mine

You are come to Sandal in a happy hour; [uncles,

The army of the queen mean to besiege us.

Sir John. She shall not need, we'll meet her in the York. What, with five thousand men? [field.

Rich. Ay, with five hundred, father, for a need.

A woman's general; what should we fear?

[A March afar off.]

Edw. I hear their drums: let's set our men in order,

And issue forth, and bid them battle straight. [great,

York. Five men to twenty!—though the odds be

I doubt not, uncle, of our victory.

Many a battle have I won in France,

When as the enemy hath been ten to one:

Why should I not now have the like success?

[Alarum. Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Plains near Sandal Castle.

Alarums; Excursions. Enter RUTLAND, and his Tutor.

Rut. Ah! whither shall I fly to 'scape their hands? Ah, tutor! look, where bloody Clifford comes.

Enter CLIFFORD, and Soldiers.

Clif. Chaplain, away: thy priesthood saves thy life.

As for the brat of this accursed duke,

Whose <sup>d</sup>father slew my father, he shall die.

Tut. And I, my lord, will bear him company.

Clif. Soldiers, away with him.

Tut. Ah, Clifford! murder not this innocent child, Lest thou be hated both of God and man.

[Exit, forced off by Soldiers.]

Clif. How now! is he dead already? Or, is it fear, That makes him close his eyes:—I'll open them.

Rut. So looks the pent-up lion o'er the wretch

That trembles under his devouring paws:

And so he walks, insulting o'er his prey,

And so he comes to rend his limbs asunder.—

Ah, gentle Clifford! kill me with thy sword,

And not with such a cruel threatening look.

Sweet Clifford! hear me speak before I die:

I am too mean a subject for thy wrath;

Be thou revenge'd on men, and let me live.

Clif. In vain thou speak'st, poor boy: my father's blood [enter.

Hath stopp'd the passage where thy words should

Rut. Then let my father's blood open it again:

He is a man, and, Clifford, cope with him.

Clif. Had I thy brethren here, their lives, and thine,

Were not revenge sufficient for me.

No; if I digg'd up thy forefathers' graves,

<sup>d</sup> "Whose father," i. e., the father of which brat, namely, the Duke of York.

And hung their rotten coffins up in chains,
It could not slake mine ire, nor ease my heart.
The sight of any of the house of York
Is as a fury to torment my soul;
And till I root out their accursed line,
And leave not one alive, I live in hell.
Therefore—

Rut. O! let me pray before I take my death.—
To thee I pray: sweet Clifford, pity me!

Clif. Such pity as my rapier's point affords.

Rut. I never did thee harm: why wilt thou slay me?

Clif. Thy father hath.

Rut.

But 'twas ere I was born.

Thou hast one son, for his sake pity me,
Lest, in revenge thereof, 'sith God is just,
He be as miserably slain as I.

Ah! let me live in prison all my days,
And when I give occasion of offence,
Then let me die, for now thou hast no cause.

Clif. No cause?

Thy father slew my father: therefore, die.

[CLIFFORD stabs him.

Rut. Dû faciant, laudis summa sit ista & tue!

[Dies.

Clif. Plantagenet! I come, Plantagenet!

And this thy son's blood cleaving to my blade,
Shall rust upon my weapon, till thy blood
Congeal'd with this do make me wipe off both.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.—The Same.

Alarums. Enter York.

York. The army of the queen hath got the field:
My 'uncles both are slain in rescuing me;
And all my followers to the eager foe
Turn back, and fly like ships before the wind,
Or lambs pursu'd by hunger-starved wolves.
My sons—God knows, what hath bechuned them,
But this I know,—they have demean'd themselves
Like men born to renown by life or death.
Three times did Richard make a lane to me,
And thrice cried,—“Courage, father! fight it out!”
And full as oft came Edward to my side,
With purple falchion, painted to the hilt
In blood of those that had encounter'd him:
And when the hardiest warriors did retire, Richard cried,—“Charge! and give no foot of ground!”
And cried,—“A crown, or else a glorious tomb!
A sceptre, or an earthly sepulchre!”
With this, we charg'd again; but, out alas!
We 'bodg'd again: as I have seen a swan
With bootless labor swim against the tide,
And spend her strength with over-matching waves.

[A short Alarum within.

Ah, hark! the fatal followers do pursue,
And I am faint, and cannot fly their fury;
And, were I strong, I would not shun their fury.
The sands are number'd that make up my life;
Here must I stay, and here my life must end.

Enter Queen MARGARET, CLIFFORD, NORTHUMBERLAND, and Soldiers.

Come, bloody Clifford,—rough Northumberland,—
I dare your quenchless fury to more rage.
I am your butt, and I abide your shot.

North. Yield to our mercy, proud Plantagenet.

Clif. Ay, to such mercy, as his ruthless arm
With downright payment show'd unto my father.

Now Phaeton hath tumbled from his car,
And made an evening at the noon-tide 'prick.

York. My ashes, as the phoenix, may bring forth
A bird that will revenge upon you all;
And in that hope I throw mine eyes to heaven,
Scorning whate'er you can afflict me with.

Why come you not?—what! multitudes, and fear?

Clif. So cowards fight when they can fly no farther;
So doves do peck the falcon's piercing talons;
So desperate thieves, all hopeless of their lives,
Breathe out invectives 'gainst the officers.

York. O, Clifford! but bethink thee once again,
And in thy thought o'er-run my former time;
And, if thou canst for blushing, view this face,
And bite thy tongue, that slanders him with cowardice,
Whose frown hath made thee faint and fly ere this.

Clif. I will not bandy with thee word for word,
But buckle with thee blows, twice two for one.

Q. Mar. Hold, valiant Clifford! for a thousand
I would prolong awhile the traitor's life.— [Causes Wrath makes him deaf: speak thou, Northumberland.

North. Hold, Clifford! do not honor him so much
To prick thy finger, though to wound his heart:
What valor were it, when a cur doth grin,
For one to thrust his hand between his teeth,
When he might spurn him with his foot away?
It is war's prize to take all vantages,
And ten to one is no impeach of valor.

[They lay hands on York, who struggles.

Clif. Ay, ay; so strives the woodcock with the gin.

North. So doth the coney struggle in the net.

[YORK is taken prisoner.

York. So triumph thieves upon their conquer'd booty;

So true men yield, with robbers so o'er-match'd.

North. What would your grace have done unto him now? [Berland,

Q. Mar. Brave warriors, Clifford and Northum-ber, make him stand upon this molehill here,

That 'raught at mountains with outstretched arms,
Yet parted but the shadow with his hand.—
What! was it you, that would be England's king?
Was't you that revell'd in our parliament,
And made a preachment of your high descent?
Where are your mess of sons to back you now,
The wanton Edward, and the lusty George?
And where's that valiant crook-back prodigy,
Dicky your boy, that, with his grumbling voice,
Was wont to cheer his dad in mutinies?
Or, with the rest, where is your darling Rutland?
Look, York: I stain'd this napkin with the blood
That valiant Clifford with his rapier's point
Made issue from the bosom of the boy;
And, if thine eyes can water for his death,
I give thee this to dry thy cheeks withal.

[Throwing it.

Alas, poor York! but that I hate thee deadly,
I should lament thy miserable state.

I pry'thee, grieve to make me merry, York:
What, hath thy fiery heart so parch'd thine entrails,
That not a tear can fall for Rutland's death?
Why art thou patient, man? thou should'st be mad;
And I, to make thee mad, do mock thee thus.
Stamp, rave, and fret, that I may sing and dance.
Thou would'st be fce'd, I see, to make me sport:
York cannot speak, unless he wear a crown.—
A crown for York!—and, lords, bow low to him.
Hold you his hands, whilst I do set it on.—

[Putting a paper Crown on his Head.

* Since.—“Heaven grant that this may be your greatest boast.”—Ovid. Epist.—“My nuckles,” i. e., Sir John and Sir
Hugh Mortimer.—“Bodg'd,” i. e., boggled; failed.

* That is, the noontide point on the dial.—“Raught,” i. e., reached.—* Handkerchief.

Ay, marry, sir, now looks he like a king.
 Ay, this is he that took king Henry's chair;
 And this is he was his adopted heir.—
 But how is it, that great Plantagenet
 Is crown'd so soon, and broke his solemn oath?
 As I bethink me, you should not be king,
 Till our king Henry had shook hands with death.
 And will you <sup>a</sup>pale your head in Henry's glory,
 And rob his temples of the diadem,
 Now in his life, against your holy oath?
 O! 'tis a fault too, too unpardonable.—
 Off with the crown; and, with the crown, his head!
 And whilst we breathe take time to <sup>b</sup>do him dead.
Clif. That is my office for my father's sake.
Q. Mar. Nay, stay; let's hear the orisons he makes.
York. She-wolf of France, but worse than wolves
 of France;

Whose tongue more poisons than the adder's tooth,
 How ill-beseeming is it in thy sex,
 To triumph, like an Amazonian trull,
 Upon thy woes whom fortune captivates?
 But that thy face is, visor-like, unchanging,
 Made impudent with use of evil deeds,
 I would essay, proud queen, to make thee blush:
 To tell thee whence thou cam'st, of whom deriv'd,
 Were shame enough to shame thee, wert thou not shameless.

Thy father bears the <sup>c</sup>type of king of Naples,
 Of both the Sicils, and Jerusalem,
 Yet not so wealthy as an English yeoman.
 Hath that poor monarch taught thee to insult?
 It needs not, nor it boots thee not, proud queen;
 Unless the adage must be verified,
 That beggars mounted run their horse to death.
 'Tis beauty that doth oft make women proud;
 But, God he knows, thy share thereof is small.
 'Tis virtue that doth make them most admir'd;
 The contrary doth make thee wonder'd at.
 'Tis <sup>d</sup>government that makes them seem divine;
 The want thereof makes thee abominable.
 Thou art as opposite to every good,
 As the Antipodes are unto us,
 Or as the south to the <sup>e</sup>septentrion.
 O, tiger's heart, wrapp'd in a woman's hide!
 How could'st thou drain the life-blood of the child,
 To bid the father wipe his eyes withal,
 And yet be seen to bear a woman's face?
 Women are soft, mild, pitiful, and flexible;
 Thou stern, obdurate, flinty, rough, remorseless.
 Bid'st thou me rage? why, now thou hast thy wish:
 Would'st have me weep? why, now thou hast thy
 For raging wind blows up incessant showers, [will;
 And, when the rage allays, the rain begins.—
 These tears are my sweet Rutland's obsequies,
 And every drop cries vengeance for his death,
 'Gainst thee, fell Clifford, and thee, false French-
 woman.

North. Beshrew me, but his <sup>f</sup>passions move me so,
 That hardly can I check my eyes from tears.

York. That face of his
 The hungry cannibals would not have touch'd,
 Would not have stain'd <sup>1</sup>the rose's hues with blood:
 But you are more inhuman, more inexorable,
 O! ten times more, than tigers of Hyrcania.
 See, ruthless queen, a hapless father's tears:
 This cloth thou dipp'st in blood of my sweet boy,
 And I with tears do wash the blood away.
 Keep thou the napkin, and go boast of this;

<sup>a</sup> Impale; encircle.—<sup>b</sup> "To do him dead," i. e., to kill him.
 —<sup>c</sup> "The type," i. e., the crown; the symbol of royalty.—

And if thou tell'st the heavy story right,
 Upon my soul, the hearers will shed tears;—
 Yea, even my foes will shed fast-falling tears,
 And say,—“Alas! it was a piteous deed.”—
 There, take the crown, and with the crown my curse;
 And in thy need such comfort come to thee,
 As now I reap at thy too cruel hand!—
 Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the world:
 My soul to heaven, my blood upon your heads!
North. Had he been slaughter-man to all my kin,
 I should not, for my life, but weep with him,
 To see how inly sorrow gripes his soul. [Berland?
Q. Mar. What! weeping-ripe, my lord Northumberland? Think but upon the wrong he did us all,
 And that will quickly dry thy melting tears.

Clif. Here's for my oath; here's for my father's death. [Stabbing him.

Q. Mar. And here's to right our gentle-hearted king. [Stabbing him.

York. Open thy gate of mercy, gracious God!
 My soul flies through these wounds to seek out thee. [Dies.

Q. Mar. Off with his head, and set it on York
 So York may overlook the town of York. [Gates: [Flourish. Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Plain near Mortimer's Cross in Herefordshire.

A March. Enter EDWARD and RICHARD, with their Power.

Edw. I wonder, how our princely father 'scap'd;
 Or whether he be 'scap'd away, or no,
 From Clifford's and Northumberland's pursuit.
 Had he been ta'en, we should have heard the news;
 Had he been slain, we should have heard the news;
 Or had he 'scap'd, methinks, we should have heard
 The happy tidings of his good escape.—
 How fares my brother? why is he so sad?

Rich. I cannot joy, until I be resolv'd
 Where our right valiant father is become.
 I saw him in the battle range about,
 And watch'd him how he singled Clifford forth.
 Methought, he bore him in the thickest troop,
 As doth a lion in a herd of <sup>1</sup>neat:

Or as a bear encompass'd round with dogs,
 Who having pinch'd a few, and made them cry,
 The rest stand all aloof, and bark at him.
 So far'd our father with his enemies;
 So fled his enemies my warlike father:
 Methinks, 'tis prize enough to be his son.
 See, how the morning opens her golden gates,
 And takes her farewell of the glorious <sup>2</sup>sun:
 How well resembles it the prime of youth,
 Trimm'd like a youngker, prancing to his love!

Edw. Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three suns?

Rich. Three glorious suns, each one a perfect <sup>3</sup>sun,
 Not separated with the <sup>4</sup>racking clouds,
 But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky.
 See, see! they join, embrace, and seem to kiss,
 As if they vow'd some league inviolable:
 Now are they but one lamp, one light, one sun!
 In this the <sup>5</sup>heavens figure some event.

<sup>a</sup> "Bore him," i. e., demeaned himself.—<sup>b</sup> "A herd of neat," i. e., of neat cattle, cows, oxen, &c.—<sup>c</sup> Aurora takes for a time her farewell of the sun, when she dismisses him to his diurnal course.—<sup>d</sup> This circumstance is mentioned by the historians Hall and Holinshed.—<sup>e</sup> "The racking clouds,"
 i. e., the clouds in rapid tumultuary motion.

Edw. 'Tis wondrous strange; the like yet never I think, it cites us, brother, to the field, [heard of. That we, the sons of brave Plantagenet, Each one already blazing by our <sup>2</sup>meeds, Should, notwithstanding, join our lights together, And over-shine the earth, as this the world. Whate'er it bodes, henceforward will I bear Upon my target three fair shining suns. [speak it; Rich. Nay, bear three daughters: by your leave I You love the breeder better than the male.

Enter a Messenger in haste.

But what art thou, whose heavy looks foretel Some dreadful story hanging on thy tongue?

Mess. Ah! one that was a woful looker on, When as the noble duke of York was slain, Your princely father, and my loving lord.

Edw. O! speak no more, for I have heard too much.

Rich. Say, how he died, for I will hear it all.

Mess. Environed he was with many foes; And stood against them, as the <sup>1</sup>hope of Troy Against the Greeks, that would have enter'd Troy. But Hercules himself must yield to odds; And many strokes, though with a little axe, How down, and fell the hardest-timber'd oak. By many hands your father was subdu'd; But only slaughter'd by the ireful arm Of unrelenting Clifford, and the queen, Who crown'd the gracious duke in high despite; Laugh'd in his face; and, when with grief he wept, The ruthless queen gave him, to dry his cheeks, A napkin steeped in the harmless blood Of sweet young Rutland, by rough Clifford slain: And, after many scorns, many foul taunts, They took his head, and on the gates of York They set the same; and there it doth remain, The saddest spectacle that e'er I view'd.

Edw. Sweet duke of York! our prop to lean upon, Now thou art gone, we have no staff, no stay. O Clifford! boisterous Clifford! thou hast slain The flower of Europe for his chivalry; And treacherously hast thou vanquish'd him, For hand to hand he would have vanquish'd thee. Now, my soul's palace is become a prison: Ah! would she break from hence, that this my body Might in the ground be closed up in rest, For never henceforth shall I joy again; Never, O! never, shall I see more joy.

Rich. I cannot weep, for all my body's moisture Scarce serves to quench my furnace-burning heart; Nor can my tongue unload my heart's great burden, For self-same wind, that I should speak withal, Is <sup>1</sup>and ting coars than live an <sup>1</sup>ay least, And bura me up with flames that tears would quench. To weep is to make less the depth of grief. Tears, then, for babes; blows, and revenge, for me!—Richard, I bear thy name; I'll venge thy death, Or die renowned by attempting it. [thee;

Edw. His name that valiant duke hath left with His dukedom and his chair with me <sup>1</sup>are left.

Rich. Nay, if thou be that princely eagle's bird, Show thy descent by gazing 'gainst the sun: For chair and dukedom, throne and kingdom say; Either that is thine, or else thou wert not his.

March. Enter WARWICK and MONTAGUE, with their Army.

War. How now, fair lords! What fare? what news abroad?

Rich. Great lord of Warwick, if we should recount Our baleful news, and at each word's deliverance, Stab poniards in our flesh till all were told,

The words would add more anguish than the wounds. O, valiant lord! the duke of York is slain.

Edw. O, Warwick! Warwick! that Plantagenet, Which held thee dearly as his soul's redemption, Is by the stern lord Clifford done to death.

War. Ten days ago I drown'd these news in tears; And now, to add more measure to your woes, I come to tell you things <sup>2</sup>sith then befallen. After the bloody fray at Wakefield fought, Where your brave father breath'd his latest gasp, Tidings, as swiftly as the posts could run, Were brought me of your loss, and his depart. I, then in London, keeper of the king, Muster'd my soldiers, gather'd flocks of friends, March'd towards Saint Albans to intercept the queen, Bearing the king in my behalf along; For by my scouts I was advis'd, That she was coming with a full intent To dash our late decree in parliament, Touching king Henry's oath, and your succession. Short tale to make,—we at Saint Albans met; Our battles join'd, and both sides fiercely fought; But, whether 'twas the coldness of the king, Who look'd full gently on his warlike queen, That robb'd my soldiers of their heated spleen, Or whether 'twas report of her success, Or more than common fear of Clifford's rigor, Who thunders to his captives blood and death, I cannot judge; but, to conclude with truth, Their weapons like to lightning came and went: Our soldiers', like the night-owl's lazy flight, Or like a lazy thrasher with a fail, Fell gently down, as if they struck their friends. I cheer'd them up with justice of our cause, With promise of high pay, and great rewards, But all in vain; they had no heart to fight, And we in this no hope to win the day; So that we fled: the king unto the queen. Lord George your brother, Norfolk, and myself, In haste, poste-haste, are come to join with you; For in the marches here, we heard, you were, Making another head to fight again. [wick!

Edw. Where is the duke of Norfolk, gentle War—And when came George from Burgundy to England?

War. Some six miles off the duke is with the And for your brother, he was lately sent [soldiers; From your kind aunt, duchess of Burgundy, With aid of soldiers to this needful war. [led:

Rich. 'Twas odds, belike, when valiant Warwick Oft have I heard his praises in pursuit, But ne'er, till now, his scandal of retire.

War. Nor now my scandal, Richard, dost thou hear; For thou shalt know, this strong right hand of mine Can pluck the diadem from faint Henry's head, And wring the awful sceptre from his fist, Were he as famous, and as bold in war, As he is fam'd for mildness, peace, and prayer.

Rich. I know it well, lord Warwick; blame me not: 'Tis love, I bear thy glories, makes me speak.

But in this troublous time what's to be done? Shall we go throw away our coats of steel, And wrap our bodies in black mourning gowns, Numbering our Ave-Maries with our beads?

Or shall we on the helmets of our foes Tell our devotion with revengeful arms?

If for the last, say—Ay, and to it, lords. [out,

War. Why, therefore Warwick came to seek you And therefore comes my brother Montague.

Attend me, lords. The proud insulting queen, With Clifford, and the haught Northumberland, And of their feather many more proud birds,

Have wrought the easy-melting king like wax.
He swore consent to your succession,
His oath enrolled in the parliament;
And now to London all the crew are gone,
To frustrate both his oath, and what beside
May make against the house of Lancaster:
Their power, I think, is thirty thousand strong.
Now, if the help of Norfolk, and myself,
With all the friends that thou, brave earl of March,
Amongst the loving Welshmen canst procure,
Will but amount to five and twenty thousand,
Why, Via! to London will we march amain,
And once again bestride our foaming steeds,
And once again cry—Charge! upon our foes;
But never once again turn back, and fly. [speak.

Rich. Ay, now, methinks, I hear great Warwick
Ne'er may he live to see a sunshine day,
That cries—Retire, if Warwick bid him stay.

Edw. Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder will I lean;
And when thou fail'st, (as God forbid the hour!)
Must Edward fall, which peril heaven forefend!

War. No longer earl of March, but duke of York:
The next degree is, England's royal throne;
For king of England shalt thou be proclaim'd
In every borough as we pass along;
And he that throws not up his cap for joy,
Shall for the fault make forfeit of his head.
King Edward,—valiant Richard,—Montague,—
Stay we no longer dreaming of renown,
But sound the trumpets, and about our task.

Rich. Then, Clifford, were thy heart as hard as steel,
As thou hast shown it flinty by thy deeds,
I come to pierce it, or to give thee mine.

Edw. Then strike up, drums!—God, and Saint George, for us!

Enter a Messenger.

War. Now now! what news?

Mess. The duke of Norfolk sends you word by me,
The queen is coming with a puissant host,
And craves your company for speedy counsel.

War. Why then, it a sorts: brave warriors, let's away. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before York.

Flourish. Enter King HENRY, Queen MARGARET, the Prince of WALES, CLIFFORD, and NORTHUMBERLAND, with Drums and Trumpets.

Q. Mar. Welcome, my lord, to this brave town of Yonder's the head of that arch-enemy, [York.
That sought to be encompass'd with your crown:
Doth not the object cheer your heart, my lord?

K. Hen. Ay, as the rocks cheer them that fear their wreck:

To see this sight, it irks my very soul.—
Withhold revenge, dear God! 'tis not my fault;
Not wittingly have I infing'd my vow.

Clif. My gracious liege, this too much lenity
And harmful pity, must be laid aside.
To whom do lions cast their gentle looks?
Not to the beast that would usurp their den.
Whose hand is that the forest bear doth lick?
Not his that spoils her young before her face.
Who 'scapes the lurking serpent's mortal sting?
Not he that sets his foot upon her back.
The smallest worm will turn, being trodden on;
And doves will peck in safeguard of their brood.
Ambitious York did level at thy crown;
Thou smiling, while he knit his angry brows:
He, but a duke, would have his son a king,
And raise his issue like a loving sire;

* "It sorts," i. e., it falls out right; things are as they should be.

Thou, being a king, bless'd with a goodly son,
Didst yield consent to disinherit him,
Which argued thee a most unloving father.
Unreasonable creatures feed their young;
And though man's face be fearful to their eyes,
Yet, in protection of their tender ones,
Who hath not seen them, even with those wings
Which sometime they have us'd in fearful flight,
Make war with him that climb'd unto their nest,
Offering their own lives in their young's defence?
For shame, my liege! make them your precedent.
Were it not pity, that this goodly boy
Should lose his birthright by his father's fault,
And long hereafter say unto his child,—
"What my great-grandfather and grandsire got,
My careless father fondly gave away."

Ah! what a shame were this. Look on the boy;
And let his manly face, which promiseth
Successful fortune, steel thy melting heart
To hold thine own, and leave thine own with him.

K. Hen. Full well hath Clifford play'd the orator, Inferring arguments of mighty force.

But, Clifford, tell me, didst thou never hear,
That things ill got had ever bad success?

And happy always was it for that son,
Whose father for his hoarding went to hell?

I'll leave my son my virtuous deeds behind,
And would my father had left me no more;

For all the rest is held at such a rate,
As brings a thousand-fold more care to keep,
Than in possession any jot of pleasure.—

Ah, cousin York! would thy best friends did know,
How it doth grieve me that thy head is here!

Q. Mar. My lord, cheer up your spirits: our foes are nigh,

And this soft carriage makes your followers faint.
You promis'd knighthood to our forward son:

Unsheath your sword, and dub him presently.—
Edward, kneel down.

K. Hen. Edward Plantagenet, arise a knight;
And learn this lesson,—Draw thy sword in right.

Prince. My gracious father, by your kingly leave,
I'll draw it as apparent to the crown,
And in that quarrel use it to the death.

Clif. Why, that is spoken like a toward prince.
Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Royal commanders, be in readiness:
For, with a band of thirty thousand men,
Comes Warwick, backing of the duke of York;

And, in the towns, as they do march along,
Proclaims him king, and many fly to him.

<sup>d</sup> Darraign your battle, for they are at hand.

Clif. I would, your highness would depart the field:
The queen hath best success when you are absent.

Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord, and leave us to our fortune. [I'll stay.

K. Hen. Why, that's my fortune too; therefore North. Be it with resolution, then, to fight.

Prince. My royal father, cheer these noble lords,
And hearten those that fight in your defence.

Unsheath your sword, good father: cry, "Saint George!"

March. Enter EDWARD, GEORGE, RICHARD, WAR-WICK, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, and Soldiers.

Edw. Now, perjur'd Henry, wilt thou kneel for
And set thy diadem upon my head, [grace,

<sup>b</sup> Foolishly.—<sup>c</sup> The king quotes two proverbs; the one—
'Ill-gotten goods never prosper'; the other—'Happy the child whose father went to the devil.' This last he must be supposed to use interrogatively, as disputing the truth of it:
'Was it always happy for that son?' &c. This interpretation sets the king's reasoning right.—<sup>d</sup> 'Darraign your battle,' i. e., arrange your order of battle.

Or bide the mortal fortune of the field?

Q. Mar. Go, rate thy minions, proud insulting boy:
Becomes it thee to be thus bold in terms,
Before thy sovereign, and thy lawful king?

Ede. I am his king, and he should bow his knee:
I was adopted heir by his consent;
Since when, his oath is broke; for, as I hear,
You, that are king, though he do wear the crown,
Have caus'd him, by new act of parliament,
To blot out me, and put his own son in.

Clif. And reason too:

Who should succeed the father, but the son?

Rich. Are you there, butcher?—O! I cannot speak.

Clif. Ay, crook-back; here I stand, to answer thee,
Or any he the proudest of thy sort. [not?]

Rich. 'Twas you that kill'd young Rutland, was it

Clif. Ay, and old York, and yet not satisfied.

Rich. For God's sake, lords, give signal to the fight.

War. What say'st thou, Henry, wilt thou yield the crown?

[dare you speak?]

Q. Mar. Why, how now, long-tongu'd Warwick!

When you and I met at Saint Albans last,

Your legs did better service than your hands.

War. Then 'twas my turn to fly, and now 'tis thine.

Clif. You said so much before, and yet you fled.

War. 'Twas not your valor, Clifford, drove me thence. [stay.]

North. No, nor your manhood that durst make you

Rich. Northumberland, I hold thee reverently.

Break off the parley; for scarce I can refrain

The execution of my big-swoln heart

Upon that Clifford, that cruel child-killer.

Clif. I slew thy father: call'st thou him a child?

Rich. Ay, like a dastard, and a treacherous coward,
As thou didst kill our tender brother Rutland;
But ere sun-set I'll make thee curse the deed.

K. Hen. Have done with words, my lords, and hear me speak. [lips.]

Q. Mar. Defy them then, or else hold close thy

K. Hen. I pry thee, give no limits to my tongue:

I am a king, and privileg'd to speak. [here,]

Clif. My liege, the wound, that bred this meeting
Cannot be cur'd by words; therefore be still.

Rich. Then, executioner, unsheath thy sword.

By him that made us all, I am resolv'd,

That Clifford's manhood lies upon his tongue.

Ede. Say, Henry, shall I have my right, or no?

A thousand men have broke their fasts to-day,

That ne'er shall dine, unless thou yield the crown.

War. If thou deny, their blood upon thy head;

For York in justice puts his armor on. [right,]

Prince. If that be right, which Warwick says is
There is no wrong, but every thing is right.

Rich. Whoever got thee, there thy mother stands;

For, well I wot, thou hast thy mother's tongue.

Q. Mar. But thou art neither like thy sire, nor
But like a foul mis-shapen stigmatic, [dam:]

Mark'd by the destinies to be avoided,

As venom toads, or lizards' dreadful stings.

Rich. Iron of Naples, hid with English gilt,

Whose father bears the title of a king,

(As if a channel should be call'd the sea) [traught,

Sham'st thou not, knowing whence thou art ex-
To let thy tongue detect thy base-born heart?

Ede. A wisp of straw were worth a thousand crowns,

To make this shameless callat know herself.—

Helen of Greece was fairer far than thou,

Although thy husband may be Menelaus;

And ne'er was Agamemnon's brother wrong'd

By that false woman, as this king by thee.

His father revell'd in the heart of France,

And tam'd the king, and made the Dauphin stoop;

And, had he match'd according to his state,

He might have kept that glory to this day;

But, when he took a beggar to his bed,

And grac'd thy poor sire with his bridal day,

Even then that sunshine brew'd a shower for him,

That wash'd his father's fortunes forth of France,

And heap'd sedition on his crown at home.

For what bath broach'd this tumult, but thy pride?

Hadst thou been meek, our title still had slept,

And we, in pity of the gentle king,

Had slipp'd our claim until another age. [spring,]

Geo. But when we saw our sunshine made thy

And that thy summer bred us no increase,

We set the axe to thy usurping root:

And though the edge hath something hit ourselves,

Yet, know thou, since we have begun to strike,

We'll never leave, till we have hewn thee down,

Or bath'd thy growing with our heated bloods.

Ede. And in this resolution I defy thee;

Not willing any longer conference,

Since thou deniest the gentle king to speak.—

Sound trumpets!—let our bloody colors wave,

And either victory, or a welcome grave.

Q. Mar. Stay, Edward.

Ede. No, wrangling woman; we'll no longer stay;

These words will cost ten thousand lives to-day.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Field of Battle near Towton.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter WARWICK.

War. Forspent with toil, as runners with a race,

I lay me down a little while to breathe;

For strokes receiv'd, and many blows repaid,

Have robb'd my strong-knit sinews of their strength,

And, spite of spite, needs must I rest awhile.

Enter EDWARD, running.

Ede. Smile, gentle heaven, or strike, ungentle death;

For this world frowns, and Edward's sun is clouded.

War. How now, my lord! what hap? what hope of good?

Enter GEORGE.

Geo. Our hap is loss, our hope but sad despair:

Our ranks are broke, and ruin follows us.

What counsel give you? whither shall we fly?

Ede. Bootless is flight; they follow us with wings,
And weak we are, and cannot shun pursuit.

Enter RICHARD.

Rich. Ah, Warwick! why hast thou withdrawn thyself?

Thy brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk,

Broach'd with the steely point of Clifford's lance;

And, in the very pangs of death he cried,

Like to a dismal clangor heard from afar,

"Warwick, revenge! brother, revenge my death!"

So, underneath the bellies of their steeds,

That stain'd their fetlocks in his smoking blood,

The noble gentleman gave up the ghost. [blood:]

War. Then let the earth be drunken with our I'll kill my horse, because I will not fly.

* A callat was a lewd woman; but a term often given to a scold.—<sup>b</sup> "May be Menelaus," i. e., may be a cuckold.—<sup>c</sup> Spent; tired.

Why stand we like soft-hearted women here,
Wailing our losses, whiles the foe doth rage,
And look <sup>a</sup>upon, as if the tragedy
Were play'd in jest by counterfoiting actors?
Here on my knee I vow to God above, <sup>1</sup>[Kneeling.
I'll never pause again, never stand still,
Till either death hath clos'd these eyes of mine,
Or fortune given me measure of revenge.

Edw. O Warwick! I do bend my knee with thine;
<sup>2</sup>[Kneeling.

And in this vow do chain my soul to thine.
And, ere my knee rise from the earth's cold face,
I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to thee,
Thou setter up and plucker down of kings;
Beseeching thee,—if with thy will it stands,
That to my foes this body must be prey,—
Yet that thy brazen gates of heaven may ope,
And give sweet passage to my sinful soul.—

<sup>3</sup>[Rising.
Now, lords, take leave until we meet again,
Where'er it be, in heaven, or in earth. [Warwick,
Rich. Brother, give me thy hand;—and, gentle
Let me embrace thee in my weary arms.
I, that did never weep, now melt with woe,
That winter should cut off our spring-time so.

War. Away, away! Once more, sweet lords, farewell.

Gco. Yet let us all together to our troops,
And give them leave to fly that will not stay,
And call them pillars that will stand to us;
And if we thrive promise them such rewards
As victors <sup>4</sup>wore at the Olympian games.
This may plant courage in their <sup>b</sup>quailing breasts;
For yet is hope of life, and victory.—

<sup>c</sup>Foreslow no longer; make we hence again.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same. Another Part of the Field.

Excursions. Enter RICHARD and CLIFFORD.

Rich. Now, Clifford, I have singled thee alone.
Suppose, this arm is for the duke of York,
And this for Rutland; both bound to revenge,
Wert thou environ'd with a brazen wall.

Clif. Now, Richard, I am with thee here alone.
This is the hand that stabb'd thy father York,
And this the hand that slew thy brother Rutland;
And here's the heart that triumphs in their death,
And cheers these hands, that slew thy sire and brother,
To execute the like upon thyself:
And so, have at thee.

[They fight. WARWICK enters; CLIFFORD flies.
Rich. Nay, Warwick, single out some other chase;
For I myself will hunt this wolf to death. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter King HENRY.

K. Hen. This battle fares like to the morning's war,
When dying clouds contend with growing light;
What time the shepherd, blowing of his nails,
Can neither call it perfect day, nor night.
Now sways it this way, like a mighty sea
Forc'd by the tide to combat with the wind;
Now sways it that way, like the self-same sea
Forc'd to retire by fury of the wind;
Sometime, the flood prevails; and then, the wind;
Now, one the better, then, another best;
Both tugging to be victors, breast to breast,

Yet neither conqueror, nor conquered:
So is the equal poise of this fell war.
Here, on this molehill, will I sit me down.
To whom God will, there be the victory;
For Margaret my queen, and Clifford too,
Have clad me from the battle, swearing both,
They prosper best of all when I am thence.
Would I were dead! if God's good will were so;
For what is in this world but grief and woe!

O God! methinks, it were a happy life,—
To be no better than a homely swain;
To sit upon a hill, as I do now,
To carve out dials quaintly, point by point,
Thereby to see the minutes how they run;
How many make the hour full complete,
How many hours bring about the day,
How many days will finish up the year,
How many years a mortal man may live.
When this is known, then to divide the times:
So many hours must I tend my flock;
So many hours must I take my rest;
So many hours must I contemplate;
So many hours must I sport myself;
So many days my ewes have been with young;
So many weeks ere the poor fools will yearn;
So many <sup>b</sup>months ere I shall shear the fleece:
So minutes, hours, days, months and years,
Pass'd over to the end they were created,
Would bring white hairs unto a quiet grave.
Ah, what a life were this! how sweet! how lovely!
Gives not the hawthorn bush a sweeter shade
To shepherds looking on their silly sheep,
Than doth a rich embroider'd canopy
To kings that fear their subjects' treachery?
O! yes it doth; a thousand fold it doth.
And to conclude,—the shepherd's homely curds,
His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle,
His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade,
All which secure and sweetly he enjoys,
Is far beyond a prince's delicacies,
His viands sparkling in a golden cup,
His body couched in a curious bed,
When care, mistrust, and treason wait on him.

Alarum. Enter a Son that hath killed his Father,
with the dead Body.

Son. Ill blows the wind that profits no body.
This man whom hand to hand I slew in fight,
May be possessed with some store of crowns;
And I, that haply take them from him now,
May yet ere night yield both my life and them
To some man else, as this dead man <sup>6</sup>to me.—
Who's this?—O God! it is my father's face,
Whom in this conflict I unware have kill'd.
O heavy times, begetting such events!
From London by the king was I press'd forth;
My father, being the earl of Warwick's man,
Came on the part of York, press'd by his master;
And I, who at his hands receiv'd my life,
Have by my hands of life bereaved him.—
Pardon me, God, I knew not what I did;
—And pardon, father, for I knew not thee.—
My tears shall wipe away these bloody marks,
And no more words, till they have flow'd their fill.

K. Hen. O piteous spectacle! O bloody times!
While lions war and battle for their dens,
Poor harmless lambs abide their enmity.
Weep, wretched man, I'll aid thee, tear for tear;
And let our hearts, and eyes, like civil war,
Be blind with tears, and break o'ercharg'd with grief.

Enter a Father, who has killed his Son, <sup>7</sup>bearing the Body.

Fath. Thou that so stoutly hast resisted me,

<sup>a</sup> "Look upon," i. e., look on, as mere spectators.—<sup>b</sup> Dejected; fainting.—<sup>c</sup> To foreslow is to delay, to loiter.

Give me thy gold, if thou hast any gold,
 For I have bought it with an hundred blows.—
 But let me see:—is this 'a foe-man's face?
 Ah, no, no, no! it is mine only son!—
 Ah, boy! if any life be left in thee,
 Throw up thine eye: see, see, what showers arise,
 Blown with the windy tempest of my heart
 Upon thy wounds, that kill mine eye and heart!—
 O, pity, God, this miserable age!—
 What 'a stratagems, how fell, how butcherly,
 Erroneous, mutinous, and unnatural,
 This deadly quarrel daily doth beget!—
 O boy! thy father gave thee life too soon,
 And hath bereft thee of thy life too late. [grief!]

K. Hen. Woe above woe! grief more than common
 O, that my death would stay these ruthless deeds!
 O, pity, pity! gentle heaven, pity!—
 The red rose and the white are on his face,
 The fatal colors of our striving houses:
 The one his purple blood right well resembles,
 The other his pale cheeks, methinks, presenteth;
 Wither one rose, and let the other flourish!
 If you contend, a thousand lives must wither.

Son. How will my mother, for a father's death,
 Take 'on with me, and ne'er be satisfied?

Fath. How will my wife, for slaughter of my son,
 Shed seas of tears, and ne'er be satisfied?

K. Hen. How will the country, for these woful chances,

°Misthink the king, and not be satisfied?

Son. Was ever son so rued a father's death?

Fath. Was ever father so bemoan'd a son?

K. Hen. Was ever king so griev'd for subjects' woe?

Much is your sorrow; mine, ten times so much.

Son. I'll bear thee hence, where I may weep my fill.
 [Exit with the Body.]

Fath. These arms of mine shall be thy winding-sheet;

My heart, sweet boy, shall be thy sepulchre,
 For from my heart thine image ne'er shall go.
 My sighing breast shall be thy funeral bell;
 And so 'a obsequious will thy father be,
 'E'en for the loss of thee, having no more,
 As Priam was for all his valiant sons.
 I'll bear thee hence; and let them fight that will,
 For I have murder'd where I should not kill.

[Exit with the Body.]

K. Hen. Sad-hearted men, much overgone with Here sits a king more woful than you are. [care,

*Alarums: Excursions. Enter Queen MARGARET,
 Prince of WALES, and EXETER.*

Prince. Fly, father, fly! for all your friends are fled,
 And Warwick rages like a chafed bull.
 Away! for death doth hold us in pursuit.

Q. Mar. Mount you, my lord: towards Berwick post again.

Edward and Richard, like a brace of greyhounds,
 Having the fearful flying hare in sight,
 With fiery eyes, sparkling for very wrath,
 And bloody steel grasp'd in their ireful hands,
 Are at our backs; and therefore hence again.

Ecc. Away! for vengeance comes along with them.
 Nay, stay not to expostulate; make speed,
 Or else come after: I'll away before. [ter:

K. Hen. Nay, take me with thee, good sweet Exc.
 Not that I fear to stay, but love to go
 Whither the queen intends. Forward! away!

[Exeunt.]

* "What stratagems," i. e., what direful events.—"Take on," i. e., persist in lamentation.—"Misthink," i. e., misjudge; think unfavorably of.—"Obsequious," i. e., careful of obsequies, or funeral rites.

SCENE VI.—The Same.

A loud Alarum. Enter CLIFFORD, wounded.

Clif. Here burns my candle out; ay, here it dies,
 Which, while it lasted, gave king Henry light.
 O, Lancaster! I fear thy overthrow,
 More than my body's parting with my soul.
 My love, and fear, glued many friends to thee;
 And now I fall thy tough commixtures melt,
 Impairing Henry, strengthening mis-proud York.
 The common people swarm like summer flies;
 And whither fly the gnats, but to the sun?
 And who shines now but Henry's enemies?
 O Phœbus! hadst thou never given consent
 That Phaeton should check thy fiery steeds,
 Thy burning car never had scorched the earth;
 And, Henry, hadst thou sway'd as kings should do,
 Or as thy father, and his father, did,
 Giving no ground unto the house of York,
 They never, then, had sprung like summer flies;
 I, and ten thousand in this luckless realm,
 Had left no mourning widows for our death,
 And thou this day hadst kept thy chair in peace.
 For what doth cherish weeds but gentle air?
 And what makes robbers bold but too much lenity?
 Bootless are plaints, and cureless are my wounds.
 No way to fly, nor strength to hold out fight:
 The foe is merciless, and will not pity;
 For at their hands I have deserv'd no pity.
 The air hath got into my deadly wounds,
 And much effuse of blood doth make me faint.—
 Come, York, and Richard, Warwick, and the rest;
 I stabb'd your fathers' bosoms, split my breast.

[He faints.]

Alarum and Retreat. Enter EDWARD, GEORGE, RICHARD, MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and Soldiers.

Edw. Now breathe we, lords: good fortune bids us pause,

And smooth the frowns of war with peaceful looks.—
 Some troops pursue the bloody-minded queen,
 That led calm Henry, though he were a king,
 As doth a sail, fill'd with a fretting gust,
 Command an argosy to stem the waves.

But think you, lords, that Clifford fled with them?

War. No, 'tis impossible he should escape;
 For, though before his face I speak the words,
 Your brother Richard mark'd him for the grave,
 And wheresoe'er he is, he's surely dead.

[CLIFFORD groans.]

Rich. Whose soul is that which takes her heavy leave?

A deadly groan, like life and death's ° departing;
 See who it is.

Edw. And, now the battle's ended,
 If friend, or foe, let him be gently used.

[CLIFFORD dies.]

Rich. Revoke that doom of mercy, for 'tis Clifford;
 Who not contented that he lopp'd the branch
 In hewing Rutland when his leaves put forth,
 But set his murdering knife unto the root
 From whence that tender spray did sweetly spring;
 I mean, our princely father, duke of York. [head,

War. From off the gates of York fetch down the
 Your father's head, which Clifford placed there;
 Instead whereof, let this supply the room:
 Measure for measure must be answered.

Edw. Bring forth that fatal screech-owl to our house,
 That nothing sung but death to us and ours:
 Now death shall stop his dismal threatening sound,
 And his ill-boding tongue no more shall speak.

°[Soldiers bring the Body forward.]

° Departing is used here for separation.

War. I think his understanding is bereft.—
Speak, Clifford, dost thou know who speaks to thee?—
Dark cloudy death o'ershades his beams of life,
And he nor sees, nor hears us, what we say.

Rich. O, would he did! and so, perhaps, he doth:
'Tis but his policy to counterfeit,
Because he would avoid such bitter taunts
Which in the time of death he gave our father.

Geo. If so thou think'st, vex him with <sup>a</sup>eager words.
Rich. Clifford! ask mercy, and obtain no grace.

<sup>1</sup>[They pull him to and fro.]

Edw. Clifford! repent in bootless penitence.

War. Clifford! devise excuses for thy faults.

Geo. While we devise fell tortures for thy faults.

Rich. Thou didst love York, and I am son to York.

Edw. Thou pitiedst Rutland; I will pity thee.

Geo. Where's the captain Margaret to fence you now?

War. They mock thee, Clifford: swears thou wast wont. [goes hard,

Rich. What! not an oath? nay then, the world
When Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath.—

I know by that, he's dead; and, by my soul,
If this right hand would buy two hours' life,

That I in all despite might rail at him, [blood

This hand should chop it off; and with the issuing

Stifle the villain, whose unstaunched thirst

York and young Rutland could not satisfy.

War. Ay, but he's dead. Off with the traitor's head,

And rear it in the place your father's stands.—

And now to London with triumphant march,

There to be crowned England's royal king:

From whence shall Warwick cut the sea to France,

And ask the lady Bona for thy queen.

So shalt thou sinew both these hands together;

And having France thy friend, thou shalt not dread

The scatter'd foe that hopes to rise again;

For though they cannot greatly sting to hurt,

Yet look to have them buz, <sup>t</sup>'t offend thine ears.

First, will I see the coronation,

And then to Brittany I'll cross the sea,

To effect this marriage, so it please my lord.

Edw. Even as thou wilt, sweet Warwick, let it be;

For in thy shoulder do I build my seat,

And never will I undertake the thing,

Wherein thy counsel and consent is wanting.—

Richard, I will create thee duke of Gloster;—

And George, of Clarence:—Warwick, as ourself,

Shall do, and undo, as him pleaseth best. [ter,

Rich. Let me be duke of Clarence, George of Gloster of Gloster's dukedom is too <sup>b</sup>ominous.

War. Tut! that's a foolish observation:

Richard, be duke of Gloster. Now to London,

To see these honors in possession. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Chace in the North of England.

Enter Two Keepers, with Cross-bows in their Hands.

1 Keeper. Under this thick-grown <sup>c</sup>brake we'll shroud ourselves;

For through this lawn anon the deer will come,

And in this covert will we make our stand,

Culling the principal of all the deer.

2 Keeper. I'll stay above the hill, so both may shoot.

1 Keeper. That cannot be; the noise of thy cross-bow
Will scare the herd, and so my shoot is lost.

Here stand we both, and aim we at the best:

And, for the <sup>d</sup>time shall not seem tedious,

I'll tell thee what befell me on a day,

In this self-place where now we mean to stand.

2 Keeper. Here comes a man; let's stay till he be past.

Enter King HENRY, disguised <sup>2</sup>as a Churchman, with a Prayer-Book.

K. Hen. From Scotland am I stol'n, even of pure
love,

To greet mine own land with my wishful sight.

No, Harry, Harry, 'tis no land of thine;

Thy place is fill'd, thy sceptre wrung from thee,

Thy balm wash'd off wherewith thou wast anointed:

No bending knee will call thee Cæsar now,

No humble suitors press to speak for right,

No, not a man comes for redress of thee,

For how can I help them, and not myself? [see.

1 Keeper. Ay, here's a deer whose skin's a keeper's

This is the quondam king: let's seize upon him.

K. Hen. Let me embrace these sour adversities;

For wise men say, it is the wisest course.

2 Keeper. Why linger we? let us lay hands upon him.

1 Keeper. Forbear a while; we'll hear a little more.

K. Hen. My queen and son are gone to France for aid;

And, as I hear, the great commanding Warwick

Is thither gone, to crave the French king's sister

To wife for Edward. If this news be true,

Poor queen and son, your labor is but lost;

For Warwick is a subtle orator,

And Lewis a prince soon won with moving words.

By this account, then, Margaret may win him,

For she's a woman to be pitied much:

Her sighs will make a battery in his breast,

Her tears will pierce into a marble heart;

The tiger will be mild whiles she doth mourn,

And Nero will be tainted with remorse,

To hear, and see, her plaints, her brinish tears.

Ay, but she's come to beg; Warwick, to give:

She on his left side craving aid for Henry,

He on his right asking a wife for Edward.

She weeps, and says—her Henry is depos'd;

He smiles, and says—his Edward is install'd;

That she, poor wretch, for grief can speak no more,

Whiles Warwick tells his title, smooths the wrong,

Inferreth arguments of mighty strength;

And, in conclusion, wins the king from her,

With promise of his sister, and <sup>3</sup>ought else,

To strengthen and support king Edward's place.

O Margaret! thus 'twill be; and thou, poor soul,

Art then forsaken, as thou went'st forlorn.

1 Keeper. Say, what art thou talkest of kings and queens? <sup>4</sup>[Coming forward.]

K. Hen. More than I seem, and less than I was

A man at least, for less I should not be; [born to:

And men may talk of kings, and why not I?

2 Keeper. Ay, but thou talk'st as if thou wert a king.

K. Hen. Why, so I am, in mind; and that's enough.

2 Keeper. But, if thou be a king, where is thy crown?

K. Hen. My crown is in my heart, not on my head;

Not deck'd with diamonds, and Indian stones,

Nor to be seen: my crown is call'd content;

A crown it is, that seldom kings enjoy.

2 Keeper. Well, if you be a king crown'd with content,

Your crown, content, and you, must be contented

To go along with us; for, as we think,

You are the king, king Edward hath depos'd;

And we his subjects, sworn in all allegiance,

Will apprehend you as his enemy. [oath!

K. Hen. But did you never swear, and break an

2 Keeper. No, never such an oath; nor will not now.

<sup>d</sup> "For the time," i. e., in order that the time.

K. Hen. Where did you dwell when I was king of England?

2 Keep. Here in this country, where we now remain.

K. Hen. I was anointed king at nine months old, My father and my grandfather, were kings, And you were sworn true subjects unto me; And tell me, then, have you not broke your oaths?

1 Keep. No;

For we were subjects, but while you were king.

K. Hen. Why, am I dead? do I not breathe a man? Ah, simple men! you know not what you swear.

Look, as I blow this feather from my face,

And as the air blows it to me again,

Obedying with my wind when I do blow,

And yielding to another when it blows,

Commanded always by the greater gust,

Such is the lightness of you common men.

But do not break your oaths; for of that sin

My mild entreaty shall not make you guilty.

Go where you will, the king shall be commanded,

And be you kings; command, and I'll obey.

1 Keep. We are true subjects to the king, king Edward.

K. Hen. So would you be again to Henry,

If he were seated as king Edward is. [King's,

1 Keep. We charge you, in God's name, and in the To go with us unto the officers.

K. Hen. In God's name, lead; your king's name be obey'd:

And what God will, that let your king perform;

And what he will, I humbly yield unto. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King EDWARD, 'in state, crowned, GLOSTER, CLARENCE, and Lady GREY.

K. Edw. Brother of Gloster, at Saint Albans' field This lady's husband, sir John Grey, was slain, His land then seiz'd on by the conqueror: Her suit is now to repossess those lands, Which we in justice cannot well deny, Because in quarrel of the house of York The worthy gentleman did lose his life.

Glo. Your highness shall do well, to grant her suit; It were dishonor to deny it her.

K. Edw. It were no less; but yet I'll make a pause.

Glo. Yea; is it so? [Aside.

I see, the lady hath a thing to grant, Before the king will grant her humble suit.

Clar. He knows the game: how true he keeps the wind! [Aside.

Glo. Silence! [Aside.

K. Edw. Widow, we will consider of your suit, And come some other time to know our mind.

L. Grey. Right gracious lord, I cannot brook delay:

May it please your highness to resolve me now, And what your pleasure is shall satisfy me. [lands,

Glo. Ay, widow? then I'll warrant you all your

An if what pleases him shall pleasure you,

Fight closer, or, good faith, you'll catch a blow.

[Aside.

Clar. I fear her not, unless she chance to fall.

[Aside.

Glo. God forbid that, for he'll take vantages.

[Aside.

K. Edw. How many children hast thou, widow? tell me.

Clar. I think, he means to beg a child of her.

[Aside.

Glo. Nay then, whip me; he'll rather give her two.

[Aside.

L. Grey. Three, my most gracious lord.

Glo. You shall have four, if you'll be rul'd by him.

[Aside.

K. Edw. 'Twere pity, they should lose their father's lands.

L. Grey. Be pitiful, dread lord, and grant it then.

K. Edw. Lords, give us leave: I'll try this widow's wit. [leave,

Glo. Ay, good leave have you; for you will have Till youth take leave, and leave you to the crutch.

[GLOSTER and CLARENCE stand 'back.

K. Edw. Now tell me, madam, do you love your children?

L. Grey. Ay, full as dearly as I love myself.

K. Edw. And would you not do much, to do them good? [harm.

L. Grey. To do them good I would sustain some

K. Edw. Then, get your husband's lands to do them good.

L. Grey. Therefore I came unto your majesty.

K. Edw. I'll tell you how these lands are to be got.

L. Grey. So shall you bind me to your highness' service. [them?

K. Edw. What service wilt thou do me, if I give

L. Grey. What you command, that rests in me to do.

K. Edw. But you will take exceptions to my boon.

L. Grey. No, gracious lord, except I cannot do it.

K. Edw. Ay, but thou canst do what I mean to ask.

L. Grey. Why then, I will do what your grace commands.

Glo. He plies her hard; and much rain wears the marble. [Aside.

Clar. As red as fire! nay then, her wax must melt. [Aside.

L. Grey. Why stops my lord? shall I not hear my task?

K. Edw. An easy task: 'tis but to love a king.

L. Grey. That's soon perform'd, because I am a subject. [give thee.

K. Edw. Why then, thy husband's lands I freely

L. Grey. I take my leave with many thousand thanks.

Glo. The match is made: she seals it with a curt'sy. [3 [Aside.

K. Edw. But stay thee; 'tis the fruits of love I mean.

L. Grey. The fruits of love I mean, my loving liege.

K. Edw. Ay, but I fear me, in another sense.

What love, think'st thou, I sue so much to get?

L. Grey. My love till death; my humble thanks, my prayers:

That love which virtue begs, and virtue grants.

K. Edw. No, by my troth, I did not mean such love. [you did.

L. Grey. Why then, you mean not as I thought

K. Edw. But now you partly may perceive my mind.

L. Grey. My mind will never grant what I perceive Your highness aims at, if I aim aright.

K. Edw. To tell thee plain, I am to lie with thee.

L. Grey. To tell you plain, I had rather lie in prison.

K. Edw. Why then, thou shalt not have thy husband's lands. [dower;

L. Grey. Why then, mine honesty shall be my For by that loss I will not purchase them.

K. Edw. Therein thou wrong'st thy children mightily.

L. Grey. Herein your highness wrongs both them But, mighty lord, this merry inclination [and me.

Accords not with the sadness of my suit; Please you dismiss me, either with ay, or no.

K. Edw. Ay, if thou wilt say ay, to my request;

No, if thou dost say no, to my demand.

L. Grey. Then, no, my lord. My suit is at an end.

Glo. The widow likes him not, she knits her brows.

[Aside.

Clar. He is the bluntest wooer in Christendom.

[Aside.

K. Edw. Her looks do argue her replete with modesty;

[Aside.

Her words do show her wit incomparable;

All her perfections challenge sovereignty:

One way, or other, she is for a king,

And she shall be my love, or else my queen.—

Say, that king Edward take thee for his queen?

L. Grey. 'Tis better said than done, my gracious

I am a subject fit to jest withal,

[lord:

But far unfit to be a sovereign.

K. Edw. Sweet widow, by my state I swear to thee,

I speak no more than what my soul intends;

And that, is to enjoy thee for my love.

L. Grey. And that is more than I will yield unto.

I know, I am too mean to be your queen,

And yet too good to be your concubine.

K. Edw. You cavil, widow: I did mean, my queen.

L. Grey. 'Twill grieve your grace, my sons should call you father. [three mother.

K. Edw. No more, than when my daughters call

Thou art a widow, and thou hast some children;

And, by God's mother, I, being but a bachelor,

Have other some: why, 'tis a happy thing

To be the father unto many sons.

Answer no more, for thou shalt be my queen.

Glo. The ghostly father now hath done his shift.

[Aside.

Clar. When he was made a shriver, 'twas for shift.

[Aside.

K. Edw. Brothers, you muse what chat we two have had.

<sup>1</sup>[GLOSTER and CLARENCE come forward.

Glo. The widow likes it not, for she looks very sad.

K. Edw. You'd think it strange if I should marry

Clar. To whom, my lord? [her.

K. Edw. Why, Clarence, to myself?

Glo. That would be ten days' wonder, at the least.

Clar. That's a day longer than a wonder lasts.

Glo. By so much is the wonder in extremes.

K. Edw. Well, jest on, brothers: I can tell you

Her suit is granted for her husband's lands. [both,

Enter a Nobleman.

Nob. My gracious lord, Henry your foe is taken,

And brought your prisoner to your palace gate.

K. Edw. See, that he be convey'd unto the Tower:—

And go we, brothers, to the man that took him,

To question of his apprehension.—

Widow, go you along.—Lords, use her honorably.

[Exeunt KING EDWARD, Lady GREY,

CLARENCE, and Lord.

Glo. Ay, Edward will use women honorably.

'Would he were wasted, marrow, bones, and ail,

That from his loins no hopeful branch may spring,

To cross me from the golden time I look for!

And yet, between my soul's desire, and me,

The lustful Edward's title buried,

Is Clarence, Henry, and his son young Edward,

And all the unlook'd-for issue of their bodies.

To take their rooms, ere I can place myself:

A cold premeditation for my purpose.

Why then, I do but dream on sovereignty;

Like one that stands upon a promontory,

And spies a far-off shore where he would tread,

Wishing his foot were equal with his eye;

And chides the sea that sunders him from thence,

Saying—he'll lade it dry to have his way:

So do I wish the crown, being so far off,

And so I chide the means that keep me from it;

And so I say I'll cut the causes off,

Flattering me with impossibilities.—

My eye's too quick, my heart o'erwens too much,

Unless my hand and strength could equal them.

Well, say there is no kingdom, then, for Richard,

What other pleasure can the world afford?

I'll make my heaven in a lady's lap,

And deck my body in gay ornaments,

And witch sweet ladies with my words and looks.

O miserable thought! and more unlikely,

Than to accomplish twenty golden crowns.

Why, love forswore me in my mother's womb;

And, for I should not deal in her soft laws,

She did corrupt frail nature with some bribe

To shrink mine arm up like a wither'd shrub;

To make an envious mountain on my back;

Where sits deformity to mock my body;

To shape my legs of an unequal size;

To disproportion me in every part,

Like to a chaos, or an unlick'd<sup>a</sup> bear-whelp,

That carries no impression like the dam.

And am I, then, a man to be belov'd?

O, monstrous fault, to harbor such a thought!

Then, since this earth affords no joy to me,

But to command, to check, to o'erbear such

As are of better person than myself,

I'll make my heaven to dream upon the crown;

And, whiles I live, t'<sup>c</sup> account this world but hell,

Until my mis-shap'd trunk that bears this head,

Be round<sup>b</sup> impaled with a glorious crown.

And yet I know not how to get the crown,

For many lives stand between me and home:

And I, like one lost in a thorny wood,

That rends the thorns, and is rent with the thorns,

Seeking a way, and straying from the way,

Not knowing how to find the open air,

But toiling desperately to find it out,

Torment myself to catch the English crown:

And from that torment I will free myself,

Or hew my way out with a bloody axe.

Why, I can smile, and murder while I smile,

And cry, content, to that which grieves my heart,

And wet my cheeks with artificial tears,

And frame my face to all occasions.

I'll drown more sailors than the mermaid shall,

I'll slay more gazers than the basilisk;

I'll play the orator as well as Nestor,

Deceive more slyly than Ulysses could,

And like a Sinon take another Troy.

I can add colors to the camelion,

Change shapes, with Proteus, for advantages,

And<sup>e</sup> send the murderous Machiavel to school.

Can I do this, and cannot get a crown?

Tut! were it further off, I'd pluck it down. [Exit.

SCENE III.—France. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter LEWIS the French King and Lady BONA, attended: the King takes his State. Then, enter Queen MARGARET, Prince EDWARD, and the Earl of OXFORD.

K. Lew. Fair queen of England, worthy Margaret, Sit down with us: it ill befits thy state, [doth sit.

And birth, that thou should'st stand, while Lewis

Q. Mar. No, mighty king of France; now Margaret

Must strike her sail, and learn a while to serve,

<sup>a</sup> An absurd opinion anciently prevailed, that the bear brings forth only shapeless lumps of flesh, which she licks into the form of bears.—<sup>b</sup> Encircled.

Where kings command. I was, I must confess,
Great Albion's queen in former golden days;
But now mischance hath trod my title down,
And with dishonor laid me on the ground,
Where I must take like seat unto my fortune,
And to my humble seat conform myself.

K. Lew. Why, say, fair queen, whence springs this deep despair? [tears,

Q. Mar. From such a cause as fills mine eyes with
And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in cares.

K. Lew. Whate'er it be, be thou still like thyself,
And sit thee by our side: yield not thy neck

[Seats her by him.

To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind
Still ride in triumph over all mischance.

Be plain, queen Margaret, and tell thy grief;
It shall be eas'd, if France can yield relief.

Q. Mar. Those gracious words revive my drooping thoughts,

And give my tongue-tied sorrows leave to speak.

Now, therefore, be it known to noble Lewis,

That Henry, sole possessor of my love,

Is of a king become a banish'd man,

And forc'd to live in Scotland<sup>1</sup> all forlorn;

While proud ambitious Edward, duke of York,

Usurps the regal title, and the seat

Of England's true-anointed lawful king.

This is the cause, that I, poor Margaret,

With this my son, prince Edward, Henry's heir,

Am come to crave thy just and lawful aid;

And if thou fail us all our hope is done.

Scotland hath will to help, but cannot help;

Our people and our peers are both misled;

Our treasure seiz'd, our soldiers put to flight,

And, as thou seest, ourselves in heavy plight.

K. Lew. Renowned queen, with patience calm the storm,

While we bethink a means to break it off. [foe,

Q. Mar. The more we stay, the stronger grows our

K. Lew. The more I stay, the more I'll succor thee.

Q. Mar. O! but impatience waiteth on true sorrow:

And see where comes the breeder of my sorrow.

Enter WARWICK, attended.

K. Lew. What's he, approacheth boldly to our presence? [friend.

Q. Mar. <sup>2</sup>The earl of Warwick, Edward's greatest

K. Lew. Welcome, brave Warwick. What brings thee to France?

[He descends. Queen MARGARET rises.

Q. Mar. Ay, now begins a second storm to rise;

For this is he that moves both wind and tide.

War. From worthy Edward, king of Albion,

My lord and sovereign, and thy vowed friend,

I come in kindness, and unfeigned love,

First, to do greetings to thy royal person,

And, then, to crave a league of amity;

And, lastly, to confirm that amity

With nuptial knot, if thou vouchsafest to grant

That virtuous lady Bona, thy fair sister,

To England's king in lawful marriage.

Q. Mar. If that go forward, Henry's hope is done.

War. And, gracious madam, [To BONA.] in our king's behalf,

I am commanded, with your leave and favor,

Humbly to kiss your hand, and with my tongue

To tell the passion of my sovereign's heart;

Where fame, late entering at his heedful ears,

Hath plac'd thy beauty's image, and thy virtue.

Q. Mar. King Lewis, and lady Bona, hear me

Before you answer Warwick. His demand [speak,

Springs not from Edward's well-meant honest love,

But from deceit, bred by necessity;

For how can tyrants safely govern home,

Unless abroad they purchase great alliance?

To prove him tyrant this reason may suffice,—

That Henry liveth still; but were he dead,

Yet here prince Edward stands, king Henry's son.

Look therefore, Lewis, that by this league and marriage

Thou draw not on <sup>3</sup>thee danger and dishonor;

For though usurpers sway the rule awhile,

Yet heavens are just, and time suppresseth wrongs.

War. Injurious Margaret!

Prince.

And why not queen?

War. Because thy father Henry did usurp,

And thou no more art prince than she is queen.

Orf. Then, Warwick disannuls great John of Gaunt,

Which did subdue the greatest part of Spain;

And, after John of Gaunt, Henry the fourth,

Whose wisdom was a mirror to the wisest;

And after that wise prince, Henry the fifth,

Who by his prowess conquered all France:

From these our Henry lineally descends.

War. Oxford, how haps it, in this smooth discourse,

You told not, how Henry the sixth hath lost

All that which Henry the fifth had gotten?

Metinks, these peers of France should smile at that.

But for the rest,—you tell a pedigree

Of threescore and two years; a silly time

To make prescription for a kingdom's worth.

Orf. Why, Warwick, canst thou speak against thy liege,

Whom thou obeyedst thirty and six years,

And not <sup>a</sup>bewray thy treason with a blush?

War. Can Oxford, that did ever fence the right,

Now buckler falsehood with a pedigree?

For shame! leave Henry, and call Edward king.

Orf. Call him my king, by whose injurious doom

My elder brother, the lord Aubrey Vere,

Was done to death? and more than so, my father,

Even in the downfall of his mellow'd years,

When nature brought him to the door of death?

No, Warwick, no; while life upholds this arm,

This arm upholds the house of Lancaster.

War. And I the house of York. [Oxford,

K. Lew. Queen Margaret, prince Edward, and Vouchsafe at our request to stand aside,

While I use farther conference with Warwick.

Q. Mar. Heaven grant, that Warwick's words be-witch him not! [They stand <sup>a</sup>apart.

K. Lew. Now, Warwick, tell me, even upon thy conscience,

Is Edward your true king? for I were loath,

To link with him that were not lawful chosen.

War. Thereon I pawn my credit, and mine honor.

K. Lew. But is he gracious in the people's eye?

War. The more, that Henry was <sup>b</sup>unfortunate.

K. Lew. Then farther, all dissembling set aside,

Tell me for truth the measure of his love

Unto our sister Bona.

War. Such it seems,

As may beseech a monarch like himself.

Myself have often heard him say, and swear,

That this his love was an eternal <sup>c</sup>plant;

Whereof the root was fix'd in virtue's ground,

The leaves and fruit maintain'd with beauty's sun,

Exempt from envy, but not from disdain,

Unless the lady Bona quit his pain.

K. Lew. Now, sister, let us hear your firm resolve.

Bona. Your grant, or your denial, shall be mine.—

<sup>a</sup> Betray.—<sup>b</sup> "Unfortunate," i. e. unsuccessful in war.—
<sup>c</sup> In Shakespeare's time; by an eternal plant was meant what is now called a perennial one.

Yet I confess, [To WAR.] that often ere this day,
When I have heard your king's desert recounted,
Mine ear hath tempted judgment to desire.

K. Lew. Then, Warwick, thus:—our sister shall be Edward's;

And now forthwith shall articles be drawn
Touching the jointure that your king must make,
Which with her dowry shall be counterpois'd.—
Draw near, queen Margaret, and be a witness,
That Bona shall be wife to the English king.

Prince. To Edward, but not to the English king.

Q. Mar. Deceitful Warwick! it was thy device
By this alliance to make void my suit:
Before thy coming, Lewis was Henry's friend.

K. Lew. And still is friend to him and Margaret:

But if your title to the crown be weak,
As may appear by Edward's good success,
Then 'tis but reason, that I be releas'd
From giving aid which late I promised.
Yet shall you have all kindness at my hand,
That your estate requires, and mine can yield.

War. Henry now lives in Scotland, at his ease,
Where having nothing, nothing can he lose.

And as for you yourself, our quondam queen,
You have a father able to maintain you,
And better 'twere you troubled him than France.

Q. Mar. Peace, impudent and shameless War-
Proud setter-up and puller-down of kings, [Wick!
I will not hence, till with my talk and tears,
Both full of truth, I make king Lewis behold
Thy sly<sup>b</sup> conveyance, and thy lord's false love;
For both of you are birds of self-same feather.

[A horn sounded within.]

K. Lew. Warwick, this is some post to us, or thee.

Enter the Post.

Post. My lord ambassador, these letters are for you,

Sent from your brother, marquess Montague.—
These from our king unto your majesty.

And, madam, these for you; from whom I know not.
[They all read their letters.]

Orf. I like it well, that our fair queen and mistress Smiles at her news, while Warwick frowns at his.

Prince. Nay, mark how Lewis stamps as he were
I hope all's for the best. [Nettled:]

K. Lew. Warwick, what are thy news? and yours, fair queen? [Joys.]

Q. Mar. Mine, such as fill my heart with unhop'd
War. Mine, full of sorrow and heart's discontent.

K. Lew. What! has your king married the lady
And now, to soothe your forgery and his, [Grey,

Sends me a paper to persuade me patience?

Is this th<sup>e</sup> alliance that he seeks with France?

Dare he presume to scorn us in this manner?

Q. Mar. I told your majesty as much before:

This proveth Edward's love, and Warwick's honesty.

War. King Lewis, I here protest, in sight of heaven,

And by the hope I have of heavenly bliss,
That I am clear from this misdeed of Edward's;

No more my king, for he dishonors me,
But most himself, if he could see his shame.

Did I forget, that by the house of York

My father came untimely to his death?

Did I let pass th<sup>e</sup> abuse done to my niece?

Did I impale him with the regal crown?

Did I put Henry from his native right,

And am I d<sup>d</sup> guerdon'd at the last with shame?

<sup>a</sup> This is ironical; the poverty of Margaret's father being a frequent topic of reproach.—<sup>b</sup> "Thy sly conveyance," i. e., thy crafty artifice.—<sup>c</sup> The abuse alluded to was an attempt by Edward to violate the chastity of Warwick's niece.—<sup>d</sup> Rewarded.

Shame on himself, for my desert is honor:

And to repair my honor lost for him,

I here renounce him, and return to Henry.

My noble queen, let former grudges pass,

And henceforth I am thy true servitor.

I will revenge his wrong to lady Bona,

And replant Henry in his former state.

Q. Mar. Warwick, these words have turn'd my hate to love;

And I forgive and quite forget old faults,
And joy that thou becom'st king Henry's friend.

War. So much his friend, ay, his unfeigned friend,

That if king Lewis vouchsafe to furnish us

With some few bands of chosen soldiers,

I'll undertake to land them on our coast,

And force the tyrant from his seat by war.

'Tis not his new-made bride shall succor him:

And as for Clarence, as my letters tell me,

He's very likely now to fall from him,

For matching more for wanton lust than honor,

Or than for strength and safety of our country.

Bona. Dear brother, how shall Bona be reveng'd,

But by thy help to this distressed queen? [Live,

Q. Mar. Renowned prince, how shall poor Henry

Unless thou rescue him from foul despair?

Bona. My quarrel and this English queen's are one.

War. And mine, fair lady Bona, joins with yours.

K. Lew. And mine, with hers, and thine, and Therefore, at last I firmly am resolv'd [Margaret's.

You shall have aid.

Q. Mar. Let me give humble thanks for all at once.

K. Lew. Then, England's messenger, return in post;

And tell false Edward, thy supposed king,

That Lewis of France is sending over maskers,

To revel it with him and his new bride:

Thou seest what's past; go, 'fear thy king withal.

Bona. Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower

I'll wear the willow garland for his sake. [shortly,

Q. Mar. Tell him, my mourning weeds are laid

And I am ready to put armor on. [aside,

War. Tell him from me, that he hath done me

wrong,

And therefore I'll uncrown him ere't be long.

There's thy reward: be gone. [Exit Post.]

K. Lew. But, Warwick, thou

And Oxford, with five thousand<sup>1</sup> warlike men,

Shall cross the seas, and bid false Edward battle:

And, as occasion serves, this noble queen

And prince shall follow with a fresh supply.

Yet, ere thou go, but answer me one doubt:

What pledge have we of thy firm loyalty?

War. This shall assure my constant loyalty:—

That if our queen and this young prince agree,

I'll join mine eldest daughter, and my joy,

To him forthwith in holy wedlock bands. [tion.—

Q. Mar. Yes, I agree, and thank you for your mo-son Edward, she is fair and virtuous,

Therefore delay not, give thy hand to Warwick;

And with thy hand thy faith irrevocable,

That only Warwick's daughter shall be thine.

Prince. Yes, I accept her, for she well deserves it;

And here, to pledge my vow, I give my hand.

[He gives his hand to WARWICK.]

K. Lew. Why stay we now? These soldiers shall be levied,

And thou, lord Bourbon, our high admiral,

Shall wait them over with our royal fleet.—

I long, till Edward fall by war's mischance,

For mocking marriage with a dame of France.

[Exeunt all but WARWICK.]

War. I came from Edward as ambassador,

<sup>e</sup> "Fear," i. e., fright.

But I return his sworn and mortal foe :
 Matter of marriage was the charge he gave me,
 But dreadful war shall answer his demand.
 Had he none else to make a <sup>a</sup>stale but me ?
 Then none but I shall turn his jest to sorrow.
 I was the chief that rais'd him to the crown,
 And I'll be chief to bring him down again :
 Not that I pity Henry's misery,
 But seek revenge on Edward's mockery. [Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter GLOSTER, CLARENCE, SOMERSET, MONTAGUE.

Glo. Now tell me, brother Clarence, what think you
 Of this new marriage with the lady Grey ?
 Hath not our brother made a worthy choice ?

Clar. Alas ! you know, 'tis far from hence to France :

How could he stay till Warwick made return ?

Som. My lords, forbear this talk : here comes the king.

Flourish. Enter King EDWARD, attended ; Lady GREY, as Queen ; PEMBROKE, STAFFORD, and HASTINGS.

Glo. And his well-chosen bride.

Clar. I <sup>b</sup>mind to tell him plainly what I think.

K. Edw. Now, brother of Clarence, how like you our choice,

That you stand pensive, as half discontent ?

Clar. As well as Lewis of France, or the earl of Warwick ;

Which are so weak of courage, and in judgment,
 That they'll take no offence at our abuse.

K. Edw. Suppose they take offence without a cause,
 They are but Lewis and Warwick : I am Edward,
 Your king and Warwick's, and must have my will.

Glo. And you shall have your will, because our Yet hasty marriage seldom proveth well. [King ;

K. Edw. Yea, brother Richard, are you offended
Glo. Not I. [Too ?

No ; God forbid, that I should wish them sever'd
 Whom God hath join'd together : ay, and 'twere pity,
 To sunder them that yoke so well together.

K. Edw. Setting your scorns and your dislike aside,
 Tell me some reason why the lady Grey
 Should not become my wife, and England's queen.—
 And you too, Somerset, and Montague,
 Speak freely what you think.

Clar. Then this is mine opinion—that king Lewis Becomes your enemy, for mocking him
 About the marriage of the lady Bona.

Glo. And Warwick, doing what you gave in charge,
 Is now dishonored by this new marriage. [appears'd

K. Edw. What, if both Lewis and Warwick be
 By such invention as I can devise ? [ance,

Mont. Yet to have join'd with France in such alli-
 Would more have strengthen'd this our commonwealth

'Gainst foreign storms than any home-bred marriage.
Hast. Why, knows not Montague, that of itself
 England is safe, if true within itself ?

Mont. But the safer, when 'tis back'd with France.

Hast. 'Tis better using France, than trusting France.

Let us be back'd with God, and with the seas,
 Which he hath given for fence impregnable,

And with their helps only defend ourselves :

In them and in ourselves our safety lies. [serves

Clar. For this one speech lord Hastings well de-
 To have the heir of the lord Hungerford. [grant ;

K. Edw. Ay, what of that ? it was my will, and
 And for this once my will shall stand for law. [well,

Glo. And yet, methinks, your grace hath not done
 To give the heir and daughter of lord Scales

To the brother of your loving bride :

She better would have fitted me, or Clarence ;

But in your bride you bury brotherhood. [c heir

Clar. Or else you would not have bestow'd the
 Of the lord Bonville on your new wife's son,

And leave your brothers to go speed elsewhere.

K. Edw. Alas, poor Clarence ! is it for a wife,

That thou art discontent ? I will provide thee.

Clar. In choosing for yourself you show'd your judgment ;

Which being shallow, you shall give me leave

To play the broker in mine own behalf ;

And to that end I shortly mind to leave you.

K. Edw. Leave me, or tarry, Edward will be king,
 And not be tied unto his brother's will.

Q. Eliz. My lords, before it pleas'd his majesty

To raise my state to title of a queen,

Do me but right, and you must all confess

That I was not ignoble of descent ;

And meaner than myself have had like fortune.

But as this title honors me and mine,

So your dislikes, to whom I would be pleasing,

Do cloud my joys with danger and with sorrow.

K. Edw. My love, forbear to fawn upon their frowns.

What danger, or what sorrow can befall thee,

So long as Edward is thy constant friend,

And their true sovereign whom they must obey ?

Nay, whom they shall obey, and love thee too,

Unless they seek for hatred at my hands ;

Which if they do, yet will I keep thee safe,

And they shall feel the vengeance of my wrath.

Glo. I hear, yet say not much, but think the more. [Aside.

Enter a Messenger.

K. Edw. Now, messenger, what letters, or what
 From France ? [news,

Mess. My sovereign liege, no letters, and few words ;
 But such as I, without your special pardon,

Dare not relate. [brief,

K. Edw. Go to, we pardon thee : therefore, in Tell me their words as near as thou canst guess them.

What answer makes king Lewis unto our letters ?

Mess. At my depart these were his very words :—

“Go tell false Edward, thy supposed king,

That Lewis of France is sending over maskers,

To revel it with him and his new bride.” [Henry.

K. Edw. Is Lewis so brave ? belike, he thinks me
 But what said lady Bona to my marriage ?

Mess. These were her words, utter'd with mild disdain :—

“Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,

I'll wear the willow garland for his sake.”

K. Edw. I blame not her, she could say little less ;
 She had the wrong. But what said Henry's queen ?

For I have heard, that she was there in 'place.

Mess. “Tell him,” quoth she, “my mourning weeds are <sup>e</sup>done,

And I am ready to put armor on.”

<sup>a</sup> A stale here means a stalking-horse, a pretence.—<sup>b</sup> “I mind,” i. e., I have a mind ; I am inclined.

<sup>c</sup> Until the Restoration, minors coming into possession of great estates were in the wardship of the king, who bestowed them on his favorites, or in other words gave them up to plunder, and afterwards disposed of them in marriage as he pleased.—<sup>d</sup> “There in place,” i. e., there present.—<sup>e</sup> “My mourning weeds are done,” i. e., my mourning is ended.

K. Edw. Belike, she <sup>a</sup>minds to play the Amazon.
But what said Warwick to these injuries?

Mess. He, more incens'd against your majesty
Than all the rest, discharg'd me with these words:—
"Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong,
And therefore I'll uncrown him ere't be long."

K. Edw. Ha! durst the traitor breathe out so proud words?

Well, I will arm me, being thus forewarn'd:
They shall have wars, and pay for their presumption.
But say, is Warwick friends with Margaret?

Mess. Ay, gracious sovereign: they are so link'd in friendship, [ter.

That young prince Edward marries Warwick's daughter.
Clar. Belike, the elder; Clarence will have the younger. <sup>1</sup>[Aside.

Now, brother king, farewell, and sit you fast,
For I will hence to Warwick's other daughter;
That, though I want a kingdom, yet in marriage
I may not prove inferior to yourself.—

You, that love me and Warwick, follow me.

[Exit CLARENCE, and SOMERSET follows.

Glo. Not I. [i*Aside.*
My thoughts aim at a farther matter: I
Stay not for the love of Edward, but the crown.

K. Edw. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick!

Yet an I arm'd against the worst can happen,
And haste is needful in this desperate case.—

Pembroke and Stafford, you in our behalf

Go levy men, and make prepare for war;

They are already, or quickly will be landed:

Myself in person will straight follow you.

[Exit PEMBROKE and STAFFORD.

But, ere I go, Hastings, and Montague,
Resolve my doubt: you twain, of all the rest,
Are near to Warwick by blood, and by alliance:

Tell me if you love Warwick more than me?

If it be so, then both depart to him:

I rather wish you foes, than hollow friends;

But, if you mind to hold your true obedience,

Give me assurance with some friendly vow,

That I may never have you in suspect.

Mont. So God help Montague as he proves true!

Hast. And Hastings as he favors Edward's cause!

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, will you stand by us?

Glo. Ay, in despite of all that shall withstand you.

K. Edw. Why so; then, am I sure of victory.

Now, therefore, let us hence; and lose no hour,

Till we meet Warwick with his foreign power.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Plain in Warwickshire.

Enter WARWICK and OXFORD with French and <sup>2</sup>English Forces.

War. Trust me, my lord, all hitherto goes well:
The common people by numbers swarm to us.

Enter CLARENCE and SOMERSET.

But, see, where Somerset and Clarence come!
Speak suddenly, my lords; are we all friends?

Clar. Fear not that, my lord. [i*War.*

War. Then, gentle Clarence, welcome unto War-

And welcome, Somerset.—I hold it cowardice,

To rest mistrustful where a noble heart

Hath pawn'd an open hand in sign of love;

Else might I think, that Clarence, Edward's brother,

Were but a feigned friend to our proceedings:

But welcome, sweet Clarence; my daughter shall be thine.

<sup>a</sup> "She minds," she inclines.

And now what rests, but in night's coverture,

Thy brother being carelessly encamp'd,

His soldiers lurking in the towns about,

And but attended by a simple guard,

We may surprise and take him at our pleasure?

Our scouts have found the adventure very easy:

That as Ulysses, and stout Diomed,

With sleight and manhood stole to Rhesus' tents,

And brought from thence the Thracian fatal steeds;

So we, well cover'd with the night's black mantle,

At unawares may beat down Edward's guard,

And seize himself; I say not slaughter him,

For I intend but only to surprise him.—

You, that will follow me to this attempt,

Applaud the name of Henry with your leader.

[They all cry, HENRY!

Why, then, let's on our way in silent sort:

For Warwick and his friends, God and Saint George!

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—EDWARD's Camp near Warwick.

Enter certain Watchmen, to guard the King's tent.

1 Watch. Come on, my masters, each man take his stand:

The king by this is set him down to sleep.

2 Watch. What, will he not to bed? [vow

1 Watch. Why, no; for he hath made a solemn

Never to lie and take his natural rest,

Till Warwick or himself be quite suppress'd.

2 Watch. To-morrow then, belike, shall be the day,
If Warwick be so near as men report.

3 Watch. But say, I pray, what nobleman is that,
That with the king here resteth in his tent?

1 Watch. 'Tis the lord Hastings, the king's chiefest friend. [king,

3 Watch. O! is it so? But why commands the

That his chief followers lodge in towns about him,

While he himself keeps in the cold field? [gerous.

2 Watch. 'Tis the more honor, because more dan-

3 Watch. Ay, but give me worship and quietness;

I like it better than a dangerous honor.

If Warwick knew in what estate he stands,

'Tis to be doubted, he would waken him. [sage.

1 Watch. Unless our halberds did shut up his pas-

2 Watch. Ay; wherefore else guard we his royal

But to defend his person from night-foes? [tent,

Enter WARWICK, CLARENCE, OXFORD, SOMERSET,
and Forces.

War. This is his tent; and see, where stand his guard.

Courage, my masters! honor now, or never!

But follow me, and Edward shall be ours.

1 Watch. Who goes there?

2 Watch. Stay, or thou diest.

[Warwick, and the rest, cry all—WARWICK!

WARWICK! and set upon the Guard; who fly, crying—Arm! Arm! WARWICK, and the rest, following them. <sup>3</sup>Shouts and confusion.

Drums beating, and Trumpets sounding, re-enter WARWICK, and the rest, bringing the King out in his Gown, sitting in a Chair: GLOSTER and HASTINGS fly over the stage.

Som. What are they that fly there? [the duke.

War. Richard, and Hastings: let them go; here's

K. Edw. The duke! why, Warwick, when we

Thou call'dst me king? [parted last,

War. Ay, but the case is alter'd:

When you disgrac'd me in my embassy,

<sup>b</sup> See the tenth book of the Iliad.

Then I degraded you from being king,
And come now to create you duke of York.
Alas! how should you govern any kingdom,
That know not how to use ambassadors,
Nor how to be contented with one wife,
Nor how to use your brothers brotherly,
Nor how to study for the people's welfare,
Nor how to shroud yourself from enemies? [too?

K. Edw. Yeu, brother of Clarence, art thou here
Nay then, I see that Edward needs must down.—
Yet, Warwick, in despite of all mischance,
Of thee thyself, and all thy complices,
Edward will always bear himself as king:
Though fortune's malice overthrow my state,
My mind exceeds the compass of her wheel.

War. Then, for his mind be Edward England's king:— [Takes off his Crown.

But Henry now shall wear the English crown,
And be true king indeed; thou but the shadow.—
My lord of Somerset, at my request,
See that forthwith duke Edward be convey'd
Unto my brother, archbishop of York.
When I have fought with Pembroke and his fellows,
I'll follow you, and tell what answer
Lewis, and the lady Bona, send to him:—
Now, for a while farewell, good duke of York.

K. Edw. What fates impose, that men must needs
It boots not to resist both wind and tide. [abide:
[Exit King EDWARD, led out forcibly;
SOMERSET with him.

Oxf. What now remains, my lords, for us to do,
But march to London with our soldiers?

War. Ay, that's the first thing that we have to do;
To free king Henry from imprisonment,
And see him seated in the regal throne. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Queen ELIZABETH and RIVERS.

Riv. Madam, what makes in you this sudden change?

Q. Eliz. Why, brother Rivers, are you yet to learn,
What late misfortune is befallen king Edward?

Riv. What! loss of some pitch'd battle against Warwick?

Q. Eliz. No, but the loss of his own royal person.

Riv. Then, is my sovereign slain?

Q. Eliz. Ay, almost slain, for he is taken prisoner;
Either betray'd by falsehood of his guard,
Or by his foe surpris'd at unawares:

And, as I farther have to understand,
Is now committed to the bishop of York,
Fell Warwick's brother, and by that our foe.

Riv. These news, I must confess, are full of grief;
Yet, gracious madam, bear it as you may:
Warwick may lose, that now hath won the day.

Q. Eliz. Till then, fair hope must hinder life's decay;
And I the rather wean me from despair,
For love of Edward's offspring in my womb:

This is it that makes me bridle passion,
And bear with mildness my misfortune's cross:

Ay, yea, for this I draw in many a tear,
And stop the rising of blood-sucking sighs,
Lest with my sighs or tears I blast or drown
King Edward's fruit, true heir to th' English crown.

Riv. But, madam, where is Warwick then become?

Q. Eliz. I am informed that he comes towards London,

To set the crown once more on Henry's head.

Guess thou the rest; king Edward's friends must
But to prevent the tyrant's violence, [down:

* "For his mind," i. e., in his mind; as far as his own mind goes.

(For trust not him that hath once broken faith)
I'll hence forthwith unto the sanctuary,
To save at least the heir of Edward's right:
There shall I rest secure from force and fraud.
Come therefore; let us fly while we may fly:
If Warwick take us we are sure to die. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A Park near Middleham Castle in Yorkshire.

Enter GLOSTER, HASTINGS, Sir WILLIAM STANLEY, and others.

Glo. Now, my lord Hastings, and sir William Stanley,

Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither,
Into this chiefest thicket of the park. [brother,
Thus stands the case. You know, our king, my
Is prisoner to the bishop here, at whose hands
He hath good usage and great liberty,
And often, but attended with weak guard,
Comes hunting this way to disport himself.
I have advertis'd him by secret means,
That if about this hour he make this way,
Under the color of his usual game,
He shall here find his friends, with horse and men,
To set him free from his captivity.

Enter King EDWARD, and a Huntsman.

Hunt. This way, my lord, for this way lies the game.

K. Edw. Nay, this way, man: see, where the huntsmen stand.

Now, brother of Gloster, <sup>2</sup> Hastings, and the rest,
Stand you thus close to steal the bishop's deer?

Glo. Brother, the time and case requireth haste:
Your horse stands ready at the park corner.

K. Edw. But whither shall we then?

Hast. To Lynn, my lord; and slip from thence to Flanders. [meaning.

Glo. Well guess'd, believe me; for that was my

K. Edw. Stanley, I will requite thy forwardness.

Glo. But wherefore stay we? 'tis no time to talk.

K. Edw. Huntsman, what say'st thou? wilt thou go along?

Hunt. Better do so, <sup>3</sup> then tarry and be hang'd.

Glo. Come then; away! let's have no more ado.

K. Edw. Bishop, farewell: shield thee from Warwick's frown,

And pray that I may repossess the crown. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—A Room in the Tower.

Enter King HENRY, CLARENCE, WARWICK, SOMER-SET, young <sup>4</sup> Henry of RICHMOND, OXFORD, MON-TAGUE, Lieutenant of the Tower, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Master lieutenant, now that God and Have shaken Edward from the regal seat, [friends
And turn'd my captive state to liberty,
My fear to hope, my sorrows unto joys,
At our enlargement what are thy due fees?

Lieu. Subjects may challenge nothing of their
But if an humble prayer may prevail, [sovereigns;
I then crave pardon of your majesty.

K. Hen. For what, lieutenant? for well using me?

Nay, be thou sure, I'll well requite thy kindness,

For that it made my imprisonment a pleasure:

Ay, such a pleasure as incaged birds

Conceive, when, after many moody thoughts,

At last by notes of household harmony

They quite forget their loss of liberty.—

But, Warwick, after God, thou set'st me free,

And chiefly therefore I thank God, and thee;

He was the author, thou the instrument.

Therefore, that I may conquer fortune's spite,

By living low, where fortune cannot hurt me,
And that the people of this blessed land
May not be punish'd with my thwarting stars,
Warwick, although my head still wear the crown,
I here resign my government to thee,
For thou art fortunate in all thy deeds.

War. Your grace hath still been fam'd for virtuous,
And now may seem as wise as virtuous,
By spying, and avoiding, fortune's malice;
For few men rightly temper with the <sup>a</sup>stars:
Yet in this one thing let me blame your grace,
For choosing me when Clarence is in <sup>b</sup>place.

Clar. No, Warwick, thou art worthy of the sway,
To whom the heavens in thy nativity
Adjudge'd an olive branch, and laurel crown,
As likely to be blest in peace, and war;
And, therefore, I yield thee my free consent.

War. And I choose Clarence only for protector.

K. Hen. Warwick, and Clarence, give me both your hands.

Now join your hands, and with your hands your hearts,
That no dissension hinder government:
I make you both protectors of this land,
While I myself will lead a private life,
And in devotion spend my latter days,
To sin's rebuke, and my Creator's praise. [will?]

War. What answers Clarence to his sovereign's

Clar. That he consents, if Warwick yield consent;
For on thy fortune I repose myself. [tent.]

War. Why then, though loath, yet must I be con-
We'll yoke together, like a double shadow
To Henry's body, and supply his place;
I mean, in bearing weight of government,
While he enjoys the honor, and his ease.

And, Clarence, now then, it is more than needful,
Forthwith that Edward be pronounce'd a traitor,
And all his lands and goods confiscated. [min'd.]

Clar. What else? and that succession be deter-
War. Ay, therein Clarence shall not want his part.

K. Hen. But, with the first of all your chief affairs,
Let me entreat, (for I command no more)

That Margaret your queen, and my son Edward,
Be sent for to return from France with speed;

For, till I see them here, by doubtful fear
My joy of liberty is half eclips'd. [speed.]

Clar. It shall be done, my sovereign, with all
K. Hen. My lord of Somerset, what youth is that,
Of whom you seem to have so tender care?

Som. My liege, it is young Henry, earl of Richmond.

K. Hen. Come hither, England's hope: if secret powers [Lays his Hand on his Head.]

Suggest but truth to my divining thoughts,
This pretty <sup>c</sup>lad will prove our country's bliss.

His looks are full of peaceful majesty;
His head by nature fram'd to wear a crown,

His hand to wield a sceptre; and himself
Likely in time to bless a regal throne.

Make much of him, my lords; for this is he,
Must help you more than you are hurt by me.

Enter a Messenger.

War. What news, my friend?

Mess. That Edward is escaped from your brother,
And fled, as he hears since, to Burgundy.

War. Unsavory news! but how made he escape?

Mess. He was convey'd by Richard duke of Gloster,
And the lord Hastings, who attended <sup>d</sup>him

In secret ambush on the forest side,
And from the bishop's huntsmen rescued him,

For hunting was his daily exercise.

War. My brother was too careless of his charge.—
But let us hence, my sovereign, to provide

A salve for any sore that may betide.

[*Exeunt King HENRY, WARWICK, CLARENCE,
Lieutenant, and Attendants.*]

Som. My lord, I like not of this flight of Edward's,
For, doubtless, Burgundy will yield him help,
And we shall have more wars, before't be long.

As Henry's late presaging prophecy [mond,
Did glad my heart with hope of this young Rich-
So doth my heart misgive me, in these conflicts

What may befall him, to his harm and ours:
Therefore, lord Oxford, to prevent the worst,
Forthwith we'll send him hence to Brittany,
Till storms be past of civil enmity.

Oxf. Ay; for if Edward repossess the crown,
'Tis like that Richmond with the rest shall down.

Som. It shall be so; he shall to Brittany.
Come therefore; let's about it speedily. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—Before York.

Enter King EDWARD, GLOSTER, HASTINGS, and <sup>1</sup>foreign forces.

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, lord Hastings, and Yet thus far fortune maketh us amends, [the rest,
And says that once more I shall interchange
My waned state for Henry's regal crown.

We'll have we pass'd, and now repass'd the seas,
And brought desired help from Burgundy:
What then remains, we being thus arriv'd
From Ravensburg haven before the gates of York,
But that we enter as into our dukedom?

Glo. The gates made fast.—Brother, I like not this;
For many men, that stumble at the threshold,
Are well foretold that danger lurks within.

K. Edw. Tush, man! abodements must not now affright us:

By fair or foul means we must enter in,
For hither will our friends repair to us.

Hast. My liege, I'll knock once more to summon them. [<sup>2</sup>Knocks.]

Enter, on the Walls, the Mayor of York, and his Brethren.

May. My lords, we were forewarned of your coming,
And shut the gates for safety of ourselves;

For now we owe allegiance unto Henry.

K. Edw. But, master mayor, if Henry be your king,
Yet Edward, at the least, is duke of York.

May. True, my good lord; I know you for no less.

K. Edw. Why, and I challenge nothing but my
As being well content with that alone. [dukedom,

Glo. But when the fox hath once got in his nose,
He'll soon find means to make the body follow. [Aside.]

Hast. Why, master mayor, why stand you in a doubt?

Open the gates: we are king Henry's friends.

May. Ay, say you so? the gates shall then be open'd. [Exeunt from above.]

Glo. A wise stout captain <sup>3</sup>he, and soon persuaded.

Hast. The good old man would fain that all were well,

So 'twere not 'long of <sup>4</sup>him; but, being enter'd,
I doubt not, I, but we shall soon persuade
Both him and all his brothers unto reason.

Re-enter the Mayor, and Two Aldermen, below.

K. Edw. So, master mayor: these gates must not be shut,

<sup>a</sup>That is, 'Few men accommodate themselves to their destiny, or adapt themselves to circumstances.'—<sup>b</sup>'In place,' i. e., present.—<sup>c</sup>'This pretty lad' was afterwards
Henry VII.—<sup>d</sup>'Attended him,' i. e., waited for him.

But in the night, or in the time of war.

What! fear not, man, but yield me up the keys,
[Takes his Keys.]

For Edward will defend the town, and thee,
And all those friends that deign to follow me.

March. Enter MONTGOMERY, and Forces.

Glo. Brother, this is sir John Montgomery,
Our trusty friend, unless I be deceiv'd. [in arms?]

K. Edw. Welcome, sir John; but why come you

Mont. To help king Edward in his time of storm,
As every loyal subject ought to do. [forget]

K. Edw. Thanks, good Montgomery; but we now
Our title to the crown, and only claim

Our dukedom, till God please to send the rest.

Mont. Then fare you well, for I will hence again:

I came to serve a king, and not a duke.—

Drummer, strike up, and let us march away.

[A March begun.]

K. Edw. Nay, stay, sir John, a while; and we'll debate,

By what safe means the crown may be recover'd.

Mont. What talk you of debating? in few words,
If you'll not here proclaim yourself our king,

I'll leave you to your fortune, and be gone

To keep them back that come to succor you.

Why shall we fight, if you pretend no title?

Glo. Why, brother, wherefore stand you on nice points? [our claim:]

K. Edw. When we grow stronger, then we'll make Till then, 'tis wisdom to conceal our meaning.

Hast. Away with scrupulous wit, now arms must rule.

Glo. And fearless minds climb soonest unto crowns.
Brother, we will proclaim you out of hand:

The <sup>a</sup>bruit thereof will bring you many friends.

K. Edw. Then be it as you will; for 'tis my right,
And Henry but usurps the diadem.

Mont. Ay, now my sovereign speaketh like himself,
And now will I be Edward's champion.

Hast. Sound, trumpet! Edward shall be here proclaim'd.—

Come, fellow-soldier, make thou proclamation.

[Gives him a Paper. Flourish.]

Sold. [Reads.] "Edward the fourth, by the grace of God, king of England and France, and lord of Ireland, &c."

Mont. And whosoe'er gainsays king Edward's right,
By this I challenge him to single fight.

[Throws down his Gauntlet.]

All. Long live Edward the fourth!

K. Edw. Thanks, brave Montgomery, and thanks unto you all:

If fortune serve me, I'll requite this kindness.

Now, for this night, let's harbor here in York,

And when the morning sun shall raise his ear

Above the border of this horizon,

We'll forward towards Warwick, and his mates;

For, well I <sup>b</sup>wot, that Henry is no soldier.—

Ah, froward Clarence! how evil it becoms thee,

To flatter Henry, and forsake thy brother!

Yet, as we may, we'll meet both thee and Warwick.—

Come on, brave soldiers: doubt not of the day;

And, that once gotten, doubt not of large pay.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter King HENRY, WARWICK, CLARENCE, MONTAGUE, EXETER, and OXFORD.

War. What counsel, lords? Edward from Belgium,
With hasty Germans, and blunt Hollanders,

Hath pass'd in safety through the narrow seas,
And with his troops doth march amain to London;
And many giddy people flock to him.

K. Hen. Let's levy men, and beat him back again.

Clar. A little fire is quickly trodden out,

Which, being suffer'd, rivers cannot quench.

War. In Warwickshire I have true-hearted friends,

Not mutinous in peace, yet bold in war;

Those will I muster up:—and thou, son Clarence,

Shalt stir up in Suffolk, Norfolk, and in Kent,

The knights and gentlemen to come with thee:—

Thou, brother Montague, in Buckingham,

Northampton, and in Leicestershire, shalt find

Men well inclin'd to hear what thou command'st:—

And thou, brave Oxford, wondrous well belov'd,

In Oxfordshire shalt muster up thy friends.—

My sovereign, with the loving citizens,

Like to his island girt in with the ocean,

Or modest Dian circled with her nymphs,

Shall rest in London, till we come to him.—

Fair lords, take leave, and stand not to reply.—

Farewell, my sovereign.

K. Hen. Farewell, my Hector, and my Troy's true hope.

Clar. In sign of truth I kiss your highness' hand.

K. Hen. Well-minded Clarence, be thou fortunate.

Mont. Comfort, my lord;—and so I take my leave.

Oxf. And thus [Kissing Henry's hand] I seal my truth, and bid adieu.

K. Hen. Sweet Oxford, and my loving Montague,
And all at once, once more a happy farewell.

War. Farewell, sweet lords: let's meet at Coven-try. [Exeunt WAR. CLAR. OXF. and MONT.]

K. Hen. Here at the palace will I rest a while.
Cousin of Exeter, what thinks your lordship?

Metinks, the power, that Edward hath in field,

Should not be able to encounter mine.

Ecc. The doubt is, that he will seduce the rest.

K. Hen. That's not my fear; my <sup>1</sup>mind hath got me fame.

I have not stopp'd mine ears to their demands,

Nor posted off their suits with slow delays;

My pity hath been balm to heal their wounds,

My mildness hath allay'd their swelling griefs,

My mercy dry'd their <sup>2</sup>bitter-flowing tears:

I have not been desirous of their wealth,

Nor much oppress'd them with great subsidies,

Nor forward of revenge, though they much err'd.

Then, why should they love Edward more than me?

No, Exeter, these graces challenge grace;

And, when the lion fawns upon the lamb,

The lamb will never cease to follow him.

[Shout within. A Lancaster! A Lancaster!]

Ecc. Hark, hark, my lord! what shouts are these?

Enter King EDWARD, GLOSTER, and Soldiers.

K. Edw. Seize on the shame-fac'd Henry! bear
him hence,

And once again proclaim us king of England.—

You are the fount that makes small brooks to flow:

Now stops thy spring; my sea shall suck them dry,

And swell so much the higher by their ebb.—

Hence with him to the Tower! let him not speak.

[Exeunt some with King HENRY.]

And, lords, towards Coventry bend we our course,

Where peremptory Warwick now remains.

The sun shines hot, and, if we use delay,

Cold biting winter mars our boy'd-for-hay.

Glo. Away betimes, before his forces join,

And take the great-grown traitor unawares.

Brave warriors, march amain towards Coventry.

[Exeunt.]

<sup>a</sup>Noise; report.—<sup>b</sup>Know.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Coventry.

Enter upon the Walls, WARWICK, the Mayor of Coventry, Two Messengers, and others.

War. Where is the post that came from valiant Oxford?

How far hence is thy lord, mine honest fellow?

1 Mess. By this at Dunsmore, marching hitherward.

War. How far off is our brother Montague?

Where is the post that came from Montague?

2 Mess. By this at Daintry, with a puissant troop.

Enter Sir JOHN SOMERVILLE.

War. Say, Somerville, what says my loving son?

And, by thy guess, how high is Clarence now?

Som. At Southam I did leave him with his forces, And do expect him here some two hours hence.

[Drum heard.]

War. Then Clarence is at hand, I hear his drum.

Som. It is not his, my lord; here Southam lies: The drum your honor hears marcheth from Warwick.

War. Who should that be? belike, unlook'd-for friends. [know.]

Som. They are at hand, and you shall quickly

March. Flourish. Enter King EDWARD, GLOSTER, and Forces.

K. Edw. Go, trumpet, to the walls, and sound a parlee.

Glo. See, how the surly Warwick mans the wall.

War. O, unbid spite! is sportful Edward come? Where slept our scouts, or how are they seduc'd, That we could hear no news of his repair! [gates?]

K. Edw. Now, Warwick, wilt thou ope the city Speak gentle words, and humbly bend thy knee, Call Edward king, and at his hands beg mercy, And he shall pardon thee these outrages.

War. Nay, rather, wilt thou draw thy forces hence, Confess who set thee up and pluck'd thee down? Call Warwick patron, and be penitent, And thou shalt still remain—the duke of York.

Glo. I thought, at least, he would have said the Or did he make the jest against his will? [king;]

War. Is not a dukedom, sir, a goodly gift?

Glo. Ay, by my faith, for a poor earl to give:

I'll do thee <sup>a</sup> service for so good a gift. [brother.]

War. 'Twas I, that gave the kingdom to thy

K. Edw. Why then, 'tis mine, if but by Warwick's gift.

War. Thou art no Atlas for so great a weight:

And, weakling, Warwick takes his gift again;

And Henry is my king, Warwick his subject.

K. Edw. But Warwick's king is Edward's prisoner, And, gallant Warwick, do but answer this: [oner:] What is the body, when the head is off?

Glo. Alas! that Warwick had no more forecast, But, whiles he thought to steal the single ten, The king was slyly finger'd from the <sup>b</sup> deck!

You left poor Henry at the bishop's <sup>c</sup> palace,

And, ten to one, you'll meet him in the Tower.

K. Edw. 'Tis even so: yet you are Warwick still.

Glo. Come, Warwick, take the time; kneel down,

Nay, <sup>d</sup> when? strike now, or else the iron cools.

War. I had rather chop this hand off at a blow, And with the other fling it at thy face,

Than bear so low a sail to strike to thee.

K. Edw. Sail how thou canst, have wind and tide thy friend,

This hand, fast wound about thy coal-black hair,

Shall, whiles thy head is warm, and new cut off,

Write in the dust this sentence with thy blood,—

“Wind-changing Warwick now can change no more.”

Enter OXFORD, with Drum and Colors.

War. O cheerful colors! see, where Oxford comes.

Orf. Oxford, Oxford, for Lancaster!

[OXFORD and his Forces enter the city.]

Glo. The gates are open, let us enter too.

K. Edw. So other foes may set upon our backs.

Stand we in good array; for they, no doubt,

Will issue out again, and bid us battle:

If not, the city being but of small defence,

We'll quickly route the traitors in the same.

War. O! welcome Oxford, for we want thy help.

Enter MONTAGUE, with Drum and Colors.

Mont. Montague, Montague, for Lancaster!

[He and his Forces enter the City.]

Glo. Thou and thy brother both shall buy this treason,

Even with the dearest blood your bodies bear.

K. Edw. The harder match'd, the greater victory:

My mind presageth happy gain, and conquest.

Enter SOMERSET with Drum and Colors.

Som. Somerset, Somerset, for Lancaster!

[He and his Forces enter the City.]

Glo. Two of thy name, both dukes of Somerset,

Have sold their lives unto the house of York;

And thou shalt be the third, if this sword hold.

Enter CLARENCE, with Drum and Colors.

War. And lo! where George of Clarence sweeps Of force enough to bid his brother battle; [along, With whom an upright zeal to right prevails, More than the nature of a brother's love.—

[GLOSTER and CLARENCE whisper.]

Come, Clarence, come; thou wilt, if Warwick calls.

Clar. Father of Warwick, know you what this means?

[Taking the red Rose out of his Hat.]

Look here, I throw my infamy at thee:

I will not ruinate my father's house,

Who gave his blood to 'lime the stones together,

And set up Lancaster. Why, 'trow'st thou, Warwick,

That Clarence is so harsh, so blunt, unnatural,

To bend the fatal instruments of war

Against his brother, and his lawful king?

Perhaps, thou wilt object my holy oath:

To keep that oath, were more impiety

Than Jephtha's, when he sacrific'd his daughter.

I am so sorry for my trespass made,

That to deserve well at my brother's hands,

I here proclaim myself thy mortal foe;

With resolution, wheresoe'er I meet thee,

(As I will meet thee, if thou stir abroad)

To plague thee for thy foul misleading me.

And so, proud-hearted Warwick, I defy thee,

And to my brother turn my blushing cheeks.—

Pardon me, Edward, I will make amends;

And, Richard, do not frown upon my faults,

For I will henceforth be no more unconstant.

K. Edw. Now welcome more, and ten times more belov'd,

Than if thou never hadst deserv'd our hate.

Glo. Welcome, good Clarence: this is brother-like.

War. O! passing traitor, perjur'd, and unjust!

K. Edw. What, Warwick, wilt thou leave the town, and fight,

Or shall we beat the stones about thine ears?

War. Alas! I am not coop'd here for defence:

I will away towards Barnet presently,
And bid thee battle, Edward, if thou dar'st.

K. Edw. Yes, Warwick, Edward dares, and leads the way.—

Lords, to the field! Saint George, and victory!

[March. Excunt.]

SCENE II.—A Field of Battle near Barnet.

Alarums, and Excursions. Enter King EDWARD, bringing in WARWICK wounded.

K. Edw. So, lie thou there: die thou, and die our
For Warwick was a bug, that fear'd us all.—[fear,
Now, Montague, sit fast: I seek for thee,
That Warwick's bones may keep thine company.

[Exit.]

War. Ah! who is nigh? come to me, friend or foe,
And tell me, who is victor, York, or Warwick?

Why ask I that? my mangled body shows,
My blood, my want of strength, my sick heart shows,
That I must yield my body to the earth,
And by my fall the conquest to my foe.
Thus yields the cedar to the axe's edge,

Where arms gave shelter to the princely eagle,
Under whose shade the ramping lion slept;
Whose top-branch over-peep'd Jove's spreading tree,
And kept low shrubs from winter's powerful wind.
These eyes, that now are dimm'd with death's black
Have been as piercing as the mid-day sun, [veil,
To search the secret treasours of the world:

The wrinkles in my brows, now fill'd with blood,
Were liken'd oft to kingly sepulchres;
For who liv'd king, but I could dig his grave?
And who durst smile when Warwick bent his brow?
Lo, now my glory smear'd in dust and blood!
My parks, my walks, my manors that I had,
Even now forsake me; and, of all my lands,
Is nothing left me, but my body's length.
Why, what is pomp, rule, reign, but earth and dust?
And, live we how we can, yet die we must.

Enter OXFORD and SOMERSET.

Som. Ah, Warwick, Warwick! wert thou as we are,
We might recover all our loss again. [power;
The queen from France hath brought a puissant
Even now we heard the news. Ah, could'st thou fly!

War. Why, then I would not fly.—Ah, Montague!
If thou be there, sweet brother, take my hand,
And with thy lips keep in my soul awhile.
Thou lov'st me not; for, brother, if thou didst,
Thy tears would wash this cold congealed blood,
That glues my lips, and will not let me speak.
Come quickly, Montague, or I am dead. [last;

Som. Ah, Warwick! Montague hath breath'd his
And to the latest gasp, cried out for Warwick,
And said—"Commend me to my valiant brother."
And more he would have said; and more he spoke,
Which sounded like a cannon in a vault,
That might not be distinguish'd: but, at last,
I well might hear, deliver'd with a groan,—
"O, farewell Warwick!" [yourselves;

War. Sweet rest his soul!—Fly, lords, and save
For Warwick bids you all farewell, to meet in heaven.

[Dies.]

Orf. Away, away, to meet the queen's great power.

[Excunt, bearing off WARWICK's Body.]

a "A bug, that fear'd us all," i. e., a bugbear, that frightened us all.

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Field.

Flourish. Enter King EDWARD in triumph; with CLARENCE, GLOSTER, and the rest.

K. Edw. Thus far our fortune keeps an upward course,

And we are grac'd with wreaths of victory.

But in the midst of this bright shining day,

I spy a black, suspicious, threatening cloud,

That will encounter with our glorious sun,

Ere he attain his caseful western bed:

I mean, my lords, those powers, that the queen

Hath rais'd in Gallia, have arriv'd our coast,

And, as we hear, march on to fight with us.

Clar. A little gale will soon disperse that cloud,

And blow it to the source from whence it came:

Thy very beams will dry those vapors up,

For every cloud engenders not a storm.

Glo. The queen is valued thirty thousand strong,

And Somerset, with Oxford, fled to her:

If she have time to breathe, be well assur'd,

Her faction will be full as strong as ours.

K. Edw. We are advertis'd by our loving friends,

That they do hold their course toward Tewksbury.

We, having now the best at Barnet field,

Will thither straight, for willingness rids way;

And, as we march, our strength will be augmented

In every county as we go along.—

Strike up the drum! cry—Courage! and away.

[Flourish. Excunt.]

SCENE IV.—Plains near Tewkesbury.

March. Enter Queen MARGARET, Prince EDWARD, SOMERSET, OXFORD, and Soldiers.

Q. Mar. Great lords, wise men ne'er sit and wait their loss,

But cheerly seek how to redress their harms.

What though the mast be now blown over-board,

The cable broke, the holding anchor lost,

And half our sailors swallow'd in the flood,

Yet lives our pilot still: is't meet that he Should leave the helm, and, like a fearful lad,

With fearful eyes add water to the sea,

And give more strength to that which hath too much;

Whiles in his moan the ship splits on the rock,

Which industry and courage might have sav'd?

Ah! what a shame, ah! what a fault were this.

Say, Warwick was our anchor; what of that?

And Montague our top-mast; what of him?

Our slaughter'd friends the tackles; what of these?

Why, is not Oxford here another anchor,

And Somerset another goodly mast?

The friends of France our shrouds and tacklings?

And, though unskilful, why not Ned and I

For once allow'd the skilful pilot's charge?

We will not from the helm to sit and weep,

But keep our course, though the rough wind say no,

From shelves and rocks that threaten us with wreck.

As good to chide the waves, as speak them fair.

And what is Edward but a ruthless sea?

What Clarence but a quicksand of deceit?

And Richard but a ragged fatal rock?

All these the enemies to our poor bark.

Say, you can swim; alas! 'tis but a while:

Tread on the sand; why, there you quickly sink:

Bestride the rock; the tide will wash you off,

Or else you famish; that's a threefold death.

This speak I, lords, to let you understand,

If case some one of you would fly from us,

That there's no hop'd-for mercy with the brothers,

b Arrived is used here actively.

More than with ruthless waves, with sands, and rocks.
Why, courage, then! what cannot be avoided,
'Twere childish weakness to lament, or fear.

Prince. Methinks, a woman of this valiant spirit
Should, if a coward heard her speak these words,
Infuse his breast with magnanimity,
And make him, naked, foil a man at arms.
I speak not this, as doubting any here;
For, did I but suspect a fearful man,
He should have leave to go away betimes,
Lest in our need he might infect another,
And make him of like spirit to himself.
If any such be here, as God forbid!
Let him depart before we need his help.

Oxf. Women and children of so high a courage,
And warriors faint! why, 'twere perpetual shame.—
O, brave young prince! thy famous grandfather
Doth live again in thee: long may'st thou live,
To bear his image, and renew his glories!

Som. And he, that will not fight for such a hope,
Go home to bed, and, like the owl by day,
If he arise, be mock'd and wonder'd at.

Q. Mar. Thanks, gentle Somerset:—sweet Oxford, thanks.

Prince. And take his thanks, that yet hath nothing else.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, lords, for Edward is at hand,
Ready to fight: therefore, be resolute.

Oxf. I thought no less: it is his policy
To haste thus fast, to find us unprovided.

Som. But he's deceived: we are in readiness.

Q. Mar. This cheers my heart to see your forwardness. [budge.]

Oxf. Here pitch our battle; hence we will not

Flourish and March. Enter King EDWARD, CLARENCE, GLOSTER, and Forces.

K. Edw. Brave followers, yonder stands the thorny wood,

Which, by the heavens' assistance and your strength,
Must by the roots be hewn up yet ere night.

I need not add more fuel to your fire,
For, well I <sup>a</sup>wot, ye blaze to burn them out.
Give signal to the fight, and to it, lords!

Q. Mar. Lords, knights, and gentlemen, what I should say,

My tears <sup>b</sup>gain say; for every word I speak,
Ye see, I drink the water of my eye.

Therefore, no more but this:—Henry, your sovereign,
Is prisoner to the foe; his state usurp'd,
His realm a slaughterhouse, his subjects slain,
His statutes cancell'd, and his treasure spent;
And yonder is the wolf that makes this spoil.
You fight in justice: then, in God's name, lords,
Be valiant, and give signal to the fight.

[Exeunt both Armies.]

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Same.

Alarums: Excursions: and afterwards a Retreat.
Then enter King EDWARD, CLARENCE, GLOSTER, and Forces; with Queen MARGARET, OXFORD, and SOMERSET, Prisoners.

K. Edw. Now, here a period of tumultuous broils.
Away with Oxford to Hammes' <sup>c</sup>castle straight:
For Somerset, off with his guilty head.
Go, bear them hence: I will not hear them speak.

Oxf. For my part, I'll not trouble thee with words.

Som. Nor I; but stoop with patience to my fortune.

[Exeunt OXFORD and SOMERSET, guarded.]

Q. Mar. So part we sadly in this troublous world,
To meet with joy in sweet Jerusalem. [Edward

K. Edw. Is proclamation made, that who finds
Shall have a high reward, and he his life?

Glo. It is: and, lo! where youthful Edward comes.

Enter Soldiers, with Prince EDWARD.

K. Edw. Bring forth the gallant: let us hear him speak. [K. EDWARD sits]

What! can so young a thorn begin to prick?

Edward, what satisfaction canst thou make,
For bearing arms, for stirring up my subjects,
And all the trouble thou hast turn'd me to?

Prince. Speak like a subject, proud ambitious York.
Suppose that I am now my father's mouth:

Resign thy chair, and where I stand kneel thou,

Whilst I propose the self-same words to thee,
Which, traitor, thou wouldst have me answer to.

Q. Mar. Ah, that thy father had been so resolv'd!

Glo. That you might still have worn the petticoat,
And ne'er have stol'n the breech from Lancaster.

Prince. Let <sup>d</sup>Æsop fable in a winter's night;
His curish riddles sort not with this place.

Glo. By heaven, brat, I'll plague you for that word.

Q. Mar. Ay, thou wast born to be a plague to men.

Glo. For God's sake, take away this captive scold.

Prince. Nay, take away this scolding crook-back, rather. [tongue.]

K. Edw. Peace! wilful boy, or I will charm your

Clar. Untutor'd lad, thou art too malapert.

Prince. I know my duty: you are all undutiful.

Lascivious Edward,—and thou perjur'd George,

And thou mis-shapen Dick,—I tell ye all,

I am your better, traitors as ye are;

And thou usurp'st my father's right and mine.

K. Edw. Take that, the <sup>e</sup>likeness of this railer here. [Stabs him.]

Glo. Sprawl'st thou? take that, to end thy agony.

[GLO. stabs him.]

Clar. And there's for twitting me with perjury.

[CLAR. stabs him.]

Q. Mar. O, kill me too!

Glo. Marry, and shall. [Offers to kill her.]

K. Edw. Hold, Richard, hold! for we have done too much. [Words.]

Glo. Why should she live, to fill the world with K. Edw. What! doth she swoon? use means for her recovery.

Glo. Clarence, excuse me to the king, my brother.
I'll hence to London on a serious matter:

Ere ye come there, be sure to hear some news.

Clar. What? what?

Glo. The Tower! the Tower! [Exit.]

Q. Mar. O, Ned! sweet Ned! speak to thy mother, boy:

Canst thou not speak?—O traitors! murderers!—

They, that stabb'd Cæsar shed no blood at all,

Did not offend, nor were not worthy blame,

If this foul deed were by to <sup>2</sup>sequel it:

He was a man: this, in respect, a child;

And men ne'er spend their fury on a child.

What's worse than murderer, that I may name it?

No, no; my heart will burst, an if I speak;

And I will speak, that so my heart may burst.—

Butchers and villains! bloody cannibals!

How sweet a plant have you untimely cropp'd!

You have no children, butchers! if you had,

The thought of them would have stirr'd up remorse:

But, if you ever chance to have a child,

Look in his youth to have him so cut off,
As, deathsmen, you have <sup>a</sup>rid this sweet young prince!

K. Edw. Away with her! go, bear her hence <sup>b</sup>perforce.

Q. Mar. Nay, never bear me hence, despatch me here;

Here sheath thy sword, I'll pardon thee my death.

What! wilt thou not?—then, Clarence, do it thou.

Clar. By heaven, I will not do thee so much ease.

Q. Mar. Good Clarence, do; sweet Clarence, do thou do it.

Clar. Didst thou not hear me swear I would not do it.

Q. Mar. Ay, but thou usest to forswear thyself: 'Twas sin <sup>c</sup>before, but now 'tis charity.

What! wilt thou not? where is that devil's butcher, Harl-favor'd Richard? Richard, where art thou?

Thou art not hero: murder is thy alms-deed; Petitioners for blood thou ne'er put'st back.

K. Edw. Away, I say! I charge ye, bear her hence.

Q. Mar. So come to you, and yours, as to this prince! [Exit.]

K. Edw. Where's Richard gone?

Clar. To London, all in post; and, as I guess, To make a bloody supper in the Tower.

K. Edw. He's sudden, if a thing comes in his head. Now march we hence: discharge the common sort

With pay and thanks, and let's away to London, And see our gentle queen how well she fares:

By this, I hope, she hath a son for me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—London. A Room in the Tower.

<sup>1</sup> King HENRY is discovered reading. Enter GLOSTER and the Lieutenant.

Glo. Good day, my lord. What, at your book so hard?

K. Hen. Ay, my good lord: my lord, I should say 'Tis good to flatter; good was little better:

Good Gloster, and good devil, were alike, And both preposterous; therefore, not good lord.

Glo. Sirrah, leave us to ourselves: we must confer. [Exit Lieutenant.]

K. Hen. So flies the reckless shepherd from the wolf:

So first the harmless sheep doth yield his fleece, And next his throat unto the butcher's knife.—

What scene of death hath Roscius now to act?

Glo. Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind: The thief doth fear each bush an officer.

K. Hen. The bird, that hath been limed in a bush, With trembling wings <sup>d</sup>misdothbeth every bush;

And I, the hapless <sup>e</sup>male to one sweet bird, Have now the fatal object in my eye, [kill'd.]

Where my poor young was lim'd, was caught, and Glo. Why, what a <sup>f</sup>peevish fool was that of Crete,

That taught his son the office of a fowl?

And yet, for all his wings, the fool was drown'd.

K. Hen. I, Dædalus; my poor boy, Icarus;

Thy father, Minos, that denied our course;

The sun, that sear'd the wings of my sweet boy,

Thy brother Edward: and thyself, the sea,

Whose envious gulf did swallow up his life.

Ah! kill me with thy weapon, not with words.

My breast can better brook thy dagger's point,

Than can my ears that tragic history.

But wherefore dost thou come? is't for my life?

Glo. Think'st thou I am an executioner?

K. Hen. A persecutor, I am sure, thou art: If murdering innocents be executing, Why, then thou art an executioner.

Glo. Thy son I kill'd for his presumption.

K. Hen. Hadst thou been kill'd, when first thou didst presume,

Thou hadst not liv'd to kill a son of mine.

And thus I prophesy,—that many a thousand,

Which now mistrust no <sup>g</sup>parcel of my fear;

And many an old man's sigh, and many a widow's,

And many an orphan's water-standing eye,—

Men for their sons', wives for their husbands',

Orphans for their parents' timeless death,

Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born.

The owl shriek'd at thy birth, an evil sign;

The night-crow cried, a boding luckless <sup>h</sup>tune;

Dogs howl'd, and hideous tempest shook down trees:

The raven <sup>i</sup>rook'd her on the chimney's top,

And chattering pies in dismal discords sung.

Thy mother felt more than a mother's pain,

And yet brought forth less than a mother's hope;

To wit,—an indigest deformed lump,

Not like the fruit of such a goodly tree.

Teeth hadst thou in thy head, when thou wast born,

To signify, thou cam'st to bite the world:

And, if the rest be true which I have heard,

Thou cam'st—

Glo. I'll hear no more.—Die, prophet, in thy speech: [Stabs him.]

For this, amongst the rest, was I ordain'd.

K. Hen. Ay, and for much more slaughter after this.

O God! forgive my sins, and pardon thee. [Dies.]

Glo. What! wilt the aspiring blood of Lancaster Sink in the ground? I thought it would have mounted.

See, how my sword weeps for the poor king's death! O, may such purple tears be always shed

From those that wish the downfall of our house!—

If any spark of life be yet remaining,

Down, down to hell; and say I sent thee thither,

[Stabs him again.]

I, that have neither pity, love, nor fear.

Indeed, 'tis true, that Henry told me of:

For I have often heard my mother say,

I came into the world with my legs forward.

Had I not reason, think ye, to make haste,

And seek their ruin that usurp'd our right?

The midwife wonder'd; and the women cried,

"O, Jesus bless us! he is born with teeth:"

And so I was; which plainly signified

That I should snarl, and bite, and play the dog.

Then, since the heavens have shap'd my body so,

Let hell make crook'd my mind to answer it.

I have no brother, I am like no brother;

And this word love, which greybeards call divine,

Be resident in men like one another,

And not in me: I am myself alone.—

Clarence, beware: thou keep'st me from the light;

But I will <sup>j</sup>sort a pitchy day for thee:

For I will buzz abroad such prophecies,

That Edward shall be fearful of his life;

And then, to purge his fear, I'll be thy death.

King Henry, and the prince his son, are gone:

Clarence, thy turn is next, and then the rest;

Counting myself but bad, till I be best.—

I'll throw thy body in another room,

And triumph, Henry, in thy day of doom.

[Exit with the Body.]

<sup>i</sup> "Sort," i. e., select; choose out.

SCENE VII.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

King EDWARD is discovered sitting on his Throne; Queen ELIZABETH; <sup>1</sup>a Nurse with the Infant Prince, <sup>2</sup>CLARENCE, HASTINGS, and others.

K. Edw. Once more we sit in England's royal
Re-purchas'd with the blood of enemies. [throno.
What valiant foe-men, like to autumn's corn,
Have we mow'd down, in tops of all their pride?
Three dukes of Somerset, threefold renown'd
For hardy and <sup>3</sup>redoubted champions:
Two Cliffords, as the father and the son;
And two Northumberlands; two braver men
Ne'er spurr'd their coursers at the trumpet's sound:
With them, the two brave bears, Warwick and Mon-
That in their chains fetter'd the kingly lion, [tague,
And made the forest tremble when they roar'd.
Thus have we swept suspicion from our seat,
And made our footstool of security.—

<sup>4</sup>Enter GLOSTER behind.

Come hither, Bess, and let me kiss my boy.—
Young Ned, for thee, thine uncles, and myself,
Have in our armors watch'd the winter's night;
Went all a-foot in summer's scalding heat,
That thou might'st repossess the crown in peace;
And of our labors thou shalt reap the gain.

Glo. I'll blast his harvest, if your head were laid;
<sup>5</sup>[Aside.

For yet I am not look'd on in the world.
This shoulder was ordain'd so thick, to heave;
And heave it shall some weight, or break my back.—

Work thou the way, and that shall <sup>a</sup>execute.

K. Edw. Clarence, and Gloster, love my lovely queen;

And kiss your princely nephew, brothers both.

Clar. The duty, that I owe unto your majesty,
I seal upon the lips of this sweet babe. <sup>6</sup>[Kissing it.

K. Edw. Thanks, noble Clarence; worthy brother, thanks.

Glo. And, that I love the tree from whence thou sprang'st, <sup>7</sup>[Kissing the infant.

Witness the loving kiss I give the fruit.—

[Aside.] To say the truth, so Judas kiss'd his master,
And cried—all hail! when as he meant—all harm.

K. Edw. Now am I seated as my soul delights,
Having my country's peace, and brothers' loves.

Clar. What will your grace have done with Mar-
Reignier, her father, to the king of France [garet?
Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem,
And hither have they sent it for her ransom.

K. Edw. Away with her, and waft her hence to France.—

And now what rests, but that we spend the time
With stately triumphs, mirthful comic shows,
Such as befit the pleasure of the court?
Sound, drums and trumpets!—farewell, sour annoy;
For here, I hope, begins our lasting joy. [Exeunt.

<sup>a</sup> "Work thou the way, and that shall execute:" 'That' refers to Richard's shoulder, before mentioned; and 'work thou the way,' to his head, which we may suppose him to touch, in his speech aside.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. A Street.

Enter GLOSTER.

Glo. Now is the winter of our discontent
Made glorious summer by this <sup>a</sup>sun of York;
And all the clouds, that lower'd upon our house,
In the deep bosom of the ocean buried.
Now are our brows bound with victorious wreaths;
Our bruised arms hung up for monuments;

<sup>a</sup> An allusion to the three sons which are said to have appeared at the battle gained by Edward IV. over the Lancastrians, at Mortimer's Cross.

Our stern alarms chang'd to merry meetings,
Our dreadful marches to delightful <sup>b</sup>measures.
Grim-visag'd war hath smooth'd his wrinkled front;
And now, instead of mounting <sup>c</sup>barbed steeds,
To fright the souls of fearful adversaries,
He capers nimbly in a lady's chamber,
To the lascivious pleasing of a lute.
But I, that am not shap'd for sportive tricks,
Nor made to court an amorous looking-glass;
I, that am rudely stamp'd, and want love's majesty,
To strut before a wanton ambling nymph;
I, that am curtail'd <sup>d</sup>thus of fair proportion,

<sup>b</sup> Dances.—<sup>c</sup> “Barbed,” i. e., barded, caparisoned for war.

Cheated of <sup>a</sup>feature by <sup>b</sup>dissembling nature,
Deform'd, unfinish'd, sent before my time
Into this breathing world, scarce half made up,
And that so lamely and unfashionable,
That dogs bark at me, as I halt by them;
Why I, in this weak piping time of peace,
Have no delight to pass away the time,
Unless to see my shadow in the sun,
And <sup>c</sup>descant on mine own deformity:
And therefore, since I cannot prove a lover,
To entertain these fair well-spoken days,
I am determined to prove a villain,
And hate the idle pleasures of these days.
Plots have I laid, <sup>d</sup>inductions dangerous,
By drunken prophecies, libels, and dreams,
To set my brother Clarence, and the king,
In deadly hate the one against the other:
And, if king Edward be as true and just,
As I am subtle, false, and treacherous,
This day should Clarence closely be <sup>e</sup>mew'd up,
About a prophecy, which says—that G
Of Edward's heirs the murderer shall be. [comes.
Dive, thoughts, down to my soul: here Clarence

Enter CLARENCE, guarded, and BRAKENBURY.
Brother, good day. What means this armed guard,
That waits upon your grace?

Clar. His majesty,
'Tendering my person's safety, hath appointed
This conduct to convey me to the Tower.

Glo. Upon what cause?

Clar. Because my name is George.

Glo. Alack! my lord, that fault is none of yours;
He should, for that, commit your godfathers.
O! belike, his majesty hath some intent,
That you should be new christen'd in the Tower.
But what's the matter, Clarence? may I know?

Clar. Yea, Richard, when I know; but I protest,
As yet I do not: but, as I can learn,
He hearkens after prophecies, and dreams;
And from the <sup>f</sup>cross-row plucks the letter G,
And says, a wizard told him, that by G
His issue disinherited should be;
And, for my name of George begins with G,
It follows in his thought that I am he.
These, as I learn, and such like <sup>g</sup>toys as these,
Have mov'd his highness to commit me now.

Glo. Why, this it is, when men are rul'd by women.
'Tis not the king, that sends you to the Tower:
My lady Grey, his wife, Clarence, 'tis she,
That tempts him to this harsh extremity.
Was it not she, and that good man of worship,
Antony Woodville, her <sup>h</sup>same brother there,
That made him send lord Hastings to the Tower,
From whence this present day he is deliver'd?
We are not safe, Clarence; we are not safe.

Clar. By heaven, I think, there is no man secure,
But the queen's kindred, and night-walking heralds
That trudge betwixt the king and mistress Shore.
Heard you not, what an humble suppliant
Lord Hastings was to her for his delivery?

Glo. Humbly complaining to her deity
Got my lord chamberlain his liberty.
I'll tell you what; I think, it is our way,
If we will keep in favor with the king,
To be her men, and wear her livery:

The jealous o'er-worn widow, and <sup>i</sup>herself,
Since that our brother dubb'd them gentlewomen,
Are mighty gossips in our monarchy.

Brak. I beseech your graces both to pardon me:
His majesty hath straitly given in charge,
That no man shall have private conference,
Of what degree soever, with your brother.

Glo. Even so; an please your worship, Brakenbury,
You may partake of any thing we say.
We speak no treason, man: we say, the king
Is wise and virtuous; and his noble queen
Well struck in years; fair, and not jealous:—
We say that Shore's wife hath a pretty foot,
A cherry lip, a bonny eye, a passing pleasing tongue;
<sup>j</sup>And the queen's kindred are made gentlefolks.

How say you, sir? can you deny all this?

Brak. With this, my lord, myself have naught to do.

Glo. Naught to do with mistress Shore? I tell thee, fellow,

He that doth naught with her, excepting one,
Were best to do it secretly, alone.

Brak. What one, my lord? [me?

Glo. Her husband, knave. Would'st thou betray

Brak. I do beseech your grace to pardon me; and withal,

Forbear your conference with the noble duke.

Clar. We know thy charge, Brakenbury, and will obey.

Glo. We are the queen's <sup>k</sup>subjects, and must obey.—

Brother, farewell: I will unto the king;
And whatsoever you will employ me in,
Were it to call king Edward' widow sister,
I will perform it to enfranchise you.

Mean time, this deep disgrace in brotherhood
Touches me deeper than you can imagine.

Clar. I know, it pleases neither of us well.

Glo. Well, your imprisonment shall not be long;
I will deliver you, or else <sup>l</sup>lie for you:
Mean time, have patience. <sup>3</sup>[Embracing him.

Clar. I must <sup>m</sup>perforce: farewell.

[Exit CLARENCE, BRAKENBURY, and Guard.

Glo. Go, tread the path that thou shalt ne'er return,
Simple, plain Clarence.—I do love thee so,
That I will shortly send thy soul to heaven,
If heaven will take the present at our hands.
But who comes here? the new-deliver'd Hastings?

Enter HASTINGS.

Hast. Good time of day unto my gracious lord.

Glo. As much unto my good lord chamberlain.

Well are you welcome to this open air.

How hath your lordship brook'd imprisonment?

Hast. With patience, noble lord, as prisoners must;
But I shall live, my lord, to give them thanks,
That were the cause of my imprisonment.

Glo. No doubt, no doubt; and so shall Clarence too
For they that were your enemies are his,
And have prevail'd as much on him as you.

Hast. More pity, that the eagles should be <sup>n</sup>mew'd,
While kites and buzzards prey at liberty.

Glo. What news abroad?

Hast. No news so bad abroad, as this at home:—
The king is sickly, weak, and melancholy,
And his physicians fear him mightily.

Glo. Now, by Saint Paul, that news is bad indeed.

O! he hath kept an evil diet long,
And over-much consum'd his royal person:

'Tis very grievous to be thought upon.

Where is he? in his bed?

<sup>l</sup> "Lie for you," i. e., lie in prison in your stead.—<sup>m</sup> "I must perforce," i. e., I am obliged to ('have patience').—<sup>n</sup> "Confin'd; shut up."

Hast. He is.

Glo. Go you before, and I will follow you.

[Exit HASTINGS.]

He cannot live, I hope; and must not die,
Till George be pack'd with 'posthaste up to heaven.
I'll in, to urge his hatred more to Clarence,
With lies well steel'd with weighty arguments;
And, if I fail not in my deep intent,
Clarence hath not another day to live:
Which done, God take king Edward to his mercy,
And leave the world for me to bustle in,
For then I'll marry Warwick's youngest daughter.—
What though I kill'd her husband, and her father?
The readiest way to make the <sup>b</sup>wench amends,
Is to become her husband, and her father:
The which will I; not all so much for love,
As for another secret close intent,
By marrying her which I must reach unto.
But yet I run before my horse to market:
Clarence still breathes; Edward still lives and reigns;
When they are gone, then must I count my gains.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Street.

Enter the Corpse of King HENRY the Sixth, borne in an open Coffin, Gentlemen, bearing Halberds, to guard it; and Lady ANNE as mourner.

Anne. Set down, set down your honorable load,
If honor may be shrouded in a hearse,
Whilst I a while 'obsequiously lament
Th' untimely fall of virtuous Lancaster.—
Poor 'key-cold figure of a holy king!
Pale ashes of the house of Lancaster!
Thou bloodless remnant of that royal blood,
Be it lawful that I invoke thy ghost,
To hear the lamentations of poor Anne,
Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughter'd son,
Stabb'd by the self-same hand that made these wounds!

Lo, in these windows, that let forth thy life,
I pour the helpless balm of my poor eyes:—
O, cursed be the hand that made these holes!
Cursed the heart, that had the heart to do it!
Cursed the blood, that let this blood from hence!
More direful hap betide that hated wretch,
That makes us wretched by the death of thee,
Than I can wish to adders, spiders, toads,
Or any creeping venom'd thing that lives!
If ever he have child, 'abortive be it,
Prodigious, and untimely brought to light,
Whose ugly and unnatural aspect
May fright the hopeful mother at the view;
And that be heir to his 'unhappiness!
If ever he have wife, let her be made
More miserable by the death of him,
Than I am made by my young lord, and thee!—
Come, now toward Chertsey with your holy load,
Taken from Paul's to be interred there;
And still, as you are weary of this weight,
Rest you, whilst I lament king Henry's corse.

[The Bearers take up the Corpse and advance.

Enter GLOSTER.

Glo. Stay you, that bear the corse, and set it down.

Anne. What black magician conjures up this fiend,
To stop devoted charitable deeds?

Glo. Villains! set down the corse; or, by Saint Paul,
I'll make a corse of him that disobeys.

1 Gent. Mylord, stand back, and let the coffin pass.

Glo. Unmanner'd dog! stand thou when I command:

Advance thy halberd higher than my breast,
Or, by Saint Paul, I'll strike thee to my foot,
And spurn upon thee, beggar, for thy boldness.

[The Bearers set down the Coffin.

Anne. What! do you tremble? are you all afraid?
Alas! I blame you not; for you are mortal,
And mortal eyes cannot endure the devil.—
Avaunt, thou dreadful minister of hell!

Thou hadst but power over his mortal body,
His soul thou canst not have: therefore, be gone.

Glo. Sweet saint, for charity, be not so <sup>b</sup>curst.

Anne. Foul devil, for God's sake, hence, and trouble us not;

For thou hast made the happy earth thy hell,
Fill'd it with cursing cries, and deep 'exclaims.

If thou delight to view thy heinous deeds,
Behold this 'pattern of thy butcheries.

O, gentlemen! see, see! dead Henry's wounds
Open their congeal'd mouths, and bleed 'afresh!—
Blush, blush, thou lump of foul deformity,
For 'tis thy presence that exhales this blood
From cold and empty veins, where no blood dwells:
Thy deed, inhuman and unnatural,
Provokes this deluge most unnatural.—

O God, which this blood mad'st, revenge his death!
O earth, which this blood drink'st, revenge his death!
Either, heaven, with lightning strike the murderer
dead,

Or, earth, gape open wide, and eat him quick,
As thou dost swallow up this good king's blood,
Which his hell-govern'd arm hath butchered!

Glo. Lady, you know no rules of charity,
Which renders good for bad, blessings for curses.

Anne. Villain, thou know'st nor law of God nor man:

No beast so fierce, but knows some touch of pity.

Glo. But I know none, and therefore am no beast.

Anne. O wonderful, when devils tell the truth!

Glo. More wonderful, when angels are so angry.—
Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman,
Of these supposed evils to give me leave
By <sup>m</sup>circumstance but to acquit myself.

Anne. Vouchsafe, 'diffus'd infection of a man,
For these known evils but to give me leave
By <sup>m</sup>circumstance to curse thy cursed self.

Glo. Fairer than tongue can name thee, let me have Some patient leisure to excuse myself. [make]

Anne. Foulter than heart can think thee, thou canst
No excuse 'current, but to hang thyself.

Glo. By such despair I should accuse myself.

Anne. And, by despairing, shalt thou stand excus'd
For doing worthy vengeance on thyself,
That didst unworthy slaughter upon others.

Glo. Say, that I slew them not?

Anne. Then say they were not slain:
But dead they are, and, devilish slave, by thee.

Glo. I did not kill your husband.

Anne. Why, then he is alive.

Glo. Nay, he is dead; and slain by Edward's hand.

Anne. In thy foul throat thou liest: queen Margaret saw

Thy murderous falchion smoking in his blood;
 The which thou once didst bend against her breast,
 But that thy brothers beat aside the point.

Glo. I was provoked by her slanderous tongue,
 That laid their <sup>a</sup>guilt upon my guiltless shoulders.

Annc. Thou wast provoked by thy bloody mind,
 That never dreamt on aught but butcheries.
 Didst thou not kill this king?

Glo. I grant ye. [me too,

Annc. Dost grant me, hedge-hog? then, God grant
 Thou may'st be damned for that wicked deed!

O! he was gentle, mild, and virtuous. [him.

Glo. The fitter for the King of heaven that hath

Annc. He is in heaven, where thou shalt never come. [thither;

Glo. Let him thank me, that help to send him
 For he was fitter for that place than earth.

Annc. And thou unfit for any place but hell. [it.

Glo. Yes, one place else, if you will hear me name

Annc. Some dungeon.

Glo. Your bed-chamber.

Annc. Ill rest betide the chamber where thou liest.

Glo. So will it, madam, till I lie with you.

Annc. I hope so.

Glo. I know so.—But, gentle lady Anne,—
 To leave this keen encounter of our wits,
 And fall something into a slower method,
 Is not the cause of the timeless deaths
 Of these Plantagenets, Henry, and Edward,
 As blameful as the executioner? [effect.

Annc. Thou was the cause, and most accurs'd

Glo. Your beauty was the cause of that effect;

Your beauty, that did haunt me in my sleep,

To undertake the death of all the world,

So I might live one hour in your sweet bosom.

Annc. If I thought that, I tell thee, homicide,

These nails should rend that beauty from my cheeks.

Glo. These eyes could not endure that beauty's wreck;

You should not blemish it, if I stood by:

As all the world is cheered by the sun,

So I by that; it is my day, my life. [thy life!

Annc. Black night o'ershade thy day, and death

Glo. Curse not thyself, fair creature; thou art both.

Annc. I would I were, to be reveng'd on thee.

Glo. It is a quarrel most unnatural,

To be reveng'd on him that loveth thee.

Annc. It is a quarrel just and reasonable,

To be reveng'd on him that kill'd my husband.

Glo. He that bereft thee, lady, of thy husband,

Did it to help thee to a better husband.

Annc. His better doth not breathe upon the earth.

Glo. He lives that loves you better than he could.

Annc. Name him.

Glo. Plantagenet.

Annc. Why, that was he.

Glo. The self-same name, but one of better nature.

Annc. Where is he?

Glo. Here: [She spits at him.] Why

dost thou spit at me?

Annc. 'Would it were mortal poison, for thy sake!

Glo. Never came poison from so sweet a place.

Annc. Never hung poison on a fouler toad.

Out of my sight! thou dost infect mine eyes.

Glo. Thine eyes, sweet lady, have infected mine.

Annc. Would they were <sup>b</sup>basilisks, to strike thee dead!

Glo. I would they were, that I might die at once,

For now they kill me with a living death.

Those eyes of thine from mine have drawn salt tears,

Sham'd their aspects with store of childish drops:

<sup>a</sup> "Their guilt," i. e., the crime of my brothers.—<sup>b</sup> The

basilisk was said to destroy its victim by gazing on it.—

These eyes, which never shed <sup>c</sup>remorseful tear;
 No, when my father York, and Edward wept
 To hear the piteous moan that Rutland made,
 When black-fac'd Clifford shook his sword at him;
 Nor when thy warlike father, like a child,
 Told the sad story of my father's death,
 And twenty times made pause to sob and weep,
 That all the standers-by had wet their cheeks,
 Like trees bedash'd with rain; in that sad time
 My manly eyes did scorn an humble tear:
 And what these sorrows could not thence exhale,
 Thy beauty bath, and made them blind with weeping.
 I never sued to friend, nor enemy;
 My tongue could never learn sweet smoothing word;
 But now thy beauty is propos'd my foe,
 My proud heart sues, and prompts my tongue to speak.

[She looks scornfully on him.

Teach not thy lip such scorn; for it was made
 For kissing, lady, not for such contempt.

If thy revengeful heart cannot forgive,

Lo! here I lend thee this sharp-pointed sword;

Which if thou please to hide in this true breast,

And let the soul forth that adoreth thee,

I lay it naked to the deadly stroke,

And humbly beg the death upon my knee.

[He lays his Breast open: she offers at it with his Sword.

Nay, do not pause; for I did kill king Henry;—

But 'twas thy beauty that provoked me.

Nay, now despatch; 'twas I that stabbed young

Edward;—

But 'twas thy heavenly face that set me on.

[She 'falls the Sword.

Take up the sword again, or take up me.

Annc. Arise, dissembler: though I wish thy death,

I will not be thy executioner.

Glo. Then bid me kill myself, and I will do it.

<sup>2</sup>[Taking up the Sword.

Annc. I have already.

Glo. That was in thy rage:

Speak it again, and even with the word,

This hand, which for thy love did kill thy love,

Shall for thy love kill a far truer love:

To both thy deaths shalt thou be necessary.

Annc. I would I knew thy heart.

Glo. 'Tis figur'd in my tongue.

Annc. I fear me, both are false.

Glo. Then, never man was true.

Annc. Well, well, put up your sword.

Glo. Say, then, my peace is made.

Annc. That shalt thou know hereafter.

Glo. But shall I live in hope?

<sup>3</sup>[Sheathing his Sword.

Annc. All men, I hope, live so.

Glo. Vouchsafe to wear this ring.

Annc. To take, is not to give.

[She puts on the Ring.

Glo. Look, how my ring encompasseth thy finger,

Even so thy breast encloseth my poor heart;

Wear both of them, for both of them are thine.

And if thy poor devoted <sup>4</sup>suppliant may

But beg one favor at thy gracious hand,

Thou dost confirm his happiness for ever.

Annc. What is it?

Glo. That it may please you leave these sad de-sings

To him that hath most cause to be a mourner,

And presently repair to <sup>5</sup>Crosby-place.

Where (after I have solemnly inter'd,

At Chertsey monastery, this noble king,

And wet his grave with my repentant tears)

<sup>c</sup> Pitying.—<sup>d</sup> "Crosby-place," i. e., a house near Bishopsgate street, belonging to the Duke of Gloster.

I will with all <sup>a</sup>expedient duty see you:
For divers unknown reasons, I beseech you,
Grant me this boon.

Anne. With all my heart; and much it joys me too,
To see you become so penitent.—
Tressel, and Berkley, go along with me.

Glo. Bid me farewell.

Anne. 'Tis more than you deserve;
But since you teach me how to flatter you,
Imagine I have said farewell already.

[Exeunt Lady ANNE, TRESSSEL, and BERKLEY.]

Gent. Towards Chertsey, noble lord?

Glo. No, to White-Friars; there attend my coming.

[Exeunt the rest, with the Corse.]

Was ever woman in this humor woo'd?
Was ever woman in this humor won?
I'll have her, but I will not keep her long.
What! I, that kill'd her husband, and his father,
To take her in her heart's extremest hate;
With curses in her mouth, tears in her eyes,
The bleeding witness of my hatred by, [me,
Having God, her conscience, and these bars against
And I no friends to back my suit withal,
But the plain devil, and dissembling looks,
And yet to win her,—all the world to nothing! Ha!
Hath she forgot already that brave prince,
Edward, her lord, whom I, some three months since,
Stabb'd in my angry mood at Tewksbury?
A sweeter and a lovelier gentleman,—
Framed in the prodigality of nature,
Young, valiant, wise, and, no doubt, right royal,—
The spacious world cannot again afford:
And will she yet <sup>b</sup>abase her eyes on me,
That cropp'd the golden prime of this sweet prince,
And made her widow to a woful bed?
On me, whose all not equals Edward's moiety?
On me, that halt, and am mis-shapen thus?
My dukedom to a beggarly <sup>c</sup>denier,
I do mistake my person all this while:
Upon my life, she finds, although I cannot,
Myself to be a marvellous <sup>d</sup>proper man.
I'll be at <sup>e</sup>charges for a looking-glass;
And entertain a score or two of tailors,
To study fashions to adorn my body:
Since I am crept in favor with myself,
I will maintain it with some little cost.
But, first, I'll turn you' fellow <sup>f</sup>in his grave,
And then return lamenting to my love.—
Shine out, fair sun, till I have bought a glass,
That I may see my shadow as I pass. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Queen ELIZABETH, Lord RIVERS, and Lord GREY.

Riv. Have patience, madam: there's no doubt, his majesty

Will soon recover his accustom'd health.

Grey. In that you brook it ill, it makes him worse:
Therefore, for God's sake, entertain good comfort,
And cheer his grace with quick and merry words.

Q. Eliz. If he were dead, what would betide on me?

Grey. No other harm, but loss of such a lord.

Q. Eliz. The loss of such a lord includes all harms.

Grey. The heavens have bless'd you with a goodly
To be your comfort when he is gone. [son,

Q. Eliz. Ah! he is young; and his minority

Is put unto the trust of Richard Gloster,
A man that loves not me, nor none of you.

Riv. Is it concluded, he shall be protector?

Q. Eliz. It is determin'd, not concluded yet;
But so it must be, if the king miscarry.

Enter BUCKINGHAM and STANLEY.

Grey. Here come the lords of Buckingham and Stanley.

Buck. Good time of day unto your royal grace.

Stan. God make your majesty joyful as you have been! [Stanley,

Q. Eliz. The countess Richmond, good my lord of
To your good prayer will scarcely say amen.
Yet, Stanley, notwithstanding she's your wife,
And loves not me, be you, good lord, assur'd,
I hate not you for her proud arrogance.

Stan. I do beseech you, either not believe
The envious slanders of her false accusers;
Or, if she be accus'd on true report,
Bear with her weakness, which, I think, proceeds
From wayward sickness, and no grounded malice.

Q. Eliz. Saw you the king to-day, my lord of Stanley?

Stan. But now, the duke of Buckingham, and I,
Are come from visiting his majesty.

Q. Eliz. What likelihood of his amendment, lords?

Buck. Madam, good hope: his grace speaks cheerfully. [with him?

Q. Eliz. God grant him health! Did you confer

Buck. Ay, madam: he desires to make <sup>e</sup>atonement
Between the duke of Gloster and your brothers,
And between them and my lord chamberlain;
And sent to <sup>h</sup>warn them to his royal presence.

Q. Eliz. Would all were well!—But that will
I fear, our happiness is at the height. [never be:

Enter GLOSTER, <sup>2</sup>stamping angrily, with HASTINGS, and DORSET.

Glo. They do me wrong, and I will not endure it.—
Who are they, that complain unto the king,
That I, forsooth, am stern, and love them not?
By holy Paul, they love his grace but lightly,
That fill his ears with such dissensions rumors.
Because I cannot flatter, and speak fair,
Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceive, and 'cog,
Duck with French nods and apish courtesy,
I must be held a rancorous enemy.
Cannot a plain man live, and think no harm,
But thus his simple truth must be abus'd
With silken, sly, insinuating <sup>k</sup>Jacks? [grace?

Grey. To whom in all this presence speaks your
Glo. To thee, that hast nor honesty, nor grace.
When have I injur'd thee? when done thee wrong?—
Or thee?—or thee?—or any of your faction?

A plague upon you all! His royal grace,
(Whom God preserve better than you would wish!)
Cannot be quiet scarce a breathing-while,
But you must trouble him with <sup>l</sup>lewd complaints.

Q. Eliz. Brother of Gloster, you mistake the matter.
The king, on his own royal disposition,
And not provok'd by any suitor else,
Aiming, belike, at your interior hatred,
That in your outward action shows itself,
Against my children, brothers, and myself,
Makes him to send; that thereby he may gather
The ground of your ill-will, and so remove it.

Glo. I cannot <sup>m</sup>tell;—the world is grown so bad,
That wren make prey where eagles dare not perch:
Since every Jack became a gentleman,
There's many a gentle person made a Jack.

Q. Eliz. Come, come, we know your meaning, brother Gloster:

<sup>a</sup> Expedious. — <sup>b</sup> "Abase." i. e., lower; cast down. —
<sup>c</sup> The denier was a small French coin. — <sup>d</sup> "Marvellous proper," i. e., marvellously well proportioned. — <sup>e</sup> "I'll be at charges for," i. e., I'll incur the expense of. — <sup>f</sup> Into.

 wheedle. — <sup>k</sup> "Jacks," i. e., low fellows. — <sup>l</sup> "Lewd," i. e., wicked. — <sup>m</sup> That is, "I cannot tell what to say or think of."

You envy my advancement, and my friends,
God grant, he never may have need of you!

Glo. Meantime, God grants that I have need of you:
Our brother is imprison'd by your means;
Myself disgrac'd, and the nobility
Held in contempt; while many great promotions
Are daily given, to ennoble those
That scarce, some two days since, were worth a noble.

Q. Eliz. By him that rais'd me to this careful height
From that contented hap which I enjoy'd,
I never did incense his majesty
Against the duke of Clarence; but have been
An earnest advocate to plead for him.
My lord, you do me shameful injury,
Falsely to draw me in these vile suspects.

Glo. You may deny, that you were not the mean
Of my lord Hastings' late imprisonment.

Riv. She may, my lord; for— [so?]

Glo. She may, lord Rivers,—why, who knows not
She may do more, sir, than denying that:
She may help you to many fair preferments,
And then deny her aiding hand therein,
And lay those honors on your high desert. [she,—
What may she not? She may,—ay, marry, may

Riv. What, marry, may she?

Glo. What, marry, may she? marry with a king,
A bachelor, and a handsome stripping too.
I 'wis, your grandam had a worse match.

Q. Eliz. My lord of Gloster, I have too long borne
Your blunt upbraidings, and your bitter scoffs:
By heaven, I will acquaint his majesty,
Of those gross taunts that oft I have endur'd.
I had rather be a country serving-maid,
Than a great queen, with this condition,
To be thus taunted, scorn'd, and baited at:
Small joy have I in being England's queen.

Enter Queen MARGARET, behind.

Q. Mar. And lessen'd be that small, God, I beseech him! <sup>1</sup>[Aside.]

Thy honor, state, and seat, is due to me.

Glo. What! threat you me with telling of the king?
Tell him, and spare not: look, what I have said
I will avouch in presence of the king:
I dare adventure to be sent to the Tower.

'Tis time to speak; my pains are quite forgot,

Q. Mar. Out, devil! I do remember thee too well: <sup>2</sup>[Aside.]

Thou kill'dst my husband Henry in the Tower,
And Edward, my poor son, at Tewksbury.

Glo. Ere you were queen, ay, or your husband king,
I was a pack-horse in his great affairs;
A weeder-out of his proud adversaries,
A liberal rewarder of his friends:
To royalize his blood, I spent mine own.

Q. Mar. Ay, and much better blood than his, or thine. <sup>3</sup>[Aside.]

Glo. In all which time, you, and your husband Grey,

Were factious for the house of Lancaster;—

And, Rivers, so were you.—Was not your husband

In Margaret's battle at Saint Alban's slain?

Let me put in your minds, if you forget,

What you have been ere this, and what you are;

Withal, what I have been, and what I am.

Q. Mar. A murd'rous villain, and so still thou art. <sup>4</sup>[Aside.]

Glo. Poor Clarence did forsake his father Warwick,
Ay, and forswore himself,—which Jesu pardon!

Q. Mar. Which God revenge! <sup>5</sup>[Aside.]

Glo. To fight on Edward's party, for the crown;

And, for his meed, poor lord, he is mew'd up.
I would to God, my heart were flint like Edward's,
Or Edward's soft and pitiful, like mine:
I am too childish-foolish for this world.

Q. Mar. Hie thee to hell for shame, and leave this world. <sup>6</sup>[Aside.]

Thou 'cacadæmon! there thy kingdom is.

Riv. My lord of Gloster, in those busy days,
Which here you urge to prove us enemies,
We follow'd then our lord, our sovereign king;
So should we you, if you should be our king.

Glo. If I should be?—I had rather be a pedlar.
Far be it from my heart the thought thereof!

Q. Eliz. As little joy, my lord, as you suppose
You should enjoy, were you this country's king,
As little joy you may suppose in me,
That I enjoy, being the queen thereof.

For I am she, and altogether joyless.

I can no longer hold me patient.—

<sup>8</sup>[Coming forward. They all start.]

Hear me, you wrangling pirates, that fall out

In sharing that which you have pill'd from me!

Which of you trembles not, that looks on me?

If not, that, I being queen, you bow like subjects,

Yet that, by you depos'd, you quake like rebels?—

Ah! gentle villain, do not turn away. [my sight?]

Glo. Foul wrinkled witch, what 'mak'st thou in

Q. Mar. But repetition of what thou hast marr'd;

That will I make, before I let thee go.

Glo. Wert thou not banished, on pain of death?

Q. Mar. I was; but I do find more pain in banishment,

Than death can yield me here by my abode.

A husband, and a son, thou ow'st to me,—

And thou, a kingdom;—all of you, allegiance:

This sorrow that I have, by right is yours,

And all the pleasures you usurp are mine.

Glo. The curse my noble father laid on thee,

When thou didst crown his warlike brows with paper,

And with thy scorns drew'st rivers from his eyes;

And then, to dry them, gav'st the duke a clout

Steep'd in the faultless blood of pretty Rutland;—

His curses, then from bitterness of soul

Denounc'd against thee, are all fallen upon thee,

And God, not we, hath plagu'd thy bloody deed.

Q. Eliz. So just is God, to right the innocent.

Hast. O! 'twas the foulest deed to slay that babe,

And the most merciless, that e'er was heard of.

Riv. Tyrants themselves wept when it was reported.

Dors. No man but prophesied revenge for it.

Buck. Northumberland, then present, wept to see it.

Q. Mar. What! were you snarling all, before I

Ready to catch each other by the throat, [came,

And turn you all your hatred now on me?

Did York's dread curse prevail so much with heaven,

That Henry's death, my lovely Edward's death,

Their kingdom's loss, my woful banishment,

Should all but answer for that peevish brag?

Can curses pierce the clouds, and enter heaven?—

Why, then give way, dull clouds, to my quick curses!—

Though not by war, by <sup>k</sup>surfeit die your king,

As ours by murder, to make him a king!

Edward, thy son, that now is prince of Wales,

For Edward, our son, that was prince of Wales,

Die in his youth by like untimely violence!

Thyself a queen, for me that was a queen,

Outlive thy glory, like my wretched self!

Long may'st thou live, to wait thy children's death;
And see another, as I see thee now,
Deck'd in thy rights, as thou art stall'd in mine!
Long die thy happy days before thy death;
And, after many lengthen'd hours of grief,
Die neither mother, wife, nor England's queen!
Rivers, and Dorset, you were standers by,
And so wast thou, lord Hastings, when my son
Was stabb'd with bloody daggers: God, I pray him,
That none of you may live his natural age,
But by some unlook'd accident cut off! [Hag.]

Glo. Have done thy charm, thou hateful wither'd

Q. Mar. And leave out thee? stay, dog, for thou shalt hear me.

If heaven have any grievous plague in store,
Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee,
O! let them keep it, till thy sins be ripe,
And then hurl down their indignation
On thee, the troubler of the poor world's peace!
The worm of conscience still be-gnaw thy soul!
Thy friends suspect for traitors while thou liv'st,
And take deep traitors for thy dearest friends!
No sleep close up that deadly eye of thine,
Unless it be while some tormenting dream
Affrights thee with a hell of ugly devils!
Thou elvish-mark'd, abortive, rooting <sup>a</sup>hog!
Thou that wast seal'd in thy nativity
<sup>1</sup>The stain of nature, and the scorn of hell!
Thou slander of thy heavy mother's womb!
Thou loathed issue of thy father's loins!
Thou rag of honor! thou detested—

Glo. Margaret.

Q. Mar. Richard!

Glo. Ha?

Q. Mar. I call thee not.

Glo. I cry thee mercy then; for I did think,
That thou hadst call'd me all these bitter names.

Q. Mar. Why, so I did; but look'd for no reply.
O! let me make the period to my curse.

Glo. 'Tis done by me, and ends in—Margaret.

Q. Eliz. Thus have you breath'd your curse against yourself. [fortune;

Q. Mar. Poor painted queen, vain flourish of my

Whose deadly web ensnareth thee about?

Fool, fool! thou whet'st a knife to kill thyself.

The day will come, that thou shalt wish for me

To help thee curse this poisonous bunch-back'd toad.

Hast. False-boding woman, end thy frantic curse,
Lest to thy harm thou move our patience.

Q. Mar. Foul shame upon you; you have all mov'd mine. [your duty.

Riv. Were you well serv'd, you would be taught

Q. Mar. To serve me well, you all should do me duty,

Teach me to be your queen, and you my subjects.

O! serve me well, and teach yourselves that duty.

Dor. Dispute not with her, she is lunatic. [part:

Q. Mar. Peace, master marquess! you are <sup>b</sup>malapropos
Your fire-new stamp of honor is scarce current.

O, that your young nobility could judge,

What 'twere to lose it, and be miserable!

They that stand high have many blasts to shake them,
And if they fall they dash themselves to pieces.

Glo. Good counsel, marry:—learn it, learn it, marquess.

Dor. It touches you, my lord, as much as me.

Glo. Ay, and much more; but I was born so high:
Our <sup>c</sup>evry buildeth in the cedar's top,
And dallies with the wind, and scorns the sun.

<sup>a</sup> An allusion to the armorial bearing of the duke, which was a boar argent.—<sup>b</sup> Inopudent.—<sup>c</sup> Evyry properly signified a brood.

Q. Mar. And turns the sun to shade,—alas! alas!—
Witness my son, now in the shade of death;
Whose bright out-shining beams thy cloudy wrath
Hath in eternal darkness folded up.

Your evry buildeth in our evry's nest.—

O God! that seest it, do not suffer it:

As it was won with blood, lost be it so!

Buck. Peace, peace! for shame, if not for charity.

Q. Mar. Urge neither charity nor shame to me:

Uncharitably with me have you dealt,

And shamefully my hopes by you are butcher'd.

My charity is outrage, life my shame,

And in that shame still live my sorrow's rage!

Buck. Have done, have done. [Hast.]

Q. Mar. O, princely Buckingham! I'll kiss thy

In sign of league and amity with thee:

Now, fair befall thee, and thy noble house!

Thy garments are not spotted with our blood,

Nor thou within the compass of my curse.

Buck. Nor no one here; for curses never pass

The lips of those that breathe them in the air.

Q. Mar. I will not think but they ascend the sky,

And there awake God's gentle-sleeping peace.

O Buckingham! take heed of yonder dog:

Look, when he fawns, he bites; and when he bites,

His venom tooth will rankle to the death:

Have not to do with him, beware of him;

Sin, death, and hell, have set their marks on him,

And all their ministers attend on him.

Glo. What doth she say, my lord of Buckingham?

Buck. Nothing that I respect, my gracious lord.

Q. Mar. What! dost thou scorn me for my gentle counsel,

And soothe the devil that I warn thee from?

O! but remember this another day,

When he shall split thy very heart with sorrow,

And say, poor Margaret was a prophetess.—

Live each of you the subjects to his hate,

And he to yours, and all of you to God's! [Exit.

Hast. My hair doth stand on end to hear her curses.

Riv. And so doth mine. I muse, why she's at liberty.

Glo. I cannot blame her: by God's holy mother,

She hath had too much wrong; and I repent

My part thereof, that I have done to her.

Q. Eliz. I never did her any, to my knowledge.

Glo. Yet you have all the vantage of her wrong.

I was too hot to do somebody good,

That is too cold in thinking of it now.

Marry, as for Clarence, he is well repaid;

He is <sup>d</sup>frank'd up to fattening for his pains!—

God pardon them that are the cause thereof!

Riv. A virtuous and a Christian-like conclusion,

To pray for them that have done <sup>e</sup>scath to us.

Glo. So do I ever, being well-advis'd; <sup>2</sup>[Aside.

For had I curs'd now, I had curs'd myself.

Enter CATESBY.

Cates. Madam, his majesty doth call for you,—

And for your grace, and you, my noble lords.

Q. Eliz. Catesby, I come.—Lords, will you go

Riv. We wait upon your grace. [with me?

[Exit all but GLOSTER.

Glo. I do the wrong, and first begin to brawl.

The secret mischiefs that I set abroad,

I lay unto the grievous charge of others.

Clarence, whom I, indeed, have cast in darkness,

I do beweepe to many simple gulls;

Namely, to Stanley, Hastings, Buckingham;

And tell them, 'tis the queen and her allies,

That stir the king against the duke my brother.

Now, they believe it; and withal whet me

<sup>d</sup> "Frank'd up," i. e., closely confined.—<sup>e</sup> Harm; mischief.

To be reveng'd on Rivers, Vaughan, Grey;
But then I sigh, and, with a piece of scripture,
Tell them, that God bids us do good for evil:
And thus I clothe my naked villainy
With odd old ends stol'n forth of holy writ,
And seem a saint when most I play the devil.

Enter two Murderers.

But soft! here come my executioners.—

How now, my hurly, stout resolved mates!

Are you now going to dispatch this thing?

1 Murd. We are, my lord; and come to have the warrant,

That we may be admitted where he is.

Glo. Well thought upon; I have it here about me.

[Gives the Warrant.]

When you have done, repair to Crosby-place.

But, sirs, be sudden in the execution,

Withal obdurate: do not hear him plead;

For Clarence is well spoken, and, perhaps,

May move your hearts to pity, if you mark him.

1 Murd. Tut, tut! my lord, we will not stand to prate;

Talkers are no good doers: be assur'd,

We go to use our hands, and not our tongues.

Glo. Your eyes drop mill-stones, when fools' eyes fall tears:

I like you, lads;—about your business straight;

Go, go, despatch.

1 Murd. We will, my noble lord. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Tower.

Enter CLARENCE and BRAKENBURY.

Brak. Why looks your grace so heavily to-day?

Clar. O! I have pass'd a miserable night,

So full of fearful dreams, of ugly sights,

That, as I am a Christian faithful man,

I would not spend another such a night,

Though 'twere to buy a world of happy days,

So full of dismal terror was the time.

Brak. What was your dream, my lord? I pray you, tell me.

Clar. Methought, that I had broken from the Tower,

And was embark'd to cross to Burgundy;

And, in my company, my brother Gloster,

Who from my cabin tempted me to walk

Upon the hatches: thence we look'd toward England,

And cited up a thousand heavy times,

During the wars of York and Lancaster,

That had befall'n us. As we pac'd along

Upon the giddy footing of the hatches,

Methought, that Gloster stumbled; and, in falling,

Struck me (that thought to stay him) over-board,

Into the tumbling billows of the main.

O Lord! methought, what pain it was to drown!

What dreadful noise of water in mine ears!

What sights of ugly death within mine eyes!

Methought I saw a thousand fearful wrecks;

A thousand men that fishes gnaw'd upon;

Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl,

Inestimable stones, unvalued jewels,

All scatter'd in the bottom of the sea:

Some lay in dead men's skulls; and in the holes

Where eyes did once inhabit, there were crept

(As 'twere in scorn of eyes) reflecting gems,

That woo'd the slimy bottom of the deep,

And mock'd the dead bones that lay scatter'd by.

Brak. Had you such leisure, in the time of death,

To gaze upon these secrets of the deep?

Clar. Methought I had, and often did I strive

To yield the ghost; but still the envious flood

Stopt in my soul, and would not let it forth
To find the empty, vast, and wandering air;
But smother'd it within my panting bulk,
Which almost burst to belch it in the sea.

Brak. Awak'd you not in this sore agony?

Clar. No, no; my dream was lengthen'd after life.
O! then began the tempest to my soul!

I pass'd, methought, the melancholy flood,

With that sour ferryman which poets write of,

Unto the kingdom of perpetual night.

The first that there did greet my stranger soul,

Was my great father-in-law, renowned Warwick,

Who cried aloud,—“What scourge for perjury
Can this dark monarchy afford false Clarence?”

And so he vanish'd. Then, came wandering by

A shadow like an angel, with bright hair

Dabbled in blood; and he shriek'd out aloud,—

“Clarence is come,—false, d'flecting, perjur'd Clarence,—

That stabb'd me in the field by Tewksbury;—

Seize on him, fiends! take him unto torment!”

With that, methought, a legion of foul fiends

Environ'd me, and howl'd in mine ears

Such hideous cries, that, with the very noise,

I trembling wak'd, and, for a season after,

Could not believe but that I was in hell;

Such terrible impression made my dream.

Brak. No marvel, lord, though it affrighted you;

I am afraid, methinks, to hear you tell it.

Clar. Al, keeper, keeper! I have done these things

That now give evidence against my soul,

For Edward's sake; and, see, how he requites me!—

O God! if my deep prayers cannot appease thee,

But thou wilt be aveng'd on my misdeeds,

Yet execute thy wrath on me alone:

O, spare my guiltless wife and my poor children!—

Keeper, I pry thee, sit by me awhile;

My soul is heavy, and I fain would sleep.

<sup>1</sup>[Sitting down.]

Brak. I will, my lord: God give your grace good rest.—

<sup>2</sup>[CLARENCE sleeps.]

Sorrow breaks seasons, and reposing hours,

Makes the night morning, and the noon-time night.

Princes have but their titles for their glories,

An outward honor for an inward toil;

And for unfelt imaginations,

They often feel a world of restless cares:

So that, between their titles, and low name,

There's nothing differs but the outward fame.

Enter the two Murderers.

1 Murd. Ho! who's here?

Brak. What would'st thou, fellow? and how cam'st thou hither?

1 Murd. I would speak with Clarence; and I came hither on my legs.

Brak. What! so brief?

2 Murd. 'Tis better, sir, than to be tedious.—

Let him see our commissions; and talk no more.

[A Paper delivered to BRAKENBURY, who reads it.]

Brak. I am, in this, commanded to deliver

The noble duke of Clarence to your hands.

I will not reason what is meant hereby,

Because I will be guiltless from the meaning:

There lies the duke asleep, and there the keys.

I'll to the king; and signify to him,

That thus I have resign'd to you my charge.

1 Murd. You may, sir; 'tis a point of wisdom: [Exit BRAKENBURY.]

Fare you well.

<sup>d</sup> “Flecting,” i. e., unstable; inconstant.—<sup>e</sup> That is, “The glories of princes are nothing more than empty titles.”—
<sup>f</sup> “Unfelt imaginations,” i. e., unreal gratifications.

2 Murd. What, shall we stab him as he sleeps?

1 Murd. No; he'll say, 'twas done cowardly, when he wakes.

2 Murd. Why, he shall never wake until the great judgment day.

1 Murd. Why, then he'll say, we stabb'd him sleeping.

2 Murd. The urging of that word, judgment, hath bred a kind of remorse in me.

1 Murd. What! art thou afraid?

2 Murd. Not to kill him, having a warrant; but to be damn'd for killing him, from the which no warrant can defend me.

1 Murd. I thought, thou hadst been resolute.

2 Murd. So I am, to let him live.

1 Murd. I'll back to the duke of Gloster, and tell him so.

2 Murd. Nay, I prythee, stay a little: I hope, this <sup>1</sup>compassionate humor of mine will change; it was wont to hold me but while one tells twenty.

1 Murd. How dost thou feel thyself now?

2 Murd. 'Faith, some certain dregs of conscience are yet within me.

1 Murd. Remember our reward, when the deed's done.

2 Murd. Zounds! he dies: I had forgot the reward.

1 Murd. Where's thy conscience now?

2 Murd. O! in the duke of Gloster's purse.

1 Murd. When he opens his purse to give us our reward, thy conscience flies out.

2 Murd. 'Tis no matter; let it go: there's few or none, will entertain it.

1 Murd. What, if it come to thee again?

2 Murd. I'll not meddle with it; it is a dangerous thing, it makes a man a coward: a man cannot steal, but it accuseth him; a man cannot swear, but it checks him; a man cannot lie with his neighbor's wife, but it detects him: 'tis a blushing shame-faced spirit, that mutinies in a man's bosom; it fills a man full of obstacles: it made me once restore a purse of gold, that by chance I found: it beggars any man that keeps it: it is turned out of all towns and cities for a dangerous thing; and every man, that means to live well, endeavors to trust to himself, and live without it.

1 Murd. Zounds! it is even now at my elbow, persuading me not to kill the duke.

2 Murd. Take the devil in thy mind, and believe him not: he would insinuate with thee, but to make thee sigh.

1 Murd. I am strong-fram'd; he cannot prevail with me.

2 Murd. Spoke like a <sup>a</sup>tall man, that respects his reputation. Come, shall we fall to work?

1 Murd. Take him on the <sup>b</sup>costard with the hilts of thy sword, and then throw him into the malmsey-butt in the next room.

2 Murd. O, excellent device! and make a sop of 1 Murd. Soft! he wakes. [him.

2 Murd. Strike.

1 Murd. No; we'll <sup>c</sup>reason with him.

Clar. [Waking.] Where art thou, keeper? give me a cup of wine. [anon.

1 Murd. You shall have wine enough, my lord,

Clar. In God's name, what art thou?

1 Murd. A man, as you are.

Clar. But not, as I am, royal.

1 Murd. Nor you, as we are, loyal.

Clar. Thy voice is thunder, but thy looks are humble.

1 Murd. My voice is now the king's, my looks mine own.

Clar. How darkly, and how deadly dost thou speak.

Your eyes do menace me: why look you pale?

Who sent you hither? Wherefore do you come?

Both Murd. To, to, to—

Clar. To murder me?

Both Murd. Ay, Ay.

Clar. You scarcely have the hearts to tell me so, And therefore cannot have the hearts to do it.

Wherein, my friends, have I offended you?

1 Murd. Offended us you have not, but the king.

Clar. I shall be reconcil'd to him again. [die.

2 Murd. Never, my lord; therefore, prepare to

Clar. Are you drawn forth among a world of men,

To slay the innocent? What is my offence?

Where is the evidence that doth accuse me?

What lawful <sup>d</sup>quest have given their verdict up

Unto the frowning judge? or who pronounce'd

The bitter sentence of poor Clarence' death?

Before I be convict by course of law,

To threaten me with death is most unlawful.

I charge you, as you hope to have redemption

By Christ's dear blood shed for our grievous sins,

That you depart, and lay no hands on me:

The deed you undertake is damnable.

1 Murd. What we will do, we do upon command.

2 Murd. And he, that hath commanded, is our king.

Clar. Erroneous vassals! the great King of kings

Hath in the table of his law commanded,

That thou shalt do no murder: will you, then,

Spurn at his edict, and fulfil a man's?

Take heed; for he holds vengeance in his hand.

To hurl upon their heads that break his law.

2 Murd. And that same vengeance doth he hurl on thee.

For false forswearing, and for murder too.

Thou didst receive the sacrament, to fight

In quarrel of the house of Lancaster.

1 Murd. And, like a traitor to the name of God, Didst break that vow; and, with thy treacherous blade, Unripp'dst the bowels of thy sovereign's son.

2 Murd. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend. [to us,

1 Murd. How canst thou urge God's dreadful law When thou hast broke it in such <sup>e</sup>dear degree?

Clar. Alas! for whose sake did I that ill deed?

For Edward, for my brother, for his sake:

He sends you not to murder me for this;

For in that sin he is as deep as I.

If God will be avenged for the deed,

O! know you yet, he doth it publicly.

Take not the quarrel from his powerful arm:

He needs no indirect or lawless course,

To cut off those that have offended him.

1 Murd. Who made thee, then, a bloody minister,

When gallant-springing, brave Plantagenet,

That princely <sup>f</sup>novice, was struck dead by thee?

Clar. My brother's love, the devil, and my rage

1 Murd. Thy brother's love, our duty, and thy

Provoke us hither now to slaughter thee. [faults,

Clar. If you do love my brother, hate not me;

I am his brother, and I love him well.

If you are hir'd for <sup>g</sup>need, go back again,

And I will send you to my brother Gloster,

Who shall reward you better for my life,

Than Edward will for tidings of my death.

2 Murd. You are deceiv'd: your brother Gloster hates you.

Clar. O! no; he loves me, and he holds me dear Go you to him from me.

Both Murd. Ay, so we will.

Clar. Tell him, when that our princely father York Bless'd his three sons with his victorious arm,
And charg'd us from his soul to love each other,
He little thought of this divided friendship:
Bid Gloster think on this, and he will weep.

1 Murd. Ay, mill-stones; as he lesson'd us to weep.

Clar. O! do not slander him, for he is kind.

1 Murd. Right; as snow in harvest.—Come, you deceive yourself;

'Tis he that sends us to destroy you here.

Clar. It cannot be; for he bewept my fortune,
And hugg'd me in his arms, and swore, with sobs,
That he would labor my delivery.

1 Murd. Why, so he doth, when he delivers you
From this earth's thralldom to the joys of heaven.

2 Murd. Make peace with God, for you must die,
my lord.

Clar. Have you that holy feeling in your souls,
To counsel me to make my peace with God,
And are you yet to your own souls so blind,
That you will war with God by murdering me?—
O! sirs, consider, they that set you on
To do this deed, will hate you to the deed.

2 Murd. What shall we do?

Clar. Relent, and save your souls.
Which of you, if you were a prince's son,
Being pent from liberty, as I am now,
If two such murderers as yourselves came to you,
Would not entreat for life? As you would beg
Were you in my distress, <sup>1</sup> so pity me.

1 Murd. Relent? no: 'tis cowardly, and womanish.

Clar. Not to relent, is bestial, savage, devilish.—
My friend, I spy some pity in thy looks;
O! if thine eye be not a flatterer,
Come thou on my side, and entreat for me.
A begging prince what beggar pities not?

2 Murd. Look behind you, my lord.

1 Murd. Take that, and that: if all this will not do, [Stabs him.]
I'll drown you in the malmsey-butt within.

[Exit with the Body.]

2 Murd. A bloody deed, and desperately despatch'd!

How fain, like Pilate, would I wash my hands
Of this most grievous guilty murder done.

Re-enter first Murderer.

1 Murd. How now! what mean'st thou, that thou help'st me not? [been.]

By heaven, the duke shall know how slack you have
2 Murd. I would he knew, that I had sav'd his brother.

Take thou the fee, and tell him what I say,
For I repent me that the duke is slain. [Exit.]

1 Murd. So do not I: go, coward, as thou art.—
Well, I'll go hide the body in some hole,
Till that the duke give order for his burial;
And when I have my <sup>a</sup> meed, I will away;
For this will out, and then I must not stay. [Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King EDWARD, led in sick, Queen ELIZABETH, DORSET, RIVERS, HASTINGS, BUCKINGHAM, GREY, and others.

K. Edw. Why, so:—now have I done a good day's work.—

* Reward.

You peers, continue this united league:

I every day expect an embassy

From my Redeemer to redeem me hence;
And more <sup>2</sup> at peace my soul shall part to heaven,
Since I have made my friends at peace on earth.
Rivers, and Hastings, take each other's hand;
Dissemble not your <sup>3</sup> hatred, swear your love.

Riv. By heaven, my soul is purg'd from grudging hate;

And with my hand I seal my true heart's love.

Hast. So thrive I, as I truly swear the like.

K. Edw. Take heed, you dally not before your king;

Lest He, that is the supreme King of kings,
Confound your hidden falsehood, and award
Either of you to be the other's end.

Hast. So prosper I, as I swear perfect love.

Riv. And I, as I love Hastings with my heart.

K. Edw. Madam, yourself are not exempt from this,—

Nor you, son Dorset,—Buckingham, nor you;—
You have been factions one against the other.

Wife, love lord Hastings, let him kiss your hand;

And what you do, do it unfeignedly. [member

Q. Eliz. There, Hastings:—I will never more re-
Our former hatred, so thrive I, and mine.

K. Edw. Dorset, embrace him;—Hastings, love lord marquess.

Dor. This interchange of love, I here protest,
Upon my part shall be inviolable.

Hast. And so swear I.

[league
K. Edw. Now, princely Buckingham, seal thou this
With thy embracements to my wife's allies,
And make me happy in your unity.

Buck. Whenever Buckingham doth turn his hate Upon your grace, [To the Queen.] but with all duteous love

Doth cherish you, and yours, God punish me
With hate in those where I expect most love.

When I have most need to employ a friend,
And most assured that he is a friend,
Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile,
Be he unto me. This do I beg of heaven,
When I am cold in love to you, or yours.

K. Edw. A pleasing cordial, princely Buckingham,
Is this thy vow unto my sickly heart.

There waiteth now our brother Gloster here,

To make the blessed period of this peace. [duke.]

Buck. And, in good time, here comes the noble
Enter GLOSTER.

Glo. Good-morrow to my sovereign king, and
And, princely peers, a happy time of day! [Queen.]

K. Edw. Happy, indeed, as we have spent the Gloster, we have done deeds of charity; [day.—
Made peace of enmity, fair love of hate,
Between these swelling wrong-incensed peers.

Glo. A blessed labor, my most sovereign lord.—

Among this princely heap, if any hero,

By false intelligence, or wrong surmise,

Hold me a foe;

If I unwittingly, or in my rage,

Have aught committed that is hardly borne

<sup>3</sup> To any in this presence, I desire

To reconcile me to his friendly peace:

'Tis death to me, to be at enmity;

I hate it, and desire all good men's love.—

First, madam, I entreat true peace of you,

Which I will purchase with my dutious service;

Of you, my noble cousin Buckingham,

If ever any grudge were lodg'd between us;

<sup>1</sup> "Dissemble not your hatred," etc., i. e., 'Do not merely cloak and conceal your hatred, but swear to love each other.'

Of you, and you, lord Rivers, and of Dorset,
That all without desert have frown'd on me;
Of you, lord Woodville, and lord Scales, of you;
Dukes, earls, lords, gentlemen; indeed, of all.
I do not know that Englishman alive,
With whom my soul is any jot at odds,
More than the infant that is born to-night.

I thank my God for my humility. <sup>1</sup>[Aside.]

Q. Eliz. A holy day shall this be kept hereafter:—
I would to God, all strifes were well compounded.—
My sovereign lord, I do beseech your highness
To take our brother Clarence to your grace.

Glo. Why, madam, have I offer'd love for this,
To be so flouted in this royal presence?
Who knows not, that the gentle duke is dead?

[They all start.]

You do him injury to scorn his corse. <sup>2</sup>[He is?]

K. Edw. Who knows not, he is dead! who knows

Q. Eliz. All-seeing heaven, what a world is this!

Buck. Look I so pale, lord Dorset, as the rest?

Dor. Ay, my good lord; and no man in the presence,

But his red color hath forsook his cheeks.

K. Edw. Is Clarence dead? the order was revers'd.

Buck. But he, poor man, by your first order died,
And that a winged Mercury did bear;

Some tardy cripple bare the countermand,

That came too lag to see him buried.

God grant, that some, less noble, and less loyal,

Nearer in bloody thoughts, and not in blood,

Deserve not worse than wretched Clarence did,

And yet go current from suspicion.

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. A boon, my sovereign, for my service done!

<sup>2</sup>[Kneels.]

K. Edw. Ipr'ythee, peace: my soul is full of sorrow.

Stan. I will not rise, unless your highness hear me.

K. Edw. Then say at once, what is it thou requestest.

Stan. The forfeit, sovereign, of my servant's life;
Who slew to-day a riotous gentleman,

Lately attendant on the duke of Norfolk. [death.]

K. Edw. Have I a tongue to doom my brother's
And shall that tongue give pardon to a slave?

My brother kill'd no man, his fault was thought,

And yet his punishment was bitter death.

Who sued to me for him? who, in my wrath,

Kneel'd at my feet, and bade me be advis'd?

Who spoke of brotherhood? who spoke of love?

Who told me, how the poor soul did forsake

The mighty Warwick, and did fight for me?

Who told me, in the field at Tewksbury,

When Oxford had me down, he rescu'd me,

And said, "Dear brother, live, and be a king?"

Who told me, when we both lay in the field,

Frozen almost to death, how he did lap me

Even in his garments; and did give himself,

All thin and naked, to the numb-cold night?

All this from my remembrance brutish wrath

Sinfully pluck'd, and not a man of you

Had so much grace to put it in my mind.

But when your carters, or your waiting-vassals,

Have done a drunken slaughter, and defac'd

The precious image of our dear Redeemer,

You straight are on your knees for pardon, pardon;

And I, unjustly too, must grant it you.

But for my brother not a man would speak,

Nor I, ungracious, speak unto myself

For him, poor soul.—The proudest of you all

Have been beholding to him in his life,

Yet none of you would once beg for his life.—

O God! I fear, thy justice will take hold

On me, and you, and mine, and yours, for this.—

Come, Hastings, prithee help me to my closet.

Ah, poor Clarence!

[Exeunt King, Queen, Hastings, Rivers, Dorset, and Grey.]

Glo. This is the fruit of rashness.—Mark'd you not,
How that the guilty kindred of the queen

Look'd pale, when they did hear of Clarence' death?

O! they did urge it still unto the king:

God will revenge it. Come, lords; will you go,

To comfort Edward with our company?

Buck. We wait upon your grace. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—London.

Enter the Duchess of YORK, with a Son and Daughter of CLARENCE.

Son. Good grandam, tell us, is our father dead?

Duch. No, boy. [Breast;]

Daugh. Why do you weep so? and oft beat your
And cry—"O Clarence, my unhappy son!"

Son. Why do you look on us, and shake your head
And call us—orphans, wretches, cast-aways,
If that our noble father were alive?

Duch. My pretty cousins, you mistake me both,

I do lament the sickness of the king,

As loath to lose him, not your father's death.

It were lost sorrow to wail one that's lost.

Son. Then you conclude, my grandam, he is dead.

The king mine uncle is to blame for it:

God will revenge it; whom I will importune

With earnest prayers all to that effect.

Daugh. And so will I. [you well.]

Duch. Peace, children, peace! the king doth love
Incapable and shallow innocents,

You cannot guess who caus'd your father's death.

Son. Grandam, we can; for my good uncle Gloucester

Told me, the king, provok'd to it by the queen,

Devis'd impeachments to imprison him:

And when my uncle told me so, he wept,

And pitied me, and kindly kiss'd my cheek;

Bade me rely on him, as on my father,

And he would love me dearly as a child. [shape,]

Duch. Ah! that deceit should steal such gentle

And with a virtuous visor hide deep vice!

He is my son, ay, and therein my shame,

Yet from my dugs he drew not this deceit.

Son. Think you, my uncle did dissemble, grandam?

Duch. Ay, boy.

Son. I cannot think it.—Hark! what noise is this?

Enter Queen ELIZABETH, distractedly; RIVERS and DORSET, following her.

Q. Eliz. Ah! who shall hinder me to wail and To chide my fortune, and torment myself? [weep,]

I'll join with black despair against my soul,

And to myself become an enemy.

Duch. What means this scene of rude impatience?

Q. Eliz. To make an act of tragic violence.

Edward, my lord, thy son, our king, is dead!

Why grow the branches, when the root is gone?

Why wither not the leaves, that want their sap?

If you will live, lament; if die, be brief;

That our swift-winged souls may catch the king's;

Or, like obedient subjects, follow him

To his new kingdom of ne'er changing light.

Duch. Ah! so much interest have I in thy sorrow,
As I had title in thy noble husband.

* "The forfeit," i. e., the remission of the forfeit.—<sup>b</sup>"Be advised," i. e., be circumspect, or consider what I was doing.

<sup>c</sup>Cousin was used formerly as a general term of kindred. The duchess is here addressing her grandchildren.—<sup>d</sup>"Incapable," i. e., unintelligent.—<sup>e</sup>Mask.—<sup>f</sup>Feign.

I have bewept a worthy husband's death,
And liv'd with looking on his images;
But now, two mirrors of his princely semblance
Are crack'd in pieces by malignant death,
And I for comfort have but one false glass,
That grieves me when I see my shame in him.
Thou art a widow; yet thou art a mother,
And hast the comfort of thy children left:
But death hath snatch'd my husband from mine arms,
And pluck'd two crutches from my feeble hands,
Clarence, and Edward. O! what cause have I, (Thine being but a moiety of my moan)
To over-go thy woes, and drown thy cries?

Son. Ah, aunt! you wept not for our father's death;
How can we aid you with our kindred tears?

Dough. Our fatherless distress was left unmoan'd;
Your widow-dolor likewise be unwept.

Q. Eliz. Give me no help in lamentation;
I am not barren to bring forth complaints.

All springs reduce their currents to mine eyes,
That I, being govern'd by the watry moon,
May send forth plentiful tears to drown the world!
Ah, for my husband, for my dear lord, Edward!

Child. Ah, for our father, for our dear lord Clarence!

Duch. Alas, for both! both mine, Edward and Clarence. [gone.]

Q. Eliz. What stay had I, but Edward? and he's Child. What stay had we, but Clarence? and he's gone. [gone.]

Duch. What stays had I, but they? and they are

Q. Eliz. Was never widow had so dear a loss.

Child. Were never orphans had so dear a loss.

Duch. Was never mother had so dear a loss.

Alas! I am the mother of these griefs:
Their woes are parcel'd, mine are general.
She for an Edward weeps, and so do I;
I for a Clarence weep, so doth not she:
These babes for Clarence weep, and so do I:
I for an Edward weep, so do not they:—
Alas! you three on me, threefold distress'd,
Pour all your tears, I am your sorrow's nurse,
And I will pamper it with lamentation. [pleas'd,

Dor. Comfort, dear mother: God is much dis-
That you take with unthankfulness his doing.
In common worldly things, 'tis call'd ungrateful,
With dull unwillingness to repay a debt,
Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent;
Much more to be thus opposite with heaven,
For it requires the royal debt it lent you.

Riv. Madam, betink you, like a careful mother,
Of the young prince your son: send straight for him,
Let him be crown'd; in him your comfort lives.
Drown desperate sorrow in dead Edward's grave,
And plant your joys in living Edward's throne.

Enter GLOSTER, BUCKINGHAM, STANLEY, HAST-INGS, RATCLIFFE, and others.

Glo. Sister, have comfort: all of us have cause
To wail the dimming of our shining star;
But none can help our harms by wailing them.—
Madam, my mother, I do cry you mercy;
I did not see your grace.—Humbly on my knee
I crave your blessing. [Kneels.]

Duch. God bless thee; and put meekness in thy Love, charity, obedience, and true duty. [breast,

Glo. Amen; [Aside.] and make me die a good old man!—

That is the butt-end of a mother's blessing;
I marvel, that her grace did leave it out. [peers,

Buck. You cloudy princes, and heart-sorrowing
That bear this heavy mutual load of moan,

Now cheer each other in each other's love:
Though we have spent our harvest of this king,
We are to reap the harvest of his son.
The broken rancor of your high-sworn hates,
But lately splinter'd, knit, and join'd together,
Must gently be preserv'd, cherish'd, and kept:
Me seemeth good, that, with some little train,
Forthwith from Ludlow the young prince be <sup>d</sup>fet
Hither to London, to be crown'd our king.

Riv. Why with some little train, my lord of Buckingham!

Buck. Marry, my lord, lest, by a multitude,
The new-heal'd wound of malice should break out;
Which would be so much the more dangerous,
By how much the estate is green, and yet ungovern'd;
Where every horse bears his commanding rein,
And may direct his course as please himself,
As well the fear of harm, as harm apparent,
In my opinion, ought to be prevented.

Glo. I hope the king made peace with all of us;
And the compact is firm and true in me.

Riv. And so in me; and so, I think, in all:
Yet, since it is but green, it should be put
To no apparent likelihood of breach,
Which, haply, by much company might be urg'd:
Therefore, I say with noble Buckingham,
That it is meet so few should fetch the prince.

Hast. And so say I.

Glo. Then be it so; and go we to determine
Who they shall be that straight shall post to Ludlow
Madam,—and you my sister,—will you go
To give your censures in this business?

[Exeunt all but BUCKINGHAM and GLOSTER.

Buck. My lord, whoever journeys to the prince,
For God's sake, let not us two stay at home;
For by the way I'll sort occasion,
As <sup>d</sup>index to the story we late talk'd of,
To part the queen's proud kindred from the prince.

Glo. My other self, my counsel's consistory,
My oracle, my prophet!—My dear cousin,
I, as a child, will go by thy direction.
Towards Ludlow then, for we'll not stay behind.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Street.

Enter two Citizens, meeting.

1 Cit. Good morrow, neighbor: whither away so fast?

2 Cit. I promise you, I scarcely know myself.
Hear you the news abroad?

1 Cit. Yes; that the king is dead.

2 Cit. Ill news, by'r lady; seldom comes the better:
I fear, I fear, 'twill prove a giddy world.

Enter another Citizen.

3 Cit. Neighbors, God speed!

1 Cit. Give you good morrow, sir.

3 Cit. Doth the news hold of good king Edward's death?

2 Cit. Ay, sir, it is too true; God help, the while!

3 Cit. Then, masters, look to see a troublous world.

1 Cit. No, no; by God's good grace, his son shall reign.

3 Cit. Woe to that land that's govern'd by a child!

2 Cit. In him there is a hope of government,
<sup>2</sup>With, in his <sup>2</sup>nonage, council under him;
And, in his full and ripen'd years, himself,
No doubt, shall then, and till then, govern well.

1 Cit. So stood the state, when Henry the Sixth
Was crown'd in Paris but at nine months old.

<sup>f</sup> "As index," i. e., by way of prelude.—<sup>g</sup> Minority.

3 Cit. Stood the state so? no, no, good friends,
God <sup>a</sup> wot;

For then this land was famously enrich'd
With politic grave counsel: then the king
Had virtuous uncles to protect his grace. [mother.

1 Cit. Why, so hath this, both by his father and

3 Cit. Better it were they all came by his father,
Or by his father there were none at all;

For emulation, who shall now be nearest,
Will touch us all too near, if God prevent not.

O! full of danger is the duke of Gloster; [proud:
And the queen's sons, and brothers, <sup>b</sup>haught and
And were they to be rul'd, and not to rule,

This sickly land might solace as before. [be well.

1 Cit. Come, come; we fear the worst: all will

3 Cit. When clouds are seen, wise men put on their cloaks;

When great leaves fall, then winter is at hand:
When the sun sets, who doth not look for night?

Untimely storms make men expect a dearth.

All may be well; but, if God sort it so,
'Tis more than we deserve, or I expect.

2 Cit. Truly, the hearts of men are full of fear:
You cannot <sup>c</sup>reason almost with a man
That looks not heavily, and full of dread.

3 Cit. Before the days of change, still is it so.
By a divine instinct men's minds mistrust
Pursuing danger; as by proof we see
The water swell before a boisterous storm.

But leave it all to God. Whither away?

2 Cit. Marry, we were sent for to the justices.

3 Cit. And so was I: I'll bear you company.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter the Archbishop of York, the young Duke of York, Queen ELIZABETH, and the Duchess of York.

Arch. Last night, I heard, they lay at Stony-Strat-
And at Northampton they do rest to-night: [ford,
To-morrow, or next day, they will be here.

Duch. I long with all my heart to see the prince:
I hope, he is much grown since last I saw him.

Q. Eliz. But I hear, no: they say, my son of York
Hath almost overtaken him in his growth.

York. Ay, mother, but I would not have it so.

Duch. Why, my young cousin? it is good to grow.

York. Grandam, one night, as we did sit at supper,
My uncle Rivers talk'd how I did grow [ter,
More than my brother; "Ay," quoth my uncle Glos-
"Small herbs have <sup>a</sup>grace, great weeds do grow apace;"

And since, methinks, I would not grow so fast, Because sweet flowers are slow, and weeds make haste. [bold

Duch. 'Good faith, 'good faith, the saying did not
In him that did object the same to thee:

He was the wretched'st thing when he was young,
So long a growing, and so leisurely,

That, if his rule were true, he should be gracious.

Arch. And so, no doubt, he is, my gracious madam.

Duch. I hope, he is; but yet let mothers doubt.

York. Now, by my troth, if I had been remember'd,
I could have given my uncle's grace a flout,

To touch his growth nearer than he touch'd mine.

Duch. How, my young York? I pr'ythee, let me hear it.

York. Marry, they say, my uncle grew so fast,
That he could gnaw a crust at two hours old:

'Twas full two years ere I could get a tooth.

Grandam, this would have been a biting jest.

Duch. I pr'ythee, pretty York, who told thee this?

York. Grandam, his nurse. [wast born.

Duch. His nurse! why, she was dead ere thou

York. If 'twere not she, I cannot tell who told me.

Q. Eliz. A <sup>a</sup>parlous boy. Go to, you are too shrewd.

Arch. Good madam, be not angry with the child.

Q. Eliz. Pitchers have ears.

Enter a Messenger.

Arch. Here comes a messenger: what news <sup>1</sup>with you?

Mess. Such news, my lord, as grieves me to report.

Q. Eliz. How doth the prince?

Mess. Well, madam, and in health.

Duch. What is thy news? [fret,

Mess. Lord Rivers and lord Grey are sent to Pom-
And with them sir Thomas Vaughan, prisoners.

Duch. Who hath committed them?

Mess. The mighty dukes,

Gloster and Buckingham.

Arch. For what offence?

Mess. The sum of all I can I have disclos'd:

Why, or for what, the nobles were committed,
Is all unknown to me, my gracious lady.

Q. Eliz. Ah me! I see the ruin of my house.

The tiger now hath seiz'd the gentle hind;

Insulting tyranny begins to <sup>2</sup>jet

Upon the innocent and awless throne:

Welcome, destruction, blood, and massacre!

I see, as in a map, the end of all.

Duch. Accurs'd and unquiet wrangling days,

How many of you have mine eyes beheld?

My husband lost his life to get the crown;

<sup>2</sup>Too often up and down my sons were tost,

For me to joy, and weep, their gain, and loss:

And being seated, and domestic broils

Clean over-blown, themselves, the conquerors,

Make war upon themselves; brother to brother.

Blood to blood, self against self:—O! preposterous

And frantic outrage, end thy damned spleen;

Or let me die, to look on death no more. [tuary.—

Q. Eliz. Come, come, my boy; we will to sanc-Madam, farewell.

Duch. Stay, I will go with you.

Q. Eliz. You have no cause.

Arch. My gracious lady, go, [To the Queen.

And thither bear your treasure and your goods.

For my part, I'll resign unto your grace

The seal I keep: and so betide to me,

As well I tender you, and all of yours.

Go; I'll conduct you to the sanctuary. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—London. A Street.

The Trumpets sound. Enter the Prince of Wales, GLOSTER, BUCKINGHAM, Cardinal BOURCHIER, and others.

Buck. Welcome, sweet prince, to London, to your chamber. [sign:

Glo. Welcome, dear cousin, my thoughts' sover-

The weary way hath made you melancholy.

Prince. No, uncle; but our crosses on the way

Have made it tedious, wearisome, and heavy:

I want more uncles here to welcome me.

<sup>e</sup> "Parlous," i. e., perilous; amazing.—("To jet," i. e., to encroach.—London was anciently called Camera Regis, the King's Chamber.

Glo. Sweet prince, the untainted virtue of your Hath not yet div'd into the world's deceit: [years
No more can you distinguish of a man,
Than of his outward show; which, God he knows,
Seldom, or never, <sup>a</sup>jumpeth with the heart.
Those uncles, which you want, were dangerous;
Your grace attended to their sugar'd words,
But look'd not on the poison of their hearts:
God keep you from them, and from such false friends!

Prince. God keep me from false friends! but they were none. [you.

Glo. My lord, the mayor of London comes to greet

Enter the Lord Mayor, and his Train.

May. God bless your grace with health and happy days!

Prince. I thank you, good my lord; and thank you all.— [Exeunt Mayor, &c.

I thought my mother, and my brother York,
Would long ere this have met us on the way:
Fie! what a slug is Hastings, that he comes not
To tell us whether they will come or no.

Enter HASTINGS.

Buck. And in good time here comes the sweating lord. [come?

Prince. Welcome, my lord. What, will our mother

Hast. On what occasion, God he knows, not I,
The queen your mother, and your brother York,
Have taken sanctuary: the tender prince
Would fain have come with me to meet your grace,
But by his mother was <sup>b</sup>perforce withheld.

Buck. Fie! what an indirect and peevish course
Is this of hers.—Lord cardinal, will your grace
Persuade the queen to send the duke of York
Unto his princely brother presently?

If she deny, lord Hastings, go with him,
And from her jealous arms pluck him perforce.

Card. My lord of Buckingham, if my weak oratory
Can from his mother win the duke of York,
Anon expect him here; but if she be obdurate
To mild entreaties, God in heaven forbid
We should infringe the holy privilege
Of blessed sanctuary! not for all this land,
Would I be guilty of so great a sin.

Buck. You are too <sup>1</sup>strict and abstinent, my lord, Too ceremonious, and <sup>c</sup>traditional:

Weigh it but with the <sup>2</sup>goodness of his age,
You break not sanctuary in seizing him.

The benefit thereof is always granted
To those whose dealings have deserv'd the place,
And those who have the wit to claim the place;

This prince hath neither claim'd it, nor deserv'd it;
<sup>3</sup>Therefore, in mine opinion, cannot have it:

Then, taking him from thence, that is not there,
You break no privilege nor charter there.

Oft have I heard of sanctuary men,
But sanctuary children, never till now. [once.—

Card. My lord, you shall o'er-rule my mind for Come on, lord Hastings; will you go with me?

Hast. I go, my lord.

Prince. Good lords, make all the speedy haste you may.— [Exeunt Cardinal and HASTINGS.

Say, uncle Gloster, if our brother come,
Where shall we sojourn till our coronation?

Glo. Where it seems best unto your royal self.
If I may counsel you, some day, or two,

Your highness shall repose you at the Tower:
Then, where you please, and shall be thought most fit

For your best health and recreation.

Prince. I do not like the Tower, of any place.—

<sup>a</sup> "Jumpeth," i. e., agreeth.—<sup>b</sup> "Perforce," i. e., by force.
—<sup>c</sup> "Too ceremonious and traditional," i. e., too superstitious and adherent to old customs

Did Julius Caesar build that place, my lord?

Buck. He did, my gracious lord, begin that place,
Which, since, succeeding ages have re-edified.

Prince. Is it upon record, or else reported
Successively from age to age, he built it?

Buck. <sup>4</sup>It is upon record, my gracious lord.

Prince. But say, my lord, it were not register'd,
Methinks, the truth should live from age to age,

As 'twere <sup>5</sup>retail'd to all posterity,
Even to the general all-ending day.

Glo. So wise so young, they say, do ne'er live long.
[Aside.

Prince. What say you, uncle?

Glo. I say without characters fame lives long.

Thus, like the <sup>6</sup>formal Vice, Iniquity, [Aside
I moralize two meanings in one word.

Prince. That Julius Caesar was a famous man:

With what his valor did enrich his wit,

His wit set down to make his valor live:

Death makes no conquest of his conqueror,

For now he lives in fame, though not in life.—

I'll tell you what, my cousin Buckingham.

Buck. What, my gracious lord?

Prince. An if I live until I be a man,

I'll win our ancient right in France again,

Or die a soldier, as I liv'd a king.

Glo. Short summers <sup>7</sup>lightly have a forward spring.
[Aside.

Enter YORK, HASTINGS, and the Cardinal.

Buck. Now, in good time here comes the duke of York. [brother?

Prince. Richard of York! how fares our noble

York. Well, my dread lord; so must I call you now.

Prince. Ay, brother; to our grief, as it is yours.

Too <sup>8</sup>late he died, that might have kept that title,
Which by his death hath lost much majesty.

Glo. How fares our cousin, noble lord of York?

York. I thank you, gentle uncle. O! my lord,

You said, that idle weeds are fast in growth:

The prince my brother hath outgrown me far.

Glo. He hath, my lord.

York. And therefore is he idle?

Glo. O! my fair cousin, I must not say so.

York. Then he is more beholding to you, than I.

Glo. He may command me as my sovereign,
But you have power <sup>9</sup>o'er me as a kinsman.

York. I pray you, uncle, give me this dagger.

Glo. My dagger, little cousin? with all my heart.

Prince. A beggar, brother?

York. Of my kind uncle, that I know will give;
And, being but a toy, which is no grief to give.

Glo. A greater gift than that I'll give my cousin.

York. A greater gift? O! that's the sword to it.

Glo. Ay, gentle cousin, were it light enough.

York. O! then, I see, you'll part but with light gifts:

In weightier things you'll say a beggar, nay.

Glo. It is too weighty for your grace to wear.

York. I weigh it <sup>10</sup>lightly, were it heavier.

Glo. What! would you have my weapon, little lord? [me.

York. I would, that I might thank you as you call
Glo. How?

York. Little. [talk.—

Prince. My lord of York will still be cross in Uncle, your grace knows how to bear with him.

York. You mean, to bear me, not to bear with me.—

Uncle, my brother mocks both you and me:

Because that I am little, like an ape,

<sup>4</sup> Recounted.—<sup>5</sup> "The formal Vice," i. e., the sensible Vice,
the buffoon in the old plays.—<sup>6</sup> "Lightly," i. e., commonly.
—<sup>7</sup> "Late."—<sup>8</sup> "I weigh it lightly." &c., i. e., "I care but little for it, even were it heavier than it is."

He thinks that you should bear me on your shoulders.

Buck. With what a <sup>1</sup> sharply pointed wit he reasons:

To mitigate the scorn he gives his uncle,

He prettily and aptly taunts himself.

So cunning, and so young, is wonderful.

Glo. My lord, will't please <sup>2</sup>your grace to pass along?

Myself, and my good cousin Buckingham,

Will to your mother, to entreat of her

To meet you at the Tower, and welcome you.

York. What! will you go unto the Tower, my lord?

Prince. My lord protector needs will have it so.

York. I shall not sleep in quiet at the Tower.

Glo. Why, what should you fear?

York. Marry, my uncle Clarence' angry ghost:

My grandam told me, he was murder'd there.

Prince. I fear no uncles dead.

Glo. Nor none that live, I hope.

Prince. An if they live, I hope, I need not fear.

But come, my lord, and, with a heavy heart,

Thinking on them, go I unto the Tower.

[A sennet. Enter Prince, York, Hastings, Cardinal, and Attendants.]

Buck. Think you, my lord, this little prating York

Was not <sup>a</sup>incensed by his subtle mother

To taunt and scorn you thus opprobriously?

Glo. No doubt, no doubt. O! 'tis a perilous boy;

Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, <sup>b</sup>capable:

He's all the mother's from the top to toe.

Buck. Well, let them rest.—Come hither, Catesby.

Thou art sworn as deeply to effect what we intend,

As closely to conceal what we impart.

Thou know'st our reasons urg'd upon the way:—

What think'st thou? is it not an easy matter

To make William lord Hastings of our mind,

For the instalment of this noble duke

In the seat royal of this famous isle?

Cate. He for his father's sake so loves the prince,

That he will not be won to aught against him.

Buck. What think'st thou then of Stanley? will not he?

Cate. He will do all in all as Hastings doth.

Buck. Well then, no more but this. Go, gentle Catesby,

And, as it were afar off, sound thou lord Hastings,

How he doth stand affected to our purpose;

And summon him to-morrow to the Tower,

To sit about the coronation.

If thou dost find him tractable to us,

Encourage him, and tell him all our reasons:

If he be leaden, icy, cold, unwilling,

Be thou so too, and so break off the talk,

And give us notice of his inclination;

For we to-morrow hold <sup>c</sup>divided councils,

Wherein thyself shalt highly be employ'd. [by,

Glo. Commend me to lord William: tell him, Cates-

His ancient knot of dangerous adversaries

To-morrow are let blood at Pomfret-castle;

And bid my lord, for joy of this good news,

Give mistress Shore one gentle kiss the more.

Buck. Good Catesby, go: effect this business soundly.

Cate. My good lords both, with all the heed I can.

Glo. Shall we hear from you, Catesby, ere we sleep?

Cate. You shall, my lord.

Glo. At Crosby-place, there shall you find us both.

[Exit CATESBY.]

Buck. Now, my lord, what shall we do, if we perceive

Lord Hastings will not yield to our complots?

Glo. Chop off his head, man;—somewhat we will do:—

And, look, when I am king, claim thou of me

The earldom of Hereford, and all the moveables,

Whereof the king, my brother, was possess'd.

Buck. I'll claim that promise at your grace's hand.

Glo. And look to have it yielded with all kindness.

Come, let us sup betimes, that afterwards

We may digest our <sup>d</sup>complots in some form.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Before Lord HASTINGS' House.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord! my lord!—

[Knocking at the door.]

Hast. [ Within. ]—Who knocks?

Mess. One from the lord Stanley.

Hast. [ Within. ] What is't o'clock?

Mess. Upon the stroke of four.

Enter HASTINGS.

Hast. Cannot <sup>3</sup>lord Stanley sleep these tedious nights?

Mess. So it appears by that I have to say.

First, he commends him to your noble self.

Hast. What then?

Mess. Then certifies your lordship, that this night

He dreamt the <sup>e</sup>boar had ras'd off his helm:

Besides, he says, there are two councils kept;

And that may be determin'd at the one,

Which may make you and him to rue at th' other.

Therefore, he sends to know your lordship's pleas—

If you will presently take horse with him, [ sure,—

And with all speed post with him toward the north,

To shun the danger that his soul divines.

Hast. Go, fellow, go; return unto thy lord.

Bid him not fear the separated council:

His honor and myself are at the one,

And at the other is my good friend Catesby;

Where nothing can proceed that toucheth us,

Whereof I shall not have intelligence.

Tell him, his fears are shallow, without <sup>f</sup>instance:

And for his dreams—I wonder he's so simple

To trust the mockery of unquiet slumbers.

To fly the boar, before the boar pursues,

Were to incense the boar to follow us,

And make pursuit, where he did mean no chase.

Go, bid thy master rise and come to me;

And we will both together to the Tower,

Where, he shall see, the boar will use us kindly.

Mess. I'll go, my lord, and tell him what you say.

[Exit.]

Enter CATESBY.

Cate. Many good morrows to my noble lord!

Hast. Good morrow, Catesby: you are early stirring.

What news, what news, in this our tottering state?

Cate. It is a reeling world, indeed, my lord;

And, I believe, will never stand upright,

Till Richard wear the garland of the realm.

Hast. How? wear the garland! dost thou mean

Cate. Ay, my good lord. [ the crown? ]

Hast. I'll have this crown of mine cut from my shoulders,

Before I'll see the crown so foul misplac'd.

But canst thou guess that he doth aim at it? [ ward ]

Cate. Ay, on my life; and hopes to find you for—
Upon his party for the gain thereof:

<sup>d</sup> Conspiracies.—<sup>e</sup> By the boar, throughout this scene is meant Gloucester, in allusion to his crest.—<sup>f</sup> His honor, was the usual address to noblemen in Shakespeare's time.—<sup>g</sup> Without instance," i. e., without cause, motive.

And thereupon he sends you this good news,—
That this same very day your enemies,
The kindred of the queen, must die at Pomfret.

Hast. Indeed, I am no mourner for that news,
Because they have been still my adversaries;
But, that I'll give my voice on Richard's side,
To bar my master's heirs in true descent,
God knows, I will not do it, to the death.

Cate. God keep your lordship in that gracious mind.

Hast. But I shall laugh at this a twelve-month hence,

That they which brought me in my master's hate,
I live to look upon their tragedy.

Well, Catesby, ere a fortnight make me older,
I'll send some packing that yet think not on't.

Cate. 'Tis a vile thing to die, my gracious lord,
When men are unprepar'd, and look not for it.

Hast. O monstrous, monstrous! and so falls it out
With Rivers, Vaughan, Grey; and so 'twill do
With some men else, who think themselves as safe
As thou, and I; who, as thou know'st, are dear
To princely Richard, and to Buckingham.

Cate. The princes both make high account of you;
For they account his head upon the bridge. [Aside.]

Hast. I know they do, and I have well deserv'd it.

Enter STANLEY.

Come on, come on; where is your boar-spear, man?
Fear you the boar, and go so unprovided?

Stan. My lord, good morrow:—good morrow,
You may jest on, but, by the holy a rood, [Catesby.—
I do not like these several councils, I.

Hast. My lord, I hold my life as dear as yours;
And never, in my days, I do protest,
Was it so precious to me as 'tis now.

Think you, but that I know our state secure,
I would be so triumphant as I am? (London,

Stan. The lords at Pomfret, when they rode from
Were jocular, and suppos'd their states were sure,
And they, indeed, had no cause to mistrust;
But yet, you see, how soon the day o'er-cast.

This sudden stab of rancor I b misdoubt:
Pray God, I say, I prove a needless coward!
What, shall we toward the Tower? the day is spent.

Hast. Come, come, have with you.—<sup>c</sup> Wot you what, my lord?

To-day, the lords you talk of are beheaded. [heads,

Stan. They for their truth might better wear their Than some that have accus'd them wear their hats.
But come, my lord, let's away.

Enter a Pursuivant.

Hast. Go on before; I'll talk with this good fellow.

[Exeunt STANLEY and CATESBY.]

How now, sirrah! how goes the world with thee?

Purs. The better, that your lordship please to ask.

Hast. I tell thee, man, 'tis better with me now,
Than when thou met'st me last, where now we meet:
Then, was I going prisoner to the Tower,
By the suggestion of the queen's allies;
But now, I tell thee, (keep it to thyself)
This day those enemies are put to death,
And I in better state than ere I was.

Purs. God <sup>d</sup>hold it to your honor's good content.

Hast. Gramercy, fellow. There, drink that for me.

Purs. I thank your honor. [Exit Pursuivant.]

Enter a Priest.

Pr. Well met, my lord; I am glad to see your honor. [heart.]

Hast. I thank thee, good sir John, with all my

I'm in your debt for your last "exercise";
Come the next Sabbath, and I will content you.
Pr. I'll wait upon your lordship.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. What, talking with a priest, lord chamberlain!

Your friends at Pomfret, they do need the priest:
Your honor hath no 'shriving work in hand.

Hast. 'Good faith, and when I met this holy man,
The men you talk of came into my mind.

What, go you toward the Tower?

Buck. I do, my lord; but long I cannot stay there:
I shall return before your lordship thence.

Hast. Nay, like enough, for I stay dinner there.

Buck. And supper too, although thou know'st it not.
[Aside.]

Come, will you go?

Hast. I'll wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Pomfret. Before the Castle.

*Enter RATCLIFF, with a Guard, conducting RIVERS,
GREY, and VAUGHAN, to execution.*

Riv. Sir Richard Ratcliff, let me tell thee this:—
To-day shalt thou behold a subject die

For truth, for duty, and for loyalty. [You!]

Grey. God bless the prince from all the pack of A knot you are of damned blood-suckers. [after.]

Vaugh. You live, that shall cry woe for this here-
Rat. Despatch! the limit of your lives is out.

Riv. O Pomfret, Pomfret! O, thou bloody prison,
Fatal and ominous to noble peers!

Within the gully closure of thy walls,
Richard the Second here was hack'd to death:

And, for more slander to thy dismal seat,
We give to thee our guiltless blood to drink.

Grey. Now Margaret's curse is fallen upon our heads,

When she exclaim'd on Hastings, you, and <sup>2</sup> me,
For standing by when Richard stab'd her son.

Riv. Then curs'd she Richard, then curs'd she Buckingham,

Then curs'd she Hastings.—O, remember, God,
To hear her prayer for them, as now for us!

And for my sister, and her princely sons,
Be satisfied, dear God, with our true blood,

Which, as thou know'st, unjustly must be spilt.

Rat. Make haste: the hour of death is <sup>3</sup> expiate.

Riv. Come, Grey,—come, Vaughan;—let us here embrace:

Farewell, until we meet again in heaven. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Tower.

BUCKINGHAM, STANLEY, HASTINGS, the Bishop of ELY, CATESBY, LOVELL, and others, sitting at a
Table: Officers of the Council attending.

Hast. Now, noble peers, the cause why we are met
Is to determine of the coronation:

In God's name, speak, when is this royal day?

Buck. Are all things ready for the royal time?

Stan. They are; and want but <sup>4</sup> nomination.

Ely. To-morrow, then, I judge a happy day.

Buck. Who knows the lord protector's mind herein?
Who is most <sup>5</sup> inward with the noble duke?

Ely. Your grace, we think, should soonest know his mind.

Buck. We know each other's faces; for our hearts,
He knows no more of mine, than I of yours;

i. e., the naming of a day for the coronation.—<sup>e</sup> "Inward,"

i. e., intimate; confidential.

<sup>c</sup> Know.—<sup>d</sup> "Hold," i. e., continue.

Nor I of his, my lord, than you of mine.
Lord Hastings, you and he are near in love.

Hast. I thank his grace, I know he loves me well;
But for his purpose in the coronation,
I have not sounded him, nor he deliver'd
His gracious pleasure any way therein;
But you, my honorable lords, may name the time;
And in the duke's behalf I'll give my voice,
Which, I presume, he'll take in gentle part.

Enter GLOSTER.

Ely. In happy time here comes the duke himself.

Glo. My noble lords and cousins, all, good morrow.
I have been long a sleeper; but, I trust,
My absence doth neglect no great design,
Which by my presence might have been concluded.

Buck. Had you not come upon your cue, my lord,
William lord Hastings had pronounc'd your part,
I mean, your voice, for crowning of the king.

Glo. Than my lord Hastings, no man might be bolder:

His lordship knows me well, and loves me well.
My lord of Ely, when I was last in Holborn,
I saw good strawberries in your garden there;
I do beseech you, send for some of them.

Ely. Marry, and will, my lord, with all my heart.

[Exit ELY.]

Glo. Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you.

[Taking him aside.]

Catesby hath sounded Hastings in our business,
And finds the testy gentleman so hot,
That he will lose his head, ere give consent,
His master's child, as worshipfully he terms it,
Shall lose the royalty of England's throne.

Buck. Withdraw yourself awhile; I'll go with you.

[Exit GLOSTER and BUCKINGHAM.]

Stan. We have not yet set down this day of tri-
To-morrow, in my judgment, is too sudden; [unph.
For I myself am not so well provided,
As else I would be, were the day prolong'd.

Re-enter Bishop of ELY.

Ely. Where is my lord, the duke of Gloster?

I have sent for these strawberries. [morning:]

Hast. His grace looks cheerfully and smooth this There's some conceit or other likes him well,
When that he bids good morrow with such spirit.
I think, there's never a man in Christendom
Can lesser hide his love, or hate, than he;
For by his face straight shall you know his heart.

Stan. What of his heart perceive you in his face,
By any livelihood he show'd to-day? [ed;

Hast. Marry, that with no man here he is offend-
For, were he, he had shown it in his looks.

Re-enter GLOSTER and BUCKINGHAM.

Glo. I pray you all, tell me what they deserve,
That do conspire my death with devilish plots
Of damned witchcraft! and that have prevail'd
Upon my body with their hellish charms?

Hast. The tender love I bear your grace, my lord,
Makes me most forward in this princely presence
To doom th' offenders: whoso'er they be,
I say, my lord, they have deserved death.

Glo. Then, be your eyes the witness of their evil.—
Look how I am bewitch'd; behold mine arm
Is like a blasted sapling wither'd up;

And this is Edward's wife, that monstrous witch,
Consorted with that harlot, strumpet Shore,
That by their witchcraft thus have marked me.

Hast. If they have done this deed, my noble lord,—

Glo. If! thou protector of this damned strumpet,

Talk'st thou to me of ifs?—Thou art a traitor:—
Off with his head!—now, by Saint Paul I swear,
I will not dine until I see the same.—

Lovel, and Ratcliff, look that it be done:
The rest, that love me, rise, and follow me.

[Exit Council, with GLOSTER and BUCKINGHAM.]

Hast. Woe, woe, for England! not a whit for me;
For I, too fond, might have prevented this.
Stanley did dream the boar did raise his helm;
And I did scorn it, and disdained to fly.

Three times to-day my foot-cloth horse did stumble,
And started when he look'd upon the Tower,
As loath to bear me to the slaughter-house.

O! now I need the priest that spake to me:

I now repent I told the pursuivant,
As too triumphing, how mine enemies,
To-day at Pomfret bloodily were butcher'd,
And I myself secure in grace and favor.

O, Margaret, Margaret! now thy heavy curse
Is lighted on poor Hastings' wretched head.

Rat. Come, come; despatch, the duke would be at dinner:

Make a short shrift; he longs to see your head.

Hast. O, momentary grace of mortal men,

Which we more hunt for than the grace of God!

Who builds his hope in air of your good looks,

Lives like a drunken sailor on a mast;

Ready with every nod to tumble down

Into the fatal bowels of the deep.

Lov. Come, come, despatch: 'tis bootless to exclaim.

Hast. O, bloody Richard!—miserable England!

I prophesy the fearful'st time to thee,

That ever wretched age hath look'd upon.

Come, lead me to the block; bear him my head:

They smile at me, who shortly shall be dead.

[Exit.]

SCENE V.—The Same. The Tower Walls.

Enter GLOSTER and BUCKINGHAM, in rusty armor, marcellous ill-favored, and in haste.

Glo. Come, cousin, canst thou quake, and change thy color,

Murder thy breath in middle of a word,

And then again begin, and stop again,

As if thou wert distract'd, and mad with terror?

Buck. Tut! I can counterfeit the deep tragedian;

Speak and look back, and pry on every side,

Tremble and start at wagging of a straw,

Intending deep suspicion: ghastly looks

Are at my service, like enforced smiles;

And both are ready in their offices,

At any time to grace my stratagems.

But what, is Catesby gone?

Glo. He is; and, see, he brings the mayor along.

Enter the Lord Mayor and CATESBY.

Buck. Lord Mayor,—

Glo. Look to the drawbridge there!

Buck.

Hark! a drum.

Glo. Catesby, o'erlook the walls.

Buck. Lord Mayor, the reason we have sent,—

Glo. Look back, defend thee: here are enemies.

Buck. God and our innocence defend and guard us!

Enter LOVEL and RATCLIFF, with HASTINGS' Head, on a Spear.

Glo. Be patient, they are friends; Ratcliff, and Lovel.

Lov. Here is the head of that ignoble traitor,
The dangerous and unsuspected Hastings.

Glo. So dear I lov'd the man, that I must weep.
I took him for the plainest harmless creature,
That breath'd upon the earth a Christian;
Made him my book, wherein my soul recorded
The history of all her secret thoughts:
So smooth he daub'd his vice with show of virtue,
That, his apparent open guilt omitted,
I mean his <sup>a</sup> conversation with Shore's wife,
He liv'd from all attainder of <sup>b</sup> suspects. [traitor]
Buck. Well, well, he was the covert'st shelter'd
That ever liv'd.—

Would you imagine, or almost believe,
Were't not that by great preservation
We live to tell it, that the subtle traitor
This day had plotted, in the council house,
To murder me, and my good lord of Gloster?
May. Had he done so?

Glo. What! think you we are Turks, or infidels?
Or that we would, against the form of law,
Proceed thus rashly in the villain's death,
But that the extreme peril of the case,
The peace of England, and our persons' safety,
Enforc'd us to this execution?

May. Now, fair befall you! he deserv'd his death;
And your good graces both have well proceeded,
To wara false traitors from the like attempts.

Buck. I never look'd for better at his hands,
After he once fell in with mistress Shore;
Yet had we not determin'd he should die,
Until your lordship came to see his end,
Which now the loving haste of these our friends,
Something against our meanings, hath prevented:
Because, my lord, I would have had you <sup>1</sup> hear
The traitor speak, and timorously confess
The manner and the purpose of his treasons;
That you might well have signified the same
Unto the citizens, who, haply, may Misconstrue us in him, and wail his death. [serve,]

May. But, my good lord, your grace's words shall
As well as I had seen, and heard him speak:
And do not doubt, right noble princes both,
But I'll acquaint our duteous citizens
With all your just proceedings in this case.

Glo. And to that end we wish'd your lordship here,
To avoid the censures of the carping world.

Buck. But since you come too late of our <sup>c</sup> intent,
Yet witness what you hear we did intend:
And so, my good lord mayor, we bid farewell.

[Exit Lord Mayor.]

Glo. Go, after, after, cousin Buckingham.
The mayor towards Guildhall lies him in all post:
There, at your meetest <sup>d</sup> vantage of the time,
<sup>e</sup> Infer the bastardy of Edward's children:
Tell them, how Edward put to death a citizen,
Only for saying—he would make his son
Heir to the crown; meaning, indeed, his house,
Which by the sign thereof was termed so.
Moreover, urge his hateful <sup>f</sup> luxury,
And bestial appetite in change of lust;
Which stretch'd unto their servants, daughters, wives,
Even where his raging eye, or savage heart,
Without control lusted to make a prey.
Nay, for a need, thus far come near my person:
Tell them, when that my mother went with child
Of that insatiate Edward, noble York,
My princely father, then had wars in France;
And by true computation of the time,
Found that the issue was not his begot;
Which well appeared in his lineaments,

Being nothing like the noble duke my father.
Yet touch this sparingly, as 'twere far off;
Because, my lord, you know, my mother lives.

Buck. Doubt not, my lord, I'll play the orator,
As if the golden fee, for which I plead,
Were for myself: and so, my lord, adieu. [castle,]

Glo. If you thrive well, bring them to Baynard's
Where you shall find me well accompanied,
With reverend fathers, and well-learned bishops.

Buck. I go; and, towards three or four o'clock,
Look for the news that the Guildhall affords.

[Exit BUCKINGHAM.]

Glo. Go, Lovel, with all speed to doctor Shaw;—
Go thou [To CAT.] to friar Penker:—bid them both Meet me within this hour at Baynard's castle.

[Excunt LOVEL and CATESBY.]

Now will I go, to take some privy order,
To draw the brats of Clarence out of sight;
And to give order, that no manner person
Have any time recourse unto the princes. [Exit.]

SCENE VI.—A Street.

Enter a Scrivener, <sup>2</sup> with a writing.

Scriv. Here is the indictment of the good lord
Which in a set hand fairly is engross'd, [Hastings;
That it may be to-day read o'er in Paul's:
And mark how well the sequel hangs together.
Eleven hours I have spent to write it over,
For yesternight by Catesby was it sent me.
The <sup>3</sup> precedent was full as long a doing;
And yet within these five hours Hastings liv'd,
Untainted, unexamined, free, at liberty.
Here's a good world the while!—Who is so <sup>b</sup> gross,
That cannot see this palpable device?
Yet who so bold, but says he sees it not?
Bad is the world; and all will come to nought,
When such ill dealing must be seen <sup>2</sup> or thought.

[Exit.]

SCENE VII.—The Same. The Court of Baynard's Castle.

Enter GLOSTER at one Door, and BUCKINGHAM at another.

Glo. How now, how now! what say the citizens?

Buck. Now by the holy mother of our Lord,
The citizens are mum, say not a word. [dren?]

Glo. Touch'd you the bastardy of Edward's child?

Buck. I did; with his contract with Lady <sup>1</sup> Lucy.
And his contract by deputy in France:
Th' insatiate greediness of his desires,
And his <sup>k</sup> enforcement of the city wives;
His tyranny for trifles; his own bastardy,
As being got, your father then in France;
And <sup>4</sup> disresemblance, being not like the duke.

Withal I did infer your lineaments,
Being the right idea of your father,
Both in your form and nobleness of mind:
Laid open all your victories in Scotland,
Your discipline in war, wisdom in peace,
Your bounty, virtue, fair humility;
Indeed, left nothing fitting for your purpose
Untouch'd, or slightly handled in discourse:
And, when my oratory drew toward end,
I bade them that did love their country's good,
Cry—"God save Richard, England's royal king!"

Glo. And did they so?

Buck. No, so God help me, they spake not a word;
But, like dumb statues, or breathing stones,

<sup>a</sup> "Conversation," i. e., familiar intercourse.—<sup>b</sup> Suspicion.
intended.—<sup>d</sup> "Vantage," i. e., opportunity.—<sup>e</sup> "Infer," i. e., allege; show.—<sup>f</sup> "Luxury," i. e., lewdness.

i. e., stupid; dull.—<sup>i</sup> Lady Elizabeth Lucy.—<sup>k</sup> "Enforcement," i. e., violation.

Star'd each on other, and look'd deadly pale.
Which when I saw, I reprehended them,
And ask'd the mayor, what meant this wilful silence?
His answer was, the people were not us'd
To be spoke to, but by the recorder.
Then, he was urg'd to tell my tale again:—
"Thus saith the duke, thus hath the duke inferr'd;"
But nothing spoke in warrant from himself.
When he had done, some followers of mine own,
At lower end of the hall, hurl'd up their caps,
And some ten voices cried, "God save king Richard!"
And thus I took the vantage of those few,—
"Thanks, gentle citizens, and friends," quoth I;
"This general applause, and cheerful shout, Argues your wisdom, and your love to Richard:"
And even here brake off, and came away.

Glo. What tongueless blocks were they! would they not speak?

Will not the mayor, then, and his brethren, come?

Buck. The mayor is here at hand. <sup>a</sup>Intend some Be not you spoke with, but by mighty suit: [fear;
And look you get a prayer-book in your hand,
And stand between two churchmen, good my lord;
For on that ground I'll make a holy <sup>b</sup>descant:
And be not easily won to our requests;
Play the maid's part, still answer nay, and take it.

Glo. I go; and if you plead as well for them,
As I can say <sup>c</sup>ay to thee for myself,
No doubt we bring it to a happy issue.

[Knocking heard.
Buck. Go, go, up to the leads! the lord mayor knocks. [Exit Mayor]

Enter the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens.
Welcome, my lord: I dance attendance here;
I think the duke will not be spoke withal.—

Enter from the Castle, CATESBY.
Now, Catesby! what says your lord to my request?

Cate. He doth entreat your grace, my noble lord,
To visit him to-morrow, or next day.
He is within, with two right reverend fathers,
Divinely bent to meditation;
And in no worldly suits would he be mov'd,
To draw him from his holy exercise.

Buck. Return, good Catesby, to the gracious duke:
Tell him, myself, the mayor and aldermen,
In deep designs, in matter of great moment,
No less importing than our general good,
Are come to have some conference with his grace.

Cate. I'll signify so much unto him straight.

[Exit.
Buck. Ah, ha! my lord, this prince is not an Ed-
He is not lulling on a lewd love-bed, [ward:
But on his knees at meditation;
Not dallying with a brace of courtezans,
But meditating with two deep divines;
Not sleeping to <sup>d</sup>engross his idle body,
But praying to enrich his watchful soul.
Happy were England, would this virtuous prince
Take on his grace the sovereignty thereof;
But <sup>e</sup>sore I fear, we shall not win him to it.

May. Marry, God defend his grace should say us nay!

Buck. I fear, he will. Here Catesby comes again.—

Re-enter CATESBY.

Now, Catesby, what says his grace? [bled

Cate. He wonders to what end you have assembled
Such troops of citizens to come to him:
His grace not being warn'd thereof before,

He fears, my lord, you mean no good to him.

Buck. Sorry I am, my noble cousin should Suspect me, that I mean no good to him:
By heaven, we come to him in perfect love;
And so once more return, and tell his grace.

[Exit CATESBY.

When holy and devout religious men
Are at their beads, 'tis much to draw them thence;
So sweet is zealous contemplation.

Enter GLOSTER, <sup>3</sup>with a book, in a Gallery above, between two Bishops. CATESBY returns.

May. See, where his grace stands 'tween two clergymen!

Buck. Two props of virtue for a Christian prince,
To stay him from the fall of vanity;
And, see, a book of prayer in his hand;
True <sup>4</sup>ornament to know a holy man.—

Famous Plantagenet, most gracious prince,
Lend favorable ear to our requests,

And pardon us the interruption
Of thy devotion, and right-christian zeal.

Glo. My lord, there needs no such apology;
I do beseech your grace to pardon me,
Who, earnest in the service of my God,
Defer'd the visitation of my friends.

But, leaving this, what is your grace's pleasure?

Buck. Even that, I hope, which pleaseth God above,
And all good men of this un govern'd isle.

Glo. I do suspect, I have done some offence,
That seems disgracious in the city's eye;
And that you come to reprehend my ignorance.

Buck. You have, my lord: would it might please
On our entreaties to amend your fault. [your grace,

Glo. Else wherefore breathe I in a Christian land?

Buck. Know then, it is your fault that you resign

The supreme seat, the throne majestic,
The scepter'd office of your ancestors,
Your state of fortune, and your due of birth,
The lineal glory of your royal house,
To the corruption of a blemish'd stock;
Whiles, in the mildness of your sleepy thoughts,
Which here we waken to our country's good,
This noble isle doth want her proper limbs;
Her face defac'd with scars of infamy,
Her royal stock graft with ignoble plants,
And almost <sup>e</sup>shoulder'd in the swallowing gulf
Of dark forgetfulness, and deep oblivion.
Which to <sup>f</sup>recover, we heartily solicit
Your gracious self to take on you the charge
And kingly government of this your land:

Not as protector, steward, substitute,
Or lowly factor for another's gain;
But as successively from blood to blood,
Your right of birth, your <sup>g</sup>empire, your own.
For this, consorted with the citizens,
Your very worshipful and loving friends,
And by their vehement instigation,
In this just cause come I to move your grace.

Glo. I cannot tell, if to depart in silence,
Or bitterly to speak in your reproof,
Best fitteth my degree, or your condition:
If, not to answer,—you might haply think,
Tongue-tied ambition, not replying, yielded
To bear the golden yoke of sovereignty,
Which fondly you would here impose on me:
If to reprove you for this suit of yours,
So season'd with your faithful love to me,
Then, on the other side, I check'd my friends.
Therefore, to speak, and to avoid the first,
And then, in speaking, not to incur the last,

<sup>e</sup> "Shoulder'd," i. e., thrust into. <sup>f</sup> "To recover," i. e., to recover. <sup>g</sup> "Empire," i. e., dominion; sovereignty.

Definitively thus I answer you.

Your love deserves my thanks; but my desert,
Unmeritable, shuns your high request.
First, if all obstacles were cut away,
And that my path were even to the crown,
As the ripe revenue and due of birth;
Yet so much is my poverty of spirit,
So mighty, and so many, my defects,
That I would rather hide me from my greatness,
Being a bark to brook no mighty sea,
Than in my greatness covet to be hid,
And in the vapor of my glory smother'd.
But, God be thank'd, there is no need of me;
And much I need to help you, were there need:
The royal tree hath left us royal fruit,
Which, mellow'd by the stealing hours of time,
Will well become the seat of majesty,
And make, no doubt, us happy by his reign.
On him I lay that you would lay on me,
The right and fortune of his happy stars;
Which God<sup>b</sup> defend that I should wring from him.

Buck. My lord, this argues conscience in your grace;
But the respects thereof are nice and trivial,
All circumstances well considered.
You say, that Edward is your brother's son:
So say we too, but not by Edward's wife;
For first was he contract to lady Lucy;
Your mother lives a witness to his vow:
And afterward by substitute betroth'd
To Bona, sister to the king of France.
These both put off, a poor petitioner,
A care-craz'd mother to a many sons,
A beauty-waning and distressed widow,
Even in the afternoon of her best days,
Made prize and purchase of his wanton eye,
Seduc'd the pitch and height of his degree
To base declension and loath'd bigamy.
By her, in his unlawful bed, he got
This Edward, whom our manners call the prince.
More bitterly could I expostulate,
Save that, for reverence to some alive,
I give a sparing limit to my tongue.
Then, good my lord, take to your royal self
This proffer'd benefit of dignity;
If not to bless us and the land withal,
Yet to draw forth your noble ancestry
From the corruption of abusing times,
Unto a lineal true-derived course.

May. Do, good my lord; your citizens entreat you.

Buck. Refuse not, mighty lord, this proffer'd love.

Cate. O! make them joyful: grant their lawful suit.

Glo. Alas! why would you heap this care on me?
I am unfit for state and majesty:

I do beseech you, take it not amiss;

I cannot, nor I will not, yield to you.

Buck. If you refuse it,—as in love and zeal,
Loath to depose the child, your brother's son;
As well we know your tenderness of heart,
And gentle, kind, effeminate remorse,
Which we have noted in you to your kindred,
And equally, indeed, to all estates,—
Yet know, wher' you accept our suit or no,
Your brother's son shall never reign our king;
But we will plant some other in your throne,
To the disgrace and downfall of your house.
And, in this resolution, here we leave you.—

[Exit BUCKINGHAM.<sup>3</sup>]

Cate. Call him again, sweet prince; accept their
If you deny them, all the land will rue it. [suit:]

Glo. Will you enforce me to a world of cares?
Call him again: I am not made of stone,
But penetrable to your kind entreaties,

[Exit CATESBY.]

Albeit against my conscience, and my soul.—

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM.<sup>5</sup>

Cousin of Buckingham, and sage, grave men,
Since you will buckle fortune on my back,
To bear her burden, wher' I will, or no,
I must have patience to endure the load:
But if black scandal, or foul-fac'd reproach,
Attend the sequel of your imposition,
Your mere enforcement shall acquaintance me
From all the impure blots and stains thereof;
For God doth know, and you may partly see,
How far I am from the desire of this. [say it.]

May. God bless your grace! we see it, and will

Glo. In saying so, you shall but say the truth.

Buck. Then I salute you with this royal title,—
Long live king Richard England's worthy king!

All. Amen.

Buck. To-morrow may<sup>1</sup> please you to be crown'd?

Glo. Even when you please, for you will have it so.

Buck. To-morrow, then, we will attend your grace:
And so, most joyfully, we take our leave.

Glo. Come, let us to our holy work again.

[To the Bishops.]

Farewell, my cousin:—farewell, gentle friends.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Before the Tower.

*Enter, on one side, Queen ELIZABETH, Duchess of YORK, and Marquess of Dorset; on the other,
ANNE, Duchess of GLOSTER, leading Lady MARGARET PLANTAGENET, CLARENCE's young Daughter.*

Duch. Who meets us here?—my niece Plantagenet,

Led in the hand of her kind aunt of Gloster!

Now, for my life, she's wandering to the Tower,

<sup>6</sup> In pure heart's love, to greet the tender prince.—
Daughter, well met.

Anne.

God give your graces both

A happy and a joyful time of day. [away?]

Q. Eliz. As much to you, good sister: whither

Anne. No farther than the Tower; and, as I guess,
Upon the like devotion as yourselves,

To gratulate the gentle princes there. [gather:]

Q. Eliz. Kind sister, thanks: we'll enter all to-

Enter BRAKENBURY.

And in good time here the lieutenant comes.—

Master lieutenant, pray you, by your leave,

How doth the prince, and my young son of York?

Brak. Right well, dear madam. By your patience,
I may not suffer you to visit them:

The king hath strictly charg'd the contrary.

Q. Eliz. The king! who's that?

Brak.

I mean the lord protector.

Q. Eliz. The Lord protect him from that kingly title!

Hath he set bounds between their love, and me?

I am their mother; who shall bar me from them?

Duch. I am their father's mother; I will see them.

Anne. Their aunt I am in law, in love their mother:
Then, bring me to their sights; I'll bear thy blame,

<sup>a</sup> Grand-daughter.—<sup>b</sup> "To their sights," i. e., to the sight of them.

And take thy office from thee, on my peril.

Brak. No, madam, no; I may not leave it so: I am bound by oath, and therefore pardon me.

[Exit BRAKENBURY.]

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. Let me but meet you, ladies, one hour hence, And I'll salute your grace of York as mother, And reverend looker-on of two fair queens.— Come, madam, you must straight to Westminster,

[To the Duchess of GLOSTER.]

There to be crowned Richard's royal queen.

Q. Eliz. Ah! cut my lace asunder, That my pent heart may have some scope to beat, Or else I swoon with this dead-killing news.

Anne. Despiteful tidings! O, unpleasing news!

Dor. Be of good cheer!—mother, how fares your grace?

Q. Eliz. O Dorset! speak not to me, got thee gone; Death and destruction dog thee at thy heels: Thy mother's name is ominous to her children. If thou wilt outstrip death, go cross the seas, And live with Richmond from the reach of hell. Go, lie thee, lie thee, from this slaughter-house, Lest thou increase the number of the dead, And make me die the <sup>b</sup>thrall of Margaret's curse,— Nor mother, wife, nor England's counted queen.

Stan. Full of wise care is this your counsel, mad— Take all the swift advantage of the hours; [am.— You shall have letters from me to my son In your behalf, to meet you on the way: Be not ta'en tardy by unwise delay.

Duch. O ill-dispersing wind of misery!— O, my accursed womb, the bed of death! A cockatrice hast thou hatch'd to the world, Whose unavoided eye is murderous!

Stan. Come, madam, come! I in all haste was sent.

Anne. And I with all unwillingness will go.— O! would to God, that the inclusive verge Of golden metal, that must <sup>a</sup>round my brow, Were red-hot steel to sear me to the <sup>c</sup>brain! Anointed let me be with deadly venom; And die, ere men can say—God save the queen!

Q. Eliz. Go, go, poor soul, I envy not thy glory; To feed my humor, wish thyself no harm.

[Now,]
Anne. No! why?—When he, that is my husband Came to me, as I follow'd Henry's corpse; [hands, When scarce the blood was well wash'd from his Which issu'd from my other angel husband, And that dear saint which, then, I weeping follow'd; O! when, I say, I look'd on Richard's face, This was my wish,—“Be thou,” quoth I, “accurs'd, For making me, so young, so old a widow! And, when thou wedd'st, let sorrow haunt thy bed; And be thy wife (if any be so mad) More miserable by the life of thee, Than thou hast made me by my dear lord's death!” Lo! ere I can repeat this curse again, Within so small a time, my woman's heart Grossly grew captive to his honey words, And proved the subject of mine own soul's curse: Which hitherto hath held mine eyes from rest; For never yet one hour in his bed Did I enjoy the golden dew of sleep, But with his <sup>f</sup>timorous dreams was still awak'd. Besides, he hates me for my father Warwick; And will, no doubt, shortly be rid of me.

Q. Eliz. Poor heart, adieu; I pity thy complaining.

Anne. No more than with my soul I mourn for yours.

Dor. Farewell, thou woeful welcomer of glory.

Anne. Adieu, poor soul, that tak'st thy leave of it.

Duch. Go thou to Richmond, and good fortune guide thee!— [To Dorset.]

Go thou to Richard, and good angels tend thee!— [To Anne.]

Go thou to sanctuary, and good thoughts possess thee! [To Queen ELIZABETH.]

I to my grave, where peace and rest lie with me! Eighty odd years of sorrow have I seen,

And each hour's joy wreck'd with a week of <sup>g</sup>teen.

Q. Eliz. Stay yet; look back, with me, unto the Tower.—

Pity, you ancient stones, those tender babes, Whom envy hath <sup>h</sup>immur'd within your walls;

Rough cradle for such little pretty ones!

Rude ragged nurse, old sullen play-fellow

For tender princes, use my babies well!

So foolish sorrow bids your stones farewell.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room of State in the Palace.

Sound a Sennet. RICHARD, crowned upon his Throne; BUCKINGHAM, CATESBY, a Page, and others.

K. Rich. Stand all apart.—Cousin of Buckingham! Buck. My gracious sovereign.

K. Rich. Give me thy hand. Thus high, by thy advice, [Trumpets sound.]

And thy assistance, is king Richard seated:

But shall we wear these glories for a day,

Or shall they last, and we rejoice in them?

Buck. Still live they, and for ever let them last!

K. Rich. Ah! Buckingham, now do I play the To try if thou be current gold, indeed.— [Touch, Young Edward lives.—Think now what I would

Buck. Say on, my loving lord. [Speak.]

K. Rich. Why, Buckingham, I say, I would be king.

Buck. Why, so you are, my thrice-renowned lord.

K. Rich. Ha! am I king? 'Tis so; but Edward

Buck. True, noble prince. [lives.]

K. Rich. O bitter consequence!

That Edward still should live,—true, noble prince.—

Cousin, thou wast not wont to be so dull:—

Shall I be plain?—I wish the bastards dead;

And I would have it suddenly perform'd.

What say'st thou now? speak suddenly; be brief.

Buck. Your grace may do your pleasure.

K. Rich. Tut, tut! thou art all ice, thy kindness freezes.

Say, have I thy consent that they shall die?

Buck. Give me some little breath, some pause, Before I positively speak in this: [dear lord,

I will resolve you herein presently.

[Exit BUCKINGHAM.]

Cate. The king is angry: see, he gnaws his lip.

[Aside.]

K. Rich. I will converse with iron-witted fools,

[Descends from his Throne.]

And <sup>k</sup>unrespective boys: none are for me,

That look into me with considerate eyes.

High-reaching Buckingham grows circumspect.

Boy!—

Page. My lord.

K. Rich. Know'st thou not any, whom corrupting Will tempt unto a close <sup>l</sup>exploit of death?

<sup>g</sup> Sorrow.—<sup>h</sup> Whom envy hath immur'd,” i. e., whom malice hath confined.—<sup>i</sup> “The touch,” i. e., the touchstone.—<sup>k</sup> Unregardful; inconsiderate.—<sup>l</sup> A close exploit,” i. e., a secret act.

Page. 'I know a discontented gentleman,
Whose humble means match not his haughty spirit:
Gold were as good as twenty orators,
And will, no doubt, tempt him to any thing.

K. Rich. What is his name?

Page. His name, my lord, is Tyrrel.

K. Rich. I partly know the man: go, call him hither! [Exit Page.]

The deep-revolving, <sup>a</sup>witty Buckingham
No more shall be the neighbor to my counsels.
Hath he so long held out with me untir'd,
And stops he now for breath?—Well, be it so.—

Enter STANLEY.

How now, lord Stanley? what's the news <sup>2</sup>with you?

Stan. Know, my loving lord,
The marquis Dorset, as I hear, is fled
To Richmond, in the parts where he abides.

K. Rich. Come hither, Catesby: rumor it abroad,
That Anne, my wife, is very grievous sick;
I will take <sup>b</sup>order for her keeping close.
Inquire me out some mean poor gentleman,
Whom I will marry straight to Clarence's daughter:—
The boy is foolish, and I fear not him.—
Look, how thou dream'st!—I say again, give out,
That Anne my queen is sick, and like to die:
About it; for it stands me much <sup>c</sup>upon,
To stop all hopes whose growth may damage me.—

[Exit CATESBY.]

I must be married to my brother's daughter,
Or else my kingdom stands on brittle glass.—
Murder her brothers, and then marry her?
Uncertain way of gain! But I am in
So far in blood, that sin will pluck on sin.
Tear-falling pity dwells not in this eye.—

Re-enter Page, with TYRRELL.

Is thy name Tyrrel?

Tyr. James Tyrrel, and your most obedient subject.

K. Rich. Art thou, indeed?

Tyr. Prove me, my gracious lord.

K. Rich. Dar'st thou resolve to kill a friend of mine?

Tyr. Please you; but I had rather kill two enemies.

K. Rich. Why, then thou hast it: two deep enemies,
Foes to my rest, and my sweet sleep's disturbers,
Are they that I would have thee deal upon.

Tyrrel. I mean those bastards in the Tower.

Tyr. Let me have open means to come to them,
And soon I'll rid you from the fear of them.

K. Rich. Thou sing'st sweet music. Hark, come hither, Tyrrel:

Go, by this token.—Rise, and lend thine ear.

<sup>4</sup>[TYRREL rises, and RICHARD whispers.]

There is no more but so:—say, it is done,

And I will love thee, and prefer thee for it.

Tyr. I will despatch it straight. [Exit.]

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. My lord, I have consider'd in my mind
The late demand that you did send me in.

K. Rich. Well, let that rest. Dorset is fled to

Buck. I hear the news, my lord. [Richmond.]

K. Rich. Stanley, he is your wife's son: well look unto it.

Buck. My lord, I claim the gift, my due by promise,
For which your honor and your faith <sup>5</sup>are pawn'd;
Th' earldom of Hereford, and the moveables,
Which you have promised I shall possess.

K. Rich. Stanley, look to your wife: if she convey Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it. [quest?]

Buck. What says your highness to my just re-

K. Rich. I do remember me,—Henry the sixth
Did prophesy that Richmond should be king,
When Richmond was a little <sup>6</sup>peevish boy.

A king!—perhaps—

Buck. My lord,— [that time]

K. Rich. How chance, the prophet could not at Have told me, I being by, that I should kill him?

Buck. My lord, your promise for the earldom,—

K. Rich. Richmond!—When last I was at Exeter,
The mayor in courtesy show'd me the castle,
And call'd it—Rouge-mont: at which name I started,
Because a bard of Ireland told me once,
I should not live long after I saw Richmond.

Buck. My lord,—

K. Rich. Ay; what's o'clock?

Buck. I am thus bold to put your grace in mind
Of what you promis'd me.

K. Rich. Well, but what's o'clock?

Buck.

Upon the stroke of ten.

K. Rich. Well, let it strike.

Buck.

Why, let it strike?

K. Rich. Because that, like a <sup>a</sup>Jack, thou keep'st the stroke

Betwixt thy begging and my meditation.

I am not in the giving vein to-day. [no.]

Buck. Why then, resolve me whether you will, or

K. Rich. Thou troublest me: I am not in the vein.

[Exit King RICHARD <sup>6</sup>angrily, and his Train.]

Buck. And is it thus? repays he my deep service

With such contempt? made I him king for this?

O! let me think on Hastings, and be gone

To 'Brecknock, while my fearful head is on. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—The Same.

Enter TYRREL.

Tyr. The tyrannous and bloody act is done;

The most <sup>7</sup>arch deed of piteous massacre,

That ever yet this land was guilty of.

Dighton and Forrest, whom I did suborn

To do this piece of ruthless butchery,

Albeit they were flesh'd villains, <sup>8</sup>blooded dogs,

Melted with tenderness and mild compassion,

Wept like two children in their death's sad story.

"O! thus," quoth Dighton, "lay the gentle babes,"—

"Thus, thus," quoth Forrest, "girdling one another

Within their alabaster innocent arms:

Their lips were four red roses on a stalk,

And in their summer beauty kiss'd each other.

A book of prayers on their pillow lay; [mind;]

Which once," quoth Forrest, "almost chang'd my

But, O! the devil"—there the villain stopp'd;

When Dighton thus told on,—"we smothered

The most <sup>9</sup>replenished sweet work of nature,

That, from the prime creation, e'er she fram'd."

Hence both are gone: with conscience and remorse,

They could not speak; and so I left them both,

To bear this tidings to the bloody king.

Enter King RICHARD.

And here he comes.—All health, my sovereign lord!

K. Rich. Kind Tyrrel, am I happy in thy news?

Tyr. If to have done the thing you gave in charge

Beget your happiness, be happy then,

For it is done.

K. Rich. But didst thou see them dead?

Tyr. I did, my lord.

K. Rich.

And buried, gentle Tyrrel?

Tyr. The chaplain of the Tower hath buried them;

But where, to say the truth, I do not know.

K. Rich. Come to me, Tyrrel, soon, and after supper,

When thou shalt tell the process of their death.
Mean time, but think how I may do thee good,
And be inheritor of thy desire.
Farewell, till then.

Tyr.

I humbly take my leave. [Exit.]

K. Rich. The son of Clarence have I pent up close;
His daughter meanly have I match'd in marriage;
The sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom,
And Anne my wife hath bid this world good night.
Now, for I know the Bretagne<sup>1</sup> Richard aims
At young Elizabeth, my brother's daughter,
And by that knot looks proudly on the crown,
To her go I, a jolly thriving wooer.

Enter CATESBY, 2 in haste.

Cate. My lord!—

K. Rich. Good or bad news, that thou com'st in so bluntly? [Mond;]

Cate. Bad news, my lord: <sup>a</sup>Morton is fled to Rich-and Buckingham, back'd with the hardy Welshmen,
Is in the field, and still his power encreaseth.

K. Rich. Ely with Richmond troubles me more near,

Than Buckingham and his rash-levied strength.
Come; I have learn'd, that fearful commenting
Is leaden servitor to dull delay;
Delay leads impotent and snail-pac'd beggary:
Then, fiery expedition be my wing,
Jove's Mercury, and herald for a king.—
Go, muster men: my counsel is my shield;
We must be brief, when traitors brave the field.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Same. Before the Palace.

Enter Queen MARGARET.

Q. Mar. So, now prosperity begins to mellow,
And drop into the rotten mould of death.
Here in these confines slyly have I lurk'd,
To watch the waning of mine enemies.
A dire<sup>b</sup> induction am I witness to,
And will to France; hoping, the consequence
Will prove as bitter, black, and tragical.
Withdraw thee, wretched Margaret: who comes here? [She stands back.]

Enter Queen ELIZABETH and the Duchess of YORK.

Q. Eliz. Ah, my poor princes! ah, my tender babes!
My unblown flowers, new-appearing sweets!
If yet your gentle souls fly in the air,
And be not fix'd in doom perpetual,
Hover about me with your airy wings,
And hear your mother's lamentation.

Q. Mar. Hover about her; say, that right for right Hath dimm'd your infant morn to aged night.

Duch. So many miseries have craz'd my voice,
That my woe-wearied tongue is still and mute.—
Edward Plantagenet! why; art thou dead?

Q. Mar. Plantagenet doth quit Plantagenet;

<sup>4</sup>[Aside.]

Edward for Edward pays a dying debt. [lambs,]
Q. Eliz. Wilt thou, O God! fly from such gentle
And throw them in the entrails of the wolf?
When didst thou sleep, when such a deed was done?

Q. Mar. When holy Harry died, and my sweet son.

Duch. Dead life, blind sight, poor mortal living ghost, [usurp'd,]
Woe's scene, world's shame, grave's due by life

Brief abstract and record of tedious days,
Rest thy unrest on England's lawful earth,

[Sitting down.]

Unlawfully made drunk with innocent blood!

Q. Eliz. Ah! that thou would'st as soon afford a
As thou canst yield a melancholy seat; [grave,]
Then would I hide my bones, not rest them here.
Ah! who hath any cause to mourn, but we?

[Sitting down by her.]

Q. Mar. If ancient sorrow be most reverent,

[Coming forward.]

Give mine the benefit of <sup>c</sup>seniory,
And let my griefs frown on the upper hand.
If sorrow can admit society,

[Sitting down 6 by them.]

Tell o'er your woes again by viewing mine:—

I had an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him;

I had a husband, till a Richard kill'd him:

Thou hadst an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him;

Thou hadst a Richard, till a Richard kill'd him.

Duch. I had a Richard too, and thou didst kill him:

I had a Rutland too; thou help'st to kill him.

Q. Mar. Thou hadst a Clarence too, and Richard kill'd him.

From forth the kennel of thy womb hath crept

A hell-hound, that doth hunt us all to death:

That dog, that had his teeth before his eyes,

To worry lambs, and lap their gentle blood:

That foul defacer of God's handy-work,

That reigns in galled eyes of weeping souls,

That excellent grand tyrant of the earth

Thy womb let loose, to chase us to our graves.—

O! upright, just, and true-disposing God,

How do I thank thee, that this <sup>d</sup>carnal cur

Preys on the issue of his mother's body,

And makes her <sup>e</sup>pew-fellow with others' mean!

Duch. O, Harry's wife! triumph not in my woes:
God witness with me, I have wept for thine.

Q. Mar. Bear with me: I am hungry for revenge,
And now I cloy me with beholding it.

Thy Edward he is dead, that kill'd my Edward;

Thy other Edward dead, to quit my Edward;

Young York he is but <sup>f</sup>boot, because both they Match not the high perfection of my loss.

Thy Clarence he is dead, that stabb'd my Edward;

And the beholders of this frantic play,

Th' <sup>g</sup>adulterate Hasting, Rivers, Vaughan, Grey, Untimely smother'd in their dusky graves.

Richard yet lives, hell's black intelligencer,

Only reserv'd their factor, to buy souls,

And send them thither; but at hand, at hand,

Ensues his piteous and unpitied end:

Earth gapes, hell burns, fiends roar, saints pray,

To have him suddenly convey'd from hence.—

Cancel his bond of life, dear God! I pray,

That I may live and say, the dog is dead. [come,]

Q. Eliz. O! thou didst prophesy, the time would

That I should wish for thee to help me curse

That bottle spider, that foul bunch-back'd toad.

Q. Mar. I call'd thee then, vain flourish of my fortune;

I call'd thee then, poor shadow, painted queen;

The presentation of but what I was,

The flattering index of a direful pageant,

One heav'd o' high, to be hurl'd down below:

A mother only mock'd with two fair babes;

A dream of what thou wast; a <sup>h</sup>garish flag,

To be the aim of every dangerous shot;

A sign of dignity, a breath, a bubble;

A queen in jest, only to fill the scene.

into the bargain. — <sup>g</sup> Adulterate. — <sup>h</sup> Showy; daring.

Where is thy husband now? where be thy brothers?
 Where be thy two sons? wherein dost thou joy?
 Who sues, and kneels, and says—God save the queen?
 Where be the bending peers that flattered thee?
 Where be the thronging troops that follow'd thee?

Decline all this, and see what now thou art.

For happy wife, a most distressed widow;

For joyful mother, one that wails the name;

For one being sued to, one that humbly sues;

For queen, a very caitiff crown'd with care;

For one that scorn'd at me, now scorn'd of me;

For one being fear'd of all, now fearing one;

For one commanding all, obey'd of none.

Thus hath the course of justice whirl'd about,

And left thee but a very prey to time;

Having no more but thought of what thou wast

To torture thee the more, being what thou art.

Thou didst usurp my place, and dost thou not

Usurp the just proportion of my sorrow?

Now, thy proud neck bears half my burden'd yoke;

From which, even here, I slip my wearied head,

And leave the burden of it all on thee.

Farewell, York's wife, and queen of sad mischance:

These English woes shall make me smile in France.

Q. Eliz. O! thou well skill'd in curses, stay a

And teach me how to curse mine enemies. [while,

Q. Mar. Forbear to sleep the night, and fast the Compare dead happiness with living woe; [day;

Think that thy babes were fairer than they were,

And he that slew them fouler than he is:

But bettering thy loss makes the bad-causer worse:

Revolving this will teach thee how to curse.

Q. Eliz. My words are dull; O! quicken them with thine.

Q. Mar. Thy woes will make them sharp, and pierce like mine. [Exit Queen MARGARET.

Duch. Why should calamity be full of words?

Q. Eliz. Windy attorneys to their client woes,

Airy succeeders of intestate joys,

Poor breathing orators of miseries!

Let them have scope: though what they do impart

Help nothing else, yet do they ease the heart.

Duch. If so, then be not tongue-ty'd: go with me,

And in the breath of bitter words let's smother

My damned son, that thy two sweet sons smother'd.

[A Trumpet heard.

The trumpet sounds: be copious in exclamings.

Enter King RICHARD, and his Train, marching.

K. Rich. Who intercepts me in my expedition?

Duch. O! she, that might have intercepted thee,

By strangling thee in her accursed womb,

From all the slaughters, wretch, that thou hast done.

Q. Eliz. Hid'st thou that forehead with a golden crown,

Where't should be branded, if that right were right,

For slaughter of the prince that ow'd that crown,

And the dire death of my poor sons, and brothers?

Tell me, thou villain-slave, where are my children?

Duch. Then toad, thou toad, where is thy brother

And little Ned Plantagenet, his son? [Clarence,

Q. Eliz. Where is the gentle Rivers, Vaughan,

Duch. Where is kind Hastings? [Grey?

K. Rich. A flourish, trumpets!—strike alarums, drums!

Let not the heavens hear these tell-tale women

Rail on the Lord's anointed. Strike, I say!—

[Flourish. Alarums.

Either be patient, and entreat me fair,

Or with the clamorous report of war

Thus will I drown your exclamations.

<sup>a</sup> "Decline all this," i. e., run through all this, from first to last.—<sup>b</sup> "Bettering," i. e., magnifying.—<sup>c</sup> Owned.

Duch. Art thou my son?

K. Rich. Ay; I thank God, my father, and yourself.

Duch. Then patiently I bear my impatience.

K. Rich. Madam, I have a touch of your<sup>d</sup> condition, That cannot brook the accent of reproof.

Duch. O! let me speak.

K. Rich. Do, then; but I'll not hear.

Duch. I will be mild and gentle in my words.

K. Rich. And brief, good mother, for I am in haste.

Duch. Art thou so hasty? I<sup>2</sup> once stay'd for thee, God knows, in torment and in agony.

K. Rich. And came I not at last to comfort you?

Duch. No, by thy holy<sup>e</sup> rood, thou know'st it well; Thou can'st on earth to make the earth my hell.

A grievous burden was thy birth to me;

Tetcy and wayward was thy infancy: [ous;

Thy school-days, frightful, desperate, wild, and furi-

Thy prime of manhood, daring, bold, and venturesome:

Thy age confirm'd, proud, subtle, sly, and bloody,

More mild, but yet more harmful, kind in hatred:

What comfortable hour canst thou name,

That ever grac'd me with thy company?

K. Rich. 'Faith, none, but Humphrey Hour, that call'd your grace

To break fast once forth of my company.

If I be so disgracious in your eye,

Let me march on, and not offend you, madam.—

Strike up the drum!

Duch. I pr'ythee, hear me speak.

K. Rich. You speak too bitterly.

Duch. Hear me a word;

For I shall never speak to thee again.

K. Rich. So.

Duch. Either thou wilt die by God's just ordinance,

Ere from this war thou turn a conqueror;

Or I with grief and extreme age shall perish,

And never look upon thy face again.

Therefore, take with thee my most grievous curse;

Which in the day of battle tire thee more,

Than all the complete armor that thou wear'st.

My prayers on the adverse party fight;

And there the little souls of Edward's children

Whisper the spirits of thine enemies,

And promise them success and victory.

Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end;

Shame<sup>g</sup> serves thy life, and doth thy death attend.

[Exit.

Q. Eliz. Though far more cause, yet much less spirit to curse

Abides in me: I say amen to her.

[Going. K. Rich. Stay, madam; I must talk a word with you.

Q. Eliz. I have no more sons of the royal blood,

For thee to slaughter: for my daughters, Richard,

They shall be praying nuns, not weeping queens;

And therefore level not to hit their lives.

K. Rich. You have a daughter call'd Elizabeth,

Virtuous and fair, royal and gracious. [live,

Q. Eliz. And must she die for this? O! let her

And I'll corrupt her manners, stain her beauty;

Slander myself as false to Edward's bed;

Throw over her the veil of infamy:

So she may live unscarr'd of bleeding slaughter,

I will confess she was not Edward's daughter.

K. Rich. Wrore not her birth; she is a royal princess.

Q. Eliz. To save her life, I'll say she is not so.

K. Rich. Her life is safest only in her birth.

Q. Eliz. And only in that safety died her brothers.

K. Rich. Lo! at their birth good stars were opposite.

Q. Eliz. No, to their lives ill friends were contrary.

K. Rich. All <sup>a</sup>unavoided is the doom of destiny.

Q. Eliz. True, when avoided grace makes destiny.

My babes were destin'd to a fairer death,

If grace had bless'd thee with a fairer life. [ins.]

K. Rich. You speak, as if that I had slain my cousin.

Q. Eliz. Cousins, indeed; and by thy uncle cozen'd
Of comfort, kingdom, kindred, freedom, life.

Whose hands soever lanc'd their tender hearts,

Thy head, all indirectly, gave direction:

No doubt the murderous knife was dull and blunt,

Till it was whetted on thy stone-hard heart,

To revel in the entrails of my lambs.

But that <sup>b</sup>still use of grief makes wild grief tame,

My tongue should to thy ears not name my boys,

Till that thy nails were anchor'd in thine eyes;

And I, in such a desperate bay of death,

Like a poor bark, of sails and tackling reft,

Rush all to pieces on thy rocky bosom.

K. Rich. Madam, so thrive I in my enterprise,

And dangerous <sup>c</sup>success of bloody wars,

As I intend more good to you and yours,

Than ever you or yours by me were harm'd!

Q. Eliz. What good is cover'd with the face of heaven,

To be discover'd, that can do me good?

K. Rich. Th' advancement of your children, gentle lady. [heads?

Q. Eliz. Up to some scaffold, there to lose their

K. Rich. Unto the dignity and height of <sup>d</sup>honor.
The high imperial type of this earth's <sup>e</sup>glory.

Q. Eliz. Flatter my sorrow with report of it:

Tell me, what state, what dignity, what honor,

Canst thou <sup>f</sup>demise to any child of mine?

K. Rich. Even all I have; ay, and myself and all,

Will I withal endow a child of thine;

So in the Lethe of thy angry soul

Thou drown the sad remembrance of those wrongs,
Which, thou supposest, I have done to thee.

Q. Eliz. Be brief, lest that the process of thy kind-

K. Rich. Then know, that from my soul I love thy daughter. [soul.

Q. Eliz. My daughter's mother thinks it with her

K. Rich. What do you think?

Q. Eliz. That thou dost love my daughter from thy soul.

So, from thy soul's love didst thou love her brothers;
And from my heart's love I do thank thee for it.

K. Rich. Be not so hasty to confound my meaning.

I mean, that with my soul I love thy daughter,

And do intend to make her queen of England.

Q. Eliz. Well then, who dost thou mean shall be her king? [should be?

K. Rich. Even he that makes her queen: who else?

Q. Eliz. What! thou?

K. Rich. Even so: how think you of it?

Q. Eliz. How canst thou woo her?

K. Rich. That I would learn of you,
As one being best acquainted with her humor.

Q. Eliz. And wilt thou learn of me?

K. Rich. Madam, with all my heart.

Q. Eliz. Send to her by the man that slew her brothers,

A pair of bleeding hearts; thereon <sup>2</sup>engraven
Edward and York; then, <sup>1</sup>haply, will she weep:
Therefore present to her,—as sometime Margaret
Did to thy father, steep'd in Rutland's blood,—
A handkerchief; which, say to her, did drain
The purple sap from her sweet brothers' body,

And bid her wipe her weeping eyes withal.

If this inducement move her not to love,

Send her a letter of thy noble deeds;

Tell her thou mad'st away her uncle Clarence,

Her uncle Rivers; ay, and, for her sake,

Mad'st quick conveyance with her good aunt Anne.

K. Rich. You mock me, madam: this is not the way
To win your daughter.

Q. Eliz. There is no other way,

Unless thou couldst put on some other shape,

And not be Richard that hath done all this.

K. Rich. Say, that I did all this for love of her?

Q. Eliz. Nay, then indeed, she cannot choose but hate thee,

Having bought love with such a bloody spoil.

K. Rich. Look, what is done cannot be now amend-
Men shall deal unadvisedly sometimes, [ed.

Which after-hours give leisure to repent:

If I did take the kingdom from your sons,

To make amends I'll give it to your daughter.

If I have kill'd the issue of your womb,

To quicken your increase, I will beget

Mine issue of your blood upon your daughter.

A grandam's name is little less in love,

Than is the doting title of a mother:

They are as children, but one step below,

Even of your mettle, of your very blood;

Of all one pain, save for a night of groans

Endur'd <sup>2</sup>of her, for whom you <sup>1</sup>bide like sorrow.

Your children were vexation to your youth;

But mine shall be a comfort to your age.

The loss you have is but a son, being king,

And by that loss your daughter is made queen:

I cannot make you what amends I would,

Therefore, accept such kindness as I can.

Dorset, your son, that with a fearful soul

<sup>3</sup>Treads discontented steps in foreign soil,

This fair alliance quickly shall call home

To high promotions and great dignity:

The king, that calls your beauteous daughter wife,

Familiarly shall call thy Dorset brother;

Again shall you be mother to a king,

And all the ruins of distressful times

Repair'd with double riches of content.

What! we have many goodly days to see:

The liquid drops of tears that you have shed,

Shall come again transform'd to orient pearl,

Advantaging their loan with interest

Of ten-times-double gain of happiness.

Go then, my mother; to thy daughter go:

Make bold her bashful years with your experience;

Prepare her ears to hear a wooer's tale;

Put in her tender heart th' aspiring flame

Of golden sov'reignty; acquaint the princess

With the sweet silent hours of marriage joys:

And when this arm of mine hath chastised

The petty rebel, dull-brain'd Buckingham,

Bound with triumphant garlands will I come,

And lead thy daughter to a conqueror's bed;

To whom I will retail my conquest won,

And she shall be sole victress, Cæsar's Cæsar.

Q. Eliz. What were I best to say? her father's brother

Would be her lord? Or shall I say, her uncle?

Or he that slew her brothers, and her uncles?

Under what title shall I woo for thee,

That God, the law, my honor, and her love,

Can make seem pleasing to her tender years?

K. Rich. Infer fair England's peace by this alliance. [ing war.

Q. Eliz. Which she shall purchase with still last-

K. Rich. Tell her, the king, that may command,

Q. Eliz. That at her hands, which the king's King
K. Rich. Say, she shall be a high and mighty queen.

Q. Eliz. To wait the tide, as her mother doth.

K. Rich. Say, I will love her everlastingly.

Q. Eliz. But how long shall that tide, ever, last?

K. Rich. Sweetly in force unto her fair life's end.

Q. Eliz. But how long fairly shall her sweet life last? [it.]

K. Rich. As long as heaven, and nature, <sup>1</sup>lengthen
Q. Eliz. As long as hell, and Richard, like of it.

K. Rich. Say, I, her sovereign, am her subject low;

Q. Eliz. But she, your subject, loaths such sovereignty.

K. Rich. Be eloquent in my behalf to her. [told.]

Q. Eliz. An honest tale speeds best, being plainly
K. Rich. Then, plainly to her tell my loving tale.

Q. Eliz. Plain, and not honest, is too harsh a style.

K. Rich. Your reasons are too shallow and too quick. [dead;—]

Q. Eliz. O! no, my reasons are too deep and Too deep and dead, poor infants, in their graves.

K. Rich. Harp not on that string, madam: that is past. [break.]

Q. Eliz. Harp on it still shall I, till heart-strings
K. Rich. Now, by my George, my garter, and my <sup>b</sup>crown,—

Q. Eliz. Profan'd, dishonor'd, and the third usurp'd.

K. Rich. I swear—

Q. Eliz. By nothing; for this is no oath.
Thy George, profan'd, hath lost its lordly honor;
Thy garter, blemish'd, pawn'd his knightly virtue;
Thy crown, usurp'd, disgrac'd his kingly glory.
If something thou would'st swear to be believ'd,
Swear then by something that thou hast not wrong'd.

K. Rich. Now by the world,—

Q. Eliz. 'Tis full of thy foul wrongs.

K. Rich. My father's death,—

Q. Eliz. Thy life hath it dishonor'd.

K. Rich. Then, by myself,—

Q. Eliz. Thyself is self-mis-us'd.

K. Rich. Why then, by God,—

Q. Eliz. God's wrong is most of all.
If thou hadst fear'd to break an oath <sup>2</sup>with him,
The unity, the king my husband made,
Thou hadst not broken, nor my brothers died.
If thou hadst fear'd to break an oath by him,
The imperial metal, circling now thy head,
Had grac'd the tender temples of my child;
And both the princes had been breathing here,
Which now, two tender bed-fellows for dust,
Thy broken faith hath made the prey for worms.
What canst thou swear by now?

K. Rich. The time to come.

Q. Eliz. That thou hast wronged in the time o'er-
For I myself have many tears to wash [past;]
Hereafter time, for time past wrong'd by thee.
The children live whose fathers thou hast slaughter'd,
Ungovern'd youth, to wait it with their age;
The parents live, whose children thou hast butcher'd,
Old barren plants, to wait it with their age.
Swear not by time to come; for that thou hast
Mis-us'd ere us'd, by times ill-us'd o'er-past.

K. Rich. As I intend to prosper, and repent,
So thrive I in my dangerous attempt
Of hostile arms! myself myself confound!
Heaven and fortune bar me happy hours!
Day, yield me not thy light, nor night, thy rest!
Be opposite all planets of good luck
To my proceeding, if, with pure heart's love,

Immaculate devotion, holy thoughts,
I tender not thy beauteous princely daughter!
In her consists my happiness and thine;
Without her, follows to myself, and thee,
Herself, the land, and many a Christian soul,
Death, desolation, ruin, and decay:
It cannot be avoided, but by this;
It will not be avoided, but by this.
Therefore, dear mother, (I must call you so)
Be the attorney of my love to her.
Plead what I will be, not what I have been;
Not my deserts, but what I will deserve:
Urgo the necessity <sup>3</sup>of state and times,
And be not <sup>c</sup>peevish <sup>4</sup>fond in great designs.

Q. Eliz. Shall I be tempted of the devil thus?

K. Rich. Ay, if the devil tempt thee to do good.

Q. Eliz. Shall I forget myself, to be myself?

K. Rich. Ay, if your self's remembrance wrong yourself.

Q. Eliz. Yet thou didst kill my children.

K. Rich. But in your daughter's womb <sup>5</sup>I'll bury them:

Where, in that nest of <sup>d</sup>spicery, they will breed
Selves of themselves, to your <sup>e</sup>recomforture.

Q. Eliz. Shall I go win my daughter to thy will?

K. Rich. And be a happy mother by the deed.

Q. Eliz. I go.—Write to me, <sup>6</sup>Richard, very short—
And you shall understand from me her mind. [ly,
K. Rich. Bear her my true love's kiss, and so farewell. [Kissing her. Exit Q. ELIZABETH.]

Relenting fool, and shallow, changing woman!—
How now! what news?

Enter RATCLIFF <sup>7</sup>in haste; CATESBY following.

Rat. Most mighty sovereign, on the western coast
Rideth a puissant navy: to our shores
Throng many doubtful hollow-hearted friends,
Unarm'd, and unresolv'd to beat them back.
'Tis thought that Richmond is their admiral;
And there they <sup>8</sup>hull, expecting but the aid
Of Buckingham to welcome them ashore.

K. Rich. Some light-foot friend post to the duke of Norfolk:—

Ratcliff, thyself,—or Catesby; where is he?

Cate. Here, my good lord.

K. Rich. Catesby, fly to the duke.

Cate. I will, my lord, with all convenient haste.

K. Rich. Ratcliff, come hither. Post to Salisbury;
When thou com'st thither,—Dull, unmindful villain,

[To CATESBY.]

Why stay'st thou here, and go'st not to the duke?

Cate. First, mighty liege, tell me your highness' pleasure,

What from your grace I shall deliver to him.

K. Rich. O! true, good Catesby.—Bid him levy straight

The greatest strength and power he can make,

And meet me suddenly at Salisbury.

Cate. I go.

[Exit.]

Rat. What, may it please you, shall I do at Salisbury? [I go?]

K. Rich. Why, what wouldst thou do there, before

Rat. Your highness told me, I should post before.

Enter STANLEY.

K. Rich. My mind is chang'd.—Stanley, what news with you? [hearing;]

Stan. None good, my liege, to please you with the Nor none so bad, but well may be reported.

K. Rich. Heyday, a riddle! neither good nor bad?
What need'st thou run so many miles about,

<sup>a</sup> "Forbids," that is, in the Levitical law.—<sup>b</sup> The ensigns of the order of the Garter.

<sup>c</sup> "Peevish fond," i. e., foolishly querulous.—<sup>d</sup> An allusion to the nest of the phoenix.—<sup>e</sup> "Recomforture," i. e., renewal of comfort.—<sup>f</sup> "Hull," i. e., float.

When thou may'st tell thy tale the nearest way?
Once more, what news?

Stan. Richmond is on the seas.

K. Rich. There let him sink, and be the seas on him,
White-liver'd runagate! what doth he there?

Stan. I know not, mighty sovereign, but by guess.

K. Rich. Well, as you guess? [ton,

Stan. Stir'd up by Dorset, Buckingham, and Mor-
He makes for England, here, to claim the crown.

K. Rich. Is the chair empty? is the sword un-sway'd?

Is the king dead? the empire unpossess'd?

What heir of York is there alive, but we,

And who is England's king, but great York's heir?

Then, tell me, what makes he upon the seas?

Stan. Unless for that, my liege, I cannot guess.

K. Rich. Unless for that he comes to be your liege,
You cannot guess wherefore the Welshman comes.

Thou wilt revolt, and fly to him, I fear. [not.

Stan. No, my good lord; therefore, mistrust me

K. Rich. Where is thy power, then, to beat him

Where be thy tenants, and thy followers? [back?

Are they not now upon the western shore,

Safe-conducting the rebels from their ships?

Stan. No, my good lord, my friends are in the north.

K. Rich. Cold friends to me: What do they in the north,

When they should serve their sovereign in the west?

Stan. They have not been commanded, mighty
Pleaseth your majesty to give me leave, [king.

I'll muster up my friends, and meet your grace,
Where, and what time, your majesty shall please.

K. Rich. Ay, thou wouldst be gone to join with But I'll not trust thee. [Richmond:

Stan. Most mighty sovereign,

You have no cause to hold my friendship doubtful.
I never was, nor never will be false. [hind

K. Rich. Go, then, and muster men: but leave be-Your son, George Stanley. Look your heart be firm,
Or else his head's assurance is but frail.

Stan. So deal with him, as I prove true to you.

[Exit STANLEY.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My gracious sovereign, now in Devonshire,
As I by friends am well advertised,
Sir Edward Courtney, and the haughty prelate,
Bishop of Exeter, his elder brother,
With many more confederates, are in arms.

Enter another Messenger.

2 Mess. In Kent, my liege, the Guildfords are in
And every hour more *competitors [arms;
Flock to the rebels, and their power grows strong.

Enter a third Messenger.

3 Mess. My lord, the army of great Buckingham—

K. Rich. Out on ye, owls! nothing but songs of death? [He strikes him.

There, take thou that, till thou bring better news.

3 Mess. The news I have to tell your majesty [Kneeling.

Is that by sudden floods and fall of waters,
Buckingham's army is dispers'd and scatter'd;
And he himself wander'd away alone,
No man knows whither.

K. Rich. I cry thee mercy:

There is my purse, to cure that blow of thine.

[Rising.

Hath any well-advised friend proclaim'd

Reward to him that brings the traitor in?

3 Mess. Such proclamation hath been made, my lord.

* Competitors here means confederates.

Enter a fourth Messenger.

4 Mess. Sir Thomas Lovel, and lord Marquess Dorset,

'Tis said, my liege, in Yorkshire are in arms;
But this good comfort bring I to your highness,—
The Bretagne navy is dispers'd by tempest.

Richmond, in Dorsetshire, sent out a boat

Unto the shore, to ask those on the banks,

If they were his assistants, yea, or no;

Who answer'd him, they came from Buckingham

Upon his party: he, mistrusting them,

<sup>b</sup> Hois'd sail, and made his course again for Bretagne.

K. Rich. March on, march on, since we are up in

If not to fight with foreign enemies, [arms;

Yet to beat down these rebels here at home.

Enter CATESBY.

Cate. My liege, the duke of Buckingham is taken;

That is the best news: that the earl of Richmond

Is with a mighty power landed at Milford,

Is colder news, but yet they must be told. [son here,

K. Rich. Away towards Salisbury! while we rea-

A royal battle might be won and lost.—

Some one take order, Buckingham be brought To Salisbury; the rest march on with me. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A Room in Lord STANLEY's House.

Enter STANLEY and Sir CHRISTOPHER URSWICK.

Stan. Sir Christopher, tell Richmond this from

That, in the sty of the most bloody bear, [me:—

My son George Stanley is <sup>d</sup>frank'd up in hold:

If I revolt, off goes young George's head:

The fear of that holds off my present aid.

So, get thee gone: commend me to thy lord.

Withal, say that the queen hath heartily consented,

He should espouse Elizabeth her daughter.

But, tell me, where is princely Richmond now?

Chris. At Pembroke, or at Ha'rford-west, in Wales.

Stan. What men of name <sup>a</sup> and mark resort to him?

Chris. Sir Walter Herbert, a renowned soldier;

Sir Gilbert Talbot, sir William Stanley;

Oxford, redoubted Pembroke, sir James Blunt,

And Rice ap Thomas, with a valiant crew,

And many other of great name and worth;

And towards London do they bend their power,

If by the way they be not fought withal.

Stan. Well, lie thee to thy lord; I kiss his hand:

My letter will resolve him of my mind.

Farewell.

[Giving Papers to Sir CHRISTOPHER. Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Salisbury. An open Place.

Enter the Sheriff, and Guard, with BUCKINGHAM, led to Execution.

Buck. Will not king Richard let me speak with
him?

Sher. No, my good lord; therefore, be patient.

Buck. Hastings, and Edward's children, Grey, and Holy King Henry, and thy fair son Edward, [Rivers,

Vaughan, and all that have miscarried

By underhand corrupted foul injustice,

If that your moody discontented souls

Do through the clouds behold this present hour,

Even for revenge mock my destruction!—

This is All-Souls' day, fellow, is it not?

<sup>d</sup> "Frank'd up," i. e., closely confined.

Sher. It is.

[doomsday.]

Buck. Why, then All-Souls' day is my body's
This is the day, which, in king Edward's time,
I wish'd might fall on me, when I was found
False to his children, or his wife's allies:
This is the day, wherein I wish'd to fall
By the false faith of him whom most I trusted:
This, this All-Souls' day to my fearful soul
Is the determin'd respite of my <sup>a</sup>wrongs.
That high All-Seer, which I dallied with,
Hath turn'd my feigned prayer on my head,
And given in earnest what I begg'd in jest.
Thus doth he force the swords of wicked men
To turn their own points in their masters' bosoms.
Thus Margaret's curse falls heavy on my neck:—
"When he," quoth she, "shall split thy heart with Remember Margaret was a prophetess."— [sorrow,
Come, lead me, officers, to the block of shame;
Wrong hath but wrong, and blame the due of blame.

[Exeunt BUCKINGHAM and Officers.]

SCENE II.—A Plain near Tamworth.

Enter, with Drum and Colors, RICHMOND, OXFORD, Sir JAMES BLUNT, Sir WALTER HERBERT, and others, with Forces, marching.

Richm. Fellows in arms, and my most loving Bruis'd underneath the yoke of tyranny, [friends,
Thus far into the bowels of the land
Have we march'd on without impediment;
And here receive we from our father Stanley

<sup>1</sup>[Showing a Paper.

Lines of fair comfort and encouragement.
The <sup>2</sup>reckless, bloody, and usurping boar,
That spoil'd your summer fields, and fruitful vines,
Swills your warm blood like wash, and makes his
In your embowell'd bosoms, this foul swine [trough is now even in the centre of this isle,
Near to the town of Leicester, as we learn:
From Tamworth thither, is but one day's march.
In God's name, cheerly on, courageous friends,
To reap the harvest of perpetual peace
By this one bloody trial of sharp war.

Oxf. Every man's conscience is a thousand men,
To fight against this guilty homicide.

Herb. I doubt not, but his friends will turn to us.

Blunt. He hath no friends, but what are friends for fear,

Which in his dearest need will fly from him.

Richm. All for our vantage: then, in God's name,
march.

True hope is swift, and flies with swallow's wings,
Kings it makes gods, and meaner creatures kings.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Bosworth Field.

Enter King RICHARD, and Forces; the Duke of NORFOLK, Earl of SURREY, and others.

K. Rich. Here pitch our tent, even here in Bosworth field.—

My lord of Surrey, why look you so sad?

Sur. My heart is ten times lighter than my looks.

K. Rich. My lord of Norfolk,—

Nor. Here, most gracious liege.

K. Rich. Norfolk, we must have knocks; ha! must we not?

Nor. We must both give and take, my loving lord.

K. Rich. Up with my tent! here will I lie tonight;

[Soldiers begin to set up the King's Tent.

<sup>a</sup> "The . . . respite of my wrongs," i. e., 'the time to which the punishment of my wrong-doings has been respited.'

But where to-morrow?—Well, all's one for that.—
Who hath descried the number of the traitors?

Nor. Six or seven thousand is their utmost power.

K. Rich. Why, our battalia trebles that account:

Besides, the king's name is a tower of strength,
Which they upon the adverse faction want.

Up with the tent!—Come, noble gentlemen,

Let us survey the vantage of the ground.—

Call for some men of sound <sup>b</sup>direction.—

Let's lack no discipline, make no delay,

For, lords, to-morrow is a busy day. [Exeunt.

Enter, on the other side of the Field, RICHMOND, Sir

WILLIAM BRANDON, OXFORD, and other Officers.

Some of the Soldiers pitch RICHMOND's Tent.

Richm. The weary sun hath made a golden set,

And by the bright track of his fiery car,

Gives token of a goodly day to-morrow.—

Sir William Brandon, you shall bear my standard.—

Give me some ink and paper in my tent:

I'll draw the form and model of our battle,

Limit each leader to his several charge,

And part in just proportion our small power.

My lord of Oxford,—you, sir William Brandon,—

And you, sir Walter Herbert, stay with me.

The earl of Pembroke <sup>d</sup>keeps his regiment:

Good captain Blunt, bear my good night to him,

And by the second hour in the morning

Desire the earl to see me in my tent.—

Yet one thing more, good captain, do for me:

Where is lord Stanley quarter'd, do you know?

Blunt. Unless I have mista'en his colors much,

(Which, well I am assur'd, I have not done)

His regiment lies half a mile, at least,

South from the mighty power of the king.

Richm. If without peril it be possible, [him,

Sweet Blunt, make some good <sup>e</sup>means to speak with

And give him from me this most needful note.

Blunt. Upon my life, my lord, I'll undertake it:

And so, God give you quiet rest to-night.

Richm. Good night, good captain Blunt.—Come,

gentlemen,

Let us consult upon to-morrow's business.

In to my tent, the dew is raw and cold.

[They withdraw into the Tent.

Enter, to his Tent, King RICHARD, NORFOLK,

RATCLIFF, and CATESBY.

K. Rich. What is't o'clock?

Cate. It's supper time, my lord; it's nine o'clock.

K. Rich. I will not sup to-night.—

Give me some ink and paper.—

What, is my beaver easier than it was,

And all my armor laid into my tent? [ness.

Cate. It is, my liege; and all things are in readi-

K. Rich. Good Norfolk, hie thee to thy charge.

Use careful watch; choose trusty sentinels.

Nor. I go, my lord. [Norfolk,

K. Rich. Stir with the lark to-morrow, gentle

Nor. I warrant you, my lord. [Exit.

K. Rich. Ratcliff!

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. Send out a pursuivant at arms

To Stanley's regiment: bid him bring his power

Before sun-rising, lest his son George fall

Into the blind cave of eternal night.—

Fill me a bowl of wine.—Give me a watch:

Saddle white Surrey for the field to-morrow.—

Look that my <sup>f</sup>staves be sound, and not too heavy.

proved soldiiership.—<sup>c</sup> "Appoint"—<sup>d</sup> "Keeps," i. e., remains with.—<sup>e</sup> "Make some good means," i. e., contrive; take measures.—<sup>f</sup> "A watch," i. e., a watch-light.—<sup>g</sup> "The staves mentioned were the poles or wood of the lances."

Ratcliff!—

Rat. My lord! [thunderland?

K. Rich. Saw'st thou the melancholy lord Nor-
Rat. Thomas the earl of Surrey, and himself,
Much about cock-shut<sup>b</sup> time, from troop to troop
Went through the army, cheering up the soldiers.

K. Rich. So: I am satisfied. Give me a bowl of
I have not that alacrity of spirit. [wine:
Nor cheer of mind, that I was wont to have.—

<sup>1</sup> [Wine brought.

Set it down.—Is ink and paper ready?

Rat. It is, my lord.

K. Rich. Bid my guard watch. Leave me.

Ratcliff, about the mid of night, come to my tent

And help to arm me.—Leave me, I say.

[King RICHARD retires into his Tent. Exit
RATCLIFF and CATESBY.

RICHMOND's Tent opens, and discovers him and his Officers, &c.

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. Fortune and victory sit on thy helm!

Richm. All comfort that the dark night can afford,
Be to thy person, noble father-in-law!

Tell me, <sup>2</sup> I pray, how fares our loving mother?

Stan. I, by attorney, bless thee from thy mother,
Who prays continually for Richmond's good:
So much for that.—The silent hours steal on,
And flaky darkness breaks within the east.

In brief, for so the season bids us be,

Prepare thy battle early in the morning;

And put thy fortune to the arbitrement

Of bloody strokes, and mortal-starting war.

I, as I may, (that which I would I cannot)

With best advantage will deceive the time,

And aid thee in this doubtful shock of arms:

But on thy side I may not be too forward,

Lest, being seen, thy brother, tender George,

Be executed in his father's sight.

Farewell. The leisure and the fearful time

Cuts off the ceremonious vows of love,

And ample interchange of sweet discourse,

Which so long sunder'd friends should dwell upon.

God give us leisure for these rites of love!

Once more, adieu.—Be valiant, and speed well!

Richm. Good lords, conduct him to his regiment.

I'll strive, with troubled thoughts, to take a nap;

Lest leaden slumber peise me down to-morrow,

When I should mount with wings of victory.

Once more, good night, kind lords, and gentlemen.

[Exit Lords, &c., with STANLEY.

O! Thou, whose captain I account myself,

<sup>3</sup> [Kneeling.

Look on my forces with a gracious eye;

Put in their hands thy bruising irons of wrath,

That they may crush down with a heavy fall

Th' usurping helmets of our adversaries!

Make us thy ministers of chastisement,

That we may praise thee in thy victory! <sup>4</sup> [Rising.

To thee I do commend my watchful soul,

Ere I let fall the windows of mine eyes:

Sleeping, and waking, O, defend me still!

<sup>5</sup> [Lies down and sleeps.

The Ghost of Prince EDWARD, Son to HENRY the Sixth, rises between the two Tent.

Ghost. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow!

[To King RICHARD.

Think, how thou stab'dst me, in my prime of youth,
At Tewksbury: despair, therefore, and die.—

<sup>a</sup> Richard calls him melancholy because he did not join heartily in his cause.—<sup>b</sup> "Cock-shut time," i. e., the evening twilight.—<sup>c</sup> "By attorney," i. e., by proxy.—<sup>d</sup> Decision.—<sup>e</sup> "The leisure," i. e., the want of leisure.—<sup>f</sup> Weigh.

Be cheerful, Richmond; for the wronged souls
Of butcher'd princes fight in thy behalf:

King Henry's issue, Richmond, comforts thee.

The Ghost of King HENRY the Sixth rises.

Ghost. When I was mortal, my anointed body

[To King RICHARD.

By thee was punched full of deadly holes.

Think on the Tower, and me: despair, and die;

Harry the sixth bids thee despair and die.—

Virtuous and holy, be thou conqueror!

[To RICHMOND.

Hurry, that prophesy'd thou should'st be king,

Doth comfort thee in sleep: live thou, and flourish.

The Ghost of CLARENCE rises.

Ghost. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow.

[To King RICHARD.

I, that was wash'd to death with fulsome wine,

Poor Clarence, by thy guile betray'd to death!

To-morrow in the battle think on me,

And fall thy edgeless sword. Despair, and die.—

Thou offspring of the house of Lancaster,

[To RICHMOND.

The wronged heirs of York do pray for thee;

Good angels guard thy battle! Live and flourish.

The Ghosts of RIVERS, GREY, and VAUGHAN, rise.

Riv. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow;

[To King RICHARD.

Rivers, that died at Pomfret. Despair, and die.

Grey. Think upon Grey, and let thy soul despair.

[To King RICHARD.

Vaugh. Think upon Vaughan, and with guilty fear

Let fall thy pointless lance. Despair, and die.—

[To King RICHARD.

All Awake! and think our wrongs in Richard's bosom

[To RICHMOND.

Will conquer him.—Awake, and win the day!

The Ghost of HASTINGS rises.

Ghost. Bloody and guilty, guiltily awake;

[To King RICHARD.

And in a bloody battle end thy days.

Think on lord Hastings: so despair, and die.—

Quiet untroubled soul, awake, awake!

[To RICHMOND.

Arm, fight, and conquer, for fair England's sake.

The Ghosts of the two young Princes rise.

Ghosts. Dream on thy cousins smother'd in the

Let us be lead within thy bosom, Richard, [Tower:

And weigh thee down to ruin, shame, and death.

Thy nephews' souls bid thee despair, and die.—

Sleep, Richmond, sleep in peace, and wake in joy;

Good angels guard thee from the boar's annoy!

Live, and beget a happy race of kings.

Edward's unhappy sons do bid thee flourish.

The Ghost of Queen ANNE rises.

Ghost. Richard, thy wife, that wretched Anne thy

That never slept a quiet hour with thee, [wife,

Now fills thy sleep with perturbations:

To-morrow in the battle think on me,

And fall thy powerless arm. Despair, and die.—

Thou, quiet soul, sleep thou a quiet sleep;

[To RICHMOND.

Dream of success and happy victory:

Thy adversary's wife doth pray for thee.

The Ghost of BUCKINGHAM rises.

Ghost. The first was I that help'd thee to the crown;

[To King RICHARD.

The last was I that felt thy tyranny.

O! in the battle think on Buckingham,

And die in terror of thy guiltiness.

<sup>a</sup> Pierced; pricked.—<sup>b</sup> "Fulsome," i. e., superabundant.—<sup>c</sup> "Fall," i. e., let fall; drop.

Dream on, dream on, of bloody deeds and death:
Fainting, despair; despairing, yield thy breath.—
I died for hope ere I could lend thee aid;

[To RICHMOND.]

But cheer thy heart, and be thou not dismay'd;
God, and good angels fight on Richmond's side;
And Richard fall in height of all his pride.

[The Ghosts vanish. King RICHARD starts out of his dream.]

K. Rich. Give me another horse!—bind up my wounds!—

Have mercy, Jesu!—Soft! I did but dream.—
O, coward conscience, how dost thou afflict me!—
The lights burn blue.—It is now dead midnight.
Cold fearful drops stand on my trembling flesh.
What do I fear? myself? there's none else by:
Richard loves Richard; that is, I am I.
Is there a murderer here? No;—yes; I am;
Then fly,—What, from myself? Great reason: why?
Lest I revenge. What! Myself upon myself?
Alack! I love myself. Wherefore? for any good,
That I myself have done unto myself?
O! no; alas! I rather hate myself,
For hateful deeds committed by myself.
I am a villain. Yet I lie; I am not.
Fool, of thyself speak well:—Fool, do not flatter.
My conscience hath a thousand several tongues,
And every tongue brings in a several tale,
And every tale condemns me for a villain.
Perjury, foul perjury, in the high'st degree;
Murder, stern murder, in the dirt'st degree;
All several sins, all us'd in each degree,
Throng to the bar, crying all,—Guilty! guilty!
I shall despair.—There is no creature loves me;
And if I die, no soul shall pity me:—
Nay, wherefore should they? since that I myself
Find in myself no pity to myself.
Methought, the souls of all that I had murder'd
Came to my tent; and every one did threat
To-morrow's vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter RATCLIFF.

Rat. My lord.—

K. Rich. Who's there? [cock]

Rat. Ratcliff, my lord; 'tis I. The early village
Hath twice done salutation to the morn:

Your friends are up, and buckle on their armor.

K. Rich. O Ratcliff! I have dream'd a fearful dream.—

What thinkest thou? will our friends prove all true?

Rat. No doubt, my lord.

K. Rich. O Ratcliff! I fear, I fear.—

Rat. Nay, good my lord, be not afraid of shadows.

K. Rich. By the apostle Paul, shadows to-night
Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard,
Than can the substance of ten thousand soldiers,
Armed in proof, and led by shallow Richmond.
It is not yet near day. Come, go with me:
Under our tents I'll play the eaves-dropper,
To hear if any mean to shrink from me.

[Exeunt King RICHARD and RATCLIFF.]

Enter OXFORD and others.

Lords. Good morrow, Richmond. [gentlemen,
Richm. Cry mercy, lords, [Waking.] and watchful
That you have ta'en a tardy sluggard here.

Lords. How have you slept, my lord? [dreams,
Richm. The sweetest sleep, and fairest-boding
That ever enter'd in a drowsy head,

Have I since your departure had, my lords. [der'd, Methought, their souls, whose bodies Richard murcame to my tent, and cried—On! victory!
I promise you, my heart is very jocund
In the remembrance of so fair a dream.

How far into the morning is it, lords?

Lords. Upon the stroke of four.

Richm. Why, then 'tis time to arm, and give direction.— [He advances to the troops.]

More than I have said, loving countrymen,
The leisure and enforcement of the time
Forbids to dwell on: yet remember this,—
God and our good cause fight upon our side;
The prayers of holy saints, and wronged souls,
Like high-rear'd bulwarks, stand before our faces.
Richard except, those whom we fight against
Had rather have us win, than him they follow.
For what is he they follow? truly, gentlemen,
A bloody tyrant, and a homicide;
One mis'd in blood, and one in blood establish'd;
One that made <sup>a</sup> means to come by what he hath,
And slaughter'd those that were the means to help
A base foul stone, made precious by the foil [him];
Of England's <sup>b</sup> chair, where he is falsely set;
One that hath ever been God's enemy.
Then, if you fight against God's enemy,
God will, in justice, <sup>c</sup> ward you as his soldiers:
If you do sweat to put a tyrant down,
You sleep in peace, the tyrant being slain;
If you do fight against your country's foes,
Your country's fat shall pay your pains the hire;
If you do fight in safeguard of your wives,
Your wives shall welcome home the conquerors;
If you do free your children from the sword,
Your children's children <sup>d</sup> quit it in your age.
Then, in the name of God, and all these rights,
Advance your standards, draw your willing swords.
For me, the <sup>e</sup> ransom of my bold attempt
Shall be this cold corpse on the earth's cold face;
But if I thrive, the gain of my attempt,
The least of you shall share his part thereof.
Sound, drums and trumpets, boldly, <sup>2</sup> cheerfully;
God, and 'Saint George! Richmond, and victory!

[Exeunt.]

Re-enter King RICHARD, RATCLIFF, Attendants,
and Forces.

K. Rich. What said Northumberland, as touching Richmond?

Rat. That he was never trained up in arms.

K. Rich. He said the truth: and what said Surrey then?

Rat. He smil'd and said, the better for our purpose.

K. Rich. He was i' the right; and so, indeed, it is.
[Clock strikes.]

Tell the clock there.—Give me a calendar.

<sup>3</sup>[Calendar brought.]

Who saw the sun to-day?

Rat.

Not I, my lord. [book,

K. Rich. Then he disdains to shine; for, by the
He should have brav'd the east an hour ago:

A black day will it be to somebody.—

Ratcliff!—

Rat. My lord.

K. Rich. The sun will not be seen to-day:
The sky doth frown and lour upon our army.
I would, these dewy tears were from the ground.
Not shine to-day! Why, what is that to me,
More than to Richmond? for the self-same heaven,
That frowns on me, looks sadly upon him.

Enter NORFOLK.

Nor. Arm, arm, my lord! the foe vaunts in the field.

<sup>a</sup> To "make means to come by" anything, is to obtain it by any means, whether lawful or otherwise.—<sup>b</sup> "England's chair" is the throne.—<sup>c</sup> Guard; watch.—<sup>d</sup> Requite.—<sup>e</sup> "The ransom of my bold attempt," i. e., the fine paid by me in atonement for my rashness.—<sup>f</sup> "Saint George!" was the cry of the English soldiers when they charged the enemy.

K. Rich. Come, bustle, bustle.—Caparison my horse.—

Call up lord Stanley, bid him bring his power.
I will lead forth my soldiers to the plain,
And thus my battle shall be ordered.
My <sup>a</sup>foreward shall be drawn out all in length,
Consisting equally of horse and foot:
Our archers shall be placed in the midst.
John duke of Norfolk, Thomas earl of Surrey,
Shall have the leading of the foot and horse.
They thus directed, we will follow <sup>1</sup> them
In the main battle; whose puissance on either side
Shall be well winged with our chiefest horse.
This, and Saint George to <sup>b</sup>boot!—What think'st thou, Norfolk?

Nor. A good direction, warlike sovereign.—
This found I on my tent this morning.

[Giving a Paper.]

K. Rich. "Jockey of Norfolk, be not too bold, [Reads.]
For 'Dickon thy master is bought and sold."

A thing devised by the enemy.—
Go, gentlemen; every man to his charge.
Let not our babbling dreams affright our souls;
For conscience is a word that cowards use,
Devis'd at first to keep the strong in awe:
Our strong arms be our conscience, swords our law.
March on, join bravely, let us to't pell-mell;
If not to heaven, then hand in hand to hell.—
What shall I say more than I have inferr'd?
Remember whom you are to cope withal;—
A <sup>a</sup>sort of vagabonds, rascals, and run-aways,
A scum of Breagnes, and base lackey peasants,
Whom their o'er-cloyed country vomits forth
To desperate ventures and assur'd destruction.
You sleeping safe, they bring you to unrest;
You having lands, and bless'd with beauteous wives.
They would <sup>3</sup>distrain the one, disdain the other.
And who doth lead them, but a paltry fellow,
Long kept in Bretagne at our mother's cost;
A milk-sop, one that never in his life
Felt so much cold as over shoes in snow?
Let's whip these stragglers o'er the seas again;
Lash hence these over-weening rags of France,
These famish'd beggars, weary of their lives;
Who, but for dreaming on this fond exploit,
For want of means, poor rats, had hang'd them.
If we be conquer'd, let men conquer us, [selves.
And not these bastard Breagnes; whom our fathers
Have in their own land beaten, <sup>c</sup>boob'd, and thump'd,
And, on record, left them the heirs of shame.
Shall these enjoy our lands? lie with our wives?
Ravish our daughters?—Hark, I hear their drum.

[Drum afar off.]

Fight, gentlemen of England! fight, bold yeomen!
Draw, archers, draw your arrows to the head;
Spur your proud horses hard, and ride in blood:
Amaze the welkin with your broken <sup>d</sup>staves!—

[Enter a Messenger.]

What says lord Stanley? will he bring his power?

Mess. My lord, he doth deny to come.

K. Rich. Off with his son George's head.

Nor. My lord, the enemy is pass'd the <sup>e</sup>marsh:
After the battle let George Stanley die. [bosom.

K. Rich. A thousand hearts are great within my Advance our standards! set upon our foes!

Our ancient word of courage, fair Saint George,
Inspire us with the spleen of fiery dragons!
Upon them! Victory sits on our helmets. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter NORFOLK, and Forces; to him CATESBY.

Cate. Rescue, my lord of Norfolk! rescue, rescue!
The king enacts more wonders than a man,
Daring an <sup>b</sup>opposite to every danger.
His horse is slain, and all on foot he fights,
Seeking for Richmond in the throat of death.
Rescue, fair lord, or else the day is lost!

Alarums. Enter King RICHARD.

K. Rich. A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

Cate. Withdraw, my lord; I'll help you to a horse.

K. Rich. Slave! I have set my life upon a cast,
And I will stand the hazard of the die.

I think there be six Richmonds in the field;

Five have I slain to-day, instead of him.—

A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

[Exeunt.]

Alarums. Enter King RICHARD and RICHMOND; and exeunt, fighting. Retreat and flourish.

Then enter RICHMOND, STANLEY bearing the Crown, with divers other Lords, and Forces.

Richm. God, and your arms, be prais'd, victorious
The day is ours, the bloody dog is dead. [friends.

Stan. Courageous Richmond, well hast thou acquit
Lo! here, this long-usurped royalty, [thee.

From the dead temples of this bloody wretch
Have I pluck'd off, to grace thy brows withal:
Wear it, enjoy it, and make much of it.

Richm. Great God of heaven, say, amen, to all!—
But, tell me, is young George Stanley living?

Stan. He is, my lord, and safe in Leicester town;
Whither, if you please, we may withdraw us.

Richm. What men of name are slain on either side?

Stan. John duke of Norfolk, Walter lord Ferrers, Sir Robert Brukenbury, and sir William Brandon.

Richm. Inter their bodies as becomes their births.

Proclaim a pardon to the soldiers fled,
That in submission will return to us;

And then, as we have ta'en the sacrament.

We will unite the white rose and the red:—

Smile heaven upon this fair conjunction,

That long hath frown'd upon their enmity!—

What traitor hears me, and says not, amen?

England hath long been mad, and scarr'd herself;

The brother blindly shed the brother's blood,

The father rashly slaughter'd his own son,

The son, compell'd, been butcher to the sire;

All this divided York and Lancaster,

Divided in their dire division,

O! now, let Richmond and Elizabeth,

The true successors of each royal house,

By God's fair ordinance conjoin together:

And let their heirs, (God, if thy will be so)

Enrich the time to come with smooth-fac'd peace,

With smiling plenty, and fair prosperous days!

That would <sup>2</sup>reduce these bloody days again,

And make poor England weep in streams of blood!

Let them not live to taste this land's increase,

That would with treason wound this fair land's peace!

Now civil wounds are stopp'd, peace lives again:

That she may long live here, God say, amen!

[Exeunt.]

<sup>1</sup> "Rebate," i. e., diminish; take away.—<sup>2</sup> "Reduce," i. e., bring back.

PROLOGUE.

I COME no more to make you laugh: things now,
That bear a weighty and a serious brow,
Sad, high, and working, full of state and woe,
Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow,
We now present. Those that can pity, here
May, if they think it well, let fall a tear;
The subject will deserve it: such, as give
Their money out of hope they may believe,
May here find truth too: those, that come to see
Only a show or two, and so agree
The play may pass, if they be still and willing,
I'll undertake, may see away their shilling
Richly in two short hours. Only they,

That come to hear a merry, bawdy play,
A noise of targets, or to see a fellow
In a long motley coat, <sup>a</sup> guarded with yellow,
Will be deceiv'd; for, gentle hearers, know,
To rank our chosen truth with such a show
As fool and fight is, beside forfeiting
Our own brains, and the <sup>b</sup> opinion that we bring,
To make that only true we now intend,
Will leave us never an understanding friend.
Therefore, for goodness' sake, and as you are known
The first and <sup>c</sup>happiest hearers of the town,
Be sad as we would make ye: think, ye see

<sup>a</sup> "Guarded," i. e., faced; trimmed.—<sup>b</sup> "Opinion," i. e., character; reputation.—<sup>c</sup> "Happiest," i. e., most favored.

The very persons of our noble story,
As they were living; think, you see them great,
And follow'd with the general throng, and sweat
Of thousand friends; then, in a moment, see
How soon this mightiness meets misery:
And, if you can be merry then, I'll say,
A man may weep upon his wedding-day.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. An Ante-chamber in the Palace.

Enter the duke of NORFOLK, at one door; at the other, the Duke of BUCKINGHAM, and the Lord ABERGAVENNY.

Buck. Good morrow, and well met. How have Since last we saw in France? [you done,

Nor. I thank your grace,
Healthful; and ever since a fresh admirer
Of what I saw there.

Buck. An untimely ague
Stay'd me a prisoner in my chamber, when
Those suns of glory, those two lights of <sup>a</sup>men,
Met in the vale of Andren.

Nor. 'Twixt Guynes and Arde:
I was then present, saw them salute on horseback;
Beheld them, when they lighted, how they clung,
In their embracement, <sup>b</sup>as they grew together;
Which had they, what four thron'd ones could have Such a compounded one? [weigh'd

Buck. All the whole time
I was my chamber's prisoner.

Nor. Then you lost
The view of earthly glory: men might say,
Till this time, pomp was single; but now married
To one above itself. Each following day
Became the next day's master, till the last
Made former wonders it's: to-day the French
All <sup>c</sup>cliquant, all in gold, like heathen gods, Shone down the English; and to-morrow they Made Britain, India: every man that stood Show'd like a mine. Their dwarfish pages were
As cherubims, all gilt: the madams, too,
Not us'd to toil, did almost sweat to bear
The pride upon them, that their very labor
Was to them as a painting: now this mask
Was cried incomparable; and the ensuing night
Made it a fool, and beggar. The two kings,
Equal in lustre, were now best, now worst,
As presence did present them; him in eye,
Still him in praise; and, being present both,
'Twas said, they saw but one: and no discernor
Durst wag his tongue in <sup>d</sup>censure. When these suns
(For so they phrase <sup>e</sup>em) by their heralds challeng'd
The noble spirits to arms, they did perform
Beyond thought's compass; that former fabulous story,
Being now seen possible enough, got credit,
That <sup>f</sup>Bevis was believ'd.

Buck. O! you go far.

Nor. As I belong to worship, and affect
In honor honesty, the tract of every thing
Would by a good discourser lose some life,
Which action's self was tongue to. All was royal:
To the disposing of it nought rebell'd;
Order gave each thing view.

Buck. The office did

Distinctly his full function. <sup>1</sup> Who did guide,
I mean, who set the body and the limbs
Of this great sport together, as you guess?

Nor. One, <sup>2</sup>certes, that promises no <sup>3</sup>element
In such a business.

Buck.

I pray you, who, my lord?

Nor. All this was order'd by the good discretion
Of the right reverend cardinal of York.

Buck. The devil speed him! no man's pie is freed
From his ambitious finger. What had he
To do in these <sup>4</sup>fierce vanities? I wonder,
That such a <sup>5</sup>keech can, with his very bulk,
Take up the rays o' the beneficial sun,
And keep it from the earth.

Nor.

Surely, sir,

There's in him stuff that puts him to these ends;
For, being not propp'd by ancestry, whose grace
Chalks successors their way, nor call'd upon
For high feats done to the crown; neither allied
To eminent assistants, but, spider-like,
Out of his self-drawing web, he gives us note,
The force of his own merit makes his way;
A gift that heaven gives <sup>6</sup>him, and which buys
A place next to the king.

Aber.

I cannot tell

What heaven hath given him: let some graver eye
Pierce into that; but I can see his pride
Peep through each part of him: whence has he that?
If not from hell, the devil is a niggard;
Or has given all before, and he begins
A new hell in himself.

Buck.

Why the devil,

Upon this French going-out, took he upon him,
(Without the privity o' the king) t' appoint
Who should attend on him? He makes up the <sup>7</sup>file
Of all the gentry; for the most part such Too, whom as great a charge as little honor
He meant to lay upon: and his own letter,
The honorable board of council out,
Must fetch him in he <sup>8</sup>papers.

Aber.

I do know

Kinsmen of mine, three at the least, that have
By this so sicken'd their estates, that never
They shall abound as formerly.

Buck.

O! many

Have broke their backs, with laying manors on them
For this great journey. What did this vanity,
But minister <sup>9</sup>the consummation of
A most poor issue?

Nor.

Grievingly I think,

The peace between the French and us not values
The cost that did conclude it.

Buck.

Every man,

After the hideous storm that follow'd, was
A thing inspir'd; and, not consulting, broke
Into a general prophecy,—that this tempest,
Dashing the garment of this peace, aboded
The sudden breach on't.

Nor.

Which is budded out;

For France hath flow'd the league, and hath attach'd
Our merchants' goods at Bordeaux.

Aber.

Is it therefore

Th' ambassador is silenc'd?

Nor.

Marry, is't.

Aber. A proper title of a <sup>10</sup>peace, and purchas'd
At a superfluous rate.

Buck.

Why, all this business

<sup>b</sup> "As," i. e., as if—<sup>c</sup> Glittering; shining.—<sup>d</sup> "In censure,"
i. e., in opinion which was most noble.—<sup>e</sup> Sir Bevis, an old romance.

<sup>f</sup> Certainly.—<sup>g</sup> "No element," i. e., no previous practice;
no initiation in the elements.—<sup>h</sup> "Fierce," i. e., proud.— <sup>i</sup> "Keech," i. e., lump of fat.—<sup>k</sup> List.—<sup>l</sup> "Fetch him in he papers," i. e., 'fetch in him whom he papers, or notes down,' —<sup>m</sup> "A proper title of a peace," i. e., ironically, 'a fine name of a peace!'

Our reverend cardinal <sup>a</sup>carried.

Nor. 'Like it your grace,
The state takes notice of the private difference
Betwixt you and the cardinal. I advise you,
(And take it from a heart that wishes toward you Honor and plenteous safety) that you read
The cardinal's malice and his potency
Together: to consider farther, that
What his high hatred would effect wants not
A minister in his power. You know his nature,
That he's revengeful; and, I know, his sword
Hath a sharp edge: it's long, and 't may be said,
It reaches far; and where 'twill not extend,
Thither he darts it. Bosom up my counsel;
You'll find it wholesome. Lo! where comes that rock,
That I advise your shunning.

Enter Cardinal WOLSEY (the Purse borne before him), certain of the Guard, and two Secretaries with Papers. The Cardinal in his passage fixeth his eye on BUCKINGHAM, and BUCKINGHAM on him, both full of disdain.

Wol. The duke of Buckingham's surveyor? ha!
Where's his examination?

1 Secr. Here, so please you.

Wol. Is he in person ready?

1 Secr. Ay, please your grace.

Wol. Well, we shall then know more; and Buckingham Shall lessen this big look.

[Exeunt WOLSEY, and Train.]

Buck. This butcher's cur is venom-mouth'd, and I
Have not the power to muzzle him; therefore, best
Not wake him in his slumber. A beggar's brood
Out-won'th a noble's blood.

Nor. What, are you chaf'd?
Ask God for temperance; that's th' appliance only,
Which your disease requires.

Buck. I read in's looks
Matter against me; and his eye revild
Me, as his abject object: at this instant
He bores me with some <sup>b</sup>trick. He's gone t' the king:
I'll follow, and out-stare him.

Nor. Stay, my lord,
And let your reason with your choler question
What 'tis you go about. To climb steep hills,
Requires slow pace at first: anger is like
A full-hot horse, who being allow'd his way,
Self-mettle tires him. Not a man in England
Can advise me like you: be to yourself,
As you would to your friend.

Buck. I'll to the king;
And from a mouth of honor quite cry down
This Ipswich fellow's insolence, or proclaim
There's difference in no persons.

Nor. Be advis'd;
Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot
That it do singe yourself: we may outrun
By violent swiftness that which we run at,
And lose by over-running. Know you not,
The fire, that mounts the liquor till't run o'er,
In seeming to augment it wastes it? Be advis'd:
I say again, there is no English soul
More stronger to direct you than yourself,
If with the sap of reason you would quench,
Or but allay, the fire of passion.

Buck. Sir,
I am thankful to you, and I'll go along
By your prescription; but this top-proud fellow,
Whom from the flow of gall I name not, but

From sincere <sup>c</sup>motions, by intelligence,
And proofs as clear as founts in July, when
We see each grain of gravel, I do know
To be corrupt and treasonous.

Nor. Say not, treasonous.

Buck. To the king I'll say't, and make my vouch as strong
As shore of rock. Attend: this holy fox,
Or wolf, or both, (for he is <sup>d</sup>equal ravenous,
As he is subtle, and as prone to mischief,
As able to perform't, his mind and place
Infecting one another, yea, reciprocally)
Only to show his pomp, as well in France
As here at home, <sup>e</sup>suggests the king, our master,
To this last costly treaty, th' interview
That swallow'd so much treasure, and like a glass
Did break i' the rinsing.

Nor. Faith, and so it did.

Buck. Pray, give me favor, sir. This cunning
The articles o' the combination drew, [cardinal
As himself pleas'd; and they were ratified,
As he cried, "Thus let be," to as much end,
As give a crutch t' the dead. But our count-cardinal
Has done this, and 'tis well; for worthy Wolsey,
Who cannot err, he did it. Now this follows,
(Which, as I take it, is a kind of puppy
To the old dam, treason) Charles the emperor,
Under pretence to see the queen, his aunt,
(For 'twas, indeed, his <sup>f</sup>color, but he came To whisper Wolsey) here makes visitation:
His fears were, that the interview betwixt
England and France might, through their amity,
Breed him some prejudice; for from this league,
Peep'd harms that menac'd him. He privily
Deals with our cardinal, and, as I <sup>g</sup>throw,
Which I do well; for, I am sure, the emperor
Paid ere he promis'd, whereby his suit was granted,
Ere it was ask'd: but when the way was made,
And paid with gold, the emperor thus desir'd:—
That he would please to alter the king's course,
And break the foresaid peace. Let the king know,
(As soon he shall by me) that thus the cardinal
Does buy and sell his honor as he pleases,
And for his own advantage.

Nor. I am sorry
To hear this of him; and could wish he were Something mistaken in't.

Buck. No, not a syllable:
I do pronounce him in that very shape,
He shall appear in proof.

*Enter BRANDON; a Sergeant at arms before him,
and two or three of the Guard.*

Bran. Your office, sergeant; execute it. Sir,

Serg. My lord the duke of Buckingham, and earl
Of Hereford, Stafford, and Northampton, I
Arrest thee of high treason, in the name
Of our most sovereign king.

Buck. Lo, you, my lord
The net has fall'n upon me: I shall perish
Under device and <sup>h</sup>practice.

Bran. I am sorry
To see you ta'en from liberty, to look on
The business <sup>i</sup>present. 'Tis his highness' pleasure,
You shall to the Tower.

Buck. It will help me nothing
To plead mine innocence; for that die is on me,

Which makes my whit'st part black. The will of Be done in this and all things.—I obey.—[heaven O! my lord Abergavenny, fare you well.

Bran. Nay, he must bear you company.—The king [To ABERGAVENNY.

Is pleas'd you shall to the Tower, till you know How he determines farther.

Aber. As the duke said, The will of heaven be done, and the king's pleasure By me obey'd.

Bran. Here is a warrant from The king t' attach lord Montacute; and the bodies Of the duke's confessor, John de la Car, And Gilbert Peck, his chancellor,—

Duck. So, so; These are the limbs o' the plot.—No more, I hope.

Bran. A monk o' the Chartreux.

Buck. O! Nicholas Hopkins?

Bran. He.

Buck. My surveyor is false: the o'er-great cardinal Hath show'd him gold. My life is <sup>a</sup>spann'd already: I am the shadow of poor Buckingham, Whose figure even this instant cloud puts on, By darkening my clear sun.—My lord, farewell.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Council-Chamber.

Cornets. Enter King HENRY, leaning on the Cardinal's shoulder; <sup>2</sup>WOLSEY, the Lords of the Council, Sir THOMAS LOVELL, Officers, <sup>3</sup>Secretary.

K. Hen. My life itself, and the best heart of it, Thanks you for this great care. I stood i' the <sup>b</sup>level Of a full charg'd confederacy, and give thanks To you that chok'd it.—Let be call'd before us That gentleman of Buckingham's: in person I'll hear him his confessions justify, And point by point the treasons of his master He shall again relate.

The King takes his State. The Lords of the Council occupy their several Places: the Cardinal places himself under the King's Feet on his right Side.

A Noise within, crying Room for the Queen! Enter the Queen, ushered by the Dukes of NORFOLK and SUFFOLK: she kneels. The King rises from his State, takes her up, kisses her, and places her by him.

Q. Kath. Nay, we must longer kneel: I am a suitor.

K. Hen. Arise, and take place by us.—Half your suit Never name to us; you have half our power: The other moiety, ere you ask, is given; Repeat your will, and take it.

Q. Kath. Thank your majesty. That you would love yourself, and in that love Not unconsider'd leave your honor, nor The dignity of your office, is the point Of my petition.

K. Hen. Lady mine, proceed.

Q. Kath. I am solicited not by a few, And those of true condition, that your subjects Are in great grievance. There have been commissions Sent down among them, which hath slaw'd the heart Of all their loyalties: wherein, although, My good lord cardinal, they vent reproaches Most bitterly on you, as <sup>c</sup>putter-on Of these exactions, yet the king our master, [not Whose honor heaven shield from soil! even he escapes Language unmannerly; yea, such which breaks

The <sup>d</sup>ties of loyalty, and almost appears In loud rebellion.

Nor. Not almost appears, It doth appear; for upon these taxations, The clothiers all, not able to maintain The many to them <sup>e</sup>longing, have put off The spinsters, carders, fullers, weavers, who, Unfit for other life, compell'd by hunger And lack of other means, in desperate manner Daring th' event to the teeth, are all in uproar, And danger serves among them.

K. Hen. Taxation! Wherein, and what taxation?—My lord cardinal You that are blam'd for it alike with us, Know you of this taxation?

Wol. Please you, sir, I know but of a single part, in ought Pertains to the state; and front but in that file Where others tell steps with <sup>d</sup>me.

Q. Kath. No, my lord, You know no more than others; but you frame Things, that are known, <sup>e</sup>belike, which are not whole-some

To those which would not know them, and yet must Performe be their acquaintance. These exactions, Whereof my sovereign would have note, they are Most pestilent to the hearing; and, to bear them, The back is sacrifice to the load. They say, They are devis'd by you, or else you suffer Too hard an exclamation.

K. Hen. Still exaction! The nature of it? In what kind, let's know, Is this exaction?

Q. Kath. I am much too venturous In tempting of your patience; but am bolden'd Under your promis'd pardon. The subjects' grief Comes through commissions, which compel from each The sixth part of his substance, to be levied Without delay; and the pretence for this [mouths: Is nam'd, your wars in France. This makes bold Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts freeze Allegiance in them: their curses now, Live where their prayers did; and it's come to pass, <sup>f</sup>Their tractable obedience is a slave To each incensed will. I would, your highness Would give it quick consideration, for There is no <sup>g</sup>primer business.

K. Hen. By my life, This is against our pleasure.

Wol. And for me, I have no farther gone in this, than by A single voice, and that not pass'd me but By learned approbation of the judges. If I am Traduc'd by ignorant tongues, which neither know My faculties, nor person, yet will be The chronicles of my doing, let me say, 'Tis but the fate of place, and the rough <sup>h</sup>brake That virtue must go through. We must not stint Our necessary actions, in the fear To <sup>i</sup>cope malicious censurers; which ever, As ravenous fishes, do a vessel follow That is new trimm'd, but benefit no farther Than vainly longing. What we oft do best, By such interpreters (<sup>h</sup>once weak ones) is Not ours, or not <sup>i</sup>allow'd; what worst, as oft, Hitting a grosser quality, is cried up For our best act. If we shall stand still, In fear our <sup>k</sup>motion will be mock'd or carp'd at, We should take root here, where we sit, or sit

State statues only.

K. Hen. Things done well,
And with a care, exempt themselves from fear:
Things done without example, in their issue
Are to be fear'd. Have you a precedent
Of this commission? I believe, not any.
We must not rend our subjects from our laws,
And stick them in our will. Sixth part of each?
A<sup>1</sup> trebling contribution! Why, we take,
From every tree, lop, bark, and part o' the timber;
And, though we leave it with a root, thus hack'd,
The air will drink the sap. To every county
Where this is question'd send our letters, with Free pardon to each man that has denied
The force of this commission. Pray, look to't;
I put it to your care.

Vol. A word with you. [To the Secretary.]
Let there be letters writ to every shire,
Of the king's grace and pardon. The griev'd commons
Hardly conceive of me: let it be nois'd,
That through our intercession this revokement
And pardon comes. I shall anon advise you
Farther in the proceeding. [Exit Secretary.]

Enter Surveyor.

K. Kath. I am sorry that the duke of Buckingham
Is run in your displeasure.

K. Hen. It grieves many:
The gentleman is learn'd, and a most rare speaker;
To nature none more bound; his training such,
That he may furnish and instruct great teachers,
And never seek for aid out of himself: yet see,
When these so noble benefits shall prove
Not well dispos'd, the mind growing once corrupt,
They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly
Than ever they were fair. This man so complete,
Who was enroll'd 'mongst wonders, and when we,
Almost with ravisht list'ning, could not find
His hour of speech a minute; he, my lady,
Hath into monstrous habits put the graces
That once were his, and is become as black
As if besmear'd in hell. Sit by us; you shall hear
(This was his gentleman in trust) of him
Things to strike honor sad.—Bid him recount
The forc-recited practices, whereof
We cannot feel too little, hear too much. [You,

Vol. Stand forth; and with bold spirit relate what Most like a careful subject, have collected
Out of the duke of Buckingham.

K. Hen. Speak freely.

Surv. First, it was usual with him, every day
It would infect his speech, that if the king
Should without issue die, he'd carry it so
To make the sceptre his. These very words
I've heard him utter to his son-in-law,
Lord Abergarny, to whom by oath he menac'd
Revenge upon the cardinal.

Vol. Please your highness, note
This dangerous conception in this point.
Not friendly by his wish, to your high person
His will is most malignant; and it stretches
Beyond you, to your friends.

Q. Kath. My learn'd lord cardinal,
Deliver all with charity.

K. Hen. Speak on.
How grounded he his title to the crown,
Upon our fail? To this point hast thou heard him
At any time speak aught?

Surv. He was brought to this
By a vain prophecy of Nicholas Hopkins.

K. Hen. What was that Hopkins?

Surv.

Sir, a Chartreux friar,
His confessor; who fed him every minute
With words of sovereignty.

K. Hen. How know'st thou this?

Surv. Not long before your highness sped to France,
The duke being at the Rose, within the parish
Saint Lawrence Poultny, did of me demand
What was the speech among the Londoners
Concerning the French journey? I replied,
Men fear'd the French would prove perfidious,
To the king's danger. Presently the duke
Said, 'twas the fear, indeed; and that he doubted,
'Twould prove the verity of certain words
Spoke by a holy monk; "that oft," says he,
"Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit
John de la Car, my chaplain, a choice hour
To hear from him a matter of some moment:
Whom after, under the confession's seal,
He solemnly had sworn, that what he spoke
My chaplain to no creature living, but
To me, should utter, with demure confidence
This pausingly ensu'd,—Neither the king, nor's heir, (Tell you the duke) shall prosper: bid him strive
To gain the love o' the commonalty: the duke Shall govern England."

Q. Kath. If I know you well,
You were the duke's surveyor, and lost your office
On the complaint o' the tenants. Take good heed,
You charge not in your spleen a noble person,
And spoil your nobler soul: I say, take heed;
Yes, heartily beseech you.

K. Hen. Let him on.—
Go forward.

Surv. On my soul, I'll speak but truth.
I told my lord the duke, by the devil's illusions
The monk might be deceiv'd; and that 'twas danger-
From this to ruminate on it so far, until [ous]
It forg'd him some design, which, being believ'd,
It was much like to do: He answered, "Tush!
It can do me no damage:" adding farther,
That had the king in his last sickness fail'd,
The cardinal's and sir Thomas Lovell's heads
Should have gone off.

K. Hen. Ha! what, so rank? Ah, ha!
There's mischief in this man.—Canst thou say farther?

Surv. I can, my liege.

K. Hen. Proceed.

Surv. Being at Greenwich,
After your highness had reprovd the duke
About sir William Blomer,—

K. Hen. I remember,
Of such a time: being my sworn servant,
The duke retain'd him his.—But on: what hence?

Surv. "If," quoth he, "I for this had been committed,

As, to the Tower, I thought, I would have play'd
The part my father meant to act upon
Th' usurper Richard; who, being at Salisbury,
Made suit to come in's presence, which if granted,
As he made semblance of his duty, would Have put his knife into him."

K. Hen. A giant traitor!

Vol. Now, madam, may his highness live in free-
And this man out of prison? [dom,

Q. Kath. God mend all!

K. Hen. There's something more would out of thee: what say'st? [knife,

Surv. After "the duke his father," with "the
He stretch'd him, and, with one hand on his dagger,
Another spread on's breast, mounting his eyes,
He did discharge a horrible oath; whose tenor
Was,—were he evil us'd, he would out-go
His father, by as much as a performance

<sup>a</sup> "Out of himself," i. e., beyond the treasures of his own mind.—<sup>b</sup> Manage; conduct.

Does an irresolute purpose.

K. Hen. There's his period,
To sheathe his knife in us.—He is attach'd;
Call him to present trial: if he may Find mercy in the law, 'tis his; if none,
Let him not seek't of us. By day and night,
He is 'a daring traitor to the height. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain, and Lord SANDS.

Cham. Is't possible, the spells of France should Men into such strange<sup>a</sup> mysteries? [juggle]

Sands. New customs,
Though they be never so ridiculous,
Nay, let 'em be unmanly, yet are follow'd.

Cham. As far as I see, all the good our English
Have got by the late voyage is but merely
A<sup>b</sup> fit or two o' the face; but they are shrewd ones,
For when they hold 'em, you would swear directly,
Their very noses had been counsellors
To Pepin or Clotharius, they keep state so.

Sands. They have all new legs, and lame ones:
one would take it,
That never saw 'em pace before, the spavin,
<sup>2</sup> Or<sup>c</sup> springhalt reign'd among them.

Cham. Death! my lord,
Their clothes are after such a pagan cut too,
That, sure, they've worn out Christendom.—How What news, sir Thomas Lovell? [now!]

Enter Sir THOMAS LOVELL.

Lov. 'Faith, my lord,
I hear of none, but the new proclamation
That's clapp'd upon the court-gate.

Cham. What is't for?
Lov. The reformation of our travell'd gallants,
That fill the court with quarrels, talk, and tailors.

Cham. I am glad 'tis there: now, I would pray our monsieurs
To think an English courtier may be wise,
And never see the Louvre.

Lov. They must either
(For so run the conditions) leave those remnants
Of fool, and feather, that they got in France,
With all their honorable points of ignorance
Pertaining thereunto, as lights and fireworks;
Abusing better men than they can be,
Out of a foreign wisdom; renouncing clean
The faith they have in tennis, and tall stockings,
Short blister'd<sup>d</sup> breeches, and those types of travel,
And understand again like honest men,
Or pack to their old playfellows: there, I take it,
They may, cum privilegio, wear away
The lag end of their lewdness, and be laugh'd at.

Sands. 'Tis time to give 'em physic, their diseases
Are grown so catching.

Cham. What a loss our ladies
Will have of these trim vanities.

Lov. Ay, marry,
There will be woe indeed, lords: the sly whoresons
Have got a speeding trick to lay down ladies;
A French song and a fiddle<sup>3</sup> have no fellow. [going.]
Sands. The devil fiddle them! I am glad they're For, sure, there's no converting of them: now,
An honest country lord, as I am, beaten
A long time out of play, may bring his plain-song,
And have an hour of hearing, and, by'r-lady,
Held current music too.

Cham. Well said, lord Sands:
Your colt's tooth is not cast yet.

Sands. No, my lord;
Nor shall not, while I have a stump.

Cham. Sir Thomas,
Whither were you a going?

Lov. To the cardinal's.
Your lordship is a guest too.

Cham. O! 'tis true;
This night he makes a supper, and a great one.
To many lords and ladies: there will be
The beauty of this kingdom, I'll assure you.

Lov. That churchman bears a bounteous mind indeed;

A hand as fruitful as the land that feeds us:
His dews fall every where.

Cham. No doubt, he's noble;
He had a black mouth that said other of him.

Sands. He may, my lord, he has wherewithal:
in him,

Sparring would show a worse sin than ill doctrine.

Men of his<sup>4</sup> sway should be most liberal;

They are set here for examples.

Cham. True, they are so;
But few now give so great ones. My barge stays;
Your lordship shall along.—Come, good sir Thomas,
We shall be late else; which I would not be,
For I was spoke to, with sir Henry Guildford,
This night to be comptrollers.

Sands. I am your lordship's. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Presence-Chamber in York-Place.

Hautboys. A small Table under a State for the Cardinal, a longer Table for the Guests; then enter ANNE BULLEN, and divers Lords, Ladies, and Gentlewomen, as Guests, at one door; at another door, enter Sir HENRY GUILDFORD.

Guil. Ladies, a general welcome from his grace
Salutes you all: this night he dedicates
To fair content, and you. None here, he hopes,
In all this noble<sup>5</sup> bevy, has brought with her
One care abroad: he would have all as merry
As, first, good company, good wine, good welcome
Can make good people.—O, my lord! y'are tardy;

Enter Lord Chamberlain, Lord SANDS, and Sir THOMAS LOVELL.

The very thought of this fair company
Clapp'd wings to me.

Cham. You are young, sir Harry Guildford.

Sands. Sir Thomas Lovell, had the cardinal
But half my lay-thoughts in him, some of these Should find a running banquet ere they rested,
I think, would better please 'em: by my life,
They are a sweet society of fair ones. [sor]

Lov. O! that your lordship were but now confes-
To one or two of these

Sands. I would, I were;
They should find easy penance.

Lov. Faith, how easy?

Sands. As easy as a down-bed would afford it.

Cham. Sweet ladies, will it please you sit? Sir
Harry,

Place you that side, I'll take the charge of this.
His grace is entering.—Nay, you must not freeze;
Two women plac'd together makes cold weather:—
My lord Sands, you are one will keep 'em waking;
Pray, sit between these ladies.

Sands. By my faith,

<sup>a</sup> "Mysteries," i. e., arts; artificial fashions.—<sup>b</sup> "A fit," i. e., a grace.—<sup>c</sup> Springhalt is a disease incident to horses.—<sup>d</sup> "Short blister'd breeches," i. e., breeches puffed out like blisters.

And thank your lordship.—By your leave, sweet ladies:

[Sits himself between ANNE BULLEN and another Lady.]

If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive me; I had it from my father.

Anne. Was he mad, sir?

Sands. O! very mad, exceeding mad; in love too; But he would bite none: just as I do now, He would kiss you twenty with a breath.

[Kisses her.]

Cham. Well said, my lord.—

So, now you are fairly seated.—Gentlemen, The penance lies on you, if these fair ladies Pass away frowning.

Sands. For my little cure, Let me alone.

Hautboys. Enter Cardinal WOLSEY, attended, and takes his State.

Wol. Y're welcome, my fair guests: that noble lady,

Or gentleman, that is not freely merry, Is not my friend. This, to confirm my welcome;

And to you all good health. [Drinks.]

Sands. Your grace is noble: Let me have such a bowl may hold my thanks, And save me so much talking.

Wol. My lord Sands, I am beholding to you: cheer your neighbors.—Ladies, you are not merry:—gentlemen, Whose fault is this?

Sands. The red wine first must rise In their fair cheeks, my lord; then, we shall have 'em Talk us to silence.

Anne. You are a merry gamester, My lord Sands.

Sands. Yes, if I make my <sup>a</sup>play. Here's to your ladyship; and pledge it, madam, For 'tis to such a thing,—

Anne. You cannot show me.

Sands. I told your grace, <sup>1</sup>how they would talk anon.

[Drum and Trumpets within; <sup>b</sup>Chambers discharged.]

Wol. What's that?

Cham. Look out there, some of you.

[Exit a Servant.]

Wol. What warlike voice, And to what end is this?—Nay, ladies, fear not; By all the laws of war y're privileg'd.

Re-enter Servant.

Cham. How now! what is't?

Serv. A noble troop of strangers, For so they seem: they've left their barge, and landed; And hither make, as great ambassadors From foreign princes.

Wol. Good lord chamberlain, Go, give them welcome; you can speak the French tongue:

And, pray, receive them nobly, and conduct them Into our presence, where this heaven of beauty Shall shine at full upon them.—Some attend him.—

[Exit Chamberlain attended. All arise, and Tables removed.]

You have now a broken banquet; but we'll mend it. A good digestion to you all; and, once more, I shower a welcome on ye.—Welcome all.

Hautboys. Enter the King, and others, as Maskers, habited like Shepherds, ushered by the Lord Chamberlain. They pass directly before the Cardinal, and gracefully salute him.

A noble company! what are their pleasures?

Cham. Because they speak no English, thus they pray'd <sup>2</sup>me

To tell your grace:—That, having heard by fame Of this so noble and so fair assembly

This night to meet here, they could do no less, Out of the great respect they bear to beauty, But leave their flocks, and under your fair conduct, Crave leave to view these ladies, and entreat An hour of revels with them.

Wol. Say, lord chamberlain, They have done my poor house grace; for which I pay them [ures.]

A thousand thanks, and pray them take their pleas— [Ladies chosen for the Dance. The King takes ANNE BULLEN.]

K. Hen. The fairest hand I ever touch'd. O, beauty!

Till now I never knew thee. [Music. Dance.]

Wol. My lord!—

Cham. Your grace?

Wol. Pray tell them thus much from me.

There should be one amongst them, by his person, More worthy this place than myself; to whom, If I but knew him, with my love and duty I would surrender.

Cham. I will, my lord.

[Cham. <sup>3</sup>whispers the Maskers, and returns.]

Wol. What say they?

Cham. Such a one, they all confess, There is, indeed; which they would have your grace Find out, and he will take it.

Wol. Let me see then. [Comes from his State.]
By all your good leaves, gentlemen, here I'll make My royal choice.

K. Hen. You have found him, cardinal.

[Unmasking.]

You hold a fair assembly; you do well, lord:

You are a churchman, or, I'll tell you, cardinal, I should judge now <sup>c</sup>unhappily.

Wol. I am glad,

Your grace is grown so pleasant.

K. Hen. My lord chamberlain, Pr'ythee, come hither. What fair lady's that?

Cham. An't please your grace, sir Thomas Bullen's daughter.—

The viscount Rochford,—one of her highness' women.

K. Hen. By heaven, she is a dainty one.—Sweet, I were unmannerly to take you out, [heart, And not to kiss you.—<sup>4</sup>[Kisses her.] A health, gen— Let it go round. [lemen!]

Wol. Sir Thomas Lovell, is the banquet ready I' the privy chamber?

Lov. Yes, my lord.

Wol. Your grace, I fear, with dancing is a little heated.

K. Hen. I fear, too much.

Wol. There's fresher air, my lord, In the next chamber. [partner,]

K. Hen. Lead in your ladies, every one.—Sweet I must not yet forsake you.—Let's be merry: Good my lord cardinal: I have half a dozen healths To drink to these fair ladies, and a <sup>d</sup>measure To lead them once again; and then let's dream Who's best in favor.—Let the music knock it.

[Exeunt, with Trumpets.]

<sup>a</sup> "If I make my play," i.e., if I may choose my game.—
<sup>b</sup> Chambers were small cannon.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Street.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting.

1 Gent. Whither away so fast?

2 Gent. O!—God save you,
E'en to the hall, to hear what shall become
Of the great duke of Buckingham.

1 Gent. I'll save you
That labor, sir. All's now done, but the ceremony
Of bringing back the prisoner.

2 Gent. Were you there?

1 Gent. Yes, indeed, was I.

2 Gent. Pray, speak what has happen'd.

1 Gent. You may guess quickly what.

2 Gent. Is he found guilty?

1 Gent. Yes, truly is he, and condemn'd upon it.

2 Gent. I am sorry for't.

1 Gent. So are a number more.

2 Gent. But, pray, how pass'd it?

1 Gent. I'll tell you in a little. The great duke
Came to the bar; where, to his accusations
He pleaded still not guilty, and alleg'd
Many sharp reasons to defeat the law.
The king's attorney, on the contrary,
Urg'd on the examinations, proofs, confessions
Of divers witnesses, which the duke desir'd
To have brought, visâ voce, to his face:
At which appeared against him, his surveyor;
Sir Gilbert Peck his chancellor; and John Car,
Confessor to him; with that devil-monk,
Hopkins, that made this mischief.

2 Gent. That was he,
That fed him with his prophecies?

1 Gent. The same.

All these accus'd him strongly; which he fain
Would have flung from him, but, indeed, he could not:
And so his peers, upon this evidence,
Have found him guilty of high treason. Much
He spoke, and learnedly, for life; but all
Was either pitied in him, or * forgotten.

2 Gent. After all this, how did he bear himself?

1 Gent. When he was brought again to the bar,
to hear

His knell rung out, his judgment, he was stirred
With such an agony, he sweat extremely,
And something spoke in choler, ill, and hasty:
But he fell to himself again, and sweetly
In all the rest show'd a most noble patience.

2 Gent. I do not think, he fears death.

1 Gent. Sure, he does not;
He was never so womanish: the cause
He may a little grieve at.

2 Gent. Certainly,
The cardinal is the end of this.

1 Gent. 'Tis likely
By all conjectures: first, Kildare's attainder,
Then deputy of Ireland; who remov'd,
Earl Surrey was sent thither, and in haste too,
Lest he should help his father.

2 Gent. That trick of state
Was a deep envious one.

1 Gent. At his return,
No doubt, he will requite it. This is noted,
And generally;—whoever the king favors,
The cardinal instantly will find employment,
And far enough from court too.

2 Gent. All the commons
Hate him perniciously, and, o' my conscience,
Wish him ten fathom deep: this duke as much

* "Forgotten," i. e., made no impression.

They love and dote on; call him, bounteous Buck—
The mirror of all courtesy— [Ingham,

1 Gent. Stay there, sir;
And see the noble ruin'd man you speak of.

*Enter BUCKINGHAM from his Arraignment; Tipstaves before him; the Axe with the edge towards him; Halberds on each side: accompanied with Sir THOMAS LOVELL, Sir NICHOLAS VAUX, Sir
WILLIAM SANDS, and common People.*

2 Gent. Let's stand close, and behold him.

Buck. All good people,

You that thus far have come to pity me,
Hear what I say, and then go home and lose me.
I have this day receiv'd a traitor's judgment,
And by that name must die: yet, heaven bear witness,
And if I have a conscience let it sink me,
Even as the axe falls, if I be not faithful.
The law I bear no malice for my death,
It has done upon the premises but justice;
But those that sought it I could wish more Christians:
Be what they will, I heartily forgive them.
Yet let them look they glory not in mischief,
Nor build their evils on the graves of great men;
For then my guiltless blood must cry against them.
For farther life in this world I ne'er hope,
Nor will I sue, although the king have mercies
More than I dare make faults. You few that lov'd me,
And dare be bold to weep for Buckingham,
His noble friends and fellows, whom to leave
Is only bitter to him, only dying,
Go with me, like good angels, to my end;
And, as the long divorce of steel falls on me,
Make of your prayers one sweet sacrifice,
And lift my soul to heaven.—Lead on, o' God's name.

Lov. I do beseech your grace, for charity,
If ever any malice in your heart

Were hid against me, now to forgive me frankly.

Buck. Sir Thomas Lovell, I as free forgive you,
As I would be forgiven: I forgive all;
There cannot be those numberless offences [Envy
'Gainst me, that I cannot take peace with: no black Shall make my grave. Commend me to his grace;
And, if he speak of Buckingham, pray, tell him,
You met him half in heaven. My vows and prayers
Yet are the king's; and, till my soul forsake,
Shall cry for blessings on him: may he live
Longer than I have time to tell his years.
Ever belov'd, and loving, may his rule be:
And when old time shall lead him to his end,
Goodness and he fill up one monument!

Lov. To the water side I must conduct your grace;
Then, give my charge up to sir Nicholas Vaux,
Who undertakes you to your end.

Vaux. Prepare there!
The duke is coming: see, the barge be ready;
And fit it with such furniture, as suits
The greatness of his person.

Buck. Nay, sir Nicholas,
Let it alone: my state now will but mock me.
When I came hither I was lord high constable,
And duke of Buckingham; now, poor Edward Bohun:
Yet I am richer than my base accusers,
That never knew what truth meant. I now seal it;
And with that blood will one day make them groan
My noble father, Henry of Buckingham, [for't.
Who first rais'd head against usurping Richard,
Flying for succor to his servant Banister,
Being distress'd, was by that wretch betray'd,
And without trial fell: God's peace be with him!
Henry the seventh succeeding, truly pitying
My father's loss, like a most royal prince,

<sup>b</sup> Malice; hatred.

Restor'd me to my honors, and out of ruins
 Made my name once more noble. Now, his son,
 Henry the eighth, life, honor, name, and all
 That made me happy, at one stroke has taken
 For ever from the world. I had my trial,
 And, must needs say, a noble one; which makes me
 A little happier than my wretched father:
 Yet thus far we are one in fortunes,—both Fell by our servants, by those men we lov'd most:
 A most unnatural and faithless service.
 Heaven has an end in all; yet, you that hear me,
 This from a dying man receive as certain:
 Where you are liberal of your loves and counsels,
 Be sure, you be not <sup>a</sup>loose; for those you make friends,

And give your hearts to, when they once perceive
 The least rub in your fortunes, fall away
 Like water from ye, never found again
 But <sup>1</sup>when they mean to sink ye. All good people,
 Pray for me. I must now forsake ye: the last hour
 Of my long weary life is come upon me. [is sad,
 Farewell: and when you would say something that Speak how I fell.—I have done, and God forgive me! [Exeunt BUCKINGHAM, &c.]

<sup>1</sup> Gent. O! this is full of pity.—Sir, it calls,
 I fear, too many curses on their heads
 That were the authors.

<sup>2</sup> Gent. If the duke be guiltless,
 'Tis full of woe: yet I can give you inkling
 Of an ensuing evil, if it fall,
 Greater than this.

<sup>1</sup> Gent. Good angels keep it from us!
 What may it be? You do not doubt my faith, sir?

<sup>2</sup> Gent. This secret is so weighty, 'twill require
 A strong <sup>b</sup>faith to conceal it.

<sup>1</sup> Gent. Let me have it:
 I do not talk much.

<sup>2</sup> Gent. I am confident:
 You shall, sir. Did you not of late days hear
 A buzzing of a separation
 Between the king and Katharine?

<sup>1</sup> Gent. Yes, but it <sup>c</sup>held not;
 For when the king once heard it, out of anger
 He sent command to the lord mayor straight
 To stop the rumor, and allay those tongues
 That durst disperse it.

<sup>2</sup> Gent. But that slander, sir,
 Is found a truth now; for it grows again
 Fresher than e'er it was, and held for certain
 The king will venture at it. Either the cardinal,
 Or some about him near, have out of malice
 To the good queen possess'd him with a scruple,
 That will undo her: to confirm this, too,
 Cardinal Campeius is arriv'd, and lately,
 As all think, for this business.

<sup>1</sup> Gent. 'Tis the cardinal;
 And merely to revenge him on the emperor,
 For not bestowing on him, at his asking,
 The archbishopric of Toledo, this is purpos'd.

<sup>2</sup> Gent. I think, you have hit the mark: but is't not cruel,
 That she should feel the smart of this? The cardinal
 Will have his will, and she must fall.

<sup>1</sup> Gent. 'Tis woful.
 We are too open here to argue this;
 Let's think in private more. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—An Ante-chamber in the Palace.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain, reading a Letter.

Cham. "My lord,—The horses your lordship sent for, with all the care I had, I saw well chosen, ridden, and furnished. They were young, and handsome, and of the best breed in the north. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my lord cardinal's, by commission and main power, took them from me; with this reason,—his master would be served before a subject, if not before the king; which stopped our mouths, sir."

 I fear, he will, indeed. Well, let him have them:
 He will have all, I think.

Enter the Dukes of NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.

Nor. Well met, my lord chamberlain.

Cham. Good day to both your graces.

Suf. How is the king employ'd?

Cham. I left him private,
 Full of sad thoughts and troubles.

Nor. What's the cause?

Cham. It seems, the marriage with his brother's
 Has crept too near his conscience. [wife

Suf. No; his conscience
 Has crept too near another lady.

Nor.

'Tis so.

This is the cardinal's doing, the king-cardinal:
 That blind priest, like the eldest son of fortune,
 Turns what he list. The king will know him one day.

Suf. Pray God, he do: he'll never know himself else.

Nor. How holily he works in all his business.

And with what zeal; for, now he has crack'd the league [nephew,

Between us and the emperor, the queen's great
 He dives into the king's soul; and there scatters

Dangers, doubts, wringing of the conscience,
 Fears, and despairs, and all these for his marriage:

And, out of all these, to restore the king,
 He counsels a divorce; a loss of her,

That like a jewel has hung twenty years
 About his neck, yet never lost her lustre;

Of her, that loves him with that excellence
 That angels love good men with; even of her

That when the greatest stroke of fortune falls,
 Will bless the king. And is not this course pious?

Cham. Heaven keep me from such counsel! 'Tis most true, [them,

These news are every where; every tongue speaks
 And every true heart weeps for't. All, that dare

Look into these affairs, see this main end,—
 The French king's <sup>d</sup>sister. Heaven will one day open

 The king's eyes, that so long have slept upon
 This bold bad man.

Suf. And free us from his slavery.

Nor. We had need pray,
 And heartily, for our deliverance,

Or this imperious man will work us all
 From princes into pages. All men's honors

Lie like one lump before him, to be fashion'd
 Into what pitch he <sup>e</sup>please.

Suf. For me, my lords,
 I love him not, nor fear him; there's my creed.

As I am made without him, so I'll stand,
 If the king please: his curses and his blessings

Touch me alike, they're breath I not believe in.
 I knew him, and I know him; so I leave him

To him that made him proud, the pope.

Nor.

Let's in,

And with some other business put the king
 From these sad thoughts, that work too much upon

My lord, you'll bear us company? [him.—

<sup>d</sup> The main end of Wolsey was to effect a marriage between Henry and "the French king's sister," the Duchess of Alençon.—<sup>e</sup> "Into what pitch he please," i. e., either high or low.

<sup>a</sup> "Loose," i. e., over-confiding.—<sup>b</sup> "A strong faith," i. e., great fidelity.—<sup>c</sup> "It held not," i. e., it did not prove true.—

Cham. Excuse me;
The king hath sent me other-where: besides,
You'll find a most unfit time to disturb him.
Health to your lordships.

Nor. Thanks, my good lord chamberlain.
[Exit Lord Chamberlain.]

<sup>1</sup> Curtain drawn: the King is discovered sitting, and reading pensively.

Suf. How sad he looks: sure, he is much afflicted.

K. Hen. Who is there? ha!

Nor. Pray God, he be not angry.

K. Hen. Who's there, I say? How dare you
Into my private meditations? [thrust yourselves
Who am I? ha!]

Nor. A gracious king, that pardons all offences,
Malice ne'er meant: our breach of duty this way
Is business of estate, in which we come
To know your royal pleasure.

K. Hen. Ye are too bold.
Go to; I'll make ye know your times of business:
Is this an hour for temporal affairs? ha!—

<sup>2</sup> [Raising his book.]

Enter WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS.

Who's there? my good lord cardinal?—O! my Wol-
The quiet of my wounded conscience; [sey,
Thou art a cure fit for a king.—You're welcome,

[To CAMPEIUS.]

Most learned reverend sir, into our kingdom:
Use us, and it.—My good lord, have great care
I be not found a talker. [To WOLSEY.

Wol. Sir, you cannot.
I would, your grace would give us but an hour
Of private conference.

K. Hen. We are busy: go.
[To NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.]

Nor. This priest has no pride in him.

Suf. Not to speak of;
I would not be so backbited though for his
But this cannot continue. [place: } Aside.

Nor. If it do,
I'll venture one heaven at him.

Suf. I another.
[Exeunt NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.]

Wol. Your grace has given a precedent of wisdom
Above all princes, in committing freely
Your scruple to the voice of Christendom.
Who can be angry now? what envy reach you?
The Spaniard, tied by blood and favor to her,
Must now confess, if they have any goodness,
The trial just and noble. All the clerks,
I mean the learned ones, in Christian kingdoms
Have their free voices: Rome, the nurse of judg-
Invited by your noble self, hath sent [ment,
One general tongue unto us, this good man,
This just and learned priest, Cardinal Campeius;
Whom once more I present unto your highness.

K. Hen. And once more in mine arms I bid him welcome,

And thank the holy conclave for their loves: [for.
They have sent me such a man I would have wish'd

Cam. Your grace must needs deserve all strangers' loves,

You are so noble. To your highness' hand
<sup>3</sup> [Kneeling and rising again.]

I tender my commission; by whose virtue,
(The court of Rome commanding) you, my lord
Cardinal of York, are join'd with me, their servant,
In the impartial judging of this business.

K. Hen. Two equal men. The queen shall be acquainted

Forthwith for what you come.—Where's Gardiner?

Wol. I know, your majesty has always lov'd her
So dear in heart, not to deny her that
A woman of less place might ask by law,
Scholars, allow'd freely to argue for her. [favor

K. Hen. Ay, and the best, she shall have; and my
To him that does best: God forbid else. Cardinal,
Pr'ythee, call Gardiner to me, my new secretary:
I find him a fit fellow. [Exit WOLSEY.

Re-enter WOLSEY, with GARDINER.

Wol. Give me your hand: much joy and favor to
You are the king's now. [you;

Gard. But to be commanded
For ever by your grace, whose hand has rais'd me.

K. Hen. Come hither, Gardiner.

[They walk and whisper.]

Cam. My lord of York, was not one doctor Pace
In this man's place before him?

Wol. Yes, he was.

Cam. Was he not held a learned man?

Wol. Yes, surely.

Cam. Believe me, there's an ill opinion spread, then,
Even of yourself, lord cardinal.

Wol. How! of me?

Cam. They will not stick to say, you envied him;
And fearing he would rise, he was so virtuous,
Kept him a foreign man still; which so griev'd him,
That he ran mad, and died.

Wol. Heaven's peace be with him!
That's Christian care enough: for living murmurers
There's places of rebuke. He was a fool,
For he would needs be virtuous: that good fellow,
If I command him, follows my appointment:
I will have none so near else. Learn this, brother,
We live not to be grip'd by meaner persons.

K. Hen. Deliver this with modesty to the queen.—

[Exit GARDINER.]

The most convenient place that I can think of,
For such receipt of learning, is Black-Friars:
There ye shall meet about this weighty business.
My Wolsey, see it furnish'd.—O my lord!
Would it not grieve an able man, to leave
So sweet a bedfellow? But, conscience, conscience,—
O! 'tis a tender place, and I must leave her.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—An Ante-chamber in the Queen's Apartments.

Enter ANNE BULLEN, and an old Lady.

Anne. Not for that neither:—here's the pang that pinches;
His highness having liv'd so long with her, and she
So good a lady, that no tongue could ever
Pronounce dishonor of her: by my life,
She never knew harm-doing.—O! now, after
So many courses of the sun enthron'd,
Still growing in a majesty and pomp, the which
To leave's a thousand-fold more bitter, than Sweet at first t' acquire,—after this process,
To give her the <sup>d</sup>avaunt! it is a pity
Would move a monster.

Old L. Hearts of most hard temper
Melt and lament for her.

Anne. O, God's will! much better,
She ne'er had known pomp: though it be temporal,
Yet, if that <sup>d</sup>cruel fortune do divorce

<sup>a</sup> "I be not found a talker," i. e., that my professions of welcome be not found empty talk.—<sup>b</sup> "So sick," i. e., so sick as he is proud.

<sup>c</sup> "Kept him a foreign man," i. e., employed him in foreign embassies, out of the king's presence.—<sup>d</sup> "To give her the <sup>d</sup>avaunt!" i. e., to send her away contemptuously.

It from the bearer, 'tis a sufferance <sup>a</sup> panging
As soul and body's severing.

Old L. Alas, poor lady!
She's a <sup>b</sup> stranger now again?

Anne. So much the more
Must pity drop upon her. Verily,
I swear, 'tis better to be lowly born,
And range with humble lives in content,
Than to be <sup>c</sup> perk'd up in a glistering grief,
And wear a golden sorrow.

Old L. Our content
Is our best <sup>d</sup> having.

Anne. By my troth, and maidenhead,
I would not be a queen.

Old L. Beshrew me, I would,
And venture maidenhead for't; and so would you,
For all this spice of your hypocrisy.
You that have so fair parts of woman on you,
Have, too, a woman's heart; which ever yet
Affected eminence, wealth, sovereignty;
Which, to say sooth, are blessings, and which gifts
(Saving your mincing) the capacity
Of your soft <sup>e</sup> cheveril conscience would receive,
If you might please to stretch it.

Anne. Nay, good troth.

Old L. Yes, troth, and troth.—You would not be a queen?

Anne. No, not for all the riches under heaven.

Old L. 'Tis strange: a three-pence <sup>f</sup> bowed would hire me,

Old as I am, to queen it. But, I pray you,
What think you of a duchess? have you limbs
To bear that load of title?

Anne. No, in truth. [<sup>g</sup> little:]

Old L. Then you are weakly made. Pluck off a
I would not be a young count in your way,
For more than blushing comes to. If your back
Cannot vouchsafe this burden, 'tis too weak
Ever to get a boy.

Anne. How you do talk!
I swear again, I would not be a queen
For all the world.

Old L. In faith, for little England
You'd venture an <sup>h</sup> emballing: I myself
Would for Carnarvonshire, although there 'long'd
No more to the crown but that. Lo! who comes here?

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Good morrow, ladies. What were't worth
The secret of your conference? [<sup>i</sup> to know]

Anne. My good lord,
Not your demand: it values not your asking.
Our mistress' sorrows we were pitying.

Cham. It was a gentle business, and becoming
The action of good women: there is hope
All will be well.

Anne. Now, I pray God, amen!

Cham. You bear a gentle mind, and heavenly blessings

Follow such creatures. That you may, fair lady,
Perceive I speak sincerely, and high notes
Ta'en of your many virtues, the king's majesty
Commends his good opinion of you to you, and Does purpose honor to you, no less flowing
Than marchioness of Pembroke; to which title
A thousand pound a year, annual support,

Out of his grace he adds.

Anne.

I do not know,
What kind of my obedience I should tender:
More than my all is nothing; nor my prayers
Are not words duly hallow'd, nor my wishes
More worth than empty vanities: yet prayers, and wishes,

Are all I can return. Beseech your lordship,
Vouchsafe to speak my thanks, and my obedience,
As from a blushing handmaid, to his highness;
Whose health, and royalty, I pray for.

Cham.

Lady,
I shall not fail to <sup>l</sup> improve the fair <sup>i</sup> conceit,
The king hath of you.—I have perus'd her well:

[Aside.

Beauty and honor in her are so mingled,
That they have caught the king; and who knows yet,
But from this lady may proceed a gem
To lighten all this isle?—[To her.] I'll to the king,
And say, I spoke with you.

Anne. My honor'd lord. [Exit Lord Chamberlain.

Old L. Why, this it is; see, see!

I have been begging sixteen years in court,
(Am yet a courtier beggarly) nor could Come pat betwixt too early and too late
For any suit of pounds; and you, O fate!
A very fresh-fish here, (fie, fie, fie upon
This compell'd fortune!) have your mouth fill'd up,
Before you open it.

Anne.

This is strange to me.
Old L. How tastes it? is it bitter? forty <sup>k</sup> pence, no.
There was a lady once, ('tis an old story)
That would not be a queen, that would she not,
For all the <sup>l</sup> mud in Egypt;—have you heard it?

Anne. Come, you are pleasant.

Old L. With your theme I could O'ermount the lark. The marchioness of Pembroke!
A thousand pounds a year for pure respect;
No other obligation. By my life,
That promises more thousands: honor's train
Is longer than his foreskirt. By this time,
I know, your back will bear a duchess.—Say,
Are you not stronger than you were?

Anne.

Good lady,
Make yourself mirth with your particular fancy,
And leave me out on't. Would I had no being,
If this <sup>m</sup> elate my blood a jot: it faints me,
To think what follows.

The queen is comfortless, and we forgetful
In our long absence. Pray, do not deliver
What here you've heard, to her.

Old L.

What do you think me? [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Hall in Black-Friars.

*Trumpets, m Sennet, and Cornets. Enter two Ver-gers, with short silver Wands; next them, two Scribes, in the habit of Doctors; after them, the Archbishop of CANTERBURY alone; after him, the Bishops of LINCOLN, ELY, ROCHESTER, and SAINT
ASAPH; next them, with some small distance, follows a Gentleman bearing the Purse, with the Great Seal, and a Cardinal's Hat; then two Priests, bearing each a silver Cross; then a Gentleman-Usher bare-headed, accompanied with a Sergeant at Arms, bearing a silver Mace; then two Gentlemen, bearing two great silver <sup>n</sup> Pillars;
after them, side by side, the two Cardinals WOLSEY*

<sup>a</sup> "Panging," i. e., inflicting as severe a pang.—<sup>b</sup> "A stranger," i. e., reduced to the condition of an unfriended stranger.
—<sup>c</sup> "Perk'd up," i. e., pranked, dressed up.—<sup>d</sup> Possession.—
<sup>e</sup> "Cheveril," i. e., kid-skin.—<sup>f</sup> Crooked.—<sup>g</sup> "Pluck off a little," i. e., let us descend a little lower.—<sup>h</sup> "An emballing,"
i. e., to be distinguished by the ball, the ensign of royalty, used at coronations.

<sup>i</sup> "Conceit," i. e., opinion.—<sup>k</sup> Forty pence was the proverbial expression for a small wage.—<sup>l</sup> Egypt owes its fertility to the mud of the Nile.—<sup>m</sup> The sennet was a signal given by sound of trumpets.—<sup>n</sup> Ensigns of dignity carried before cardinals.

and CAMPEIUS; two Noblemen with the Sword and Mace. The King takes place under the cloth of state: the two Cardinals sit under him as judges. The Queen takes place at some distance from the King. The Bishops place themselves on each side the court, in manner of a consistory; below them, the Scribes. The Lords sit next the Bishops. The rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the stage.

Wol. Whilst our commission from Rome is read, Let silence be commanded.

K. Hen. What's the need?
It hath already publicly been read,
And on all sides th' authority allow'd;
You may, then, spare that time.

Wol. Be't so.—Proceed.
Scribe. Say, Henry king of England, come into Crier. Henry king of England, &c. [the court.
K. Hen. Here. [into the court.
Scribe. Say, Katharine queen of England, come Crier. Katharine, queen of England, &c.

[The Queen makes no answer, rises out of her chair, goes about the court, comes to the King, and kneels at his feet; then speaks.]

Q. Kath. Sir, I desire you, do me right and justice, And to bestow your pity on me; for I am a most poor woman, and a stranger, Born out of your dominions; having here No judge indifferent, nor no more assurance Of equal friendship and proceeding. Alas! sir In what have I offended you? what cause Hath my behavior given to your displeasure, That thus you should proceed to put me off, And take your good grace from me? Heaven witness, I have been to you a true and humble wife, At all times to your will conformable; Ever in fear to kindle your dislike, Yea, subject to your countenance; glad, or sorry, As I saw it inclin'd. When was the hour I ever contradicted your desire, Or made it not mine too? or which of your friends Have I not strove to love, although I knew He were mine enemy? what friend of mine, That had to him deriv'd your anger, did I Continue in my liking? nay, gave notice He was from thence discharg'd. Sir, call to mind That I have been your wife, in this obedience, Upward of twenty years, and have been blest With many children by you: if in the course And process of this time you can report, And prove it too, against mine honor aught, My bond to wedlock, or my love and duty, Against your sacred person, in God's name, Turn me away; and let the foul'st contempt Shut door upon me, and so give me up To the sharp'st knife of justice. Please you, sir, The king, your father, was reputed for A prince most prudent, of an excellent And unmatched wit and judgment: Ferdinand, My father, king of Spain, was reckon'd one The wisest prince, that there had reign'd by many A year before: it is not to be question'd That they had gather'd a wise council to them Of every realm, that did debate this business, Who deem'd our marriage lawful. Wherefore I humbly beseech you, sir, to spare me, till I may [bly Be by my friends in Spain advis'd, whose counsel I will implore: if not, i' the name of God, Your pleasure be fulfill'd!

Wol. You have here, lady, (And of your choice) these reverend fathers; men Of singular integrity and learning, Yea, the elect o' the land, who are assembled To plead your cause. It shall be therefore bootless, That longer you defer the court, as well For your own quiet, as to rectify What is unsettled in the king.

Cam. His grace Hath spoken well, and justly: therefore, madam, It's fit this royal session do proceed, And that, without delay, their arguments Be now produc'd and heard.

Q. Kath. Lord cardinal, To you I speak.

Wol. Your pleasure, madam?
Q. Kath. Sir, I am about to weep; but, thinking that We are a queen, (or long have dream'd so) certain The daughter of a king, my drops of tears I'll turn to sparks of fire.

Wol. Be patient yet.
Q. Kath. I will, when you are humble; nay, before, Or God will punish me. I do believe, Induc'd by potent circumstances, That You are mine enemy, and make my challenge: You shall not be my judge; for it is you Have blown this coal betwixt my lord and me, Which God's dew quench.—Therefore, I say again, I utterly abhor, yea, from my soul, Refuse you for my judge; whom, yet once more, I hold my most malicious foe, and think not At all a friend to truth.

Wol. I do profess, You speak not like yourself; who ever yet Have stood to clarity, and display'd th' effects Of disposition gentle, and of wisdom, [wrong: O'ertopping woman's power. Madam, you do me I have no spleen against you; nor injustice For you, or any: how far I have proceeded, Or how far further shall, is warranted By a commission from the consistory, Yea, the whole consistory of Rome. You charge me, That I have blown this coal: I do deny it. The king is present: if it be known to him, That I "gausay my deed, how may he wound, And worthily, my falsehood; yea, as much As you have done my truth. If he know That I am free of your report, he knows, I am not of your wrong: therefore, in him It lies to cure me; and the cure is, to Remove these thoughts from you: the which, before His highness shall speak in, I do beseech You, gracious madam, to unthink your speaking, And to say no more.

Q. Kath. My lord, my lord, I am a simple woman, much too weak [mouth'd; To oppose your cunning. Y're meek, and humble— You sign your place and calling in full seeming, With meekness and humility; but your heart Is cramm'd with arrogancy, spleen, and pride. You have, by fortune and his highness' favors, Gone slightly o'er low steps, and now are mounted Where powers are your retainers; and your words, Domestics to you, serve your will, as't please Yourself pronounce their office. I must tell you, You tender more your person's honor, than Your high profession spiritual; that again I do refuse you for my judge, and here, Before you all, appeal unto the pope, To bring my whole cause fore his holiness, And to be judg'd by him.

[She curtsies to the King, and offers to depart.
Cam. The queen is obstinate,

* Deny.—"Sign," i. e., show; denote.—"In full seeming," i. e., with a fair appearance.

Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse it, and Disdainful to be tried by't: 'tis not well.
She's going away.

K. Hen. Call her again. [court.]

Crier. Katharine, queen of England, come into the Gent. Ush. Madam, you are call'd back.

Q. Kath. What need you note it? pray you, keep your way:

When you are call'd, return.—Now the Lord help!
They vex me past my patience.—Pray you, pass on.
I will not tarry; no, nor ever more,
Upon this business, my appearance make
In any of their courts.

[Exeunt Queen, and her Attendants.]

K. Hen. Go thy ways, Kate:
That man i' the world who shall report he has
A better wife, let him in nought be trusted,
For speaking false in that. Thou art alone
(If thy rare qualities, sweet gentleness,
Thy meekness saint-like, wife-like government,
Obeying in commanding, and thy parts
Sovereign and pious else, could speak thee <sup>a</sup> out)
The queen of earthly queens.—She's <sup>1</sup> nobly born;
And, like her true nobility, she has Carried herself towards me.

Vol. Most gracious sir,
In humblest manner I require your highness,
That it shall please you to declare, in hearing
Of all these curs, (for where I am robb'd and bound,
There must I be unloos'd, although not there
At once, and fully satisfied) whether ever I Did breach this business to your highness, or Laid any scruple in your way, which might Induce you to the question on't? or ever
Have to you, but with thanks to God for such A royal lady, spake one the least word, that might Be to the prejudice of her present state,
Or touch of her good person?

K. Hen. My lord cardinal,
I do excuse you; yea, upon mine honor,
I free you from't. You are not to be taught
That you have many enemies, that know not
Why they are so, but, like to village curs,
Bark when their fellows do: by some of these
The queen is put in anger. Y'are excus'd;
But will you be more justified? You ever
Have wish'd the sleeping of this business; never Desir'd it to be stir'd; but oft have hinder'd, oft,
The passages made toward it.—On my honor,
I speak my good lord cardinal to this point,
And thus far clear him. Now, what mov'd me to't,
I will be bold with time, and your attention:—
Then, mark th' inducement. Thus it came;—give My conscience first receiv'd a tenderness, [heed to't.
Scruple, and prick, on certain speeches utter'd
By the bishop of Bayonne, then French ambassador,
Who had been hither sent, on the debating
A marriage 'twixt the duke of Orleans and
Our daughter Mary. I' the progress of this business, Ere a determinate resolution, he
(I mean, the bishop) did require a respite;
Wherein he might the king his lord advertise
Whether our daughter were legitimate,
Respecting this our marriage with the dowager,
Sometime our brother's wife. This respite shook
The bottom of my conscience, enter'd me,
Yea, with a splitting power, and made to tremble
The region of my breast; which forc'd such way,
That many maz'd considerings did throng,
And press in with this caution. First, methought,
I stood not in the smile of Heaven; who had

<sup>a</sup> "Could speak thee out," i. e., could do justice to thy merits.

Commanded nature, that my lady's womb,
If it conceiv'd a male child by me, should Do no more offices of life to't, than
The grave does to the dead; for her male issue
Or died where they were made, or shortly after
This world had air'd them. Hence I took a thought,
This was a judgment on me; that my kingdom,
Well worthy the best heir o' the world, should not Be gladdened in't by me. Then follows, that I weigh'd the danger which my realms stood in
By this my issue's fail; and that <sup>a</sup> gave to me
Many a groaning throe. Thus, <sup>b</sup> hulling in
The wild sea of my conscience, I did steer Toward this remedy, whereupon we are Now present here together; that's to say,
I meant to rectify my conscience,—which
I then did feel full sick, and yet not well,—
By all the reverend fathers of the land,
And doctors learn'd. First, I began in private
With you, my lord of Lincoln: you remember
How under my oppression I did <sup>c</sup> reek,
When I first mov'd you.

Lin. Very well, my liege.

K. Hen. I have spoke long: be pleas'd yourself
How far you satisfied me. [to say

Lin. So please your highness,
The question did at first so stagger me,—
Bearing a state of mighty moment in't,
And consequence of dread,—that I committed
The daring'st counsel which I had to doubt,
And did entreat your highness to this course,
Which you are running here.

K. Hen. I then mov'd you,
My lord of Canterbury; and got your leave
To make this present summons.—Unsolicted
I left no reverend person in this court;
But by particular consent proceeded,
Under your hands and seals: therefore, go on;
For no dislike i' the world against the person
Of the good queen, but the sharp thorny points
Of my alleged reasons drive this forward.
Prove but our marriage lawful, by my life,
And kingly dignity, we are contented
To wear our mortal state to come with her,
Katharine our queen, before the primest creature
That's <sup>d</sup> paragon'd o' the world.

Cam. So please your highness,
The queen being absent, 'tis a needful fitness
That we adjourn this court till farther day:
Meanwhile must be an earnest motion
Made to the queen, to call back her appeal
She intends unto his holiness.

K. Hen. I may perceive, [Aside.]
These cardinals trifle with me: I abhor
This dilatory sloth, and tricks of Rome.
My learn'd and well-beloved servant, Cranmer,
Pry'thee, return! with thy approach, I know,
My comfort comes along. <sup>2</sup> [Aloud.].—Break up the court:

I say, set on. [Exeunt, in manner as they entered.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Palace at Bridewell.

A Room in the Queen's Apartment.

The Queen, and her Women, as at work.

Q. Kath. Take thy hute, wench: my soul grows sad with troubles;

<sup>b</sup> "Hulling," i. e., floating without guidance.—<sup>c</sup> "Reek," i. e., waste, or wear away.—<sup>d</sup> "Paragon'd," i. e., without comparison.

Sing, and disperse them, if thou canst. Leave working.

SONG.

*Orpheus with his lute made trees,
And the mountain-tops, that freeze;
Bow themselves, when he did sing:
To his music, plants, and flowers,
Ever sprung; as sun, and showers,
There had made a lasting spring.*

*Every thing that heard him play,
Even the billows of the sea,
Hung their heads, and then lay by.
In sweet music is such art,
Killing care and grief of heart
Fall asleep, or, hearing, die.*

Enter a Gentleman.

Q. Kath. How now.

Gent. An't please your grace, the two great car- wait in the <sup>a</sup>presence. [dinals]

Q. Kath. Would they speak with me?

Gent. They will'd me say so, madam.

Q. Kath. Pray their graces To come near. [Exit Gent.] What can be their business

With me, a poor weak woman, fallen from favor? I do not like their coming, now I think on't. They should be good men, their <sup>b</sup>affairs as righteous; But all hoods make not monks.

Enter WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS.

Wol. Peace to your highness.

Q. Kath. Your graces find me here part of a housewife;

I would be all, against the worst may happen. What are your pleasures with me, reverend lords?

Wol. May it please you, noble madam, to withdraw Into your private chamber, we shall give you The full cause of our coming.

Q. Kath. Speak it here.

There's nothing I have done yet, o' my conscience, Deserves a corner: would all other women Could speak this with as free a soul as I do! My lords, I care not, (so much I am happy Above a number) if my actions Were tried by every tongue, every eye saw them, Envy and base opinion set against them, I know my life so even. If your business Seek me out, and that way I am wife <sup>c</sup>in, Out with it boldly: truth loves open dealing.

Wol. Tanta est erga te mentis integritas, regina serenissima,—

Q. Kath. O, good my lord, no Latin:

I am not such a truant since my coming, As not to know the language I have liv'd in: A strange tongue makes my cause more strange, suspicious; [you]

Pray, speak in English. Here are some will thank If you speak truth, for their poor mistress' sake: Believe me, she has had much wrong. Lord cardinal, The willing'st sin I ever yet committed May be absolv'd in English.

Wol. Noble lady,

I am sorry, my integrity should breed, (And service to his majesty and you) So deep suspicion, where all faith was meant. We come not by the way of accusation, To taint that honor every good tongue blesses, Nor to betray you any way to sorrow;

You have too much, good lady; but to know How you stand minded in the weighty difference Between the king and you, and to deliver, Like free and honest men, our just opinions, And comforts to your cause.

Cam. Most honor'd madam, My lord of York,—out of his noble nature, Zeal and obedience he still bore your grace, Forgetting, like a good man, your late censures Both of his truth and him, (which was too far)—Offers, as I do, in a sign of peace, His service and his counsel.

Q. Kath. To betray me. [Aside. My lords, I thank you both for your good wills, Ye speak like honest men, (pray God, ye prove so!) But how to make ye suddenly an answer, In such a point of weight, so near mine honor, (More near my life, I fear,) with my weak wit, And to such men of gravity and learning, In truth, I know not. I was set at work Among my maids; full little, God knows, looking Either for such men, or such business.

For her sake that I have <sup>d</sup>been, for I feel The last fit of my greatness, good your graces, Let me have time and counsel for my cause.

Alas! I am a woman, friendless, hopeless. [fears:] Wol. Madam, you wrong the king's love with these Your hopes and friends are infinite.

Q. Kath. In England, But little for my profit: can you think, lords, That any Englishman dare give me counsel? Or be a known friend, 'gainst his highness' pleasure, (Though he be grown so desperate to be honest) And live a subject? Nay, forsooth, my friends, They that must weigh <sup>e</sup>out my afflictions, They that my trust must grow to, live not here: They are, as all my other comforts, far hence, In mine own country, lords.

Cam. I would, your grace Would leave your griefs, and take my counsel.

Q. Kath. How, sir?

Cam. Put your main cause into the king's protection; He's loving, and most gracious: 'twill be much Both for your honor better, and your cause; For if the trial of the law <sup>f</sup>overtake you, You'll part away disgrac'd.

Wol. He tells you rightly.

Q. Kath. Ye tell me what ye wish for both,—my Is this your Christian counsel? out upon ye! [ruin.] Heaven is above all yet: there sits a Judge That no king can corrupt.

Cam. Your rage mistakes us.

Q. Kath. The more shame for ye! holy men I thought ye, Upon my soul, two reverend cardinal virtues; But cardinal sins, and hollow hearts, I fear ye. Mend them for shame, my lords. Is this your com- The cordial that ye bring a wretched lady? [fort?] A woman lost among ye, laugh'd at, scorn'd? I will not wish ye half my miseries, I have more charity; but say, I warn'd ye: Take heed, for heaven's sake, take heed, lest at once The burden of my sorrows fall upon ye.

Wol. Madam, this is a mere distraction;

You turn the good we offer into envy.

Q. Kath. Ye turn me into nothing. Woe upon ye, And all such false professors! Would ye have me (If ye have any justice, any pity, If ye be any thing but churchmen's habits)

Put my sick cause into his hands that hates me?
 Alas! he has banish'd me his bed already;
 His love, too long ago: I am old, my lords,
 And all the fellowship I hold now with him
 Is only my obedience. What can happen
 To me above this wretchedness? all your studies
 Make me a curse like this.

Cam. Your fears are worse.

Q. Kath. Have I liv'd thus long—(let me speak myself, Since virtue finds no friends,)—a wife, a true one?

 A woman (I dare say without vain-glory)
 Never yet branded with suspicion?
 Have I with all my full affections [him?]
 Still met the king? lov'd him next heaven? obey'd*
 Been, out of fondness, <sup>a</sup>superstitious to him?
 Almost forgot my prayers to content him?
 And am I thus rewarded? 'tis not well, lords.
 Bring me a constant woman to her husband,
 One that ne'er dream'd a joy beyond his pleasure,
 And to that woman, when she has done most,
 Yet will I add an honor,—a great patience.

Wol. Madam, you wander from the good we aim at.

Q. Kath. My lord, I dare not make myself so guilty,
 To give up willingly that noble title
 Your master wed me to: notwithstanding but death
 Shall e'er divorce my dignities.

Wol. Pray, hear me.

Q. Kath. Would I had never trod this English
 Or felt the flatteries that grow upon it! [earth,
 Ye have angels' faces, but heaven knows your hearts.
 What will become of me now, wretched lady?
 I am the most unhappy woman living.—
 Alas! poor wenches, where are now your fortunes!

[To her Women.

Shipwreck'd upon a kingdom, where no pity,
 No friends, no hope, no kindred weep for me,
 Almost no grave allow'd me.—Like the lily,
 That once was mistress of the field and flourish'd,
 I'll hang my head, and perish.

Wol. If your grace

Could but be brought to know your ends are honest,
 You'd feel more comfort. Why should we, good lady,
 Upon what cause, wrong you? alas! our places,
 The way of our profession is against it:
 We are to cure such sorrows, not to sow them.
 For goodness sake, consider what you do;
 How you may hurt yourself, ay, utterly
 Grow from the king's acquaintance, by this carriage.
 The hearts of princes kiss obedience,
 So much they love it; but to stubborn spirits,
 They swell, and grow as terrible as storms.
 I know, you have a gentle, noble temper,
 A soul as even as a calm: pray, think us [vants.
 Those we profess, peace-makers, friends, and ser-

Cam. Madam, you'll find it so. You wrong your virtues

With these weak women's fears: a noble spirit,
 As yours was put into you, ever casts [you;
 Such doubts, as false coin, from it. The king loves
 Beware, you lose it not: for us, if you please
 To trust us in your business, we are ready
 To use our utmost studies in your service.

Q. Kath. Do what ye will, my lords: and, pray,
 If I have <sup>b</sup>us'd myself unmannerly: [forgive me,
 You know I am a woman, lacking wit
 To make a seemly answer to such persons.
 Pray do my service to his majesty:
 He has my heart yet, and shall have my prayers,
 While I shall have my life. Come, reverend fathers;

Bestow your counsels on me: she now begs,
 That little thought, when she set footing here,
 She should have bought her dignities so dear.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Auto-chamber to the King's Apartment.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk, the Duke of Suffolk, the Earl of Surrey, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. If you will now unite in your complaints,
 And force them with a constancy, the cardinal
 Cannot stand under them: if you omit
 The offer of this time, I cannot promise,
 But that you shall sustain more new disgraces,
 With these you bear already.

Sar. I am joyful
 To meet the least occasion, that may give me
 Remembrance of my father-in-law, the duke,
 To be reveng'd on him.

Suf. Which of the peers
 Have uncontent'd gone by him, or at least
 Strangely neglected? when did he regard
 The stamp of nobleness in any person,
 Out of himself?

Cham. My lords, you speak your pleasures
 What he deserves of you and me, I know;
 What we can to him, (though now the time Gives way to us) I much fear. If you cannot Bar his access to the king, never attempt
 Any thing on him, for he hath a witchcraft
 Over the king in's tongue.

Nor. O! fear him not;
 His spell in that is out: the king hath found
 Matter against him, that for ever mars
 The honey of his language. No, he settled,
 Not to come off, in his displeasure.

Sar. Sir,
 I should be glad to hear such news as this
 Once every hour.

Nor. Believe it, this is true.
 In the divorce his contrary <sup>d</sup>proceedings
 Are all unfolded; wherein he appears,
 As I could wish mine enemy.

Sar. How cōme
 His practices to light?

Suf. Most strangely.

Sar. O! how? how?
Suf. The cardinal's letter to the pope miscarried,
 And came to the eye o' the king; wherein was read,
 How that the cardinal did entreat his holiness
 To stay the judgment o' the divorce; for if
 It did take place, "I do," quoth he, "perceive,
 My king is tangled in affection to
 A creature of the queen's, lady Anne Bullen."

Sar. Has the king this?

Suf. Believe it.

Sar. Will this work?

Cham. The king in this perceives him, how he coasts,

And hedges, his own way. But in this point
 All his tricks founder, and he brings his physic
 After his patient's death: the king already Hath married the fair lady.

Sar. Would he had!

Suf. May you be happy in your wish, my lord;
 For, I profess, you have it.

Sar. Now I may all joy

<sup>e</sup>Trace the conjunction!

Suf. My amen to't.

<sup>c</sup>"Force," i. e., enforce; urge.—<sup>d</sup>"His contrary proceedings," i. e., his secret endeavors to counteract the divorce.—<sup>e</sup>"Trace," i. e., follow.

Nor. All men's.

Suf. There's order given for her coronation :
Marry, this is yet but young, and may be left
To some ears unrecounted.—But, my lords,
She is a gallant creature, and complete
In mind and feature : I persuade me, from her
Will fall some blessing to this land, which shall
In it be "memoriz'd."

Sur. But, will the king
Digest this letter of the cardinal's ?
The lord forbid !

Nor. Marry, amen !

Suf. No, no :
There be more wasps <sup>1</sup> than buz about his nose,
Will make this sting the sooner. Cardinal Campeius
Is stolen away to Rome ; hath ta'en no leave ;
Has left the cause o' the king unhandled, and
Is posted, as the agent of our cardinal,
To second all his plot. I do assure you
The king cried, ha ! at this.

Cham. Now, God incense him,
And let him cry ha ! louder.

Nor. But, my lord,
When returns Cranmer ?

Suf. He is return'd in his opinions, which Have satisfied the king for his divorce,
Together with all famous colleges
Almost in Christendom. Shortly, I believe,
His second marriage shall be publish'd, and
Her coronation. Katharine no more
Shall be call'd queen, but princess dowager,
And widow to prince Arthur.

Nor. This same Cranmer's
A worthy fellow, and hath ta'en much pain
In the king's business.

Suf. He has ; and we shall see him
For it an archbishop.

Nor. So I hear.

Suf. 'Tis so.
The cardinal— <sup>2</sup> [ They stand back. ]

Enter WOLSEY and CROMWELL.

Nor. Observe, observe ; he's moody.

Wol. The packet, Cromwell, gave it you the king ?

Crom. To his own hand, in his bedchamber.

Wol. Look'd he o' th' inside of the paper ?

Crom. Presently
He did unseal them, and the first he view'd,
He did it with a serious mind ; a heed
Was in his countenance : you he bade
Attend him here this morning.

Wol. Is he ready
To come abroad ?

Crom. I think, by this he is.

Wol. Leave me awhile.— [ Exit CROMWELL. ]
It shall be to the duchess of Alençon,
The French king's sister : he shall marry her.—
Anne Bullen ? No ; I'll no Anne Bullens for him :
There's more in't than fair visage.—Bullen !
No, we'll no Bullens.—Speedily I wish
To hear from Rome.—The marchioness of Pembroke !

Nor. He's discontented.

Suf. May be, he hears the king
Does whet his anger to him.

Sur. Sharp enough,
Lord ! for thy justice. [ daughter,

Wol. The late queen's gentlewoman, a knight's
To be her mistress' mistress ! the queen's queen !—
This candle burns not clear : 'tis I must snuff it ;
Then, out it goes.—What though I know her virtuous,
And well deserving, yet I know her for
A spleeny Lutherau ; and not wholesome to

Our cause, that she should lie i' the bosom of Our hard-ru'd king. Again, there is sprung up
An heretic, an arch one, Cranmer ; one
Hath crawl'd into the favor of the king,
And is his oracle. <sup>3</sup> [ Retires, musing. ]

Nor. He is vex'd at something.

Suf. I would, 'twere something that would fret the
The master-chord on's heart ! [ string,

Enter the King, reading a Schedule ; and LOVELL.

Suf. The king, the king !
K. Hen. What piles of wealth hath he accumulated,
To his own portion ! and what expense by the hour
Seems to flow from him ! How, i' the name of thrift,
Does he rake this together ?—Now, my lords ;
Saw you the cardinal ?

Nor. My lord, we have <sup>4</sup> [ Coming forward. ]
Stood here observing him. Some strange commotion
Is in his brain : he bites his lip, and starts ;
Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground,
Then, lays his finger on his temple ; straight,
Springs out into fast gait ; then, stops again,
Strikes his breast hard ; and anon he casts
His eye against the moon. In most strange postures
We have seen him set himself.

K. Hen. It may well be :
There is a mutiny in's mind. This morning
Papers of state he sent me to peruse,
As I requir'd ; and, b' wot you, what I found
There, on my conscience, put unwittingly ?
Forsooth an inventory, thus importing,—
The several parcels of his plate, his treasure, Rich stuffs, and ornaments of household ; which I find at such proud rate, that it out-speaks
Possession of a subject.

Nor. It's heaven's will :
Some spirit put this paper in the packet,
To bless your eye withal.

K. Hen. If we did think
His contemplation were above the earth,
And fix'd on spiritual object, he should still Dwell in his musings ; but, I am afraid,
His thinkings are below the moon, not worth
His serious considering.

[ He takes his seat, and whispers LOVELL, who goes to WOLSEY. ]

Wol. Heaven forgive me ! <sup>5</sup> [ Amazedly. ]
Ever God bless your highness.

K. Hen. Good my lord,
You are full of heavenly stuff, and bear the inventory
Of your best graces in your mind, the which
You were now running o'er : you have scarce time
To steal from spiritual <sup>6</sup> labor a brief span,
To keep your earthly audit. Sure, in that I deem you an ill husband, and am glad
To have you therein my companion.

Wol. Sir,
For holy offices I have a time ; a time
To think upon the part of business, which I bear i' the state ; and nature does require
Her times of preservation, which, perforce,
I her frail son, amongst my brethren mortal,
Must give my tendance to.

K. Hen. You have said well.
Wol. And ever may your highness yoke together,
As I will lend you cause, my doing well
With my well saying !

K. Hen. 'Tis well said again ;
And 'tis a kind of good deed to say well :
And yet words are no deeds. My father lov'd you ;
He said he did, and with his deed did crown
His word upon you : since I had my office,

* "Be memoriz'd," i. e., be made memorable.

<sup>b</sup> Know.

I have kept you next my heart; have not alone
Employ'd you where high profits might come home,
But pur'd my present havings, to bestow
My bounties upon you.

Vol. What should this mean? <sup>1</sup> [Aside.

Sur. The Lord increase this business! <sup>2</sup> [Behind.

K. Hen. Have I not made you
The prime man of the state? I pray you, tell me,
If what I now pronounce you have found true;
And, if you may confess it, say withal,
If you are bound to us, or no. What say you?

Vol. My sovereign, I confess, your royal graces, Shower'd on me daily, have been more than could
My studied purposes requite; which went Beyond all man's endeavors: my endeavors
Have ever come too short of my desires,
Yet <sup>3</sup> fill'd with my abilities. Mine own ends
Have been mine so, that evermore they pointed To the good of your most sacred person, and
The profit of the state. For your great graces
Heap'd upon me, poor undeserver, I
Can nothing render but allegiant thanks;
My prayers to heaven for you; my loyalty,
Which ever has, and ever shall be growing,
Till death, that winter, kill it.

K. Hen. Fairly answer'd:

A loyal and obedient subject is Therein illustrated. The honor of it
Does pay the act of it; as, i' the contrary,
The foulness is the punishment. I presume,
That as my hand has open'd bounty to you,
My heart dropp'd love, my power rain'd honor, more
On you than any; so your hand, and heart,
Your brain, and every function of your power,
Should, notwithstanding that your bond of duty,
As 'twere in love's particular, be more
To me, your friend, than any.

Vol. I do profess,
That for your highness' good I ever labor'd
More than mine own: that am, have, and will be—(Though all the world should crack their duty to you,
And throw it from their soul; though perils did Abound, as thick as thought could make them, and Appear in forms more horrid) yet my duty,
As doth a rock against the chiding flood,
Should the approach of this wild river break,
And stand unshaken yours.

K. Hen. 'Tis nobly spoken.
Take notice, lords, he has a loyal breast,
For you have seen him open't.—Read o'er this:

[Giving him Papers.

And, after, this; and then to breakfast, with What appetite you have.

[*Exit King, frowning upon Cardinal WOLSEY:
the Nobles throng after him, smiling, and whispering.*

Vol. What should this mean?
What sudden anger's this? how I have reap'd it?
He parted frowning from me, as if ruin
Leap'd from his eyes: so looks the chafed lion
Upon the daring huntsman that has gall'd him,
Then, makes him nothing. I must read this paper;
I fear, the story of his anger.—'Tis so:

<sup>4</sup> [Opens the Paper, and reads, trembling.
This paper has undone me!—'Tis th' account
Of all that world of wealth I have drawn together
For mine own ends; indeed, to gain the popedom,
And fee my friends in Rome. O negligence!
Fit for a fool to fall by. What cross devil
Made me put this main secret in the packet
I sent the king? Is there no way to cure this?
No new device to beat this from his brains?
I know 'twill stir him strongly; yet I know

A way, if it take right, in spite of fortune
Will bring me off again. What's this?—"To the Pope?"

The letter, as I live, with all the business
I writ to his holiness. Nay then, farewell!
I have touch'd the highest point of all my greatness,
And from that full meridian of my glory,
I haste now to my setting: I shall fall
Like a bright exhalation in the evening,
And no man see me more. <sup>5</sup> [Sinks in a chair.

Re-enter the Dukes of NORFOLK and SUFFOLK, the Earl of SURREY, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. Hear the king's pleasure, cardinal; who commands you

To render up the great seal presently
Into our hands, and to confine yourself
To Asher-house, my lord of Winchester's,
Till you hear farther from his highness.

Vol. Stay: <sup>6</sup> [Rising.
Where's your commission, lords? words cannot carry Authority so weighty.

Sur. Who dare cross them,
Bearing the king's will from his mouth expressly?

Vol. Till I find more than will, or words, to do it,
(I mean your malice) know, officious lords,
I dare, and must deny it. Now, I feel
Of what coarse metal ye are moulded,—envy;
How eagerly ye follow my disgraces,
As if it fed ye; and how sleek and wanton
Ye appear in every thing may bring my ruin!
Follow your envious courses, men of malice;
You have Christian warrant for them, and, no doubt,
In time will find their fit rewards. That seal,
You ask with such a violence, the king,
(Mine, and your master) with his own hand gave me;
Bade me enjoy it, with the place and honors,
During my life, and to confirm his goodness,
Tied it by letters patent. Now, who'll take it?

Sur. The king that gave it.

Vol. It must be himself, then.

Sur. Thou art a proud traitor, priest.

Vol. Proud lord, thou liest:
Within these forty hours Surrey durst better
Have burnt that tongue, than said so.

Sur. Thy ambition,
Thou scarlet sin, robb'd this bewailing land
Of noble Buckingham, my father-in-law:
The heads of all thy brother cardinals,
(With thee, and all thy best parts bound together)
Weigh'd not a hair of his. Plague of your policy!
You sent me deputy for Ireland,
Far from his succor, from the king, from all
That might have mercy on the fault thou gav'st him;
Whilst your great goodness, out of holy pity,
Absolv'd him with an axe.

Vol. This, and all else
This talking lord can lay upon my credit,
I answer, is most false. The duke by law Found his deserts: how innocent I was
From any private malice in his end,
His noble jury and foul cause can witness.
If I lov'd many words, lord, I should tell you,
You have as little honesty as honor,
That in the way of loyalty and truth
Toward the king, my ever royal master,
Dare <sup>a</sup> mate a sounder man than Surrey can be,
And all that love his follies.

Sur. By my soul,
Your long coat, priest, protects you: thou should'st feel

My sword i' the life-blood of thee else.—My lords,

<sup>a</sup> "Mate," i. e., equal.

Can ye endure to hear this arrogance?
And from this fellow? If we live thus tamely,
To be thus <sup>a</sup>jaded by a piece of scarlet,
Farewell nobility; let his grace go forward,
And dare us with his <sup>b</sup>cap, like larks.

Vol. All goodness
Is poison to thy stomach.

Sur. Yes, that goodness
Of gleaming all the land's wealth into one,
Into your own hands, cardinal, by extortion;
The goodness of your intercepted packets, [ness,
You writ to the pope, against the king; your good-
Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious.—
My lord of Norfolk,—as you are truly noble,
As you respect the common good, the state
Of our despis'd nobility, our issues,
(Who, if he live, will scarce be gentlemen)
Produce the grand sum of his sins, the articles
Collected from his life.—I'll startle you
Worse than the sacring <sup>c</sup>bell, when the brown wench
Lay kissing in your arms, lord cardinal. [man,
Vol. How much, methinks, I could despise this
But that I am bound in charity against it.

Nor. Those articles, my lord, are in the king's hand;
But, thus much, they are foul ones.

Vol. So much fairer,
And spotless, shall mine innocence arise,
When the king knows my truth.

Sur. This cannot save you.
I thank my memory, I yet remember
Some of these articles; and out they shall.
Now, if you can blush, and cry guilty, cardinal,
You'll show a little honesty.

Vol. Speak on, sir;
I dare your worst objections: if I blush,
It is to see a nobleman want manners.

Sur. I had rather want those, than my head.
Have at you.—

First, that without the king's assent or knowledge,
You wrought to be a legate; by which power
You main'd the jurisdiction of all bishops.

Nor. Then, that in all you writ to Rome, or else
To foreign princes, Ego et Rex meus
Was still inscrib'd; in which you brought the king
To be your servant.

Sur. Then, that without the knowledge
Either of king or council, when you went
Ambassador to the emperor, you made bold
To carry into Flanders the great seal.

Sur. Item, you sent a large commission
To Gregory de Cassalis, to conclude,
Without the king's will or the state's allowance,
A league between his highness and Ferrara.

Sur. That out of mere ambition you have caus'd
Your holy hat to be stamp'd on the king's coin.

Sur. Then, that you have sent innumerable substance,

(By what means got I leave to your own conscience)
To furnish Rome, and to prepare the ways
You have for dignities; to the <sup>d</sup>mere undoing
Of all the kingdom. Many more there are;
Which, since they are of you, and odious,
I will not taint my mouth with.

Cham. O my lord!

Press not a falling man too far; 'tis virtue.
His faults lie open to the laws: let them,
Not you, correct him. My heart weeps to see him
So little of his great self.

Sur. I forgive him.

Suf. Lord cardinal, the king's farther pleasure is,— Because all those things, you have done of late
By your power <sup>e</sup>legateine within this kingdom,
Fall into the compass of a <sup>f</sup>præmunire,—
That therefore such a writ be sued against you;
To forfeit all your goods, lands, tenements,
Chattels, and whatsoever, and to be
Out of the king's protection.—This is my charge.
Nor. And so we'll leave you to your meditations,
How to live better. For your stubborn answer,
About the giving back the great seal to us, [you.
The king shall know it, and, no doubt, shall thank
So, fare you well, my little good lord cardinal.

[Exeunt all but WOLSEY.]

Vol. So, farewell to the little good you bear me.
Farewell, a long farewell, to all my greatness!
This is the state of man: to-day he puts forth
The tender leaves of hopes, to-morrow blossoms,
And bears his blushing honors thick upon him:
The third day comes a frost, a killing frost;
And,—when he thinks, good easy man, full surely
His greatness is a ripening,—nips his root,
And then he falls, as I do. I have ventur'd,
Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,
This many summers in a sea of glory,
But far beyond my depth: my high blown pride
At length broke under me; and now has left me,
Weary and old with service, to the mercy
Of a rude stream, that must for ever hide me.
Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye:
I feel my heart new open'd. O! how wretched
Is that poor man, that hangs on princes' favors.
There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to,
That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,
More pangs and fears than wars or women have;
And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,
Never to hope again.—

Enter CROMWELL, amazedly.

Why, how now, Cromwell!

Crom. I have no power to speak, sir.

Vol. What! amaz'd

At my misfortunes? can thy spirit wonder,
A great man should decline? Nay, an you weep,
I am fallen indeed.

Crom. How does your grace?

Vol. Why, well:

Never so truly happy, my good Cromwell.
I know myself now; and I feel within me
A peace above all earthly dignities,
A still and quiet conscience. The king has cur'd me,
I humbly thank his grace, and from these shoulders,
These ruin'd pillars, out of pity, taken
A load would sink a navy—too much honor.
O! 'tis a burden, Cromwell, 'tis a burden,
Too heavy for a man that hopes for heaven.

Crom. I am glad your grace has made that right use of it.

Vol. I hope I have: I am able now, methinks, (Out of a fortitude of soul I feel)
To endure more miseries, and greater far,
Than my weak-hearted enemies dare offer.
What news abroad?

Crom. The heaviest, and the worst,
Is your displeasure with the king.

Vol. God bless him!

Crom. The next is, that sir Thomas More is chosen
Lord Chancellor in your place.

Vol. That's somewhat sudden;

* <sup>a</sup> "Jaded," i. e., degraded; overborne.—<sup>b</sup> A cardinal's cap or hat is scarlet: the method of darning or catching larks is by small mirrors on scarlet cloth.—<sup>c</sup> The "sacring bell" is a little bell rung to give notice of the elevation of the Host.
—<sup>d</sup> Absolute.

<sup>e</sup> "Legatine," i. e., as the pope's legate.—<sup>f</sup> A præmunire was a writ incurring a penalty.—<sup>g</sup> "Their ruin," i. e., their displeasure, producing the ruin of him on whom it lights.

But he's a learned man. May he continue
Long in his highness' favor, and do justice
For truth's sake, and his conscience; that his bones,
When he has run his course and sleeps in blessings,
May have a tomb of orphans' tears wept on 'em!
What more?

Crom. That Cranmer is returned with welcome,
Install'd lord Archbishop of Canterbury.

Vol. That's news indeed!

Crom. Last, that the lady Anne,
Whom the king hath in secrecy long married,
This day was view'd in 'open, as his queen,
Going to chapel; and the voice is now
Only about her coronation. [O Cromwell!

Vol. There was the weight that pulled me down.
The king has gone beyond me: all my glories
In that one woman I have lost for ever.
No sun shall ever usher forth mine honors,
Or gild again the noble troops that waited
Upon my smiles. Go, get thee from me, Cromwell;
I am a poor fallen man, unworthy now
To be thy lord and master. Seek the king;
(That sun, I pray, may never set!) I have told him
What, and how true thou art: he will advance thee.
Some little memory of me will stir him,
(I know his noble nature) not to let
Thy hopeful service perish too. Good Cromwell, Neglect him not; make use now, and provide
For thine own future safety.

Crom. O, my lord!
Must I then leave you? must I needs forego
So good, so noble, and so true a master?
Bear witness all that have not hearts of iron,
With what a sorrow Cromwell leaves his lord.—
The king shall have my service; but my prayers,
For ever and for ever, shall be yours.

Vol. Cromwell, I did not think to shed a tear
In all my miseries; but thou hast forc'd me,
Out of thy honest truth, to play the woman.
Let's dry our eyes; and thus far hear me, Cromwell:
And,—when I am forgotten, as I shall be,
And sleep in dull cold marble, where no mention
Of me more must be heard of,—say, I taught thee,
Say, Wolsey, that once trod the ways of glory,
And sounded all the depths and shoals of honor,
Found thee a way, out of his wreck, to rise in;
A sure and safe one, though thy master miss'd it.
Mark but my fall, and that that ruin'd me.
Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away ambition:
By that sin fell the angels; how can man, then,
The image of his maker, hope to win by't?
Love thyself last: cherish those hearts that hate thee;
Corruption wins not more than honesty.
Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace,
To silence envious tongues: be just, and fear not.
Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,
Thy God's, and truth's: then, if thou fall'st, O Cromwell,
Thou fall'st a blessed martyr. [well!
Serve the king; and,—Pr'ythee, lead me in:
There take an inventory of all I have,
To the last penny; 'tis the king's: my robe,
And my integrity to heaven, is all
I dare now call mine own. O Cromwell, Cromwell!
Had I but serv'd my God with half the zeal
I serv'd my king, he would not in mine age
Have left me naked to mine enemies.

Crom. Good sir, have patience.

Vol. So I have.—Farewell
The hopes of court: my hopes in heaven do dwell.
[Exit.

* The chancellor is the guardian of orphans.—b "In open," i. e., openly.—c "Make use," i. e., make interest.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Street in Westminster.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting.

1 Gent. You're well met once again.

2 Gent. So are you. [behold

1 Gent. You come to take your stand here, and
The lady Anne pass from her coronation?

2 Gent. 'Tis all my business. At our last encounter,
The duke of Buckingham came from his trial.

1 Gent. 'Tis very true; but that time offer'd sorrow,
This, general joy.

2 Gent. 'Tis well: the citizens,
I am sure, have shown at full their royal minds;
As, let 'em have their rights, they are ever forward
In celebration of this day with shows,
Pageants, and sights of honor.

1 Gent. Never greater;
Nor, I'll assure you, better taken, sir.

2 Gent. May I be bold to ask what that contains,
That paper in your hand?

1 Gent. Yes: 'tis the list
Of those that claim their offices this day,
By custom of the coronation.

The duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims
To be high steward: next, the duke of Norfolk,
He to be earl marshal. You may read the rest.

2 Gent. I thank you, sir; had I not known those customs,

I should have been beholding to your paper.
But, I beseech you, what's become of Katharine,
The princess dowager? how goes her business?

1 Gent. That I can tell you too. The archbishop Of Canterbury, accompanied with other
Learned and reverend fathers of his order,
Held a late court at Dunstable, six miles off
From Amptihill, where the princess lay; to which
She was often cited by them, but appear'd not:
And, to be short, for not appearance, and
The king's late scruple, by the main assent
Of all these learned men she was divorc'd,
And the late marriage made of none effect:
Since which she was removed to Kimbolton,
Where she remains now, sick.

2 Gent. Alas, good lady!—

[Trumpets.
The trumpets sound: stand close, the queen is coming. [Hautboys.

THE ORDER OF THE CORONATION.

A lively flourish of Trumpets.

1. Then, two Judges.
2. Lord Chancellor, with purse and mace before him.
3. Choristers singing. [Music]
4. Mayor of London bearing the mace. Then, Garter in his coat of arms; and on his head he wore a gilt copper crown.
5. Marquess Dorset, bearing a sceptre of gold; on his head a demi-coronet of Gold. With him the Earl of Surrey, bearing the rod of silver with the dove; crowned with an earl's coronet. Collars of SS.
6. Duke of Suffolk, in his robe of estate, his coronet on his head, bearing a long white wand, as high-steward. With him, the Duke of Norfolk, with the rod of marshalship; a coronet on his head. Collars of SS.
7. A canopy borne by four of the <sup>a</sup> Cinque-ports;

under it, the Queen in her robe; in her hair, richly adorned with pearl, crowned. On each side her, the Bishops of London and Winchester.

8. The old Duchess of Norfolk, in a coronal of gold, wrought with flowers, bearing the Queen's train.

9. Certain Ladies or Countesses, with plain circlets of gold without flowers.

2 Gent. A royal train, believe me.—These I know : Who's that, that bears the sceptre ?

1 Gent. Marquess Dorset : And that the earl of Surrey, with the rod.

2 Gent. A bold brave gentleman. That should be The duke of Suffolk.

1 Gent. 'Tis the same ; high-steward.

2 Gent. And that my lord of Norfolk ?

1 Gent. Yes.

2 Gent. Heaven bless thee !

[Looking on the Queen.

Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look'd on.—

Sir, as I have a soul, she is an angel :

Our king has all the Indies in his arms,

And more, and richer, when he strains that lady.

I cannot blame his conscience.

1 Gent. They, that bear The cloth of honor over her, are four barons Of the cinque-ports. [near her.

2 Gent. Those men are happy ; and so are all, are I take it, she that carries up the train

Is that old noble lady, duchess of Norfolk.

1 Gent. It is ; and all the rest are countesses.

2 Gent. Their coronets say so. These are stars, And sometimes falling ones. [indeed ;

1 Gent. No more of that.

[Exit Procession, with a great flourish of Trumpets.

Enter a third Gentleman.

God save you, sir ! Where have you been broiling ?

3 Gent. Among the crowd i' the abbey ; where a finger

Could not be wedg'd in more : I am stifled

With the mere rankness of their joy.

2 Gent. You saw the ceremony ?

3 Gent. That I did.

1 Gent. How was it ?

3 Gent. Well worth the seeing.

2 Gent. Good sir, speak it to us.

3 Gent. As well as I am able. The rich stream, Of lords and ladies, having brought the queen

To a prepar'd place in the choir, fell off

A distance from her ; while her grace sat down

To rest a while, some half an hour or so,

In a rich chair of state, opposing freely

The beauty of her person to the people.

Believe me, sir, she is the goodliest woman

That ever lay by man : which when the people

Had the full view of, such a noise arose

As the shrouds make at sea in a stiff tempest,

As loud, and to as many tunes : hats, cloaks,

(Doublets, I think) flew up ; and had their faces

Been loose, this day they had been lost. Such joy

I never saw before. Great-bellied women,

That had not half a week to go, like <sup>a</sup>rams

In the old time of war, would shake the press,

And make them reel before them. No man living

Could say, " This is my wife," there ; all were woven

So strangely in one piece.

2 Gent. But, what follow'd ?

[paces

3 Gent. At length her grace rose, and with modest Came to the altar ; where she kneel'd, and saint like * Batter-ing-rams.

Cast her fair eyes to heaven, and pray'd devoutly.

Then rose again, and bow'd her to the people :

When by the archbishop of Canterbury

She had all the royal makings of a queen ;

As holy oil, Edward Confessor's crown,

The rod, and bird of peace, and all such emblems

Laid nobly on her : which perform'd, the choir,

With all the choicest music of the kingdom,

Together sung Te Deum. So she parted,

And with the same full state pac'd back again

To York-place, where the feast is held.

1 Gent.

Sir,

You must no more call it York-place, that's past ;

For, since the cardinal fell, that title's lost :

'Tis now the king's, and call'd—Whitehall.

3 Gent.

I know it ;

But 'us so lately alter'd, that the old name

Is fresh about me.

2 Gent.

What two reverend bishops

Were those that went on each side of the queen ?

3 Gent. Stokesley and Gardiner ; the one of Winchester,

Newly preferr'd from the king's secretary ;

The other, London.

2 Gent.

He of Winchester

Is held no great good lover of the archbishop's,

The virtuous Crammer.

3 Gent.

All the land knows that,

However, yet there's no great breach : when it comes, Crammer will find a friend will not shrink from him.

2 Gent.

Who may that be, I pray you ?

3 Gent.

Thomas Cromwell ;

A man in much esteem with the king, and truly

A worthy friend.—The king has made him

Master o' the jewel-house,

And one, already, of the privy-council.

2 Gent.

He will deserve more.

3 Gent.

Yes, without all doubt.

Come, gentlemen, ye shall go my way, which

Is to the court, and there ye shall be my guests :

Something I can command. As I walk thither,

I'll tell ye more.

Both.

You may command us, sir. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Kimbolton.

Enter KATHARINE, Dowager, sick ; led between GRIFFITH and PATIENCE.

Grif. How does your grace ?

Kath.

O, Griffith ! sick to death :

My legs, like loaden branches, bow to the earth,

Willing to leave their burden. Reach a chair.—

<sup>1</sup> [Sits down.

So,—now, methinks, I feel a little ease.

Didst thou not tell me, Griffith, as thou led'st me,

That the great child of honor, cardinal Wolsey,

Was dead ?

Grif.

Yes, madam ; but, I think, your grace,

Out of the pain you suffer'd, gave no ear to't.

Kath.

Pr'ythee, good Griffith, tell me how he died :

If well, he stepp'd before me, <sup>b</sup> happily,

For my example.

Grif.

Well, the voice goes, madam :

For after the stout earl Northumberland

Arrested him at York, and brought him forward,

As a man sorely tainted, to his answer,

He fell sick suddenly, and grew so ill,

He could not sit his mule.

Kath.

Alas, poor man !

Grif.

At last, with easy <sup>c</sup>roads, he came to

Leicester ;

<sup>b</sup> Happily ; perhaps.—<sup>c</sup> " Roads," i. e., stages ; journeys.

Lodg'd in the abbey, where the reverend abbot,
With all his convent, honorably receiv'd him;
To whom he gave these words,—“O father abbot,
An old man, broken with the storms of state,
Is come to lay his weary bones among ye:
Give him a little earth for charity!”
So went to bed, where eagerly his sickness
Pursu'd him still; and three nights after this,
About the hour of eight, which he himself
Foretold should be his last, full of repentance,
Continual meditations, tears, and sorrows,
He gave his honors to the world again,
His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace.

Kath. So may he rest: his faults lie gently on him!
Yet thus fat, Griffith, give me leave to speak him,
And yet with charity.—He was a man
Of an unbounded <sup>a</sup>stomach, ever ranking
Himself with princes; one, that by <sup>b</sup>suggestion
Tied all the kingdom: simony was fair play;
His own opinion was his law: i' the presence
He would say untruths, and be ever double,
Both in his words and meaning. He was never,
But where he meant to ruin, pitiful:
His promises were, as he then was, mighty;
But his performance, as he is now, nothing.
Of his own body he was <sup>c</sup>ill, and gave
The clergy ill example.

Grif. Noble madam,
Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues
We write in water. May it please your highness
To hear me speak his good now?

Kath. Yes, good Griffith;
I were malicious else.

Grif. This cardinal,
Though from an humble stock, undoubtedly
Was fashion'd to much honor from his cradle.
He was a scholar, and a ripe, and good one;
Exceeding wise, fair spoken, and persuading:
Lofty and sour to them that lov'd him not;
But, to those men that sought him, sweet as summer:
And though he were unsatisfied in getting,
(Which was a sin) yet in bestowing, madam,
He was most princely. Ever witness for him
Those twins of learning, that he rais'd in you,
Ipswich, and Oxford! one of which fell with him.
Unwilling to outlive the good <sup>1</sup>man did it;
The other, though unfinish'd, yet so famous,
So excellent in art, and still so rising,
That Christendom shall ever speak his virtue.
His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him;
For then, and not till then, he felt himself,
And found the blessedness of being little:
And, to add greater honors to his age
Than man could give him, he died fearing God.

Kath. After my death I wish no other herald,
No other speaker of my living actions,
To keep mine honor from corruption,
But such an honest chronicler as Griffith.
Whom I most hated living, thou hast made me,
With thy religious truth and modesty,
Now in his ashes honor. Peace be with him!—
Patience, be near me still; and set me lower:
I have not long to trouble thee.—Good Griffith,
Cause the musicians play me that sad note
I nam'd my knell, whilst I sit meditating
On that celestial harmony I go to.

[Sad and Solemn music.

Grif. She is asleep. Good wench, let's sit down quiet,
For fear we wake her:—softly, gentle Patience.

<sup>a</sup> “Of an unbounded stomach,” i. e., of unbounded pride, or haughtiness.—<sup>b</sup> “Suggestion,” i. e., wicked prompting.—

The Vision. Enter, solemnly tripping one after another, six Personages, clad in white robes, wearing on their heads garlands of bays, and golden vizards on their faces; branches of bays, or palm, in their hands. They first conge unto her, then dance; and, at certain changes, the first two hold a spare garland over her head; at which, the other four make reverend courtesies: then, the two that held the garland deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their changes, and holding the garland over her head. Which done, they deliver the same garland to the last two, who likewise observe the same order: at which, (as it were by inspiration) she makes in her sleep signs of rejoicing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven. And so in their dancing they vanish, carrying the garland with them. The music continues.

Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye? Are ye all gone,
And leave me here in wretchedness behind ye?

Grif. Madam, we are here.

Kath. It is not you I call for.
Saw ye none enter, since I slept?

Grif. None, madam.

Kath. No! Saw you not, even now, a blessed troop Invite me to a banquet; whose bright faces
Cast thousand beams upon me, like the sun?
They promis'd me eternal happiness,
And brought me garlands, Griffith, which I feel
I am not worthy yet to wear: I shall, assuredly.

Grif. I am most joyful, madam, such good dreams
Possess your fancy.

Kath. Bid the music leave,
They are harsh and heavy to me. [Music ceases.

Pat. Do you note,
How much her grace is alter'd on the sudden?
How long her face is drawn? How pale she looks,
And of an earthy <sup>3</sup>coldness? Mark her eyes!

Grif. She is going, wench. Pray, pray.

Pat. Heaven comfort her

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. An't like your grace,—

Kath. You are a saucy fellow:
Deserve we no more reverence?

Grif. You are to blame
Knowing she will not lose her wonted greatness,
To use so rude behavior: go to; kneel.

Mess. I humbly do entreat your highness' pardon;
[Kneeling.

My haste made me unmannerly. There is staying
A gentleman, sent from the king to see you.

Kath. Admit him entrance, Griffith: but this fellow
Let me ne'er see again.

[Exeunt GRIFFITH and Messenger.

Re-enter GRIFFITH, with CAPUCIUS.

If my sight fail not,
You should be lord ambassador from the emperor,
My royal nephew; and your name Capucius.

Cap. Madam, the same, your servant.

Kath. O my lord!
The times, and titles, now are alter'd strangely
With me, since first you knew me. But, I pray you,
What is your pleasure with me?

Cap. Noble lady,
First, mine own service to your grace; the next,
The king's request that I would visit you;
Who grieves much for your weakness, and by me
Sends you his princely commendations,
And heartily entreats you take good comfort.

Kath. O! my good lord, that comfort comes too late:

'Tis like a pardon after execution.

That gentle physic, given in time, had cur'd me ;
But now I am past all comforts here, but prayers.
How does his highness ?

Cap. Madam, in good health.

Kath. So may he ever do ; and ever flourish,
When I shall dwell with worms, and my poor name
Banish'd the kingdom.—Patience, is that letter,
I caus'd you write, yet sent away ?

Pat. No, madam. [Giving it to KATHARINE.]

Kath. Sir, I most humbly pray you to deliver
This to my lord the king.

Cap. Most willing, madam.

Kath. In which I have commended to his goodness
The <sup>a</sup>model of our chaste loves, his young <sup>b</sup>daughter :—

The dew of heaven fall thick in blessings on her !
Beseeching him to give her virtuous breeding.
She is young, and of a noble modest nature,
I hope, she will deserve well ; and a little
To love her for her mother's sake, that lov'd him,
Heaven knows how dearly. My next poor petition
Is, that his noble grace would have some pity
Upon my wretched women, that so long,
Have follow'd both my fortunes faithfully :
Of which there is not one, I dare avow,
(And now I should not lie) but will deserve,
For virtue, and true beauty of the soul,
For honesty, and decent carriage,
A right good husband, let him <sup>c</sup>be a noble ;
And, sure, those men are happy that shall have them.
The last is, for my men :—they are the poorest,
But poverty could never draw them from me ;—
That they may have their wages duly paid them,
And something over to remember me by :
If heaven had pleas'd to have given me longer life,
And able means, we had not parted thus.
These are the whole contents :—and, good my lord,
By that you love the dearest in this world,
As you wish Christian peace to souls departed,
Stand these poor people's friend, and urge the king
To do me this last right.

Cap. By heaven, I will,
Or let me lose the fashion of a man !

Kath. I thank you, honest lord. Remember me
In all humility unto his highness :
Say, his long trouble now is passing
Out of this world : tell him, in death I bless'd him,
For so I will.—Mine eyes grow dim.—Farewell,
My lord.—Griffith, farewell.—Nay, Patience,
You must not leave me yet : I must to bed ;
Call in more women.—When I am dead, good wench,
Let me be us'd with honor : strew me over
With maiden flowers, that all the world may know
I was a chaste wife to my grave. Embalm me ;
Then lay me forth : although unqueen'd, yet like
A queen, and daughter to a king, inter me.
I can no more.— [Exeunt, leading KATHARINE.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Gallery in the Palace.

Enter GARDINER, Bishop of Winchester, a Page with a Torch before him ; met by Sir THOMAS LOVELL.

Gar. It's one o'clock, boy, is't not ?

Boy. It hath struck.

Gar. These should be hours for necessities,

Not for delights ; times to repair our nature
With comforting repose, and not for us [Thomas :
To waste these times.—Good hour of night, sir
Whither so late ?

Lov. Came you from the king, my lord ?

Gar. I did, sir Thomas ; and left him at <sup>d</sup>primero
With the duke of Suffolk.

Lov. I must to him too,
Before he go to bed. I'll take my leave. [matter ?]

Gar. Not yet, sir Thomas Lovell. What's the
It seems you are in haste : an if there be
No great offence belongs to't, give your friend
Some <sup>e</sup>touch of your late business. Affairs that walk
(As, they say, spirits do) at midnight have
In them a wilder nature, than the business
That seeks despatch by day.

Lov. My lord, I love you,
And durst commend a secret to your ear [bor ;
Much weightier than this work. The queen's in la-
They say, in great extremity, and fear'd,
She'll with the labor end.

Gar. The fruit she goes with
I pray for heartily ; but it may find
Good time, and live : to for the stock, sir Thomas,
I wish it grubb'd up now.

Lov. Methinks, I could Cry thee amen ; and yet my conscience says
She's a good creature, and, sweet lady, does
Deserve our better wishes.

Gar. But, sir, sir,—
Hear me, sir Thomas : y'are a gentleman
Of mine own way ; I know you wise, religious ;
And, let me tell you, it will ne'er be well,
'Twill not, sir Thomas Lovell, take't of me,
Till Cranmer, Cromwell, her two hands, and she,
Sleep in their graves.

Lov. Now, sir, you speak of two
The most remark'd i' the kingdom. As for Cromwell,
Beside that of the jewel-house, he's made master
O' the rolls, and the king's secretary ; further, sir,
Stands in the gap and trade of more preferments,
With which the time will load him. Th' archbishop
Is the king's hand, and tongue ; and who dare speak
One syllable against him ?

Gar. Yes, yes, sir Thomas,
There are that dare ; and I myself have ventur'd
To speak my mind of him : and, indeed, this day,
Sir, (I may tell it you) I think, I have <sup>b</sup>Incens'd the lords o' the counsel, that he is
(For so I know he is, they know he is)
A most arch heretic, a pestilence
That doth infect the land : with which they moved
Have broken with the king ; who hath so far Given ear to our complaint, (of his great grace
And princely care, foreseeing those fell mischiefs
Our reasons laid before him) hath commanded,
To-morrow morning to the council-board
He be <sup>c</sup>convented. He's a rank weed, sir Thomas,
And we must root him out. From your affairs
I hinder you too long : good night, sir Thomas.

Lov. Many good nights, my lord. I rest your servant. [Exeunt GARDINER and Page.]

As LOVELL is going out, enter the King, and the Duke of Suffolk.

K. Hen. Charles, I will play no more to-night :
My mind's not on't ; you are too hard for me.

Suf. Sir, I did never win of you before.

K. Hen. But little, Charles ;

<sup>a</sup> "Model," i. e., image.—<sup>b</sup> "His young daughter," afterwards Queen Mary.—<sup>c</sup> "Let him be," i. e., even if he should be.

<sup>d</sup> "Primero" : a game at cards.—<sup>e</sup> "Touch," i. e., hint.—
<sup>f</sup> "Of mine own way," i. e., of my own opinion in religion.
—<sup>g</sup> "Trade," i. e., course ; way.—<sup>h</sup> "Incens'd," i. e., informed ; instructed.—<sup>i</sup> "Broken," i. e., broken silence.—
<sup>j</sup> "Convented," i. e., convened ; summoned.

Nor shall not when my fancy's on my play.—

Now, Lovell, from the queen what is the news?

Lov. I could not personally deliver to her
What you commanded me, but by her woman
I sent your message; who return'd her thanks
In the greatest humbleness, and desir'd your highness
Most heartily to pray for her.

K. Hen. What say'st thou? ha!
To pray for her? what! is she crying out? [made]

Lov. So said her woman; and that her sufferance
Almost each pang a death.

K. Hen. Alas, good lady!

Suf. God safely quit her of her burden, and
With gentle travail, to the gladdening of
Your highness with an heir!

K. Hen. 'Tis midnight, Charles:
Pr'ythee, to bed; and in thy prayers remember
Th' estate of my poor queen. Leave me alone,
For I must think of that, which company
Would not be friendly to.

Suf. I wish your highness
A quiet night; and my good mistress will Remember in my prayers.

K. Hen. Charles, good night.— [Exit SUFFOLK.]

Enter Sir ANTHONY DENNY.

Well, sir, what follows?

Den. Sir, I have brought my lord the archbishop,
As you commanded me.

K. Hen. Ha! Canterbury?

Den. Ay, my good lord.

K. Hen. 'Tis true: where is he, Denny?

Den. He attends your highness' pleasure.

K. Hen. Bring him to us. [Exit DENNY.]

Lov. This is about that which the Bishop spake:
[Aside.]

I am <sup>a</sup>happily come hither.

Re-enter DENNY with CRANMER.

K. Hen. Avoid the gallery.

[LOVELL seems to stay.]

Ha!—I have said.—Be gone,
What!— [Exeunt LOVELL and DENNY.]

Cran. I am fearful.—Wherefore frowns he thus?

<sup>1</sup>[Aside.]

'Tis his aspect of terror: all's not well. [know]

K. Hen. How now, my lord! You do desire to Wherefore I sent for you.

Cran. It is my duty <sup>2</sup>[Kneeling.]
T' attend your highness' pleasure.

K. Hen. Pray you, arise,

My good and gracious lord of Canterbury.
Come, you and I must walk a turn together; [hand.]
I have news to tell you. Come, come, give me your Ah, my good lord, I grieve at what I speak,
And am right sorry to repeat what follows.

I have, and most unwillingly, of late
Heard many grievous, I do say, my lord,
Grievous complaints of you; which being consider'd
Have mov'd us and our council, that you shall
This morning come before us: where, I know,
You cannot with such freedom purge yourself,
But that, till farther trial in those charges
Which will require your answer, you must take
Your patience to you, and be well contented
To make your house our Tower: <sup>3</sup>to a brother of us,
It fits me thus proceed, or else no witness
Would come against you.

Cran. I humbly thank your highness,
And am right glad to catch this good occasion

<sup>4</sup>[Kneeling.]

Most thoroughly to be winnow'd, where my chaff
And corn shall fly asunder; for, I know,

* Opportunely; luckily.

There's none stands under more calumnious tongues
Than I myself, poor man.

K. Hen.

Stand up, good Canterbury:
Thy truth, and thy integrity, is rooted
In us, thy friend. Give me thy hand, stand up:

<sup>5</sup>[Rising.]

Pr'ythee, let's walk. Now, by my holy dame,
What manner of man are you? My lord, I look'd
What would have given me your petition, that I should have ta'en some pains to bring together
Yourself and your accusers; and to have heard you,
Without <sup>b</sup>indurance, further.

Cran.

Most dread liege,
The <sup>c</sup>ground I stand on, is my truth, and honesty:
If they shall fail, I, with mine enemies,
Will triumph o'er my person, which I <sup>e</sup>weigh not,
Being of those virtues vacant. I fear nothing
What can be said against me.

K. Hen.

Know you not [world?]
How your state stands i' the world, with the whole
Your enemies are many, and not small; their practices
Must bear the same proportion: and not <sup>d</sup>ever
The justice and the truth o' the question carries
The due o' the verdict with it. At what ease
Might corrupt minds procure knaves, as corrupt,
To swear against you: such things have been done:
You are potently oppos'd, and with a malice
Of as great size. <sup>e</sup>Ween you of better luck,
I mean in perjurd witness, than your Master,
Whose minister you are, whiles here he liv'd Upon this naughty earth? Go to, go to:
You take a precipice for no leap of danger,
And woo your own destruction.

Cran.

God, and your majesty,
Protect mine innocence, or I fall into
The trap is laid for me!

K. Hen.

Be of good cheer;
They shall no more prevail, than we give way to.
Keep comfort to you; and this morning, see
You do appear before them. If they shall chance,
In charging you with matters, to commit you,
The best persuasions to the contrary
Fail not to use, and with what vehemency
The occasion shall instruct you: if entreaties
Will render you no remedy, this ring
Deliver them, and your appeal to us [weeps:]
There make before them.—Look, the good man
He's honest, on mine honor. God's blest mother!
I swear, he is true-hearted; and a soul
None better in my kingdom.—Get you gone,
And do as I have bid you. [Exit CRANMER.] He
His language in his tears. [has strangled]

Enter an old Lady, <sup>7</sup>in haste.

Gent. [Within.] Come back; what mean you?

Lady. I'll not come back; the tidings that I bring
Will make my boldness manners.—Now, good angels
Fly o'er thy royal head, and shade thy person
Under their blessed wings!

K. Hen.

Now, by thy looks
I guess thy message. Is the queen deliver'd?
Say, ay; and of a boy.

Lady.

Ay, ay, my liege;
And of a lovely boy: the God of heaven
Both now and ever bless her!—'tis a girl,
Promises boys hereafter. Sir, your queen
Desires your visitation, and to be Acquainted with this stranger: 'tis as like you
As cherry is to cherry.

K. Hen.

Lovell!

<sup>b</sup> "Indurance," i. e., imprisonment.—<sup>c</sup> "Weigh not," i. e., value not.—<sup>d</sup> "Not ever," i. e., not always.—<sup>e</sup> "Ween," i. e., think; imagine.

Re-enter LOVELL.

Lov. Sir.

K. Hen. Give her an hundred marks. I'll to the queen. [Exit King.]

Lady. An hundred marks! By this light, I'll ha' An ordinary groom is for such payment: [more.] I will have more, or scold it out of him. Said I for this the girl was like to him? I will have more, or else unsay't; and now, While it is hot, I'll put it to the issue. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Lobby before the Council-Chamber.

Enter CRANMER; Servants, Door-Keeper, &c. attending.

Cran. I hope, I am not too late; and yet the gentleman,
That was sent to me from the council, pray'd me
To make great haste. All fast! what means this?
Who waits there?—Sure, you know me? [Hoa!]
D. Keep. Yes, my lord;
But yet I cannot help you.

Cran. Why? [for.]
D. Keep. Your grace must wait, till you be call'd

Enter Doctor BUTTS.

Cran. So.
Butts. This is a piece of malice. I am glad,
[Aside.]

I came this way so happily: the king
Shall understand it presently. [Exit BUTTS.]

Cran. 'Tis Butts,<sup>2</sup>
The king's physician. As he past along,
How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me.
Pray heaven, he sound not my disgrace! For certain,
This is of purpose laid by some that hate me,
(God turn their hearts! I never sought their malice)
To quench mine honor: they would shame to make me
Wait else at door, a fellow counsellor
'Mong boys, grooms, and lackeys. But their pleasures
Must be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience.

Enter the King and BUTTS, at a window above.

Butts. I'll show your grace the strangest sight,—

K. Hen. What's that, Butts?

Butts. I think, your highness saw this many a day.

K. Hen. Body o' me, where is it?

Butts. There, my lord:
The high promotion of his grace of Canterbury;
Who holds his state at door, 'mongst pursuivants,
Pages, and footboys.

K. Hen. Ha! 'Tis he, indeed.
Is this the honor they do one another?

'Tis well, there's one above 'em yet. I had thought,
They had <sup>a</sup>parted so much honesty among 'em,
(At least good manners) as not thus to suffer
A man of his place, and so near our favor,
To dance attendance on their lordships' pleasures,
And at the door too, like a post with packets.
By holy Mary, Butts, there's knavery:

Let 'em alone, and draw the curtain close;
We shall hear more anon.— [Exeunt.]

THE COUNCIL-CHAMBER.

in order on each side. CROMWELL at the lower end, as secretary.

Chan. Speak to the business, master secretary:
Why are we met in council?

Crom. Please your honors,

The chief cause concerns his grace of Canterbury.

Gar. Has he had knowledge of it?

Crom. Yes.

Nor. Who waits there?

D. Keep. Without, my noble lords?

Gar. Yes.

D. Keep. My lord archbishop;
And has done half an hour, to know your pleasures.

Chan. Let him come in.

D. Keep. Your grace may enter now.

[CRANMER approaches the Council-table.]
Chan. My good lord archbishop, I am very sorry
To sit here at this present, and behold

That chair stand empty: but we all are men,
In our own natures frail, and <sup>3</sup>culpable
Of our flesh; few are angels: out of which frailty,
And want of wisdom, you, that best should teach us,
Have misdeemean'd yourself, and not a little,
Toward the king first, then his laws, in filling
The whole realm, by your teaching, and your chaplains,

(For so we are inform'd) with new opinions.

Divers, and dangerous; which are heresies,
And, not reform'd, may prove pernicious.

Gar. Which reformation must be sudden too,
My noble lords; for those that tame wild horses
Pace them not in their hands to make them gentle,
But stop their mouths with stubborn bits, and spur
Till they obey the manage. If we suffer, [them,
Out of our easiness and childish pity
To one man's honor, this contagious sickness,
Farewell all physic: and what follows then?
Commotions, uproars, with a general taint
Of the whole state: as, of late days, our neighbors,
The upper Germany, can dearly witness,
Yet freshly pitied in our memories.

Cran. My good lords, hitherto, in all the progress
Both of my life and office, I have labor'd,
And with no little study, that my teaching,
And the strong course of my authority,
Might go one way, and safely; and the end
Was ever, to do well: nor is there living
(I speak it with a single <sup>4</sup>heart, my lords,)
A man, that more detests, more <sup>2</sup>strives against,
Both in his private conscience and his place,
Defacers of the public peace, than I do.
Pray heaven, the king may never find a heart
With less allegiance in it! Men, that make Envy and crooked malice nourishment,
Dare bite the best. I do beseech your lordships,
That in this case of justice, my accusers,
Be what they will, may stand forth face to face,
And freely urge against me.

Suf. Nay, my lord,
That cannot be: you are a counsellor,
And by that virtue no man dare accuse you.

Gar. My lord, because we have business of more moment, [ure,

We will be short with you. 'Tis his highness' pleas-
And our consent, for better trial of you,
From hence you be committed to the Tower:
Where, being but a private man again,
You shall know many dare accuse you boldly,
More than, I fear, you are provided for. [you;

Cran. Ah! my good lord of Winchester, I thank
You are always my good friend: if your will pass,

<sup>a</sup> "Parted," i. e., shared.

<sup>b</sup> "With a single heart," i. e., without duplicity.

I shall both find your lordship judge and juror,
You are so merciful. I see your end;
'Tis my undoing. Love and meekness, lord,
Become a churchman better than ambition:
Win straying souls with modesty again,
Cast none away. That I shall clear myself,
Lay all the weight ye can upon my patience,
I make as little doubt, as you do conscience
In doing daily wrongs. I could say more,
But reverence to your calling makes me modest.

Gar. My lord, my lord, you are a sectary;
That's the plain truth: your painted gloss discovers,
To men that understand you, words and <sup>a</sup> weakness.

Crom. My lord of Winchester, you are a little,
By your good favor, too sharp: men so noble,
However faulty, yet should find respect
For what they have been: 'tis a cruelty,
To load a falling man.

Gar. Good master secretary,
I cry your honor mercy: you may, worst
Of all this table, say so.

Crom. Why, my lord?

Gar. Do not I know you for a favorer
Of this new sect? ye are not sound.

Crom. Not sound?

Gar. Not sound, I say.

Crom. Would you were half so honest;
Men's prayers, then, would seek you, not their fears.

Gar. I shall remember this bold language.

Crom. Do:
Remember your bold life too.

Chan. This is too much:
Forbear, for shame, my lords.

Gar. I have done.

Crom. And I.

Chan. Then thus for you, my lord.—It stands
I take it, by all voices, that forthwith [agreed,

You be convey'd to the Tower a prisoner;

There to remain, till the king's farther pleasure

Be known unto us. Are you all agreed, lords?

All. We are.

Cran. Is there no other way of mercy,
But I must needs to the Tower, my lords?

Gar. What other
Would you expect? You are strangely troublesome.
Let some o' the guard be ready there.

Cran. For me?
Must I go like a traitor thither?

<sup>1</sup> Enter Guard.

Gar. Receive him,
And see him safe i' the Tower.

Cran. Stay, good my lord;

I have a little yet to say.—Look there, my lords:

By virtue of that ring I take my cause

Out of the gripes of cruel men, and give it

To a most noble judge, the king my master.

Chan. This is the king's ring.

Suf. 'Tis no counterfeit.

Suf. 'Tis the right ring, by heaven! I told ye all,

When we first put this dangerous stone a rolling,

'Twould fall upon ourselves.

Nor. Do you think, my lords,

The king will suffer but the little finger

Of this man to be vex'd?

Chan. 'Tis now too certain,

How much more is his life in value with him.

Would I were fairly out on't.

Crom. My mind gave me,

In seeking tales, and informations,
Against this man, whose honesty the devil

And his disciples only envy at,

Ye blew the fire that burns ye. Now, have at ye.

Enter the King, frowning on them: he takes his seat.

Gar. Dread sovereign, how much are we bound to heaven

In daily thanks, that gave us such a prince;

Not only good and wise, but most religious:

One that in all obedience makes the church

The chief aim of his honor; and, to strengthen

That holy duty, out of dear respect,

His royal self in judgment comes to hear

The cause betwixt her and this great offender.

K. Hen. You were ever good at sudden commendations,

Bishop of Winchester; but know, I come not

To hear such flattery now, and in my presence:

They are too thin and base to hide offences.

To me you cannot reach. You play the spaniel,

And think with wagging of your tongue to win me;

But, whatsoe'er thou tak'st me for, I'm sure,

Thou hast a cruel nature, and a bloody.—

Good man, [To CRANMER.] sit down. Now, let me see the proudest, <sup>2</sup> [CRANMER sits.

He that dares most, but wag his finger at thee:

By all that's holy, he had better starve,

Than but once think this place becomes thee not.

Suf. May it please your grace,—

K. Hen. No, sir, it does not please me.

I had thought, I had had men of some understanding

And wisdom of my council; but I find none.

Was it discretion, lords, to let this man,

This good man, (few of you deserve that title)

This honest man, wait like a lousy footboy

At chamber door? and one as great as you are?

Why, what a shame was this! Did my commission

Bid ye so far forget yourselves? I gave ye

Power, as he was a counsellor to try him,

Not as a groom. There's some of ye, I see.

More out of malice than integrity,

Would try him to the utmost, had ye mean;

Which ye shall never have <sup>3</sup> the while I live.

Chan. Thus far,

My most dread sovereign, may it like your grace

To let my tongue excuse all. What was purpos'd

Concerning his imprisonment, was rather

(If there be faith in men) meant for his trial,

And fair purgation to the world, than malice,

I'm sure, in me.

K. Hen. Well, well, my lords, respect him:

Take him, and use him well; he's worthy of it.

I will say thus much for him: if a prince

May be beholding to a subject, I

Am, for his love and service, so to him.

Make me no more ado, but all embrace him:

<sup>4</sup> [They embrace him: GARDINER last.

Be friends, for shame, my lords!—My lord of Canterbury,

I have a suit which you must not deny me;

That is, a fair young maid that yet wants baptism,

You must be godfather, and answer for her.

Cran. The greatest monarch now alive may glory

In such an honor: how may I deserve it,

That am a poor and humble subject to you?

K. Hen. Come, come, my lord, you'd spare your <sup>b</sup> spoons.

You shall have two noble partners with you;

The old duchess of Norfolk, and lady marquess

Will these please you? [Dorset:

Once more, my lord of Winchester, I charge you.

Embrace, and love this man.

<sup>a</sup> "Words and weakness," i. e., empty talk and false reasoning.

<sup>b</sup> It was an ancient custom for sponsors to present silver or silver-gilt spoons to their god-children.

Gar. With a true heart,
And 'brother's love, I do it. <sup>2</sup>[Embrace again.]
Cran. And let heaven
Witness, how dear I hold this confirmation.
K. Hen. Good man! those joyful tears show thy
The common voice, I see, is verified [true heart.
Of thee, which says thus, "Do my lord of Canterbury
A shrewd turn, and he is your friend for ever."—
Come, lords, we trifle time away; I long
To have this young one made a Christian.
As I have made ye one, lords, one remain;
So I grow stronger, you more honor gain. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Palace Yard.

Noise and Tumult within. Enter Porter and his Man.

Port. You'll leave your noise anon, ye rascals: do you take the court for <sup>a</sup>Paris-garden? ye rude slaves, leave your <sup>b</sup>gaping.

[Within.] Good master porter, I belong to the larder.

Port. Belong to the gallows, and be hanged, you rogue! Is this a place to roar in?—Fetch me a dozen crab-tree staves, and strong ones: these are but switches to them.—I'll scratch your heads: you must be seeing christenings? Do you look for ale and cakes here, you rude rascals? <sup>3</sup>[Tumult within.]

Man. Pray, sir, be patient: 'tis as much impossible,
Unless we sweep 'em from the door with cannons,
To scatter 'em, as 'tis to make 'em sleep
On May-day morning; which will never be.
We may as well push against Paul's, as stir 'em.

Port. How got they in, and be hang'd?

Man. Alas, I know not: how gets the tide in?
As much as one sound cudgel of four foot
(You see the poor remainder) could distribute,
I made no spare, sir.

Port. You did nothing, sir.

Man. I am not Samson, nor sir Guy, nor <sup>c</sup>Colbrand,
To mow 'em down before me; but if I spared any,
That had a head to hit, either young or old,
He or she, cuckold or cuckold-maker,
Let me ne'er hope to see a <sup>d</sup>queen again;
And that I would not for a <sup>e</sup>crown, God save her.

[Within.] Do you hear, master Porter?

Port. I shall be with you presently, good master puppy.—Keep the door close, sirrah.

Man. What would you have me do?

Port. What should you do, but knock 'em down by the dozens? Is this Moorfields to muster in? or have we some strange Indian with the great tool come to court, the women so besiege us? <sup>6</sup>[Noise.] Bless me, what a fry of fornication is at door! On my Christian conscience, this one christening will beget a thousand: here will be father, godfather, and all together.

Man. The spoons will be the bigger, sir. There is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a brazier by his face, for, o' my conscience, twenty of the dog-days now reign in's nose: all that stand about him are under the line; they need no other penance. That fire-drake did I hit three times on the head, and three times was his nose discharg'd against me: he stands there, like a mortar-piece, to blow us. There was a haberdasher's wife of small wit near him, that railed upon me till her pink'd <sup>d</sup>porringer fell off her head, for kindling such a combustion in the state. I miss'd the <sup>e</sup>meteor once, and hit that woman, who cried out, clubs! when I might see from far some forty truncheoners draw to her succor, which were the hope o' the Strand, where she was quartered. They fell on; I made good my place; at length they came to the broom-staff with me: I defied 'em still; when suddenly a file of boys behind 'em, loose <sup>f</sup>shot, delivered such a slower of pebbles, that I was fain to draw mine honor in, and let 'em win the <sup>g</sup>work. The devil was amongst 'em, I think, surely. <sup>7</sup>[Shouts.]

Port. These are the youths that thunder at a playhouse, and fight for bitten apples; that no audience, but the Tribulation of Tower-hill, or the limbs of Limehouse, their dear brothers, are able to endure.
I have some of 'em in <sup>h</sup>Limbo Patrum, and there they are like to dance these three days, besides the running banquet of two <sup>i</sup>headles, that is to come.
<sup>8</sup>[Tumult and Shouts.]

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Mercy o' me, what a multitude are here!
They grow still, too; from all parts they are coming,
As if we kept a fair! <sup>9</sup>Where are these porters,
These lazy knaves?—Ye have made a fine hand, fel-
There's a trim rabble let in. Are all these [lows:
Your faithful friends o' the suburbs? We shall have Great store of room, no doubt, left for the ladies,
When they pass back from the christening.

Port. An't please your honor
We are but men; and what so many may do,
Not being torn a pieces, we have done:
An army cannot rule 'em.

Cham. As I live,
If the king blame me for't, I'll lay ye all
By the heels, and suddenly; and on your heads
Clap round fines for neglect. Y're lazy knaves;
And here ye lie baiting of <sup>k</sup>bombards, when <sup>10</sup>[Trumpets.]

Ye should do service. Hark! the trumpets sound;
They're come already from the christening.

Go, break among the press, and find a way out
To let the troop pass fairly, or I'll find
A Marshalsea shall hold ye play these two months.

Port. Make way there for the princess.

Man. You great fellow, <sup>11</sup>[Tumult and confusion.]
Stand close up, or I'll make your head ache.

Port. You i' the camblet, get up o' the rail;
I'll peck you o'er the <sup>12</sup>pole else. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Palace at Greenwich.

Enter Trumpets, sounding; then two Aldermen, Lord Mayor, Garter, CRANMER, Duke of NORFOLK, with his Marshal's staff, Duke of SUFFOLK, two Noblemen bearing great standing <sup>m</sup>bowls for the christening gifts: then, four Noblemen bearing a canopy, under which the Duchess of NORFOLK, godmother, bearing the child richly habited in a mantle, &c. Train borne by a Lady: then follows the Marchioness of DORSET, the other godmother, and Ladies. The Troop pass once about the stage, and Garter speaks.

Gart. Heaven,
From thy endless goodness, send prosperous life,
Long, and ever happy, to the high and mighty
Princess of England, Elizabeth!

<sup>a</sup> "Paris-garden," i. e., the bear-garden on the Bank-side.
<sup>b</sup> Roaring; shouting.—<sup>c</sup> "Nor Sir Guy, nor Colbrand,"
i. e., neither Guy of Warwick, nor Colbrand the Danish giant.—<sup>d</sup> "Pink'd porringer," i. e., pink'd cap, which looked as if moulded on a porringer.

<sup>e</sup> "The meteor," i. e., the brazier.—<sup>f</sup> "Loose shot," i. e., loose or random shooters.—<sup>g</sup> "The work," i. e., the fortress.
—<sup>h</sup> "In Limbo Patrum," i. e., in confinement.—<sup>i</sup> The "banquet of two headles," is a desert of whipping.—<sup>k</sup> Bombards were black leather vessels to hold beer.—<sup>l</sup> "Peck," i. e., pitch.—<sup>m</sup> Standing bowls were bowls elevated on pedestals.

Flourish. Enter King, and Train.

Cran. And to your royal grace, and the good queen, [Kneeling.

My noble partners, and myself, thus pray:—
All comfort, joy, in this most gracious lady,
Heaven ever laid up to make parents happy,
May hourly fall upon ye!

K. Hen. Thank you, good lord archbishop.
What is her name?

Cran. Elizabeth.

K. Hen. Stand up, lord.—<sup>2</sup> [CRAN. rises.
With this kiss take my blessing: God protect thee!
Into whose hand I give thy life. <sup>3</sup> [Kissing the child.

Cran. Amen. [gal.

K. Hen. My noble gossips, ye have been too prodigal
I thank ye heartily: so shall this lady,
When she has so much English.

Cran. Let me speak, sir,
For Heaven now bids me; and the words I utter
Let none think flattery, for they'll find them truth.
This royal infant,—heaven still move about her!—
Though in her cradle, yet now promises
Upon this land a thousand thousand blessings,
Which time shall bring to ripeness. She shall be (But few now living can behold that goodness)
A pattern to all princes living with her,
And all that shall succeed: Sheba was never
More covetous of wisdom, and fair virtue,
Than this pure soul shall be: all princely graces,
That mould up such a mighty piece as this is,
With all the virtues that attend the good,
Shall still be doubled on her: truth shall nurse her;
Holy and heavenly thoughts still counsel her: [her:
She shall be lov'd, and fear'd: her own shall bless
Her foes shake like a field of beaten corn, [her.
And hang their heads with sorrow: good grows with
In her days every man shall eat in safety
Under his own vine what he plants, and sing
The merry songs of peace to all his neighbors.
God shall be truly known; and those about her
From her shall read the perfect ways of honor,
And by those claim their greatness, not by blood.
Nor shall this peace sleep with her: but as when
The bird of wonder dies, the maiden phoenix,
Her ashes new create another heir,
As great in admiration as herself;
So shall she leave her blessedness to one, [ness)
(When heaven shall call her from this cloud of dark-
Who, from the sacred ashes of her honor,
Shall star-like rise, as great in fame as she was,

And so stand fix'd. Peace, plenty, love, truth, terror,
That were the servants to this chosen infant,
Shall then be his, and like a vine grow to him:
Wherever the bright sun of heaven shall shine,
His honor and the greatness of his name
Shall be, and make new nations: he shall flourish,
And, like a mountain cedar, reach his branches
To all the plains about him. Our children's children Shall see this, and bless heaven.

K. Hen. Thou speakest wonders.

Cran. She shall be, to the happiness of England,
An aged princess; many days shall see her,
And yet no day without a deed to crown it.
Would I had known no more! but she must die:
She must; the saints must have her: yet a virgin,
A most unspotted lily shall she pass
To the ground, and all the world shall mourn her.

K. Hen. O, lord archbishop!
Thou hast made me now a man: never, before
This happy child, did I get any thing.
This oracle of comfort has so pleased me,
That when I am in heaven I shall desire
To see what this child does, and praise my Maker.—
I thank ye all.—To you, my good lord mayor,
And you, good brethren, I am much beholding:
I have receiv'd much honor by your presence,
And ye shall find me thankful.—Lead the way, lords:—
Ye must all see the queen, and she must thank ye;
She will be sick else. This day, no man think
He has business at his house, for all shall stay:
This little one shall make it holiday. [Exeunt.

EPILOGUE.

'Tis ten to one, this play can never please
All that are here. Some come to take their ease,
And sleep an act or two; but those, we fear,
We have frighted with our trumpets; so, 'tis clear,
They'll say, 'tis naught: others, to hear the city
Abus'd extremely, and to cry,—“that's witty,”
Which we have not done neither: that, I fear,
All the expected good we're like to hear
For this play, at this time, is only in
The merciful construction of good women;
For such a one we show'd 'em. If they smile,
And say, 'twill do, I know, within a while
All the best men are ours; for 'tis ill hap,
If they hold, when their ladies bid 'em clap.

THE PROLOGUE (in Armor.)

In Troy, there lies the scene. From isles of Greece
The princes <sup>a</sup>orgulous, their high blood chaf'd,
Have to the port of Athens sent their ships,
Fraught with the ministers and instruments
Of cruel war: sixty and nine, that wore
Their crownets regal, from th' Athenian bay
Put forth toward Phrygia; and their vow is made,
To ransack Troy, within whose strong immures
The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus' queen,
With wanton Paris sleeps; and that's the quarrel.
To Tenedos they come,
And the deep-drawing barks do there disgorge

Their warlike <sup>b</sup>fraughtage: now on Dardan plains
The fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch
Their brave pavilions: Priam's six-gated city,
Dardan, and Tymbria, Ilias, Chetas, Trojan,
And Antenorides, with massy staples
And responsive and fulfilling bolts,
<sup>c</sup>Sperr up the sons of Troy.
Now expectation, tickling skittish spirits
On one and other side, Trojan and Greek,
Sets all on hazard.—And hither am I come
A Prologue arm'd,—but not in confidence
Of author's pen, or actor's voice, but suited
In like conditions as our argument,—
To tell you, fair beholders, that our play

<sup>b</sup> "Fraughtage," i. e., freight.—<sup>c</sup> To sperr is to fasten, shut, or close.

Leaps o'er the <sup>a</sup>vaunt and firstlings of those broils,
Beginning in the middle; starting thence away
To what may be digested in a play.
Like, or find fault; do as your pleasures are;
Now, good or bad, 'tis but the chance of war.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Troy. Before PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter TROILUS armed, and PANDARUS.

Tro. Call here my <sup>b</sup>varlet; I'll unarm again:
Why should I war without the walls of Troy,
That find such cruel battle here within?
Each Trojan, that is master of his heart,
Let him to field; Troilus, alas! hath none.

Pan. Will this <sup>c</sup>gear ne'er be mended?

Tro. The Greeks are strong, and skilful to their <sup>d</sup>strength,

Fierce to their skill, and to their fierceness valiant;
But I am weaker than a woman's tear,
Tamer than sleep, <sup>e</sup>fonder than ignorance;
Less valiant than the virgin in the night,
And skill-less as unpractis'd infancy.

Pan. Well, I have told you enough of this: for my part, I'll not meddle nor make no farther. He that will have a cake out of the wheat must tarry the grinding.

Tro. Have I not tarried?

Pan. Ay, the grinding; but you must tarry the bolting.

Tro. Have I not tarried?

Pan. Ay, the bolting; but you must tarry the leavening.

Tro. Still have I tarried.

Pan. Ay, to the leavening: but here's yet, in the word hereafter, the kneading, the making of the cake, the heating <sup>1</sup> the oven, and the baking: nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance burn your lips.

Tro. Patience herself, what goddess e'er she be,
Doth lesser <sup>2</sup>bleach at sufferance than I do.

Pan. At Priam's royal table do I sit;
And when fair Cressid comes into my thoughts,—
So, traitor!—when she comes!—When is she thence?

Pan. Well, she looked yesternight fairer than Ever I saw her look, or any woman else.

Tro. I was about to tell thee,—when my heart,
As wedged with a sigh, would <sup>3</sup>rive in twain,
Lest Hector or my father should perceive me,
I have (as when the sun doth light a storm)
Bury'd this sigh in wrinkle of a smile;
But sorrow, that is couch'd in seeming gladness,
Is like that mirth fate turns to sudden sadness.

Pan. An her hair were not somewhat darker than Helen's, (well, go to) there were no more comparison between the women,—but, for my part, she is my kinswoman: I would not, as they term it, praise her,—but I would somebody had heard her talk yesterday, as I did: I will not dispraise your sister Cassandra's wit, but—

Tro. O Pandarus! I tell thee, Pandarus,—
When I do tell thee, there my hopes lie drown'd,
Reply not in how many fathoms deep
They lie indrench'd. I tell thee, I am mad
In Cressid's love: thou answer'st, she is fair;

Pour'st in the open ulcer of my heart
Her eyes, her hair, her cheek, her gait, her voice;
Handlest in thy discourse, O! that her hand,
In whose comparison all whites are ink,
Writing their own reproach: to whose soft seizure
The cygnet's down is harsh, and spirit of sense
Hard as the palm of ploughman! This thou tell'st me,

As true thou tell'st me, when I say—I love her;
But, saying thus, instead of oil and balm,
Thou lay'st in every gash that love hath given me
The knife that made it.

Pan. I speak no more than truth.

Tro. Thou dost not speak so much.

Pan. Faith, I'll not meddle in't. Let her be as she is: if she be fair, 'tis the better for her; an she be not, she has the 'mends in her own hands.

Tro. Good Pandarus. How now, Pandarus!

Pan. I have had my labor for my travail; ill-thought on of her, and ill-thought on of you: gone between and between, but small thanks for my labor.

Tro. What, art thou angry, Pandarus? what,
with me?

Pan. Because she's kin to me, therefore, she's not so fair as Helen: an she were not kin to me, she would be as fair on Friday, as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I? I care not, an she were a black-a-moor; 'tis all one to me.

Tro. Say I, she is not fair?

Pan. I do not care whether you do or no. She's a fool to stay behind her father: let her be to the Greeks; and so I'll tell her the next time I see her.
For my part, I'll meddle nor make no more <sup>4</sup> the matter.

Tro. Pandarus.—

Pan. Not I.

Tro. Sweet Pandarus,—

Pan. Pray you, speak no more to me: I will leave all as I found it, and there an end.

[Exit PANDARUS. An Alarum.]

Tro. Peace, you ungracious clamors! peace, rude sounds!

Fools on both sides! Helen must needs be fair,
When with your blood you daily paint her thus.

I cannot fight upon this argument;

It is too starv'd a subject for my sword.

But Pandarus!—O gods, how do you plague me!

I cannot come to Cressid, but by Pandar;

And he's as tetchy to be woo'd to woo,

As she is stubborn-chaste against all suit.

Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne's love,

What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we?

Her bed is India; there she lies, a pearl:

Between our Ilium, and where she resides,

Let it be call'd the wild and wandering flood;

Ourselves the merchant, and this sailing Pandar,

Our doubtful hope, our convoy, and our bark.

Alarums. Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. How now, prince Troilus! wherefore not afraid? [<sup>5</sup>sorts,

Tro. Because not there: this woman's answer
For womanish it is to be from thence.

What news, Æneas, from the field to-day?

Æne. That Paris is returned home, and hurt.

Tro. By whom, Æneas?

Æne.

Troilus, by Menelaus.

Tro. Let Paris bleed: 'tis but a scar to scorn;
Paris is gor'd with Menelaus' horn. [Alarum.]

Æne. Hark, what good sport is on foot to-day!

Tro. Better at home, if "would I might," were "may."

<sup>b</sup> "Varlet," i. e., servant.—<sup>c</sup> "Gear," i. e., habit.—<sup>d</sup> "To their strength," i. e., in addition to their strength.—

<sup>h</sup> "Sorts," i. e., suits.

But to the sport abroad:—are you bound thither?

Æne. In all swift haste.

Tro. Come; go we, then, together. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Street.

Enter CRESSIDA and ALEXANDER.

Cres. Who were those went by?

Alex. Queen Hecuba, and Helen.

Cres. And whither go they?

Alex. Up to the eastern tower,

Whose height commands as subject all the vale,
To see the battle. Hector, whose patience

Is as a virtue fix'd, to-day was mov'd:

He chid Andromache, and struck his armorer;

And, like as there were husbandry in war,

Before the sun rose he was harness'd light,

And to the field goes he; where every flower

Did, as a prophet, weep what it foresaw

In Hector's wrath.

Cres. What was his course of anger?

Alex. The noise goes, thus: there is among the Greeks

A lord of Trojan blood, nephew to Hector;

They call him, Ajax.

Cres. Good; and what of him?

Alex. They say he is a very man per se.
And stands alone.

Cres. So do all men; unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs.

Alex. This man, lady, hath robbed many beasts of their particular additions: he is as valiant as the lion, churlish as the bear, slow as the elephant;
a man into whom nature hath so crowded humors, that his valor is <sup>d</sup>crushed into folly, his folly sauced with discretion: there is no man hath a virtue that he hath not a glimpse of, nor any man an attain but he carries some stain of it. He is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hair: he hath the joints of every thing; but every thing so out of joint, that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no use; or purblind Argus, all eyes and no sight.

Cres. But how should this man, that makes me smile, make Hector angry?

Alex. They say, he yesterday <sup>c</sup>oped Hector in the battle, and struck him down; the disdain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and waking.

Enter PANDARUS.

Cres. Who comes here?

Alex. Madam, your uncle Pandarus.

Cres. Hector's a gallant man.

Alex. As may be in the world, lady.

Pan. What's that? what's that?

Cres. Good morrow, uncle Pandarus.

Pan. Good morrow, cousin Cressid. What do you talk of?—Good morrow, Alexander.—How do you, cousin? When were you at Ilium?

Cres. This morning, uncle.

Pan. What were you talking of, when I came?
Was Hector armed, and gone, ere ye came to Ilium?
Helen was not up, was she?

Cres. Hector was gone; but Helen was not up.

Pan. E'en so: Hector was stirring early.

Cres. That were we talking of, and of his anger.

Pan. Was he angry?

Cres. So he says, here.

Pan. True, he was so; I know the cause too.
He'll lay about him to-day, I can tell them that;
and there's Troilus will not come far behind him;
let them take heed of Troilus, I can tell them that too.

Cres. What, is he angry too?

Pan. Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two.

Cres. O, Jupiter! there's no comparison.

Pan. What, not between Troilus and Hector?
Do you know a man if you see him?

Cres. Ay; if I ever saw him before, and knew him.

Pan. Well, I say, Troilus is Troilus.

Cres. Then you say as I say; for, I am sure, he is not Hector.

Pan. No, nor Hector is not Troilus, in some degrees.

Cres. 'Tis just to each of them; he is himself.

Pan. Himself? Alas, poor Troilus! I would, he were,—

Cres. So he is.

Pan.—Condition, I had gone bare-foot to India.

Cres. He is not Hector.

Pan. Himself? no, he's not himself.—Would 'a were himself! Well, the gods are above; time must friend, or end. Well, Troilus, well.—I would, my heart were in her body!—No, Hector is not a better man than Troilus.

Cres. Excuse me.

Pan. He is elder.

Cres. Pardon me, pardon me.

Pan. Th' other's not come to't; you shall tell me another tale, when th' other's come to't. Hector shall not have his wit this year.

Cres. He shall not need it, if he have his own.

Pan. Nor his qualities.

Cres. No matter.

Pan. Nor his beauty.

Cres. 'Twould not become him; his own's better.

Pan. You have no judgment, niece. Helen herself swore th' other day, that Troilus, for a brown favor, (for so 'tis, I must confess)—not brown neither—

Cres. No, not brown.

Pan. Faith, to say truth, brown and not brown.

Cres. To say the truth, true and not true.

Pan. She prais'd his complexion above Paris.

Cres. Why, Paris hath color enough.

Pan. So he has.

Cres. Then, Troilus should have too much: if she praised him above, his complexion is higher than his: he having color enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion. I had as lief Helen's golden tongue had commended
Troilus for a copper nose.

Pan. I swear to you, I think Helen loves him better than Paris.

Cres. Then she's a merry Greek, indeed.

Pan. Nay, I am sure she does. She came to him
th' other day into the <sup>c</sup>compassed window; and, you know, he has not past three or four hairs on his chin.

Cres. Indeed, a tapster's arithmetic may soon bring his particulars therein to a total.

Pan. Why, he is very young; and yet will he, within three pound, lift as much as his brother Hector.

Cres. Is he so young a man, and so old a <sup>b</sup>lifter?

Pan. But, to prove to you that Helen loves him;

* "Husbandry," i. e., thrift. — <sup>b</sup> "Per se," i. e., by himself. — "Of their particular additions," i. e., of their titles.
marks of distinction. — <sup>d</sup> "Crushed into," i. e., confuted and mingled with. — <sup>e</sup> "Against the hair" (Fr. à contre poil), i. e., against the grain. — "Coped" i. e. engaged.

<sup>a</sup> A "compassed window" is a circular or bow window. —
<sup>b</sup> "Lifter," i. e., thief.

—she came, and puts me her white hand to his cloven chin,—

Cres. Juno have mercy! How came it cloven?

Pan. Why, you know, 'tis dimpled. I think his smiling becomes him better than any man in all Phrygia.

Cres. O! he smiles valiantly.

Pan. Does he not?

Cres. O! yes, an 'twere a cloud in autumn.

Pan. Why, go to then.—But to prove to you that Helen loves Troilus,—

Cres. Troilus will stand to the proof, if you'll prove it so.

Pan. Troilus? why, he esteems her no more than I esteem an addle egg.

Cres. If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens i' the shell.

Pan. I cannot choose but laugh, to think how she tickled his chin!—indeed, she has a marvellous white hand, I must needs confess.

Cres. Without the rack.

Pan. And she takes upon her to spy a white hair on his chin.

Cres. Alas, poor chin! many a wart is richer.

Pan. But, there was such laughing: queen Hecuba laughed, that her eyes ran o'er.

Cres. With <sup>a</sup> mill-stones.

Pan. And Cassandra laughed.

Cres. But there was more temperate fire under the pot of her eyes: did her eyes run o'er too?

Pan. And Hector laughed.

Cres. At what was all this laughing?

Pan. Marry, at the white hair that Helen spied on Troilus' chin.

Cres. An't had been a green hair I should have laughed too.

Pan. They laughed not so much at the hair, as at his pretty answer.

Cres. What was his answer?

Pan. Quoth she, "Here's but two and fifty hairs on your chin, and one of them is white."

Cres. This is her question.

Pan. That's true; make no question of that. "Two and fifty hairs," quoth he, "and one white: that white hair is my father, and all the rest are his sons." "Jupiter!" quoth she, "which of these hairs is Paris, my husband?" "The forked one," quoth he; "pluck't out, and give it him." But there was such laughing, and Helen so blushed, and Paris so chafed, and all the rest so laughed, that it <sup>b</sup>passed.

Cres. So let it now, for it has been a great while going by.

Pan. Well, cousin, I told you a thing yesterday; think on't.

Cres. So I do.

Pan. I'll be sworn, 'tis true: he will weep you, an 'twere a man born in April.

Cres. And I'll spring up in his tears, an 'twere a nettle against May. [ A retreat sounded. ]

Pan. Hark! they are coming from the field. Shall we stand up here, and see them, as they pass toward Ilium? good niece, do; sweet niece, Cressida.

Cres. At your pleasure.

Pan. Here, here; here's an excellent place: here we may see most bravely. I'll tell you them all by their names, as they pass by, but mark Troilus above the rest.

Cres. Speak not so loud.

Pan. That's Æneas. Is not that a brave man? he's one of the flowers of Troy, I can tell you: but mark Troilus; you shall see anon.

Cres. Who's that?

ANTENOR passes over.

Pan. That's Antenor: he has a shrewd wit, I can tell you; and he's a man good enough: he's one o'the soundest judgment in Troy, whosoever, and a proper man of <sup>2</sup>his person.—When comes Troilus?—I'll show you Troilus anon: if he see me, you shall see him nod at me.

Cres. Will he give you the 'nod'?

Pan. You shall see.

Cres. If he do, the rich shall have more.

HECTOR passes over.

Pan. That's Hector; that, that, look you, that; there's a fellow!—Go thy way, Hector.—There's a brave man, niece.—O brave Hector!—Look how he looks; there's a countenance. Is't not a brave man?

Cres. O! a brave man.

Pan. Is't a not? It does a man's heart good.—Look you what hacks are on his helmet! look you yonder, do you see? look you there. There's no jesting; there's laying on, tak't off who will, as they say; there be hacks?

Cres. Be those with swords?

PARIS passes over.

Pan. Swords? any thing, he cares not; an the devil come to him, it's all one: by god's lid, it does one's heart good.—Yonder comes Paris; yonder comes Paris: look ye yonder, niece: is't not a gallant man too, is't not?—Why, this is brave now.—Who said he came hurt home to-day! he's not hurt: why, this will do Helen's heart good now. Ha! would I could see Troilus now.—You shall see Troilus anon.

Cres. Who's that?

Pan. That's Helenus.—I marvel, where Troilus is. That's Helenus.—I think he went not forth to-day.—That's Helenus.

Cres. Can Helenus fight, uncle?

Pan. Helenus? no:—yes, he'll fight indifferent well.—I marvel, where Troilus is.—Hark! do you not hear the people cry, Troilus?—Helenus is a priest.

Cres. What sneaking fellow comes yonder?

Pan. Where? yonder? that's Deiphobus.—'Tis Troilus! there's a man, niece!—Hem!—Brave Troilus, the prince of chivalry!

Cres. Peace! for shame; peace!

Pan. Mark him; note him.—O brave Troilus!—look well upon him, niece: look you how his sword is bloodied, and his <sup>4</sup>helm more hack'd than Hector's; and how he looks, and how he goes!—O admirable youth! he ne'er saw three and twenty. Go thy way, Troilus, go thy way: had I a sister were a grace, or a daughter a goddess, he should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris?—Paris is dirt to him; and I warrant, Helen, to change, would give an eye to boot.

<sup>3</sup>Soldiers pass over the Stage.

Cres. Here comes more.

Pan. Asses, fools, dolts, chaff and bran, chaff and bran; porridge after meat. I could live and die i'th eyes of Troilus. Ne'er look, ne'er look: the eagles are gone; crows and daws, crows and daws. I had rather be such a man as Troilus, than Agamemnon and all Greece.

Cres. There is among the Greeks Achilles, a better man than Troilus.

Pan. Achilles? a drayman, a porter, a very camel.

Cres. Well, well.

Pan. Well, well?—Why, have you any discretion? have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and such like, the spice and salt that season a man?

Cres. Ay, a minced man: and then to be baked with no <sup>a</sup> date in the pye,—for then the man's date's out.

Pan. You are such a woman! one knows not at what <sup>b</sup> ward you lie.

Cres. Upon my back, to defend my belly; upon my wit, to defend my wiles; upon my secrecy, to defend mine honesty; <sup>1</sup> upon my mask, to defend my beauty; and <sup>2</sup> upon you, to defend all these: and at all these wards I lie, at a thousand watches.

Pan. Say one of your watches.

Cres. Nay, I'll watch you for that; and that's one of the chiefest of them too: if I cannot ward what I would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow, unless it swell past hiding, and then it's past watching.

Pan. You are such another!

Enter TROILUS' Boy.

Boy. Sir, my lord would instantly speak with you.

Pan. Where?

Boy. At your own house; there he unarms him.

Pan. Good boy, tell him I come. [Exit Boy.]
I doubt he be hurt.—Fare ye well, good niece.

Cres. Adieu, uncle.

Pan. I'll be with you, niece, by and by.

Cres. To bring, uncle,—

Pan. Ay, a token from Troilus.

Cres. By the same token, you are a bawd.—

[Exit PANDARUS.]

Words, vows, gifts, tears, and love's full sacrifice,
He offers in another's enterprise;
But more in Troilus thousand fold I see,
Than in the glass of Pandar's praise may be.
Yet hold I off. Women are angels, wooing:
Things won are done, joy's soul lies in the doing:
That <sup>c</sup> she below'd knows nought, that knows not this,—

Men prize the thing ungain'd more than it is:
That she was never yet, that ever knew
Love got so sweet as when desire did sue.
Therefore, this maxim out of love I teach,—
Achieved men <sup>3</sup> still command; ungain'd, beseech:
Then, though my heart's content firm love doth bear,
Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appear. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—The Grecian Camp. Before
AGAMEMNON'S TENT.

Sennet. Enter AGAMEMNON, NESTOR, ULYSSES, MENELAUS, and others.

Agam. Princes,
What grief hath set the jaundice on your cheeks?
The ample proposition, that hope makes
In all designs begun on earth below,
Fails in the promis'd largeness: checks and disasters

Grow in the veins of actions highest rear'd;
As knots, by the conflux of meeting sap,
Infect the sound pine, and divert his grain
Tortive and <sup>d</sup> errant from his course of growth.
Nor, princes, is it matter new to us,
That we come short of our suppose so far,
That after seven years' siege yet Troy walls stand;
<sup>e</sup> Sith every action that hath gone before,
Whereof we have record, trial did draw
Bias and thwart, not answering the aim,
And that unbodied figure of the thought
That gav't surmised shape. Why then, you princes,
Do you with cheeks abash'd behold our <sup>f</sup> wrecks,
And <sup>g</sup> call them shames, which are, indeed, nought
But the protractive trials of great Jove, [else
To find perservative constancy in men?
The fineness of which metal is not found
In fortune's love; for then, the bold and coward,
The wise and fool, the artist and unread,
The hard and soft, seem all <sup>h</sup> affin'd and kin:
But, in the wind and tempest of her frown,
Distinction, with a broad and powerful fan,
Puffing at all, winnows the light away;
And what hath mass, or matter, by itself
Lies rich in virtue, and unmingled.

Nest. With due observance of thy godlike <sup>i</sup> seat,
Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall <sup>j</sup> apply
Thy latest words. In the reproof of chance
Lies the true proof of men. The sea being smooth,
How many shallow bauble boats dare sail
Upon her patient breast, making their way
With those of nobler bulk:
But let the ruffian Boreas once enrage
The gentle Thetis, and anon, behold,
The strong-ribb'd bark through liquid mountains cut,
Bounding between the two moist elements,
Like Perseus' horse: where's then the saucy boat,
Whose weak untimber'd sides but even now
Co-rival'd greatness? either to harbor fled,
Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so
Doth valor's show, and valor's worth, divide
In storms of fortune: for, in her ray and brightness
The herd hath more annoyance by the <sup>k</sup> brize,
Than by the tiger; but when the splitting wind
Makes flexible the knees of knotted oaks,
And flies fled under shade, why then, the thing of courage,
As rous'd with rage, with rage doth sympathize,
And with an accent tun'd in self-same key,
<sup>l</sup> Replies to chiding fortune.

Ulyss. Agamemnon,
Thou great commander, nerve and bone of Greece,
Heart of our numbers, soul and only spirit,
In whom the tempers and the minds of all
Should be shut up, hear what Ulysses speaks.
Besides the applause and approbation
The which,—most mighty for thy place and sway,—
[To AGAMEMNON.]
And thou most reverend for thy stretch'd-out life,—
[To NESTOR.]

I give to both your speeches, which were such,
As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece
Should hold up high in brass; and such again,
As Venerable Nestor, hatch'd in <sup>m</sup> silver,
Should with a bond of air (strong as the axletree
On which heaven rides) knit all the Greekish ears
To his experienc'd tongue,—yet let it please both,—

<sup>e</sup> Since—"Affin'd," i. e., joined by affinity.—<sup>f</sup> "Thy godlike seat," i. e., the throne.—<sup>g</sup> "Apply," i. e., give special attention to.—<sup>h</sup> "The brize," i. e., the gadfly, that stings cattle.—<sup>i</sup> "Hatch'd in silver," i. e., silver-haired; gray-haired.

Thou great,—and wise,—to hear Ulysses speak.

Agam. Speak, prince of Ithaca; and be't of less <sup>a</sup> expect

That matter needless, of importless burden,
 Divide thy lips, than we are confident,
 When rank Thersites opes his mastiff jaws,
 We shall hear music, wit, and oracle.

Ulyss. Troy, yet upon his basis, had been down,
 And the great Hector's sword had lack'd a master,
 But for these instances.

The specialty of <sup>b</sup> rule hath been neglected:
 And look, how many Grecian tents do stand
 Hollow upon this plain, so many hollow factions.

When that the general is not like the hive,
 To whom the foragers shall all repair,
 What honey is expected? Degree being <sup>c</sup> vizarded,
 Th' unworthiest shows as fairly in the mask.

The heavens themselves, the planets, and this <sup>d</sup> centre,
 Observe degree, priority, and place,

<sup>e</sup> Insisture, course, proportion, season, form,
 Office, and custom, in all line of order:

And therefore is the glorious planet, Sol,
 In noble eminence enthron'd and sph'ring
 Amidst the other; whose medicinal eye
 Corrects the ill aspects of planets evil,
 And posts, like the commandment of a king,

'Sans check, to good and bad. But when the planets,
 In evil mixture, to disorder wander,
 What plagues, and what portents! what mutiny!

What raging of the sea, shaking of earth,
 Commotion in the winds, frights, changes, horrors,
 Divert and crack, rend and <sup>f</sup> deracinate

The unity and married calm of states
 Quite from their fixure! O! when degree is shak'd,

Which is the ladder to all high designs,
 The enterprise is sick. How could communities,
 Degrees in schools, and <sup>h</sup> brotherhoods in cities,

Peaceful commerce from <sup>i</sup> dividable shores,
 The primogenitive and due of birth,

Prerogative of age, crowns, sceptres, laurels,
 But by degree stand in authentic place?

Take but degree away, untune that string,
 And, hark, what discord follows! each thing meets
 In <sup>j</sup> mere oppugnancy: the bounded waters

Should lift their bosoms higher than the shores,
 And make a sop of all this solid globe:

Strength should be lord of imbecility,
 And the rude son should strike his father dead:

Force should be right; or, rather, right and wrong,
 (Between whose endless jar justice resides)

Should lose their names, and so should justice too.
 Then every thing includes itself in power,

Power into will, will into appetite;
 And appetite, an universal wolf,

So doubly seconded with will and power,
 Must make perforce an universal prey,

And last eat up himself. Great Agamemnon,
 This chaos, when degree is suffocate,

Follows the choking:
 And this neglection of degree it is,

That by a pace goes backward, with a purpose
 It hath to climb. The general's disdain'd

By him one step below; he, by the next;
 That next, by him beneath: so, every step,

Exemplary by the first pace that is sick
 Of his superior, grows to an envious fever

Of pale and bloodless emulation:
 And 'tis this fever that keeps Troy on foot,

Not her own sinews. To end a tale of length,
 Troy in our weakness stands, not in her strength.

Nest. Most wisely hath Ulysses here discover'd
 The fever whereof all our power is sick.

Agam. The nature of the sickness found, Ulysses,
 What is the remedy?

Ulyss. The great Achilles, whom opinion crowns
 The sinew and the forehead of our host,

Having his ear full of his airy fame,
 Grows dainty of his worth, and in his tent

Lies mocking our designs. With him, Patroclus,
 Upon a lazy bed the livelong day

Breaks scurril jests;
 And with ridiculous and awkward action

(Which, slanderer, he imitation calls,)
 He <sup>n</sup> pageants us: sometime, great Agamemnon,

Thy <sup>o</sup> topless deputation he puts on;
 And like a strutting player,—whose conceit

Lies in his hamstring, and doth think it rich
 To hear the wooden <sup>p</sup> dialogue and sound

'Twixt his stretch'd footing and the <sup>q</sup> scaffolding,—
 Such to-be-pitied and o'er-wrested <sup>r</sup> seeming

He acts thy greatness in: and when he speaks,
 'Tis like a chime a mending; with terms <sup>s</sup> unsquar'd,

Which, from the tongue of roaring Typhon dropp'd,
 Would seem hyperboles. At this fusty stuff

The large Achilles, on his press'd bed lolling,
 From his deep chest laughs out a loud applause;

Cries—"Excellent!"—'tis Agamemnon <sup>t</sup> right.—
 Now play me Nestor;—hem, and stroke thy beard

As he, being <sup>u</sup> drest to some oration."

That's none;—as near as the extremest ends
 Of <sup>v</sup> parallels—as like as Vulcan and his wife:

Yet good Achilles still cries, "Excellent!"
 'Tis Nestor right! Now play him me, Patroclus,

Arming to answer in a night alarm."

And then, forsooth, the faint defects of age
 Must be the scene of mirth; to cough, and spit,

And with a palsy, fumbling on his gorget,
 Shake in and out the rivet:—and at this sport,

Sir Valor dies; cries, "O!—enough, Patroclus,
 Or give me ribs of steel! I shall split all

In pleasure of my spleen." And in this fashion,
 All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,

Severals and generals, <sup>z</sup> all grace extract,
 Achievements, plots, orders, preventions,

Excitements to the field, or speech for truce,
 Success, or loss, what is, or is not, serves

As stuff for these two to make paradoxes.

Nest. And in the imitation of these twain,
 (Whom, as Ulysses says, opinion crowns

With an imperial voice) many are infect.
 Ajax is grown self-will'd; and bears his head

In such a <sup>re</sup>in, in full as proud a place
 As broad Achilles: keeps his tent like him;

Makes factious feasts; rails on our state of war,
 Bold as an oracle; and sets Thersites,

A slave whose gall coils slanders like a mint,
 To match us in comparisons with dirt;

To weaken and discredit our exposure,
 How rank soever <sup>rounded</sup> in with danger.

Ulyss. They tax our policy, and call it cowardice:
 Count wisdom as no member of the war;

Forestill prescience, and esteem no act
 But that of hand: the still and mental parts,—

That do contrive how many hands shall strike,

<sup>1</sup> Army; force.—<sup>m</sup> "Airy fame," i. e., mouth honor.—<sup>n</sup> "He pageants us," i. e., he takes us off.—<sup>o</sup> Supreme; sovereign.—<sup>p</sup> "The wooden dialogue," i. e., the dialogue between the player's foot and the boards.—<sup>q</sup> Stage.—<sup>r</sup> "O'er-wrested seeming," i. e., overstrained show.—<sup>s</sup> Unsuitable; unfitted.—<sup>t</sup> Parallels on a map.—<sup>u</sup> "In such a rein," i. e., as haughtily.—<sup>v</sup> "How rank soever rounded in," i. e., how strongly soever encompassed.

When fitness calls them on, and know, by measure
Of their observant toil, the enemies' weight,—
Why, this hath not a finger's dignity.

They call this bed-work, mappery, closet-war:
So that the ram, that batters down the wall,
For the great swing and rudeness of his poise,
They place before his hand that made the engine,
Or those that with the fineness of their souls
By reason guide his execution.

Nest. Let this be granted, and Achilles' horse
Makes many Thetis' sons. <sup>1</sup>[A Tucket.

Agam. What trumpet? look, Menelaus.

Enter ÆNEAS.

Men. From Troy.

Agam. What would you 'fore our tent?

Æne. Is this

Great Agamemnon's tent, I pray you?

Agam. Even this.

Æne. May one, that is a herald and a prince,
Do a fair message to his kingly ears?

Agam. With surety stronger than Achilles' arm,
'Fore all the Greekish heads, which with one voice
Call Agamemnon head and general.

Æne. Fair leave, and large security. How may
A stranger to those most imperial looks
Know them from eyes of other mortals?

Agam. How?

Æne. Ay; I ask, that I might waken reverence,
And bid the cheek be ready with a blush,
Modest as morning when she coldly eyes
The youthful Phœbus.

Which is that god in office, guiding men?

Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon?

Agam. This Trojan seems us, or the men of Troy
Are ceremonious courtiers.

Æne. Courtiers as free, as debonair, unarm'd,
As bending angels: that's their fame in peace;
But when they would seem soldiers, they have galls,
Good arms, strong joints, true swords; and, Jove's
<sup>a</sup>accord,

Nothing so full of heart. But peace, Æneas!

Peace, Trojan! lay thy finger on thy lips.

The worthiness of praise distains his worth,

If that the prais'd himself bring the praise forth;

<sup>2</sup>What the repining enemy commends, [seends.

That breath fame blows; that praise, soul-pure, tran-

Agam. Sir, you of Troy, call you yourself Æneas?

Æne. Ay, Greek, that is my name.

Agam. What's your affair, I pray you?

Æne. Sir, pardon: 'tis for Agamemnon's ears.

Agam. He hears nought privately that comes from Troy.

Æne. Nor I from Troy<sup>3</sup> came not to whisper him:

I bring a trumpet to awake his ear;

To set his sense on the attentive bent,

And then to speak.

Agam. Speak <sup>b</sup>frankly as the wind.

It is not Agamemnon's sleeping hour:

That thou shalt know, Trojan, he is awake,

He tells thee so himself.

Æne.

Trumpet, blow loud,

Send thy brass voice through all these lazy tents;

And every Greek of mettle, let him know,

What Troy means fairly shall be spoke aloud.

[Trumpet sounds.

We have, great Agamemnon, here in Troy,

A prince call'd Hector, Priam is his father,

Who in this dull and long-contain'd truce

Is rusty grown: he bade me take a trumpet,

And to this purpose speak.—Kings, princes, lords,

If there be one among the fair'st of Greece,

That holds his honor higher than his ease;
That seeks his praise more than he fears his peril;
That knows his valor, and knows not his fear;
That loves his mistress more than in <sup>c</sup>confession
With truant vows to her own lips he loves,
And dare avow her beauty and her worth
In other arms than hers,—to him this challenge.

Hector, in view of Trojans and of Greeks,
Shall make it good, or do his best to do it.

He hath a lady, wiser, fairer, truer,

Than ever Greek did <sup>d</sup>couple in his arms;

And will to-morrow with his trumpet call,

Mid-way between your tents and walls of Troy,

To rouse a Grecian that is true in love.

If any come, Hector shall honor him;

If none, he'll say in Troy, when he retires,

The Grecian dames are sun-burnt, and not worth

The splinter of a lance. Even so much.

Agam. This shall be told our lovers, lord Æneas:

If none of them have soul in such a kind,

We left them all at home; but we are soldiers,

And may that soldier a mere recreant prove,

That means not, hath not, or is not in love!

If then one is, or hath, or means to be,

That one meets Hector; if none else, I am he.

Nest. Tell him of Nestor, one that was a man

When Hector's grandsire suck'd: he is old now;

But if there be not in our Grecian host

One noble man that hath one spark of fire,

To answer for his love, tell him from me,

I'll hide my silver beard in a g'd beaver,

And in my <sup>e</sup>vantbrace put this wither'd brawn;

And, meeting him, will tell him, that my lady

Was fairer than his grandam, and as chaste

As may be in the world. His youth in flood,

I'll prove this truth with my three drops of blood.

Æne. Now heavens forbid such scarcity of youth!

Ulyss. Amen.

Agam. Fair lord Æneas, let me touch your hand;

To your pavilion shall I lead you, sir.

Achilles shall have word of this intent,

So shall each lord of Greece, from tent to tent;

Yourself shall feast with us before you go,

And find the welcome of a noble foe.

[Exeunt all but ULYSSES and NESTOR.

Ulyss. Nestor!

Nest. What says Ulysses?

Ulyss. I have a young conception in my brain;

Be you my time to bring it to some shape.

Nest. What is't?

Ulyss. This 'tis.

Blunt wedges rive hard knots: the seeded pride,

That hath to this maturity <sup>f</sup>grown up

In rank Achilles, must or now be cropp'd,

Or, shedding, breed a nursery of like evil,

To overbulk us all.

Nest. Well, and how?

Ulyss. This challenge that the gallant Hector sends,

However it is spread in general name,

Relates in purpose only to Achilles.

Nest. The purpose is perspicuous even as substance,

Whose grossness little characters sum up:

And in the publication make no <sup>g</sup>strain,

But that Achilles, were his brain as barren

As banks of Libya (though Apollo knows,

'Tis dry enough) will, with great speed of judgment,

Ay, with celerity, find Hector's purpose

Pointing on him.

Ulyss. And wake him to the answer, think you?

Nest. <sup>h</sup>Why, 'tis most meet: whom may you else

Tuan can from Hector bring his honor off, [oppose,

<sup>c</sup> Profession, —<sup>d</sup> "Vantbrace" (Fr. avant bras), i. e., armor for the arm.—<sup>e</sup> "No strain," i. e., no difficulty; no doubt.

If not Achilles? Though't be a sportful combat,
Yet in the trial much opinion dwells;
For here the Trojans taste our dear'st repute
With their fin'st palate: and trust to me, Ulysses,
Our reputation shall be oddly pois'd
In this wild action; for the success,
Although particular, shall give a <sup>3</sup>scantling
Of good or bad unto the general;
And in such indexes (although small <sup>b</sup>pricks
To their subsequent volumes) there is seen
The baby figure of the giant mass
Of things to come at large. It is suppos'd,
He that meets Hector issues from our choice:
And choice, being mutual act of our souls,
Makes merit her election, and doth boil,
As 'twere from forth us all, a man did'll'd
Out of our virtues; who miscarrying,
What heart receives from hence the conquering part,
To steel a strong opinion to themselves?
Which entertain'd, limbs are his instruments,
In no less working, than are swords and bows
Directive by the limbs.

Ulyss. Give pardon to my speech:—
Therefore 'tis meet Achilles meet not Hector.
Let us, like merchants, show our foulest wares,
And think, perchance, they'll sell; if not,
The lustre of the better shall exceed,
By showing the worst first. Do not consent,
That ever Hector and Achilles meet;
For both our honor and our shame, in this,
Are dogg'd with two strange followers. [they?]

Nest. I see them not with my old eyes: what are Ulyss. What glory our Achilles shares from Hector,
Were he not proud, we all should share with him:
But he already is too insolent;
And we were better parch in Afric sun,
Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes,
Should he 'scape Hector fair. If he were foil'd,
Why, then we did our main <sup>c</sup>opinion crush
In taint of our best man. No; make a lottery,
And by device let blockish Ajax draw
The <sup>d</sup>sort to fight with Hector: among ourselves
Give him allowance for the better man,
For that will physic the great Myrmidon,
Who broils in loud applause; and make him fall
His crest, that prouder than blue Iris bends.
If the dull, brainless Ajax comes safe off,
We'll dress him up in voices: if he fail,
Yet go we under our <sup>e</sup>opinion still,
That we have better men. But, hit or miss,
Our project's life this shape of sense assumes,—
Ajax employ'd plucks down Achilles' plumes.

Nest. <sup>2</sup>Now I begin to relish thy advice;
And I will give a taste of it forthwith
To Agamemnon: go we to him straight.
Two curs shall tame each other: pride alone
Must <sup>f</sup>tarre the mastiffs on, as 'twere their bone.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Another Part of the Grecian Camp.

Enter AJAX and THERSITES.

Ajax. Thersites!

Ther. Agamemnon—how if he had boils? full,
all over, generally?

Ajax. Thersites!

Ther. And those boils did run?—Say so,—did not the general run then? were not that a botchy sore?

Ajax. Dog!

Ther. Then would come some matter from him:
I see none now.

Ajax. Thou bitch-wolf's son, canst thou not hear?
Feel then. [Strikes him.]

Ther. The plague of Greece upon thee, thou mongrel beef-witted lord!

Ajax. Speak then, thou <sup>g</sup>vinew'd'st leaven, speak:
I will beat thee into handsomeness.

Ther. I shall sooner rail thee into wit and holiness: but, I think, thy horse will sooner con an oration, than thou learn a prayer without book. Thou canst strike, canst thou? a red <sup>h</sup>murrain o'thy jade's tricks!

Ajax. Toads-stool, learn me the proclamation.

Ther. Dost thou think I have no sense, thou strik'<sup>i</sup>st me thus?

Ajax. The proclamation,—

Ther. Thou art proclaimed a fool, I think.

Ajax. Do not, porcupine, do not: my fingers itch.

Ther. I would, thou didst itch from head to foot, and I had the scratching of thee; I would make thee the loathsomest scab in Greece. When thou art forth in the incursions, thou strik'st as slow as another.

Ajax. I say, the proclamation,—

Ther. Thou grumblest and rail'st every hour on Achilles; and thou art as full of envy at his greatness, as Cerberus is at Proserpina's beauty, ay, that thou bark'st at him.

Ajax. Mistress Thersites!

Ther. Thou should'st strike him.

Ajax. Cobloaf!

Ther. He would <sup>j</sup>pun thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a biscuit.

Ajax. You whoreson cur! [Beating him.]

Ther. Do, do.

Ajax. Thou stool for a witch!

Ther. Ay, do, do; thou sodd'n-witted lord! thou hast no more brain than I have in mine elbows; an <sup>k</sup>assinego may tutor thee: thou scurvy valiant ass!
thou art here but to thrash Trojans; and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit, like a Barbarian slave. If thou <sup>l</sup>use to beat me, I will begin at thy heel, and tell what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels, thou!

Ajax. You dog!

Ther. You scurvy lord!

Ajax. You cur! [Beating him.]

Ther. Mar's idiot! do, rudeness; do, camel; do, do.

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

Achil. Why, how now, Ajax! wherefore do you this. How now, Thersites! what's the matter, man?

Ther. You see him there, do you?

Achil. Ay; what's the matter?

Ther. Nay, look upon him.

Achil. So I do: what's the matter?

Ther. Nay, but regard him well.

Achil. Well, why I do so.

Ther. But yet you look not well upon him; for, whosoever you take him to be, he is Ajax.

Achil. I know that, fool.

Ther. Ay, but that fool knows not himself.

Ajax. Therefore I beat thee.

Ther. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what modicums of wit he utters! his <sup>m</sup>orations have ears thus long. I have

bobbed his brain, more than he has beat my bones : I will buy nine sparrows for a penny, and his pia mater is not worth the ninth part of a sparrow. This lord, Achilles, Ajax, who wears his wit in his belly, and his guts in his head, I'll tell you what I say of him.

Achil. What ?

Ther. I say, this Ajax—

Achil. Nay, good Ajax.

[AJAX offers to strike him.]

Ther. Has not so much wit—

Achil. Nay, I must hold you.

Ther. As will stop the eye of Helen's needle, for whom he comes to fight.

Achil. Peace, fool !

Ther. I would have peace and quietness, but the fool will not : he there ; that he, look you there.

Ajax. O, thou damned cur ! I shall—

Achil. Will you set your wit to a fool's ?

Ther. No, I warrant you ; for a fool's will shame it.

Patr. Good words, Thersites.

Achil. What's the quarrel ?

Ajax. I bade the vile owl go learn me the tenor of the proclamation, and he rails upon me.

Ther. I serve thee not.

Ajax. Well, go to, go to.

Ther. I serve here voluntary.

Achil. Your last service was sufferance, 'twas not voluntary ; no man is beaten voluntary : Ajax was here the voluntary, and you as under an impress.

Ther. Even so ?—a great deal of your wit, too, lies in your sinews, or else there be liars. Hector shall have a great catch, if he knock out either of your brains : 'he were as good crack a fusty nut with no kernel.

Achil. What, with me too, Thersites ?

Ther. There's Ulysses, and old Nestor,—whose wit was mouldy ere your grandsires had nails on their toes,—yoke you like draught oxen, and make you plough up the war.

Achil. What ? what ?

Ther. Yes, good sooth : to Achilles, to Ajax, to—

Ajax. I shall cut out your tongue.

Ther. 'Tis no matter ; I shall speak as much as thou, afterwards.

Patr. No more words, Thersites ; peace !

Ther. I will hold my peace when Achilles' <sup>b</sup> brach bids me, shall I ?

Achil. There's for you, Patroclus.

Ther. I will see you hanged, like clotpoles, ere I come any more to your tents : I will keep where there is wit stirring, and leave the faction of fools.

[Exit.]

Patr. A good riddance.

[our host :—]

Achil. Marry, this, sir, is proclaimed through all That Hector, by the fifth hour of the sun, Will, with a trumpet, 'twixt our tents and Troy, To-morrow morning call some knight to arms, That hath a stomach ; and such a one, that dare Maintain—I know not what : 'tis trash. Farewell.

Ajax. Farewell. Who shall answer him ?

Achil. I know not : it is put to lottery ; otherwise, He knew his man.

Ajax. O ! meaning you.—I will go learn more of it.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Troy. A Room in PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter PRIAM, HECTOR, TROILUS, PARIS and HELENUS.

Pri. After so many hours, lives, speeches spent, Thus once again says Nestor from the Greeks :—

* Voluntarily.—<sup>b</sup> Bitch-hound.

“ Deliver Helen, and all damage else—

As honor, loss of time, travail, expense, Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is consum'd In hot digestion of this cormerant war,— Shall be struck off : ”—Hector, what say you to't ?

Hect. Though no man lesser fears the Greeks than I,

As far as toucheth my particular,

Yet, dread Priam,

There is no lady of more softer bowels,

More spungy to suck in the sense of fear,

More ready to cry out—“ Who knows what follows ? ”

Than Hector is. The wound of peace is surety,

Surety secure ; but modest doubt is call'd

The beacon of the wise, the tent that searches

To the bottom of the worst. Let Helen go :

Since the first sword was drawn about this question,

Every tithe soul, 'mongst many thousand <sup>c</sup> dismes,

Hath been as dear as Helen ; I mean, of ours :

If we have lost so many tenths of ours,

To guard a thing not ours, nor worth to us,

Had it our name, the value of one ten,

What merit's in that reason which denies

The yielding of her up ?

Tro.

Fie, fie ! my brother

Weigh you the worth and honor of a king,

So great as our dread father, in a scale

Of common ounces ? will you with counters sum

The past-proportion of his infinite ?

And buckle in a waist most fathomless,

With spans and inches so diminutive

As fears and reasons ? fie, for godly shame !

Hcl. No marvel, though you bite so sharp at reasons,

You are so empty of them. Should not our father

Bear the great sway of his affairs with reasons,

Because your speech hath none, that tells him so ?

Tro. You are for dreams and slumbers, brother priest :

[reasons :]

You put your gloves with reason. Here are your

You know, an enemy intends you harm,

You know, a sword employ'd is perilous,

And reason flies the object of all harm.

Who marvels, then, when Helenus beholds

A Grecian and his sword, if he do set

The very wings of reason to his heels,

And fly like chidden Mercury from Jove,

Or like a star dis-orb'd ?—Nay, if we talk of reason,

Let's shut our gates, and sleep : manhood and honor

Should have hare hearts, would they but fat their thoughts

With this cram'd reason : reason and <sup>d</sup> respect

Make livers pale, and lustihood deject.

Hect. Brother, she is not worth what she doth cost The holding.

Tro. What is aught, but as 'tis valued ?

Hect. But value dwells not in particular will ;

It holds his estimate and dignity,

As well wherein 'tis precious of itself,

As in the prizer. 'Tis mad idolatry,

To make the service greater than the god ;

And the will dotes, that is inclinable

To what infectiously itself affects,

Without some image of th' affected merit.

Tro. I take to-day a wife, and my election

Is led on in the <sup>e</sup>conduct of my will ;

My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,

Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous shores

Of will and judgment. How may I avoid,

Although my will distaste what it elected,

The wife I chose ? there can be no evasion

To 'blench from this, and to stand firm by honor.

<sup>c</sup> Tens.—<sup>d</sup> Caution.—<sup>e</sup> “ In the conduct,” i. e., under the guidance.—Shrink ; fly off.

We turn not back the silks upon the merchant,
When we have soil'd them; nor the remainder viands
We do not throw in unrespective <sup>a</sup> sieve,
Because we now are full. It was thought meet,
Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks:
Your breath of full consent bellied his sails;
The seas and winds (old wranglers) took a truce,
And did him service: he touch'd the ports desir'd;
And for an old <sup>b</sup> aunt, whom the Greeks held captive,
He brought a Grecian queen, whose youth and freshness

Wrinkles Apollo's, and makes pale the morning.
Why keep we her? the Grecians keep our aunt.
Is she worth keeping? why, she is a pearl,
Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand ships,
And turn'd crown'd kings to merchants.
If you'll avouch 'twas wisdom Paris went,
As you must need, for you all cry'd—"Go, go;"
If you'll confess, he brought home noble prize,
As you must needs, for you all clapp'd your hands,
And cry'd—"Inestimable!" why do you now
The issue of your proper wisdoms rate,
And do a deed that fortune never did,
Beggard the estimation which you priz'd
Richer than sea and land? O, theft most base,
That we have stolen what we do fear to keep!
But, thieves, unworthy of a thing so stolen,
That in their country did them that disgrace,
We fear to warrant in our native place!

Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans, cry!

Tro. What noise? what shriek is this?

Pri. 'Tis our mad sister: I do know her voice.

Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans!

Hect. It is Cassandra.

Enter CASSANDRA, raving.

Cas. Cry, Trojans, cry! lend me ten thousand eyes,
And I will fill them with prophetic tears.

Hect. Peace, sister, peace!

Cas. Virgins and boys, mid-age and wrinkled <sup>1</sup> eld,
Soft infancy, that nothing canst but cry,
Add to my clamors! let us pay betimes
A moiety of that mass of mean to come.
Cry, Trojans, cry! practise your eyes with tears:
Troy must not be, nor goodly Ilium stand;
Our fire-brand brother, Paris, burns us all.
Cry, Trojans, cry! a Helen, and a woe!
Cry, cry! Troy burns, or else let Helen go. [Exit.]

Hect. Now, youthful Troilus, do not these high
Of divination in our sister work [strains]
Some touches of remorse? or is your blood
So madly hot, that no discourse of reason,
Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause,
Can qualify the same?

Tro. Why, brother Hector,

We may net think the justness of each act
Such and no other than event doth form it;
Nor once deject the courage of our minds,
Because Cassandra's mad: her brain-sick raptures
Cannot <sup>c</sup> distaste the goodness of a quarrel,
Which hath our several honors all engag'd
To make it <sup>d</sup> gracious. For my private part,
I am no more touch'd than all Priam's sons;
And Jove forbid, there should be done amongst us
Such things as might offend the weakest spleen
To fight for, and maintain.

Par. Else might the world <sup>e</sup> convince of levity,
As well my undertakings, as your counsels;
But, I attest the gods, your full <sup>f</sup> consent

Gave wings to my <sup>g</sup> propension, and cut off
All fears attending on so dire a project:
For what, alas! can these my single arms?
What <sup>h</sup> propugnation is in one man's valor,
To stand the push and enmity of those
This quarrel would excite? Yet, I protest,
Were I alone to <sup>2</sup> poise the difficulties,
And had as ample power as I have will,
Paris should ne'er retract what he hath done,
Nor faint in the pursuit.

Pri.

Paris, you speak

Like one besotted on your sweet delights:
You have the honey still, but these the gall.
So to be valiant is no praise at all.

Par. Sir, I propose not merely to myself
The pleasures such a beauty brings with it,
But I would have the soil of her fair rape
Wip'd off in honorable keeping her.
What treason were it to the ransack'd queen,
Disgrace to your great worths, and shame to me,
Now to deliver her possession up,
On terms of base compulsion? Can it be,
That so degenerate a <sup>3</sup> strain as this,
Should once set footing in your generous bosoms?
There's not the meanest spirit on our party,
Without a heart to dare, or sword to draw,
When Helen is defend'd; nor none so noble,
Whose life were ill bestow'd, or death unfam'd,
Where Helen is the subject: then, I say,
We'll may we fight for her, whom, we know well,
The world's large spaces cannot parallel.

Hect. Paris, and Troilus, you have both said well;
And on the cause and question now in hand
Have <sup>k</sup> glaz'd,—but superficially; not much
Unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought
Unfit to hear moral philosophy.
The reasons you allege do more conduce
To the hot passion of distemper'd blood,
Than to make up a free determination
'Twixt right and wrong; for pleasure, and revenge,
Have ears more deaf than adders to the voice
Of any true decision. Nature craves,
All dues be render'd to their owners: now,
What nearer debt in all humanity
Than wife is to the husband? if this law
Of nature be corrupted through affection,
And that great minds, <sup>l</sup> of partial indulgence
To their benumbed wills, resist the same,
There is a law in each well-order'd nation,
To curb those raging appetites that are
Most disobedient and refractory.

If Helen, then, be wife to Sparta's king,
As it is known she is, these moral laws
Of nature, and of nation, speak aloud
To have her back return'd: thus to persist
In doing wrong extenuates not wrong,
But makes it much more heavy. Hector's opinion
Is this, in way of truth: yet, nevertheless,
My spritely brethren, I <sup>m</sup> propend to you
In resolution to keep Helen still;
For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependence
Upon our joint and several dignities.

Tro. Why, there you touch'd the life of our design.
Were it not glory that we more affected,
Than the performance of our leaving spleens,
I would not wish a drop of Trojan blood
Spent more in her defence. But, worthy Hector,
She is a theme of honor and renown;
A spur to valiant and magnanimous deeds;
Whose present courage may beat down our foes,

<sup>g</sup> Inclination. — <sup>h</sup> Defence. — <sup>i</sup> Disposition. — <sup>k</sup> Commented. — <sup>l</sup> "Of," i. e., through. — <sup>m</sup> Incline.

And fame in time to come canonize us:
For, I presume, brave Hector would not lose
So rich advantage of a promis'd glory,
As smiles upon the forehead of this action,
For the wide world's revenue.

Hect. I am yours,
You valiant offspring of great Priamus.—
I have a <sup>a</sup>roisting challenge sent amongst
The dull and factious nobles of the Greeks,
Will strike amazement to their drowsy spirits.
I was advertis'd, their great general slept,
Whilst <sup>b</sup>emulation in the army crept:
This, I presume, will wake him. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Grecian Camp. Before
ACHILLES' Tent.

Enter THERSITES.

Ther. How now, Thersites! what! lost in the labyrinth of thy fury? Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus? he beats me, and I rail at him: O worthy satisfaction! would, it were otherwise; that I could beat him, whilst he railed at me. 'Scot, I'll learn to conjure and raise devils, but I'll see some issue of my spiteful execrations. Then, there's Achilles,—a rare engineer. If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves. <sup>1</sup>[Kneels.] O, thou great thunder-darter of Olympus! forget that thou art Jove the king of gods; and, Mercury, lose all the serpentine craft of thy <sup>c</sup>Caduceus, if ye take not that little, little, less-than-little wit from them that they have; which short-armed ignorance itself knows is so abundant scarce, it will not in circumvention deliver a fly from a spider, without drawing their massy irons and cutting the web.
After this, the vengeance on the whole camp! or, rather the Neapolitan bone-ache; for that, me-think, is the curse dependent on those that war for a placket. <sup>2</sup>[Rises.] I have said my prayers, and devil, envy, say Amen. What, ho! my lord Achilles!

Enter PATROCLUS.

Patr. Who's there? Thersites? Good Thersites, come in and rail.

Ther. If I could have remembered a gilt counterfeit, thou wouldest not have slipped out of my contemplation; but it is no matter: thyself upon thyself! The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance, be thine in great revenue! heaven bless thee from a tutor, and discipline come not near thee! Let thy <sup>d</sup>blood be thy direction till thy death! then, if she, that lays thee out, says thou art a fair corse, I'll be sworn and sworn upon't, she never shrouded any but <sup>e</sup>lazars. Amen. Where's Achilles?

Patr. What! art thou devout? wast thou in prayer?

Ther. Ay; the heavens hear me!

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Who's there?

Patr. Thersites, my lord.

Achil. Where, where!—Art thou come? Why, my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not served thyself in to my table so many meals? Come;
what's Agamemnon?

Ther. Thy commander, Achilles. Then, tell me, Patroclus, what's Achilles?

Patr. Thy lord, Thersites. Then, tell me, I pray thee, what's thyself?

Ther. Thy knower, Patroclus. Then tell me,
Patroclus, what art thou?

Patr. Thou <sup>3</sup>must tell, that knowest.

Achil. O! tell, tell.

Ther. I'll decline the whole question. Agamem-non commands Achilles; Achilles is my lord; I am Patroclus' knower; and Patroclus is a fool.

Patr. You rascal!

Ther. Peace, fool! I have not done.

Achil. He is a privileged man.—Proceed, Ther-sites.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool; Achilles is a fool; Thersites is a fool; and, as aforesaid, Patroclus is a fool.

Achil. Derive this: come.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command
Achilles; Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon; Thersites is a fool to serve such a fool; and Patroclus is a fool positive.

Patr. Why am I a fool?

Ther. Make that demand of <sup>4</sup>thy Creator.—It suffices me, thou art. Look you, who comes here?

Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, DIOMEDES, and AJAX.

Achil. Patroclus, I'll speak with nobody.—Come in with me, Thersites. [Exit.]

Ther. Here is such patchery, such juggling, and such knavery! all the argument is a cuckold, and a whore; a good quarrel, to draw <sup>f</sup>emulous factions, and bleed to death upon. Now, the dry <sup>g</sup>serpigo on the subject, and war and lechery confound all!

[Exit.]

Agam. Where is Achilles?

Patr. Within his tent; but ill-dispos'd, my lord.

Agam. Let it be known to him that we are here.

<sup>5</sup>We sent our messengers; and we lay by

Our <sup>h</sup>appertainments visiting of him:

Let him be told so, lest, perchance, he think

We dare not move the question of our place,

Or know not what we are.

Patr. I shall say so to him. [Exit.]

Ulyss. We saw him at the opening of his tent:
He is not sick.

Ajax. Yes, lion-sick, sick of proud heart: you may call it melancholy, if you will favor the man; but, by my head, 'tis pride: but why! why! let him show us a cause.—A word, my lord.

[Taking AGAMEMNON aside.]

Nest. What moves Ajax thus to bay at him?

Ulyss. Achilles hath inveigled his fool from him.

Nest. Who? Thersites?

Ulyss. He.

Nest. Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have lost his argument.

Ulyss. No; you see, he is his argument, that has his argument, Achilles.

Nest. All the better; their faction is more our wish, than their faction: but it was a strong composure, a fool could disunite.

Ulyss. The amity that wisdom knits not, folly may easily untie. Here comes Patroclus.

Nest. No Achilles with him.

<sup>6</sup>Re-enter PATROCLUS.

Ulyss. The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy: his legs are legs for necessity, not for flexure.

Patr. Achilles bids me say, he is much sorry,
If any thing more than your sport and pleasure
Did move your greatness, and this noble <sup>i</sup>state,

<sup>a</sup> Blustering.—<sup>b</sup> "Emulation," i. e., envious rivalry; fac-tious contention.—<sup>c</sup> "Caduceus," i. e., the wand of Mercury, which is wreathed with serpents.—<sup>d</sup> "Thy blood," i. e., thy passions; thy natural propensities.—<sup>e</sup> Leprous persons.

<sup>f</sup> Envious; contending.—<sup>g</sup> Tetter; scab.—<sup>h</sup> Appendages of rank or dignity.—<sup>i</sup> "This noble state," i. e., this stately train of attending nobles.

To call upon him: he hopes, it is no other,
But, for your health and your digestion sake,
An after-dinner's <sup>a</sup> breath.

Agam. Hear you, Patroclus.
We are too well acquainted with these answers;
But his evasion, wing'd thus swift with scorn,
Cannot outfly our apprehensions.
Much attribute he hath, and much the reason
Why we ascribe it to him; yet all his virtues,
Not virtuously on his own part beheld,
Do in our eyes begin to lose their gloss;
Yea, like fair fruit in an unwholesome dish,
Are like to rot untasted. Go and tell him,
We come to speak with him; and you shall not sin,
If you do say, we think him over-proud,
And under-honest; in self-assumption greater,
Than in the note of judgment; and worthier than himself

Here <sup>b</sup> tend the savage strangeness he puts on,
Disguise the holy strength of their command,
And <sup>c</sup> underwrite in an observing kind
His humorous predominance; yea, watch
His pettish <sup>d</sup> lunes, his ebbs, his flows, as if
The passage and whole carriage of this action
Rode on his tide. Go, tell him this: and add,
That, if he overhold his price so much,
We'll none of him; but let him, like an engine
Not portable, lie under this report—
Bring action hither, this cannot go to war.
A stirring dwarf we do <sup>e</sup> allowance give
Before a sleeping giant—tell him so.

Patr. I shall; and bring his answer presently.

Agam. In second voice we'll not be satisfied,
We come to speak with him.—ULYSSES, enter you.

[Exit ULYSSES.]

Ajax. What is he more than another?

Agam. No more than what he thinks he is.

Ajax. Is he so much? Do you not think, he thinks himself a better man than I am?

Agam. No question.

Ajax. Will you subscribe his thought, and say he is?

Agam. No, noble Ajax; you are as strong, as valiant, as wise, no less noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable.

Ajax. Why should a man be proud? How doth pride grow? I know not what pride is.

Agam. Your mind is the clearer, Ajax, and your virtues the fairer. He that is proud, eats up himself: pride is his own glass, his own trumpet, his own chronicle; and whatever praises itself but in the deed, devours the deed in the praise.

Ajax. I do hate a proud man, as I hate the engendering of toads.

Nest. Yet he loves himself: is't not strange?

[Aside.]

Re-enter ULYSSES.

Ulyss. Achilles will not to the field to-morrow.

Agam. What's his excuse?

Ulyss. He doth rely on none;
But carries on the stream of his <sup>f</sup> dispose Without observance or respect of any,
In will peculiar, and in self-admission.

Agam. Why will he not, upon our fair request,
Untent his person, and share the air with us? [only,

Ulyss. Things small as nothing, for request's sake
He makes important. Possess'd he is with greatness;
And speaks not to himself, but with a pride

That quarrels at self-breath: imagin'd worth
Holds in his blood such swoll and hot discourse,
That, 'twixt his mental and his active parts,
Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages,
And batters down himself. What should I say?
He is so plaguily proud, that the death <sup>g</sup> tokens of it
Cry—"No recovery."

Agam. Let Ajax go to him.—
Dear lord, go you and greet him in his tent:
'Tis said, he holds you well; and will be led,
At your request, a little from himself.

Ulyss. O Agamemnon! let it not be so:
We'll consecrate the steps that Ajax makes
When they go from Achilles. Shall the proud lord,
That bastes his arrogance with his own <sup>h</sup> seam,
And never suffers matter of the world
Enter his thoughts,—save such as doth revolve
And ruminate himself,—shall he be worshipp'd
Of that we hold an idol more than he?
No, this thrice worthy and right valiant lord
Must not so stale his palm, nobly acquir'd;
Nor, by my will, assubjugate his merit,
As amply titled as Achilles is, by going to Achilles:
That were to enlard his fat-already pride;
And add more coals to Cancer, when he burns
With entertaining great Hyperion.

This lord go to him? Jupiter forbid;
And say in thunder—"Achilles, go to him."

Nest. O! this is well; he rubs the vein of him.

[Aside.]

Dio. And how his silence drinks up this applause!

[Aside.]

Ajax. If I go to him, with my armed fist
I'll <sup>i</sup> push him o'er the face.

Agam. O, no! you shall not go.

Ajax. An a' be proud with me, I'll <sup>k</sup> phreeze his pride. Let me go to him.

Ulyss. Not for the worth that hangs upon our <sup>l</sup> quarrel.

Ajax. A paltry, insolent fellow!

Nest. How he describes Himself? [ Aside. ]

Ajax. Can he not be sociable?

Ulyss. The raven
Chides blackness. [ Aside. ]

Ajax. I'll let his humors blood.

Agam. He will be the physician, that should be the patient. [ Aside. ]

Ajax. An all men were o' my mind,—

Ulyss. Wit would be out of fashion. [ Aside. ]

Ajax. 'A should not bear it so,

'A should cut swords first: shall pride carry it?

Nest. An 'twould, you'd carry half. [ Aside. ]

Ulyss. 'A would have ten shares. [ Aside. ]

Ajax. I will knead him; I will make him supple.

Nest. He's not yet thorough warm: <sup>m</sup> force him with praises.

Pour in, pour in; his ambition is dry. [ Aside. ]

Ulyss. My lord, you feed too much on this dislike.

[ To AGAMEMNON. ]

Nest. Our noble general, do not do so.

Dio. You must prepare to fight without Achilles.

Ulyss. Why, 'tis this naming of him does him harm.
Here is a man—but 'tis before his face;
I will be silent.

Nest. Wherefore should you so?

He is not <sup>n</sup> emulous, as Achilles is.

Ulyss. Know the whole world, he is as valiant.

<sup>a</sup> Breathing; exercise.—<sup>b</sup> "Tend," i. e., attend upon.—<sup>c</sup> Subscribe; submit to.—<sup>d</sup> "Pettish lunes," i. e., fitful lunacies.—
<sup>e</sup> Approbation.—<sup>f</sup> Inclination.

<sup>g</sup> "Death tokens;" an allusion to the decisive spots, usually called tokens, that precede the death of those infected with plague.—<sup>h</sup> Fat.—<sup>i</sup> Strike.—<sup>k</sup> Comb; curry.—<sup>l</sup> That is, 'Not for the value of that for which we are fighting.'—<sup>m</sup> Stuff.—
<sup>n</sup> Envious.

Ajax. A whoreson dog, that shall *palter thus with Would, he were a Trojan! [us!]

Nest. What a vice
Were it in Ajax now—

Ulyss. If he were proud?

Dio. Or covetous of praise?

Ulyss. Ay, or surly borne?

Dio. Or strange, or self-affected? [composeure;

Ulyss. Thank the heavens, lord, thou art of sweet
Praise him that got thee, <sup>1</sup>her that gave thee suck:

Fam'd be thy tutor, and thy parts of nature

Thrice-fam'd, beyond all erudition;

But he that disciplin'd thine arms to fight,

Let Mars divide eternity in twain,

And give him half: and for thy vigor,

Bull-bearing Milo his <sup>2</sup>addition yield

To sinewy Ajax. I will not praise thy wisdom,

Which, like a <sup>3</sup> bourn, a pale, a shore, confines

Thy spacious and dilated parts: here's Nestor,

Instructed by the antiquary times,

He must, he is, he cannot but be wise;

But pardon, father Nestor, were your days

As green as Ajax, and your brain so temper'd,

You should not have the eminence of him,

But as be Ajax.

Ajax. Shall I call you father?

Nest. Ay, my good son.

Dio. Be rul'd by him, lord Ajax.

Ulyss. There is no tarrying here: the hart Achilles
Keeps thicket.—Please it our great general
To call together all his state of war:

Fresh kings are come to Troy; to-morrow,

We must with all our main of power stand fast:

And here's a lord,—come knights from east to west,

And cull their flower, Ajax shall cope the best.

Agam. Go we to council: let Achilles sleep.

Light boats sail swift, though greater hulks draw deep. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Troy. A Room in PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter PANDARUS and a Servant.

Pan. Friend you; pray you, a word. Do not you follow the young lord Paris?

Serv. Ay, sir, when he goes before me.

Pan. You depend upon him, I mean?

Serv. Sir, I do depend upon the lord.

Pan. You depend upon a noble gentleman: I must needs praise him.

Serv. The lord be praised!

Pan. You know me, do you not?

Serv. Faith, sir, superficially.

Pan. Friend, know me better. I am the lord Pandarus.

Serv. I hope, I shall know your honor better.

Pan. I do desire it.

Serv. You are in the state of grace.

[Music within.]

Pan. Grace! not so, friend: honor and lordship are my titles.—What music is this?

Serv. I do but partly know, sir: it is music in parts.

Pan. Know you the musicians?

Serv. Wholly, sir.

Pan. Who play they to?

Serv. To the hearers, sir.

Pan. At whose pleasure, friend?

Serv. At mine, sir; and theirs that love music.

Pan. Command, I mean, friend.

Serv. Who shall I command, sir?

Pan. Friend, we understand not one another: I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning. At whose request do these men play?

Serv. That's to't, indeed, sir. Marry, sir, at the request of Paris, my lord, who is there in person; with him, the mortal Venus, the heart-blood of beauty, love's invisible soul—

Pan. Who? my cousin Cressida?

Serv. No, sir, Helen: could you not find out that by her attributes?

Pan. It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the prince Troilus: I will make a complimentary assault upon him, for my business <sup>4</sup>seeths.

Serv. Sudden business: there's a stewed phrase, indeed.

Enter PARIS and HELEN, attended.

Pan. Fair be to you, my lord, and to all this fair company! fair desires, in all fair measure, fairly guide them; especially to you, fair queen: fair thoughts be your fair pillow!

Helen. Dear lord, you are full of fair words.

Pan. You speak your fair pleasure, sweet queen.

—Fair prince, here is good broken music.

Par. You have broke it, cousin; and, by my life, you shall make it whole again: you shall piece it out with a piece of your performance.—Nell, he is full of harmony.

Pan. Truly, lady, no.

Helen. O, sir!—

Pan. Rude, in sooth; in good sooth, very rude.

Par. Well said, my lord. Well, you say so in <sup>5</sup>fits.

Pan. I have business to my lord, dear queen.—
My lord, will you vouchsafe me a word?

Helen. Nay, this shall not hedge us out: we'll hear you sing, certainly.

Pan. Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant with me. But, marry, thus, my lord.—My dear lord, and most esteemed friend, your brother Troilus—

Helen. My lord Pandarus; honey-sweet lord,—

Pan. Go to, sweet queen, go to:—commends himself most affectionately to you.

Helen. You shall not bob us out of our melody: if you do, our melancholy upon your head.

Pan. Sweet queen, sweet queen; that's a sweet queen,—i'faith—

Helen. And to make a sweet lady sad is a sour offence.

Pan. Nay, that shall not serve your turn; that shall it not, in truth, la! Nay, I care not for such words: no, no.—And, my lord, he desires you, that
